SCORE OF LIVES MAY BE LOST IN BRIDGE WRECK.

Night Shift of Workmen Plunged Into River Under Tons of Concrete.

Middle Pier of Mammoth Structure in Course of Construction Across American River Near Auburn, Cal., Falls, Carrying Down at Least Twenty Laborers—Details Hard to Obtain in Early Morning.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

AUBURN (Sunday,) Nov. 5.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Late last night the middle pier of the big concrete bridge in course of erection over the American River collapsed, carrying down with it in its fall between twenty and thirty of the night shift of workmen employed.

Shortly after midnight five men had been taken from underneath the ruins, one of them dead, the other alive, but injured.

Foreman Smith, in charge of the work, who was himself injured in the wreck, says this morning that there cannot be over sixteen men remaining in the ruins.

Just what the fate of the men is it is impossible to even guess at this hour. Sufficient material fell into the river to have buried the men beneath tons of cement. The river bed at this point, also, is full of huge boulders, and a swift, treacherous current is running.

The bridge is being built by the Mountain Quarries Company, on the line of their railroad running from Auburn to the lime works of the Portland Cement Company's plant, near Cool, in Eldorado county.

Duncanson & Haroldson are the contractors.

The span which gave way is 300 feet long and eighty feet above the river. It is said to be the largest concrete bridge in the world.

Workmen to the number of 200 have been rushing construction in order to get the bridge complete before the opening of the rainy season.

The night shift, composed of fifty or sixty men, was at work on the center piers, over which hung mammoth scaffoldings, when the accident occurred.

Every physician and nurse in Auburn has been dispatched to the scene.

The spot is difficult to reach from this city in the darkness. The only road which leads to it winds down the river hills to the Yuba Ditch Company's dam, and then over an old wagon trail that long ago fell into disuse.

It has been intended that Sunday excursions should be run over this line on the completion of the bridge, owing to the great natural beauty of the region.

At an early hour this morning it is said that sixteen men are in the river under masses of cement, while a score or more of others are more or less injured. These escaped being precipitated a sheer sixty feet into the waters of the river.

PORTLAND GIRL IS HEROINE.

Saves Lives of Thirty-five Fellow Students in Early Morning Fire in Boston Clubhouse.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BOSTON (Mass.) Nov. 5.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Miss Maud Gesner of Portland, Or., who is a student at the New England Conservatory of Music, saved the lives of thirty-five girls at the Boston Students' Union clubhouse early this morning. Aroused by smoke in her room Miss Gesner donned a bath robe, opened the windows and aroused the inmates. Mrs. Osborn, the director, was one of the first.

When Mrs. Osborn and Miss Gesnor, choking and coughing severely, went the rounds of the building, they were horrified to find the kitchen burning fiercely and the room filled with smoke which rushed out into the main clubhouse.

All the girls were marched out scantily clad and then an effort was made to get to the twelve maids sleeping in the rear above the flame-filled kitchen. These became hysterical when awakened, but were finally calmed and all were led out of the building safely. The building was gutted.

PENNY PAPER CEASES ISSUE.

Experiment of One-Cent Sunday Publication in Boston Brings Only Grief and Loss to Publisher.

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—Frank A. Munsey has directed the suspension of further publication of his Boston Sunday Journal, a 1-cent morning paper. He started the paper in April, 1910. Mr. Munsey said:

"The Boston Sunday Journal was placed in the field as a 1-cent paper. Outside of Boston many people seem to think the paper was an evening publication as I have Sunday evening papers in three other cities. The paper was placed in the field as an experiment, without, I must admit, much hope of success. We have tried it out, we are not satisfied with the result and so we are going to stop publication of the Sunday edition. The reason why the experiment failed is because it is impossible to place a 1-cent Sunday paper in the field with 5-cent Sunday papers in Boston."

Wife Gets Divorce in Reno and He Wakes Up County Clerk to Get License to Marry Another.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW HAVEN (Conn.) Nov. 4.—At 2 o'clock this morning Assistant Town Clerk Joseph N. Buckley was routed out of bed to issue a marriage license to James M. Schley, nephew of the late Admiral Schley of New York city, and Miss Bertha Sedgwick of the same place. The couple then went to police headquarters, where the services of a justice of the peace were secured by telephone. It is understood that Mr. Schley's first wife secured a divorce in Reno yesterday.

At San Diego.

STODDARD-DAYTON FIRST, MAXWELL SECOND IN RACE.

SAN DIEGO, Nov. 5.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Stoddard Dayton is still leading the race. At 2:34-44 A. M. having made the trip to San Diego in 3 hours, 34 minutes, 44 seconds wining the $1000 Prize.

The Maxwell was second at 2:35-50.

SANTA ANA, Nov. 5.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The cars as they passed through Santa Ana ran in the following order, leaving out the Pope: Stoddard-Dayton, first; Fiat, second; National, third; Cole, fourth; Mercer, fifth; Maxwell, sixth; Buick, seventh; Franklin, eighth; E.M.F., ninth; Case, tenth; Flanders, eleventh; Midland, twelfth; Cadillac, thirteenth.

The Pope-Hartford met with an accident here at 11:42 when the car went into a ditch at First street, and put both front wheels out of commission.

Driver Tremaine sent in frantic calls for help to Los Angeles for two new wheels saying that he still had a chance to win if aid would arrive, but it was an hour before anyone from the Pope-Hartford bunch could be located, and much time was lost.

The cars passed through Santa Ana in the following order:

No. 1—Maxwell, 11:55; time of leaving, 10:45; elapsed time, 1 hr. 1 min.

No. 4—Stoddard-Dayton, 11:56½; time of leaving, 11:00; elapsed time, 56½ min.

No. 3. Franklin, 11:59½; time of leaving, 10:55; elapsed time, 1 hr. 4½ min.

No. 6—E.M.F., 12:15½; time of leaving, 11:00; elapsed time, 1 hr. 5½ min.

No. 8—Mercer, 12:19¾; time of leaving, 11:20; elapsed 59¾ min.

No. 9—Cole, 12:20¼; time of leaving, 11:25; elapsed time, 54¾ min.

No. 11—National, 12:22½; time of leaving, 11:35; elapsed time, 47½ min.

No. 7—Flanders, 12:29¼; time of leaving, 11:15; elapsed time, 1 hour, 14¼ min.

No. 13—Fiat, 12:32; time of leaving, 11:45; elapsed time, 17 min.

No. 10—Case, 12:42½; time of leaving, 11:30; elapsed time, 1 hour, 12½ min.

No. 12—Buick, 12:43; time of leaving, 11:40; elapsed time, 1 hour 3 min.

No. 14—Midland, 12:50½; time of leaving, 11:50; elapsed time, 1 hour, ½ min.

No. 5—Cadillac, 1:08; time of leaving, 11:05; elapsed time, 2 hours, 3 min. (Engine trouble.)

E. Roger Stearns on the Stoddard-Dayton shot through the outskirts of Whittier one minute behind the Franklin and ahead of all other cars in the race in point of time. The fast an hour along the smooth boulevard and Stearns was driving like a fiend.

Harvey Herrick almost wrecked the National at the city limits when he swung around a turn into the Whittier road. An automobile was driven directly in front of the fast racer and Herrick swung wide and the blue racer grazed the fence. It was a close call for the man who won last year, but he righted the car and swung on at a fierce clip.

Thousands of spectators thronged the Whittier road and forced several of the drivers to cut down the speed of the cars as the machines were sent at top speed. Teddy Tetzlaff, on the Fiat, did not open his car to the limit until he had driven through the long lanes of spectators. Then the Fiat leaped into the night and made as fast time as the Stoddard.

When Bill Tremaine hummed into Whittier he was cheered to the echo. The Pope-Hartford was rolling along at about sixty-eight miles an hour and Tremaine looked like a winner. The joy of the Pope boosters was short-lived. At Whittier Tremaine rolled into the curb and the Pope was wrecked, two front wheels being smashed. This practically eliminates the fast racing car from the running. Two wheels were shipped to the Pope this morning and Tremaine will continue on to Phoenix.

THROUGH OCEAN SIDE.

OCEAN SIDE, Nov. 5.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Maxwell was the first car through at 1:20 A.M., doing the distance from Los Angeles in 2 hours and 45 minutes.

The Stoddard Dayton passed second in 2 hours, 35 minutes. Apparently still leading. The Franklyn passed third in 2 hours, 45 minutes tying the Maxwell.

The detailed story of the start of the big auto race to Phoenix will be found on Page 1, the Pink Sheet.

DENOUNCE TAYLOR SYSTEM.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—[By A. P. Day Wire.] Denouncing the endorsement of the so-called "Taylor system" of scientific shop management by the Secretary of War, as unjust and predicting a general walkout of the seven or eight thousand machinists employed by the War Department, should it be adopted, James McConnell, president of the International Association of Machinists, issued a statement yesterday in which he said the machinists were unalterably opposed to the system.

Eyewitness Tells of Incredible Barbarity By Italians.

Four Hundred Women and Children and Four Thousand Men Put to Death to Gratify Blood Lust Run Riot—Horrors of Cholera Added to Sickening Scenes of Massacre—Oasis Near Tripoli a Shambles.

BY FRANCIS M'CULLAGH,

(Special correspondent who was with the Ital ian forces in Tripoli and who surrendered his papers that he might go to Malta and send an uncensored account of what he had seen.)

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Nov. 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Dispatches from Malta say that it is reported the Turks and Arabs have attacked and re-entered Tripoli, inflicting tremendous loss upon the Italians, who, for several days, have been confined to the inner fortifications, weakened and disheartened by disease and the fearful stench arising from thousands of unburied corpses.

MALTA, Nov. 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] As a protest against the murder of innocent Arab women, children and men last week, I have returned my official papers as a correspondent to Gen. Caneua. I cannot remain longer with an army which is no army, but an armed band of marauders and a gang of assassins.

About 400 women and children and 4000 men have been shot. Cripples and blind beggars have been deliberately shot; sick people, whose houses were burned, were left on the ground and refused even a drop of water. I personally witnessed these scenes of horror and photographed them.

PURE ASSASSINATION.

There was not the faintest pretext of justice. The Arab quarter was overrun with crazy soldiers with revolvers, shooting every Arab man, woman and child they met. Officers are worse than the men. The army is demoralized.

Every British correspondent save one leaves today.

The facts of the massacre are beyond dispute and the Consuls have already informed their governments.

The scenes are worse than any Russian or Armenian massacre.

Many pro-Italian Jews were massacred by mistake among the Arabs. The Arabs did mutilate corpses, but not till after Italians began the massacre.

NO QUARTER TO ARABS.

I visited the extreme Italian front during the battle of October 26 and found the soldiers paralyzed with fear. Very many of the soldiers are barbers and ice cream men from New York. They are heartily sick of the war and their whole anxiety is to return safe to America.

The Italians frankly admit they are conducting this war as a war of extermination. No quarter is ever given to the Arabs, whom Caneva persists in regarding as non-combatants. He says he is fighting Turkey. The Arabs, therefore, are not regular soldiers in uniform, and must be shot if caught with arms in their hand, whether under the flag or not.

These atrocities have aroused the whole country to a pitch of incredible desperation. Women and boys have gone into the desert to fight beside the men, as have likewise all the relatives of the innocent town Arabs massacred by the Italians.

HOLY WAR PROCLAIMED.

A holy war has been successfully proclaimed, Bedouins from Egypt and Arabs from Soudan all joining the Tripolitans. Only an advance guard of 1500 Arabs is so far attacking the Italians, despite the ridiculous statements in the Italian papers that the losses run into the thousands.

The Italians have informed the Consuls of their intention to demolish, if necessary, all houses in the oasis on the outskirts of the city, afterward paying an indemnity. This order may necessitate the demolition of the German and American Consulates. The Italians contemplate a last stand inside the city. The invaders are thus worse off than a month ago, having been gradually shoved into the sea. The territory they hold is shrinking daily.

CHOLERA RAGING.

Meanwhile cholera is raging among the troops and the people. The disease has attacked the Arabs for the first time. Whole streets are closed to traffic by the troops on account of the cholera.

Twenty-seven soldiers died of cholera yesterday. Hundreds are sick. Thirty-three civilians are dead.

The soldiers refuse to bury the murdered Arabs, who litter the oasis. Owing to the stench, the Arabs also refuse, save at the bayonet's point. Consequently the contagion is spreading fast.

EXAMPLE OF BARBARITY.

The worst case of barbarity I witnessed during the massacres was that of a boy and girl and two aged women, all sick and lying on the bare ground among the corpses in their burnt village. All their relatives had been killed.

They lay at the gate of the magnificent Italian Red Cross hospital. I begged the military doctors, whose only occupation seemed to be photographing the most horrible massacre scenes, to help these sick people.

The doctors did not do it. Italian soldiers guarded these wretches, preventing anyone giving them even a drop of water. All died.

Undeniable Proof.

GHASTLY SIGHTS IN OASIS CAUGHT BY CAMERA'S LENS.

Photographs Taken Near Tripoli Have Reached London, With All Damning Details of Atrocities Perpetrated by Italian Soldiers—Terrible Retaliation Feared by All Europe Should Battle Turn in Favor of Turks.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Nov. 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] It is reported by wireless from Tripoli that the threatened attack of the Turks and Arabs of that place is likely to occur at any moment and that the Italians, who now hold only the inner forts within the city itself, are no longer confident of the result of an attack by their foes, who are in complete possession of the outer circle of fortresses.

Europe shudders at the very thought of what may occur at Tripoli if the Turks should reconquer their city and commit upon the Italians the atrocities which it has been proved, by common consent and opinion, the Italians committed upon the Turks and Arabs.

PHOTOGRAPHS TELL TALE.

The earlier reports of the cruelties of the Italians toward their North African foes are further confirmed today by the arrival here and at Berlin, Paris, Vienna and Frankfort of additional uncensored delayed dispatches from English, German and French correspondents at the front.

Photographs, too, have reached London with all their damning details, and the combined effect of the pictures and the telegraph stories of newspaper eye-witnesses has been to arouse the British public to a high pitch of excitement and angry protest.

Mutilation of women and children is shown in the photographs. The response of the Italians that they themselves have been cruelly treated, shot down and barbarously mutilated by the fanatical, semi-civilized tribes with whom they are struggling is not believed to represent a proved state of facts.

PORTE MAKES PROTEST.

The Porte, it is learned today, has sent a formal protest to the signatories of the second Hague conference against the execution of Arabs. The protest is based upon the convention concerning the laws and customs of war signed in 1907 by all the powers, including Italy, and containing this paragraph:

"Inhabitants and belligerents shall remain under the protection and governance of the principles of the laws of nations derived from the usages established among the civilized, from the laws of humanity and from the dictates of public conscience."

TIDE OF FEELING.

BIG ISSUES IN BALANCE

National Political Pot Boils.

Results in at Least Three Great States May Be Prophetic.

Larger Ambitions of Wilson and Foss Depend on the Outcome.

G. O. P. Probably Gets Kentucky, Maryland and Massachusetts.

BY SUMNER CURTIS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] National political affairs, both inter-party and intra-party, are vitally connected with off-year elections that take place in several States next Tuesday. In three of the States where governors are to be elected—Massachusetts, Maryland and Kentucky—the results are likely to be interpreted respectively as setbacks or "boosts" for one party or the other in the country at large.

In New Jersey the future political aspirations of Gov. Woodrow Wilson are more or less entangled with the election of members of the Legislature. In New York the continued prestige of Tammany at Albany is involved in the election of members of the Assembly, with the chance favoring the election of a Republican majority. In the city of Philadelphia the indorsement of the administration in Washington has been an issue in a campaign that primarily has to do with the mayoralty and the preservation of the Penrose organization.

IN OTHER STATES.

Governors also are to be elected in Rhode Island, Virginia and Mississippi, but there is little more than local interest in the results in those States.

There is a good chance for both sides to get consolation out of Tuesday's results as the conditions in different States have been so variegated that Democrats may lose where they now are in power, while Republicans may suffer in places where they normally would be expected to win. A general sweep one way or the other, of course, will be susceptible of only one interpretation—an addition to Democracy's strong hope on the one side, or a lift of the gloom which settled upon Republicans after the Congressional elections a year ago. In connection with the signs of the times that usually are seen in off-year elections it should be stated that the local conditions in States where the most interest centers are exerting influences entirely apart from national issues or sentiment and a fair analysis of some of the results is not likely to show absolutely the mind of the voters with respect to the 1912 election. Just the same the political leaders may be expected to make the most of anything that happens favorably on the surface to their respective parties.

No off-year election in many years has aroused so much national concern as that in Massachusetts this fall. If Gov. Eugene N. Foss should be re-elected he will become on next Wednesday morning a potential figure in connection with the Presidential slate-making of 1912.

ONE OBJECT IN VIEW.

Gov. Foss is playing the game largely with this fact in view. He has White House aspirations, but the most his re-election is likely to gain for him in the national field is a fine chance to capture second place on the Democratic ticket. His great wealth combined with his hold on a normally Republican State would make him a most available candidate for Vice-President. And it is believed he would accept the Vice-Presidential nomination with alacrity, although he is now playing for higher stakes.

Massachusetts is a Republican State according to all the plans and specifications in vogue since the protective tariff principle has been upheld under its present auspices. Therefore if it fails to stick to the old standard in this crisis there will be full recognition of the significance which the country is bound to attach to the result.

The Maryland gubernatorial election has many points of interest, not the least of which is the bright prospect of Republican success in a year when the tide is running the other way. Maryland has been a strong Democratic State so far as the State government is concerned, although it has split in recent years in National elections. Without doubt the Democrats would win this fall were it not for frauds at the primaries. These frauds have so angered an element in the Democratic party that many voters who would not vote for a Republican under any circumstances will stay away from the polls. The Democratic managers are very doubtful of success.

WANTS HIS FATHER'S JOB.

The Maryland election also is of interest to outsiders because the Democratic candidate for Governor is Arthur P. Gorman, son of that Arthur P. Gorman who once was to the Democratic party in the United States Senate what Aldrich was to the Republican party. Young Mr. Gorman aspires to the political chieftainship in his State once held by his father and if he is elected Governor under the prevailing conditions he is in a fair way to attain his ambition.

The other hot gubernatorial fight to which much national interest attaches is the one in Kentucky, where Democrats have nominated former United States Senator James B. McCreary and the Republicans E. C. O'Rear, a former chief justice of the State Court of Appeals. The two parties have adopted almost identically the same platforms so far as State issues are concerned. Both sides are confident, with the result admittedly close. Naturally the result is calculated to give encouragement to the national leaders of the successful party, Kentucky having been debatable ground in recent Presidential campaigns.

New Jersey is interesting primarily because of the entanglement of Gov. Wilson with the situation rather than by reason of any significance of a general political character attaching to the result. New Jersey naturally is Republican in State elections and only the landslide and Wilson's personality carried the Lower House of the Legislature for the Democrats a year ago. Now the issue has turned—or it has been made so to appear—on Gov. Wilson's Democracy. The Democrats expect to lose the Assembly while possibly gaining the Senate which now is Republican. Gov. Wilson has been bending every energy to win the continued support of his party in the Lower House. If his efforts fail his opponents will declare to the country that it is a repudiation of his Presidential aspirations.

One thing that may make the best guesses of politicians go awry in New Jersey is the fact that for the first time in years the bona fide voters will have a fair and square show. The election law enacted by the recent Legislature has done away with padded registration lists and the vote this fall will be affected by the elimination of fifteen or twenty thousand floaters and repeaters.

Quiet.

ENJOYS A DAY OF REAL REST.

PRESIDENT'S FIRST LEISURE IN SEVEN WEEKS.

Plays a Game of Golf With Mrs. Taft as His "Gallery"—With Reference to Harlan's Successor He Lets It Be Known Whom He Has in Mind.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

HOT SPRINGS (Va.) Nov. 4.—For the first time in more than seven weeks, President Taft had leisure today. He rested from breakfast time until dark, except for a golf game with Mrs. Taft as his "gallery." The President's game showed a bit of improvement.

Secretary Hilles did not bring data for the President's annual message to Hot Springs today, but is expected to arrive before tomorrow night when Mr. Taft will leave for Cincinnati.

The President let it be known today that he had given but little thought to a successor to the late Supreme Court Justice Harlan.

Reports that Mr. Taft had gone so far as to narrow the field of possible selections to four men were denied to callers.

The President named at least a score of men prominent in public life who would be considered when he returned to Washington. Among the score are Solicitor General Frederick Lehmann, United States Circuit Judge Hook of Omaha, Secretary of Commerce and Labor Charles Nagel, Justices Swayzee and Gummere of the New Jersey State Supreme Court, Chief Justice Carter of Illinois, and United States Circuit Judge Buffington of Pittsburgh, as well as several United States District Judges and a few well-known lawyers. The third, fourth and seventh judicial districts now are not represented on the Supreme Court bench and Mr. Taft may bear this in mind when he selects successor to the late Associate Justice Harlan.

THE SMALL HOME OWNER IS NOW IN GREAT DANGER.

AROUSED as are all citizens by the Socialist menace, nobody is so thoroughly stirred as are the great numbers of small home-owners in Los Angeles.

Probably there is no city in the Union where so many people own their homes. Thousands of wage-earners have purchased houses on the installment plan and have them partly paid for. They need every cent they can earn, to keep up their payments and meet other expenses.

If by some mischance Harriman should be elected, what would happen? It is no idle threat. Industrial operations would be curtailed, building would be checked, avenues of employment would be closed, thousands of men and women would find themselves out of jobs.

The election of a Socialist city government would cause the banks to cut off loans and would injure private as well as public credit; it would frighten capital from going into enterprise; it would hold back orders for goods and supplies; it would stop wheels and put out furnaces. As a matter of fact some of the biggest industrial concerns in Los Angeles have announced that they would have to reduce their forces one-half or shut down, should socialism capture the city.

Who would suffer most? The wage-earners. Thousands of owners of humble homes would not be able to maintain their payments and would lose their all.

"Property is robbery," is the Socialist motto. A bungalow or a cottage is "property," just as well as a sky-scraper. The owners of property of this sort have most to fear from socialism, especially if there is a mortgage on it.

Control.

WU TING-FANG WITH REBELS.

Accepts Place in Chinese Republican Cabinet.

Methodist Mission Probably Destroyed in Hankow.

Chamber of Commerce for New Regime.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SHANGHAI, Nov. 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The central machine of the revolutionary government does not trust the throne nor does it agree with the throne's terms. It is therefore proceeding to arrange to control the nation's affairs in expectation of the success which it regards as certain.

The official list drawn up includes Dr. Wu Ting-fang, at one time Minister at Washington, who has accepted the post of Secretary of Foreign Affairs; Weng Thong Wyo, at one time Chinese resident in Thibet, to whom the post of under-Secretary has been offered; Ehr Tang, at one time director of the Army Council at Canton, who has accepted the Military governorship of Che Kiang and Kiang Su province; Li Ping Shui, head of the Shanghai gentry, who has accepted the civil governorship of those provinces; Yu Ya Ching, a leading merchant, who has accepted the Mayoralty of Shanghai.

The Chinese Chamber of Commerce today declared for the rebels and urged the consular body to prevent the imperial fleet from entering the Whang Poo River.

The populace fears a repetition of the Hankow brutalities.

CHINESE REPUBLIC WILL FAVOR AMERICA.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 4.—That the success of the Chinese revolution and the substitution of a republican form of government for the Manchu rule will mean the ascendancy of the United States over every other nation in the Chinese trade was the prediction made here today by Tong King Cheng, secretary of the Chinese National Association, before the Commonwealth Club.

"With the republic will come a shifting of the world's commerce to the Pacific," said Tong. "By reason of its many kindnesses to China during the Boxer troubles and at other times, I think it is safe to say the United States will enjoy an advantage over every other nation. At present the American trade is rapidly decreasing in China. This is thought to be directly due to the exclusion law. The law has created a prejudice against American goods among most of our people.

"The policy of the Manchu government has long been to keep the people in ignorance. Every enlightening influence has been checked and every effort used to keep the people in the dark as to the real condition of the country. Nevertheless, through secret means, knowledge of better forms of government has reached the uttermost limits of the empire. Whether or not the Manchus remain in power at present, a republic is inevitable."

The success of the revolutionary cause in China will be celebrated tomorrow by the local Chinese. A parade, with American bands and a display of the flags of the republic, followed by a banquet attended by many prominent Americans, will be features of the festival.

An account of the suicide of Ting Tao Shuen, Governor of the town of Tai Yuen Fu, was received in a cablegram today to the Chung Sai Yat Po, a Chinese daily newspaper. The Governor took his own life, says the dispatch, in fear that his city would fall into the hands of the revolutionists.

Another dispatch to the same paper tells of the capture of Bok Lu, a town in the northern part of the province of Canton, by the revolutionists.

DISTRIBUTE RIFLES TO THE POPULACE.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SHANGHAI, Nov. 4.—The new revolutionary government which is apparently impersonal nevertheless effectively controlled the situation in Shanghai and on the Yangtse Delta today.

Since morning the rebel cause has been strengthened by the arming of all those who applied for rifles and ammunition. The rebels obtained not only the arsenal, but the powder factory, gunboats and an enormous supply of new and first-class Mauser rifles. Fully 10,000 rifles were given indiscriminately to applicants this evening.

The forts at Wu Sung went over to the rebels without resistance and the other up-river forts hoisted the white flag, as if through a previous understanding with the rebel commander. The rebels can hardly be said to have "seized" Shanghai, Wu Sung and the other up-river forts. It was simply a change of control in which everybody acquiesced. About ten persons were killed and twenty others injured, but most of the casualties were accidentally due to the explosion of dynamite used to open the gates of the city.

The arsenal at Shanghai had a capacity for a great output and is now completely manned, and is being operated. It can manufacture 50,000 cartridges daily. The powder factory, which is the largest in China, is well stocked.

Admiral Sah's squadron has depended entirely upon this arsenal and powder factory for supplies. Up to 6 o'clock tonight there had not been a disturbance within the foreign settlement. Many foreigners visited the arsenal and everywhere they were treated with the utmost courtesy.

The foreign troops which had been guarding the railway station of the Nanking-Shanghai railway continued on duty there today on order of the British consul. This action continues to cause comment and apprehension. The bonds of the railway company are owned in England and this appears to be the only reason for British interference.

Rear-Admiral Murdock, commander of the American Asiatic fleet, landed 200 marines today and marched them through the main streets of the settlement.

Nanking road, which is a mass of revolutionary flags, is the main street of the settlement.

Nearly every store displayed the rebel colors. All mandarins have found refuge in the foreign concessions.

The American cruiser Albany has gone to Wu Sung.

METHODIST MISSION PROBABLY DESTROYED.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

HANKOW (China) Nov. 4.—Almost the whole of the native city of Hankow is afire this morning and it is feared that the Wesleyan mission, near the Han River, in which are fifty blind boys and 150 wounded persons, who, with the staff of the mission, make up a total of 200 people, was destroyed.

Dr. Booth, the head of the mission, asked the imperialists to grant an armistice of two hours to permit of removal from the mission, but the firing ceased for only a half-hour.

A Red Cross steamer, which attempted to rescue the inmates of the mission, was driven back by the fire from the rebel fort. One shell riddled the steamer's deckhouse.

When the vessel was compelled to turn back the mission was still standing, but its position was hopeless, the flames being within 200 yards of it.

The fires in the town were started by the imperialists, who threw inflammable shells into the place. A strong wind carried the flames across the river to Han Yang and a strip of that city on the waterfront a mile long was destroyed and the fire is still burning there.

A few hundred rebels against whom the imperialists are preparing to advance occupy the unburned parts of Hankow.

When the steamer left, an artillery duel was taking place between the batteries of the imperialists, which were planted back of the British concession, and the Wu Chang and Hanyang forts. Several rebel shells landed in the foreign concessions, piercing the walls of houses.

The imperialists occupy the district westward from the railway station almost to the Han River. The Chamber of Commerce asked the foreign Consuls to protest against the burning of the city, but the Consuls declined to do so.

The directory of Protestant missionaries in China, Japan and Korea for the current year shows the staff of the Wesleyan Methodist missionary society at Hankow to be as follows:

Rev. G. A. Clayton and wife, Rev. J. L. Phelps and wife, Rev. R. T. Booth and wife, Rev. W. A. Tatchell and wife, Rev. C. S. Minty, Miss Gooch, Miss N. Booth and Miss I. Wilkinson.

It is a British society with headquarters in London.

CHINESE SITUATION IS DAILY MORE COMPLEX.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PEKING, Nov. 4.—The situation in China is becoming more complex, if not more serious, every day. A week ago co-operation was suspected between Yuan Shi Kai and the national assembly. Later it was believed Yuan Shi Kai could reach an understanding with the Lanchau troops, headed by Gen. Chan Shao Tsen. It is now evident, however, that all elements—the throne, Yuan Shi Kai's party, the National Assembly, the provincial assemblies, the southern rebels and the northern army—have up to the present no connection whatever. The whole movement is a spontaneous uprising against old corrupt methods, and the fact that foreigners have not been attacked indicates that the desire for genuine reform is sincere.

It is reported tonight that the National Assembly, at a secret session, decided to resign in a body, owing to protests telegraphed to Peking by many of the provisional assemblies, objecting that a provisional body should assume authority to draft a Constitution which should be the work of a duly elected Parliament. It is stated that Gen. Li Yuen-Heng and other rebel leaders, who do not recognize the Peking government, decline also to recognize the powers of the National Assembly in conjunction with the efforts of the throne and Yuan Shi Kai, now their military opponent and Premier-elect, towards a settlement. Gen. Chang, likewise, is said to consider the National Assembly's methods unsatisfactory.

Yuan Shi Kai, is not expected to accept the premiership, owing to his inability to obtain the support of the northern military party.

The third army division, which has been stationed at Chang Fu, and the twentieth at Mukden, are being mobilized at Lanchau, with troops already there, ostensibly for the formation of a second army to be used by Yuan Shi Kai. But seemingly Yuan Shi Kai does not intend to fight, nor does the so-called second army intend to proceed to Hankow. Its objective is believed to be Peking.

It is only necessary to threaten the capital to obtain edicts altering those of yesterday and today, but new edicts will not satisfy Chang Shao Tsen and his army. Therefore, it is expected that the next fortnight might see Chang provisional military dictator, pending the election of a full Parliament and the appointment of a responsible cabinet. He may, however, remain with the army, keeping pressure on the Manchus, while his representatives, who are already here, carry out his programme.

Several edicts were issued today. One refers to Yuan Shi Kai's request to be relieved from the premiership. It sets forth that he has everybody's confidence, is able and patriotic and has received the throne's bounty for many years. It orders him not to decline the premiership again. Another approves Yuan Shi Kai's decision to enter into negotiations with the rebels for the suspension of hostilities. About one hundred members attended the meeting of the National Assembly today. There was no discussion of any bills on the programme; events these days are moving too fast for programmes.

FATHER SHERMAN COMMITTED.

Jesuit Priest, Son of a Famous General of the Civil War, is in a Boston Sanatorium.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BOSTON, Nov. 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Rev. Thomas Ewing Sherman, Jesuit preacher and son of Gen. William Tecumseh Sherman, has been committed to Dr. Henry Stedman's sanatorium, Jamaica Plain, after a long struggle to retain his mental faculties. The commitment papers were made out by Judge Perkins of Brookline, and the request for the cimmitment was signed by one of Father Sherman's relatives and his physicians.

About a year ago Father Sherman went insane while hearing confessions in a California church and attempted to commit suicide. He was placed under private treatment and strong hope was entertained for his recovery. For the past few weeks he has been in one of the Brookline sanatoriums.

INDIGESTION GOES IN FIVE MINUTES.

HEARTBURN, GAS, DYSPEPSIA AND OTHER STOMACH MISERY ENDED WITH A LITTLE DIAPEPSIN.

If what you just ate is souring on your stomach or lies like a lump of lead, refusing to digest, or you belch gas and eructate sour, undigested food, or have a feeling of Dizziness, Heartburn, Fullness, Nausea, Bad taste in mouth and stomach, headache—this is Indigestion.

A full case of Pape's Diapepsin costs only 50 cents and will thoroughly cure your out-of-order stomach, and leave sufficient about the house in case some one else in the family may suffer from stomach trouble or Indigestion.

Ask your pharmacist to show you the formula plainly printed on these 50-cent cases, then you will understand why Dyspeptic trouble of all kinds must go, and why Diapepsin always relieves sour, out-of-order stomachs or Indigestion in five minutes. Diapepsin is harmless and tastes like candy, though each dose contains power sufficient to digest and prepare for assimilation into the blood all the food you eat; besides, it makes you go to the table with a healthy appetite; but, what will please you most, is that you will feel that your stomach and intestines are clean and fresh and you will not need to resort to laxatives or liver pills for Biliousness or Constipation.

This city will have many Diapepsin cranks, as some people will call them, but you will be cranky about this splendid stomach preparation, too, if you ever try a little for Indigestion or Gastritis or any other Stomach misery.

Get some Pape's Diapepsin now, this minute, and forever rid yourself of Stomach Trouble and Indigestion.

GHASTLY SIGHTS.

of feeling in England against Premier Asquith and Sir Edward Grey, the foreign secretary, who have refused to let the Tripoli massacres be discussed in Parliament. There is widespread dissatisfaction at the foreign secretary's explanatory statement to the effect that the military operations in Tripoli were a matter with which the British government could not interfere consistently with its declaration of neutrality.

The Italian correspondents of the Roman papers are the only ones at the front who have declared that the Turks and Arabs were practicing atrocities.

UNREST IN EGYPT.

Advices today from Rome say that Sig. Giolitti, the Italian Premier, reiterates his denial of the massacres by Italians. He talks again of treachery.

Telegrams today from Cairo and Alexandria, in Egypt, say that there is a dangerous state of unrest there and throughout Egypt on account of the war in Tripoli. The students' riots at Alexandria, it is feared, may spread revolutionary feeling among the natives.

UNCENSORED DISPATCHES ADD FRESH HORRORS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Nov. 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Terrible stories of the wanton slaughter by the Italians of the defenseless Turkish and Arab men, women and children, are arriving here and in Berlin, Paris and Frankfort, in delayed, uncensored dispatches from English, German and French newspaper correspondents at Tripoli.

More than 3000 instances of Italian atrocities are reported by the correspondent of the Frankfurter Zeitung, who says prisoners of war are being butchered by the hundreds by the Italians without even a pretense of court-martial. Under date of Tuesday, he writes:

"In retaliation, a wild-man hunt was begun by the Italian troops. They even were ordered to fire on women and children. Thus far several thousand natives have been shot down or executed. Hundreds of Arab corpses and the carcasses of animals are lying about in the Oasis."

DROPPING OF GRENADES FROM AIR CRAFT RIGHT.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—Italy's use of the aeroplane in dropping grenades into the Turkish camps, it is declared here, is not a violation of the fourteenth agreement of the Hague conference of 1907, prohibiting the use of air craft in the dropping of projectiles and explosives," or by other new methods of a similar nature," in so far as that country is concerned.

The last official report of countries which have signed the agreements enacted by the 1907 conference, received at the State Department last June, showed that while Turkey had signed this particular agreement, Italy had not.

As the agreement is only binding when war takes place between two or more signatories, in this case it is binding on neither power. In any event the convention is only binding for a period extending to the adjournment of the third peace conference.

WHY IRELAND WAITS.

Because of His Relations With Roosevelt, Rome Hears, He Fails to Get the Cap of a Cardinal.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ROME, Nov. 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A careful investigation of the circumstances governing the selection of the new cardinals brings prominently to the front the failure to promote Archbishop Ireland. This is due to the Bellamy Storer incident and the fear that Theodore Roosevelt might claim the credit of the advancement of the archbishop.

"Roosevelt would have been capable of saying the Pope had made Archbishop Ireland a cardinal with the hope that out of gratitude, the colonel, upon his next visit to Rome, would prefer the Vatican to the Methodists," said a member of the Pope's entourage.

According to the correspondent's information, it is likely that Archbishop James Edward Quigley of Chicago will be the next American cardinal.

LORIMER HELPED BROWNE.

Latter Says United States Senator Came to Rescue with Cash When He Was on Trial for Bribery.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Nov. 4.—Lee O'Neil Browne, former minority leader in the Illinois Legislature, testified today before the committee of United States Senators investigating the Lorimer election, that Senator Lorimer personally bore a portion of the expense of Browne's defense at the two bribery trials wherein Browne was acquitted.

"Senator Lorimer voluntarily offered to aid me," said Browne, "and I accepted his aid. I gave him no note or other security and I expect to pay him back as soon as I am able."

Browne said another Chicagoan, whose name was not divulged, loaned him $1500 to assist in the former minority leader's defense.

TIME TO VOTE AND BE JUROR.

Mother of Twenty-one Sits in Criminal Case.

San Francisco Lady Tells of Her Experience.

She Regards the Ballot as a Real Blessing.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO (Cal.) Nov. 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] From the obscurity of simply being the mother of twenty-one children to the prominence of participating as a member of the first jury composed entirely of women that ever tried a criminal case in Northern California is the fame that has come to Mrs. Rebecca Barskey of Daly City, a suburb of San Francisco, during the last forty-eight hours.

Mrs. Barskey, who sat in judgment Thursday afternoon, shows the keenest interest in her duties of citizenship, and stated today that she is a firm believer in the franchise for women and would gladly spend the time necessary to exercise her political rights.

"The time taken up in casting a ballot or sitting on a jury," stated Mrs. Barskey, "is but infinitessimal compared with what the right to vote means to women.

"Of course, with my large family, I am necessarily a very busy woman, but I will gladly give the time whenever called upon to act in the capacity of elector or juror."

From her family of twenty-one, but one of them can ever follow her mother as a suffragette, the other twenty being boys.

The oldest Barskey child is 28, while the baby of the family has recently turned five, having been born in a refugee tent in Golden Gate Park, shortly after the conflagration of 1906.

Besides attending to her household duties, the ballot and the jury box, Mrs Barskey says she will endeavor to influence the political beliefs of numerous future voters of her family.

Just which party has her affiliations, she declines to state.

HOLDS COURT IN BATH TUB.

Judge at His Ablutions Throws Up the Sponge in Order to Fine a Pair of Speeders.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTERVILLE, Nov. 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Police Judge Aubrey M. Lumley, former Assemblyman, today established a precedent when he held court in his home while seated in his bath tub. W. W. Sargent, a San Francisco automobile salesman, and F. E. DeValon, a Porterville garage owner, were arrested for speeding. Both being well known, and expressing a wish to start on a journey, the arresting officer released them on the agreement that they appear before the judge before going. As court was not in session the two men drove to the Lumley home, and when a voice answered the bell they walked into the house. Finding the judge in his tub, they explained the necessity for their unconventional call. They waived their rights and were fined $10, which they paid by leaving a check on the table in the judge's sitting-room.

PORTLAND (Or.) Nov. 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Hildegard Butz, 17 years old and pretty, has been appointed carrier of rural route No. 2 out of Portland, which extends from the city postoffice out the Cornell road, to and through part of Washington county and returning by the Barnes road, a distance of twenty-six and a half miles. Her appointment is the result of a civil service examination from which she emerged with flying colors.

She will draw a salary of $83.50 per month and it is necessary for her to keep three horses to fulfill her duties. At the same time a carrier in the city, using a cart, receives $135 per month.

"This," says Miss Butz, "seems hardly fair; but I am glad to get the route, anyway."

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN JOSE, Nov. 4.—The mystery surrounding A. A. West, the "man from Mexico," who is held here on the charge of defrauding a liveryman, and who has persistently refused to disclose his identity or past life, has been solved, according to reports received by the local police from the Chief of Police of Portland, Or., who declares that West is none other than J. H. Davis, alias E. K. Campbell, a man paroled in April last after receiving sentence for three years for obtaining money under false pretenses. West still denies that he is Davis. In this city West married a girl after three days' acquaintance, and ran up bills to a large amount.

HARBOR IMPROVEMENTS.

LEGALITY OF BONDS ISSUED.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, Nov. 4.—The legality of the million dollar bonds voted for the improvement of San Francisco harbor was established by Superior Judge Hughes today after the matter had been submitted to him by Att.-Gen. Webb, representing the State, and N. W. Halsey company, the bond buyers. The matter was submitted to the court to have the bonds approved, as Gov. Gillett failed to issue the proclamation after the bonds had carried. The State held that a proclamation was not mandatory, but only directory, and this view was also taken by the court. Halsey company had paid $5000 for premium on the bonds, and under the court's order will now proceed to take up the bonds. Halsey company of San Francisco, paid to State Treasurer Roberts today the first installment of the one million dollar bonds. The actual amount paid into the treasury was $1,018,563.55, which includes $1,000,000 in bonds, $5,008 premium, and accrued interest of $13,555.55.

DEAFNESS

SUCCESSFULLY TREATED
By the Simplest Method Yet Discovered

Ninety-five per cent. of the cases of deafness brought to our attention are the result of chronic catarrh of the throat and middle ear. The air passages become clogged by catarrhal deposits, stopping the action of the vibratory bones. Until these deposits are removed relief is impossible. The inner ear cannot be reached by probing or spraying, hence the inability of specialists to always effect a cure. Neither can ear drums cure deafness. But there is a scientific treatment for deafness and catarrh which is demonstrated every day by the use of Actina. The vapor generated in the Actina passes through the Eustachian tubes into the middle ear, removing the catarrhal obstructions and loosens up the bones (hammer, anvil and stirrup) in the inner ear, making them respond to the vibration of sound. Actina has also been very succesful in relieving ringing noises in the head. We have known people afflicted with this distressing trouble for years to be entirely relieved by a few weeks' use. Actina has also been very successful in the treatment of hay fever, asthma, bronchitis, sore throat, weak lungs, colds, headache, and other troubles that are directly or indirectly due to catarrh. Actina will be sent on trial postpaid. Write us about your case. Our advice will be free as well as a valuable book—Prof. Wilson's Treatise on Disease. —Plenty of Swains Seek to Wed Seattle Girl Who "Frisked" Alaskan of His "Poke."

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SEATTLE (Wash.) Nov. 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] When Judge Gay announced that he would parole Jeannette McLean who had confessed to stealing $110 from an Alaskan while out on a joy ride, providing an honest husband could be found for her, he started something. Both he and the woman have been deluged with letters from prospective grooms. The judge has a bushel of them. But the discovery was made today that the woman is already married. Judge Gay paroled her, anyhow. She is required to report to the court every month for three years. Another young woman who accompanied the McLean girl on the ride when the robbery was committed was paroled by Judge Gay because a young man agreed to wed her, and it was Judge Gay's announcement at that time that he would treat Jeanette McLean similarly that brought the missives in showers from would-be benedicts.

WILL CONTEST.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 4.—The contest of the will of Julius Friedman, who died in 1900, leaving an estate of $250,000 to charity, was submitted to Judge Thomas F. Graham today. Since Friedman's death the value of the real estate has increased to $650,000. Friedman's holographic will declared he died without relatives. After his death, depositions from 40 persons claiming to have been related to him were in the court's hands. These records went through the great fire of 1906 and many of the depositions were so badly charred when removed from the vaults that they could not be read. By the expenditure of much labor the attorneys succeeded in restoring enough of the documents to permit the trial to proceed.

TOBACCO PLANS WELL RECEIVED.

Atty.-Gen. Wickersham Optimistic at Progress.

Thinks Trust's Reorganization Is in Good Faith.

Stockholders Likewise Happy at New Situation.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Upon his return from New York today, Atty.-Gen. Wickersham was in a very optimistic mood concerning the litigation growing out of the dissolution of the American Tobacco Company. He said that while the case is entirely out of the hands of the Deparament of Justice and he has no knowledge as to the eventual outcome of the litigation, he believes the action of the court will be satisfactory to all the interests concerned.

"I am satisfied that the tobacco company's representatives acted in entire good faith in submitting their plan of dissolution," he said, "and I believe the court will settle the case so that every one will be pleased.

"There is nothing left for us to do but wait the action of the court. Of course, if at any time in the future it appears that any of the parties are not living up to the court's decision, the government will be ready to take further steps."

It had been expected at one time that the Attorney-General would take an antagonistic view of the proposed dissolution plan of the tobacco trust, and some of the interests connected with that corporation wanted radical action, even asking that a receiver be appointed to entirely close out the trust.

Mr. Wickersham, however, has taken the ground that such action would be a public calamity and result in great injury to not only those directly in the management of the trust, but to many innocent stockholders as well.

There is general satisfaction among holders of stocks already affected and those likely to be affected by dissolution suits, at the conciliatory attitude of the Attorney-General and the feeling that chaos was to result from the government's uncompromising position that the Sherman anti-trust act must be implicitly enforced has practically disappeared.

WEST FLEET IS PRAISED.

High Degree of Efficiency Is Shown in Mobilization in Los Angeles Harbor.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] In his preliminary report to the Navy Department, Rear Admiral Thomas says the Pacific Fleet displayed a very high degree of efficiency in its mobilization at Los Angeles. He declares the review was highly satisfactory. Satisfaction was expressed by the members of Congress present on invitation of Secretary Meyer. They visited the various ships and were received with the customary honors as a committee of Congress. The navy chiefs are much gratified with the success of the Pacific maneuvers, but they say Congress ought to provide two vice-admirals, one for the Pacific and one for the Atlantic fleet.

COMING TO COAST ON INSPECTION TRIP.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Capt. Carr W. Walter, ordnance department, has been ordered to Los Angeles and San Diego to inspect coast artillery material issued to the militia, and to Fort Rosecrans to inspect armament. Capt Walter will visit other Coast points before concluding his tour of duty.

WASHINGTON (D. C.) Nov. 4.—[By A. P. Day Wire.] Depositors in the government's postal savings banks January 1 next may exchange all or part of their deposits for bonds, according to announcement made yesterday. These bonds, which will pay 2½ per cent., one-half per cent. more than the ordinary postal deposit interest, will be issued in $20, $100 and $500 denominations.

Coming and Going.

SAN FRANCISCO BETTER CANNOT WIN OR WELSH.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] An innocent-looking civil action brought in the Superior Court by V. De Martini, a court interpreter of the Italian language, against L. Scatena, president of the Bank of Italy, to recover $1,000, today developed before Judge George A. Sturtevant to be an effort to back out of an election bet.

From the arguments it appears that some time before the primary election De Martini made a bet of $1,000, to $500 with Leon Lewin a wholesale commission merchant, that Rolph would not be elected mayor of San Francisco at the primary.

At the time of making the bet De Martini claims he was laboring under the misapprehension that in order to be elected mayor, Rolph would have to receive a total of two-thirds of the entire vote cast.

Two days before election he learned the difference and, upon the advice of his counsel, notified the stakeholder and the others interested.

Scatena refused to return the money, as De Martini demanded, fearing his own liability if an action to collect from him should be pressed by Lewin.

Lewin was not satisfied to permit the money to be drawn down, claiming that a bet is a bet and it was not his fault if De Martini did not know the law.

The peculiar phase of the case, causing a fight against setting forth all of the facts, is that if this is done then the anti-gambling laws of the State may be pleaded by both Scatena and Lewin and De Martini stands a good chance to lose his money just the same, as if he had allowed the bet to stand without interruption.

TURKEY FOR MR. TAFT.

Rhode Island Fancier is Feeding Chestnuts To The Proud Bird To Be Eaten In White House.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEWPORT, (R. I.,) Nov 4.—Horace Vose, the Westerly turkey fancier is preparing his annual Thanksgiving gift for President Taft's table. The Taft turkey this year is a fine bronze gobbler, which is gaining weight on a diet of chestnuts, which produces a fine quality of white meat.

"I shall send President Taft the finest turkey I ever gave to any President since the one I sent to President Grant," said Vose.

GREAT CLEAN-UP PLAN.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Nov. 4.—A plan to merge all the young people's church societies in the United States and Canada to fight the liquor traffic, the social evil and dishonesty in public life was effected at yesterday's meeting of an organization known as "America's Young People," now in session here. The chief means by which these reforms are to be effected is through a campaign to induce young men to enter local politics.

GINSENG MARKET GONE.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MOUNT CARMEL, (Ill.,) Nov. 4.—The Chinese revolution has knocked the bottom out of the ginseng market. Expertations having fallen off to such an extent that the farmers totally find themselves losing on the root crop with steadily decreasing prices offered. Until yesterday ginseng for months had been selling here at $4.75 a pound, but the price dropped down to $2.50.

WAR UPON TIPPING.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Nov. 4.—A campaign against tipping has been started by commercial travelers of the United States. According to P. E. Dowe, president of the Commercial Travelers National league, fifty million dollars is distributed by salesmen annually among bell boys, waiters and porters in addition to $325,000,000 paid as regular hotel charges. President Dowe has mailed to the various associations of hotel proprietors what he calls the "final call" of the traveling salesmen. In this he serves the following ultimatum: "The traveling men, forced to action in self protection and finding only one way to bring the hotel proprietors to a realization that they have under rated public sentiment against the tipping abuse, are preparing to compile lists of private houses where transients can be accommodated. For commercial men with trunks, it is proposed to establish in the central section of each city a loft or lofts divided into light, clean show rooms. You can see that we mean business, but in consideration of the self evident fact that your members have failed properly to gauge the sentiment against tipping, we will withhold definite action a reasonable time and if there are no signs that the hotel proprietors propose to put their help upon a self respecting basis, making them wage earners instead of beggars for gratuities, no power on earth can prevent our carrying out our programme of reprisal."

Woman Who Knows the Supposed Victim of Oklahoma Life Convicts Informs One of Them that He Is a Citizen of Texas on the Way to Prove His Identity.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

OKLAHOMA CITY (Okla.) Nov. 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] After two men had served over eight years of life sentences as his supposed slayers, and more than eleven years after his supposed violent death at the hands of William M. Yoder and Thomas Curtis, A. J. Eyck, whose "dead body" was exhibited in the trial, is now reported alive in Paris, Tex. He has sent his photograph here and word that he is on the way here to be identified.

By chance several weeks ago Yoder heard of him through a woman who came here from Texas. She says she knows Eyck and when she heard the story of his murder here, she informed Yoder that A. J. Eyck was living in Texas.

The Eyck murder, according to the Oklahoma court annals, was committed by friends, who, according to the evidence, killed him in cold blood for a small amount of money. A body sewed up in a carpet, riddled by bullets and stabbed in many places, and without the head, which had been found in the Canadian River, was exhibited at the trial.

The head, much disfigured and sewed up in a pillow case, was also shown in court. The death penalty might have been the result of the trial had the evidence been more complete.

It is said that Eyck had not been in hiding, but merely had not known of the conviction of the two men for his murder.

WRANGLE OVER EVIDENCE IN DYNAMITE CASE.

Indianapolis Judge Grants Appeal of Ironworkers' Union Against Turning Over Books to Federal Grand Jury—Government Counsel Enters Strong Protest.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 4.—Judge Joseph J. Markey of the County Criminal Court this afternoon granted to the International Union of Bridge and Structural Ironworkers, an appeal to the Indiana Supreme Court from his order giving temporary possession of the evidence in the McNamara dynamiting case to the Federal grand jury.

More detectives than had appeared in this city at any other time since the raid on the offices of the International Bridge and Structural Ironworkers' Union and the arrest of John J. McNamara, were active today in the Federal and County courthouses.

Some were identified as assistants of William J. Burns and others were said to be agents of the Department of Justice at Washington. All were busy watching persons in any way interested in the dispute as to possession of evidence in the McNamara dynamiting case.

Pending decision by the Supreme Court, Judge Markey announced the evidence, which consists in part of account books of the ironworkers' union, would be guarded by deputy sheriffs.

United States Dist.-Atty. Charles W. Miller protested that the evidence was needed in the Federal grand jury's inquiry, opening next week and declared he was prepared to argue that an appeal could not lie in this case, but Judge Markey answered that he had already signed the bill of exceptions presented by counsel for the ironworkers' union and John J. McNamara.

Mr. Miller pointed out that if a subpoena were issued calling the Sheriff of the county before the Federal grand jury, with the evidence, and he obeyed, he would be in contempt of Judge Markey's court, and if he did not obey, the government might have recourse. He did not announce what action he would take.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—[By A. P. Day Wire.] Men receiving pensions from the government on account of wounds received in action, or any other form of disability, cannot be enlisted in the regular service and in the opinion of Brig.-Gen. Robert K. Evans, chief of the division of military affairs, expressed in a formal ruling today should not be enlisted in the National Guard. There are a number of cases of this kind in the organized militia

TWO WITNESSES FAIL TO APPEAR.

Verdict of Coroner's Jury in the Hicks Case.

Disturbances by Strikers in Railway Yards.

Extra Police May Be Needed to Maintain Order.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND (Or.) Nov. 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Prevented from getting at the facts surrounding the killing of William A. Wortman, a union striker, by Burt Hicks, an employing machinist, through the unexplained failure of at least two witnesses who were with Wortman at the time he was shot to make their appearance, a coroner's jury at the inquest this morning was forced to return a verdict which throws no light whatever on the affair, reciting merely that Wortman came to his death from a shot fired by Hicks.

Notwithstanding the disappearance of the union men who were with Wortman and who had aided him in the attack on Hicks which led him to shoot Wortman, testimony was brought out by Hicks's attorneys which indicated that self-defense was the motive for the killing.

THREATS AND CURSES.

Earl Griffin, although himself a member of a union, admitted that Wortman, accompanied by two or three other men, were following and cursing Hicks just before the shooting; that Wortman and Hicks came to blows and that it was then the shooting occurred. The object of his testimony was to contradict the statement made by Hicks that he was forced back into the entrance to Markell's store. Griffin swore Wortman went into the store entrance first.

Harry Born, who works in a store near the scene, heard the noise of the men bumping into the glass windows and running forward saw Hicks and Wortman fighting. With the report of the weapon Wortman staggered back into the store and fell. Born ran outside and heard a man in the crowd which assembled cry out to Hicks "You're a murderer." Hicks, he testified, replied, "I am not; he insulted me and called me names." The witness said he would not be able to identify the man who denounced Hicks's act.

There was testimony to show that about twenty or twenty-five men followed Policeman Coulter, Hicks, Foreman Anderson and two of the men from Hicks's shop. Hicks will be arraigned Monday.

Additional patrolmen are likely to be appointed to handle the strike situation, following the recent disturbance by union strikers in the railroad yards which are causing Police Chief Stover anxiety. The chief said he would be forced to this step soon if the demonstrations continue.

FOLLOWED BY STRIKERS.

Seven employees of the Brooklyn yards were followed by strikers for over ten blocks last night as they left work. The union men loudly abused the workmen.

Sergt. Olsner, in charge of the squad of police patrolling the East Side yards, made a long report of conditions to the chief. In part the report reads: "Much complaint has come to me from the police at the Southern Pacific shops regarding pickets who follow home the independent workmen, cursing them and frightening their wives and children. This without question will cause serious trouble sooner or later and to prevent this I spoke to the pickets a few days ago to quit following the men all the way home. Then they met the men several blocks from the shops and continued to follow them. Officers had to rush after them to stop fighting."

CHICAGO, Nov. 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] "Baby versus Bridge Whist" was the subject of discussion at a luncheon of the Illinois Congress of Mothers at the Union League Club this afternoon, and mothers who neglect their children and the sessions of the Congress of Mothers to compete for bridge prizes were severely scored.

Mothers in the wealthier sections of Chicago were said to be negligent in the care of their children; even more so than the mothers in the districts of the extremely poor.

"It is hard to designate which is the fortunate and which is the unfortunate child," said Mrs. W. H. Hefferan, president of the Englewood Woman's Club. "We ought to get out after the mothers in the aristocratic neighborhoods who turn their children over to teachers or nurses and go to their afternoon bridge parties. Stops a Deep-Seated Cough in a Hurry

A Family Supply of Unequaled Cough Remedy for 50c—Money Refunded If It Fails.

Cough medicines, as a rule, contain a large proportion of plain syrup—a good ingredient, but one that anyone can make. A pint of granulated sugar, with ½ pint of warm water, stirred for 2 minutes, gives you as good syrup as money can buy.

A 50-cent bottle of Pinex, mixed in a pint bottle with home-made sugar syrup, gives you a full pint of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-mixed for $2.50. There's a clear saving of $2.00. Full directions in package.

And money couldn't buy a quicker, better remedy. Takes hold at once, gives almost instant relief, and usually stops the most obstinate, deep-seated cough in 24 hours. It stimulates the appetite, is slightly laxative and has a pleasant taste—children take it willingly. Splendid for hoarseness, asthma, chest pains and other throat troubles, and unequaled for prompt results in whooping cough.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of imported Norway White Pine extract, and is rich in guaiacol and other natural healing pine elements. Simply mix it as directed with sugar syrup or strained honey, and it is ready for use.

Used in more homes in the U. S. and Canada than any other cough remedy.

Pinex has often been imitated, but never successfully, for nothing else will produce the same results. The genuine is guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. Certificate of guarantee is wrapped in each package. Your druggist has Pinex or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

SPEEDY WORK OF POLICEMAN.

Ex-Convicts Make Faux Pas in San Francisco.

The Live One Is Walloped for Moral Effect.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] In an interval of time so brief that it might have been measured by one swing of the pendulum in a kitchen clock, Policeman Thomas W. Maloney stood on the threshold of the hereafter when he looked into the barrel of James Dwyer's revolver in Battery street last night. The odds were 100 to 1 that there would be a dead policeman instead of a dead bandit. The muscles of Dwyer's finger on the trigger had already begun to contract when Maloney drew his revolver and fired, mortally wounding the highwayman.

Dwyer died as a result of his wound in the Central Emergency Hospital.

Policemen Maloney and James O'Donnell were detailed last night to go in citizens' clothes to the vicinity of Davis and Jackson streets and watch for footpads. There had been several hold-ups in the locality.

The policemen were walking along Battery street at 11 o'clock when James Dwyer, alias John Emerson, and George Murphy, both ex-convicts, crossed Battery street from the west side and approached them. When the pair had advanced to a distance of ten feet from the officers Dwyer leveled his revolver at Maloney and said: "Throw up your hands. Throw them up quick!"

Dwyer advanced so rapidly that when he had finished speaking the muzzle of his revolver almost touched Maloney's face. Instead of throwing up his hands, Maloney reached for his pistol and fired, the bullet striking Dwyer full in the throat. Dwyer fell and his revolver dropped.

In the same moment O'Donnell struck Murphy in the face and knocked him down. The officers said it all seemed to happen in a second.

The highwaymen, who made the mistake of believing the policemen ordinary pedestrians, were young men. James Dwyer, alias Emerson, in January, 1906, was given one and a half years in Folsom for a burglary committed in Ventura county. George Murphy was sent to Folsom for two years in April, 1905, for a burglary committed in Los Angeles. He is a steeplejack.

Frenchman Finds Teeth of Quarternary Epoch Man Worn Down to the Crown.

[A. P. CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

PARIS, Oct. 18.—Doctor Henri-Martin, grandson of the great historian, made an announcement at the weekly meeting of the Academy of Sciences of exceptional importance to the study of pre-historic man. At the foot of a hill in the department of the Charente the doctor dug up the skull of a man of the Quarternary Epoch, showing marked divergences from the four or five similar specimens already extant, notably a very pronounced protuberance at the base of the forehead. The teeth, which are very strong, are worn right down to the crown, and lead to the belief that their owner was herbivorous. Beside the skull were found a few broken instruments and some other bones, all of the same period, and the digging is being continued with the greatest care in the hope of being able to unearth the complete skeleton.

CHURCH PROGRESS IN JAPAN.

Methodist Conference Held In Tokio Shows Sunday-School Work Growing In Interest.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

TOKIO, Nov. 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The second quadrennial conference of the Methodist Church in Japan has just closed after a session lasting two weeks. The reports show that there has been progress along all lines. The membership has increased to more than 13,700, while the growth of the Sunday-schools has been remarkable.

The proposition to appoint an advisory commission, practically eliminating the bishop's power, was rejected. Instead an assistant was appointed to relieve the bishop of routine office work.

It was made known that the church was approaching a condition of self-support, more than 70,000 yen ($35,000,) having been raised in Japan in 1910. Less foreign aid will consequently be needed.

YOUNG ATTORNEY INDICTED.

Portland Lawyer Charged With Agreeing to Accept a Bribe While Acting as City Judge.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND (Or.) Nov. 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Max G. Cohen, a young attorney, was indicted, by the grand jury today on the charge of agreeing to take a bribe of $150 for a verdict while he was acting municipal judge, last month.

Cohen is supposed to be in Chicago. He left Portland a week ago, saying he had a case to try in Chicago which was to keep him there several weeks. From Chicago he said he intended to go to Florida for an indefinite stay. It is expected efforts will be made to have him returned for trial.

The indictment comes as the result of charges brought against Cohen by Police Commissioner John B. Coffey. Coffey and his witnesses say that Cohen, while acting judge agreed to take $150 from Leonora Maceo for a verdict favorable to her in the case in which she was defendant.

QUESTION OF BAIL AND GOING TO PRISON.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

REDDING (Cal.) Nov. 4.—The question of placing Daniel Fleming, who is out on $25,000 bail during his trial for the murder of George Villier, in the custory of the Sheriff came before Judge Barber today, but was postponed until Monday. Fleming's counsel explained that it was the custom in this county for prisoners under bail to remain at liberty until a verdict had been reached. The prosecutor cited instances to the contrary where defendants in murder cases had been committed to custody in spite of bail. Judge Barber inclined to the prosecutor's view and said he was against setting a new precedent. Nevertheless he said he would take a couple of days to decide. He pronounced Fleming's bail excessive.

ANOTHER CHANCE.

RENO (Nev.) Nov. 4.—L. A. D. Percival, president of the Amalgamated Paint Company of New York and Boston, was denied a divorce by Judge John S. Orr today. The court held Percival failed to show a legal residence and ordered the case dismissed without prejudice, thus allowing the plaintiff to file another suit. Percival alleged cruelty, and his wife did not contest.

WOMAN IS A POWER.

Becomes Assistant to the President of a Railway and Navigation Company In Portland, Or.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND (Or.) Nov. 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Portland has a brand new novelty in Mrs. A. E. Griffith, the assistant to President Farrell, of the Oregon-Washington Railroad and Navigation Company. Portland railroad men who have met Mrs. Griffith in the past few days have learned that her title is not simply an honorary one.

Not a bit of transportation issued by the Oregon-Washington is good unless countersigned by Mrs. Griffith. The back of each pass bears a little notice to that effect. It doesn't speak of her as Mrs. Griffith, but as A. E. Griffith.

The new assistant to the president of the O.W.R., and N., is an attractive looking brunette with coal black hair and eyes, a flashing smile and business-like, but pleasant manners. She has a private office adjoining that of President Farrell on the eleventh floor of the Wells Fargo building and company employees who think they have to see President Farrell on business matters have to see Mrs. Griffith first. Usually that means they don't have to see President Farrell. Mrs. Griffith sees to that, and personally handles a large share of the important business of the office.

Mrs. Griffith has been with Mr. Farrell for ten or fifteen years, having been his secretary when he was with the Great Northern in Seattle and later becoming his chief clerk when he was made vice-president of the Seattle-Portland Harriman lines.

RANCHER ACCUSED OF MURDER.

Man Whom He Beat and Kicked in Fight Found Dead Next Day and Warrant Sworn Out.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

COLLINS (Mont.) Nov. 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] George Ulhack is dead; a warrant charging John Dickerson with his murder is in the hands of the Sheriff and the arrest of the accused is hourly expected. The tragedy for which Dickerson must answer to court is the outcome of a row which started in the Oasis saloon at Collins late yesterday afternoon and was concerning a horse deal.

The men engaged in a fight and used their fists with telling effect, it is said by witnesses. Finally Dickerson knocked Ulhack down and jumped on him and stamped him in the face with his feet. After the fight Ulhack washed his face and walked about the town and later mounted his horse and started to ride home, but apparently was stricken on the way, for his horse went to his ranch and the body was found this morning by the roadside by Walter Gorham, driver of the Collins-Choteau stage.

Gorham brought the body to town and notified the officers and a warrant was issued at once charging Dickerson with the murder.

Ulhack was 45 years old and formerly was one of the owners of the Collins Hotel at Collins.

Dickerson is a well known rancher. He lives near Collins and has a SMALL OWNERS IN THE FIGHT.

Realty Men Working for the City's Safety.

Everybody With Property Is on the Alert.

Tremendous Campaign to Beat the Socialists.

As a result of the energetic campaign the Los Angeles Realty Board is making in behalf of George Alexander for Mayor and for the other Good Government candidates, practically every real estate dealer in Los Angeles has temporarily suspended his business, or at least given notice that he will devote as much time as possible to the purpose of registering every available voter for the coming election.

From all portions of the city the realty men have rallied to the headquarters of the board in the Consolidated Realty building and offered their services.

The small real estate dealer is more prominent than the large dealer in this work. Out of a total membership of 435 over 300 have already volunteered their services, and assurances have been received by Secretary Wilson at headquarters, that practically all members of the board, most of them small dealers, will be available for this work.

The members are being sworn in rapidly as Deputy County Clerks are devoting their time to registering both men and women in the residence districts, who have heretofore failed to register.

Austin O. Martin is chairman of the Registration Committee of the board, and he, together with his committee of twenty-five, are working night and day to assist County Clerk Lelande in the good work of registering voters who will cast their ballots for George Alexander.

Today, Sunday, the work will not let up for an instant; it is legal to register on Sunday and the members of the realty board who have been appointed Deputy County Clerks will work all day in this important undertaking. Members of the Registration Committee will be on duty. They will be engaged the greater part of the time in a house-to-house canvass in their respective precincts, but they will be ready at their own residences to receive calls from all unregistered persons in their neighborhood, and to register them at any time during the day if notice will be left at their residences.

With Bradner W. Lee in the chair, Phil A. Stanton as vice-chairman, J. J. Petermichel, secretary, and Gen. Wankowski as treasurer, the Citizens' Committee is now ready for strenuous work. The next meeting will be held tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock in Room 839, H. W. Hellman building. Sub-committees, to be appointed by the chair, will be announced at that meeting. George N. Black and Secretary Petermichel, as a committee on headquarters, have full authority to act, and will open their offices some time tomorrow.

"Los Angeles is to be congratulated on the strength of this committee of workers," said Chairman Lee last night. "Every member has accepted, and each has been appointed because of special ability to get out a winning Alexander vote. We know what is at stake, and we know the work required to make our point. We will deliver the goods."

Timely Tip.

MILWAUKEE CITIZENS GIVE WARNING TO LOS ANGELES.

Failure of Socialists to Make Good in Wisconsin City Is Described by Strong Men from Milwaukee—Taxes Higher and Treasury Looted and Not a Single Preelection Pledge Carried Out.

"LET Los Angeles take a lesson from Milwaukee and fight the red peril which menaces it. This menace is real, let there be no mistake about that. If the various factions do not unite and present a solid front the Socialists will overwhelm Los Angeles as they did Milwaukee one year ago. The Socialists are working in Los Angeles day and night. They know politics and they are trained talkers and organizers. They carried Milwaukee because of the apathy or indifference of a large percentage of voters. Don't let this happen in Los Angeles and regret it when it is too late. Get out every vote and don't stop short of that."

This was the earnest warning given yesterday by H. F. Cochems and C. A. A. McGee, representative citizens of Milwaukee, who dropped off in this city en route to Vancouver on business. Cochems was a candidate for Congress in the Fifth Wisconsin Congressional District and was defeated by Victor L. Berger, Socialist, by 200 votes. McGee was a candidate for District Attorney to succeed himself. He was defeated by W. C. Zabel, Socialist, although he received a big Republican vote, and ran ahead of his ticket.

These vigorous types of the best citizenship of Milwaukee are not here on a political mission. McGee brought his family, who will pass the winter in Ventura, but they are sincerely interested in the fight against the Socialists which Los Angeles is putting up and with the desire to strengthen the voters' hands against the fate of their own fair city, now dominated by the Socialists, they earnestly outlined the present conditions in Milwaukee, which will be the situation in Los Angeles if socialism defeats Alexander December 5.

"The people of Los Angeles," they said in a joint interview, "are in a more advantageous position than we were in Milwaukee last year because you have got a Good Government or non-partisan organization as against our party nominees. Had we been similarly favored undoubtedly the result would have been the defeat of the socialists.

"The Socialist victory in Milwaukee was not due primarily to their platform or to their principles so much as to a protest against conditions as they existed under two former administrations, augmented by the apathy and indifference of the voters. This will be seen from the fact that the Socialists cast approximately 35 per cent. of the vote in the county, leaving 65 per cent., which would readily have won had the organization been sufficient to express that vote at the polls.

"The factional and party disputes in Milwaukee prevented a solid front to the socialistic menace at the time of the election of Mayor Seidel, but with the experience of the past year of socialistic rule, this has been changed until now there is a universal desire to sink our family differences in the face of the great and more serious menace, and we are ready to get together to overthrow the socialistic influence. We have not the machinery for a non-partisan election which you enjoy in Los Angeles, but sentiment has grown so strong during the year that we shall be able, we hope, to effect the same results, by mutual agreement between the voters and factions of all parties.

"The Socialists promised the most unusual things; for instance that the prices of commodities would be reduced, when any sane man knows it is absolutely impossible for a municipal government to control commodity prices. They promised meat and ice at cost—a municipal ice plant, municipal slaughter-house; homes built by the city at a nominal cost for laboring men; municipal electric light plant; public utilities owned by the city; a big railway terminus; remission of water taxes to washerwomen; free ice for the poor; reduction of taxes, labor for the unemployed; municipal survey to improve housing conditions.

"And what have the Socialists done for Milwaukee? Nothing; absolutely not a thing. They have not redeemed a single pledge. The taxes are higher under their levy than ever before in the history of the city. There are more unemployed, drawn to Milwaukee by reason of the great things the Socialists said they were going to do.

"The Socialists had leaders intelligent enough to know that what they promised was absolutely impossible. What is more, immediately after, the patronage of public office fell to them they had the hungry desire to fatten at the public trough and pass the good things on to their relations. Notwithstanding their salary roll is so high and their expenditures are profligate, the taxes are higher than ever before. Every relative and every office holder is being taken care of in a way that equals the re-construction days in South Carolina.

"Milwaukee is a manufacturing city, and perhaps for that reason socialism has not injured it as much as it will Los Angeles, which has commercial relations, if they win out in December. But Milwaukee is a term of reproach now in the business centers of the East. We have lost a good many industries which intended to come to Milwaukee and would have built there if the Socialists had not gained control.

"Gen. Otto Falk, president of the Merchants' & Manufacturers' Association, stated that at the time the Mayoralty election was pending an arrangement had practically been concluded for the establishment of an industry which would employ 1500 men, but when the Socialists got in control, the parties declined to invest their money and left the city. This is one of the many instances.

"We are marking time now. The people are aroused. Meantime, the eyes of the country are on Los Angeles. A Socialist victory here in December makes it easier for the Socialists in Milwaukee and stiffens them in other cities where the same organization is going on, and where the same fights will be made to control municipal affairs.

"You can't put it too strong to the voters of this city that the Socialists are a menace, an organized menace working while you sleep. They are tireless in proselyting, ingenious in their arguments, but when it comes to making good, they can't, because of very good constitutional reasons.

"Take the tip from Milwaukee which enjoyed a fair name, but now is a reproach because it's got an old man of the sea on its back."

Cures Like Nature

Drugless Treatment Restores Health While You Sleep

Here's a remedy that cures while you sleep. No poisonous drugs to swallow. No weak stomach or digestive troubles due to drugging. This remedy is Nature's medicine—electricity.

The only way to cure anything is to help Nature. Nature will cure when she has the power. That power is electricity. Feed it to your nerves and they will absorb and carry it to every organ and tissue of the body, where it gives health and vim to every ailing part.

The reason drugs don't cure is because they do not assist nature. Nature needs nourishment, strength, something that builds up. Drugs give no nourishment, no electricity, not one thing that builds up vitality—just poison which tears down.

Electra-Vita is the dry cell body battery for saturating the nerves and vitals with life-giving electricity. It builds up vitality and strength in every weakened organ and removes the cause of disease by giving to every ailing part the power to do its work as Nature intended.

Electra-Vita does not shock or blister. Its influence is powerful, yet soothing and pleasant to the nerves. It makes its own electricity, therefore it is always charged ready for use. It is applied while you sleep.

Those who have used Electra-Vita say that it is the grandest remedy of the age.

Mr. Jacob Isaac, Jr., care Bartlett State bank, Bartlett, Texas, says: "I must acknowledge that I am well satisfied with my use of Electra-Vita, and it has done me a great deal of good in my condition of nervousness, weak back and stomach trouble."

Miners at Fernie, B. C., Resent Importation of Blacks and Stones and Bullets Fly In Crowd.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

FERNIE (B. C.) Nov. 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Three colored miners in jail for their protection, one running for life, several shots fired by one of the colored men and the roughest evening during the week of excitement outline the incidents after the arrival of the mine train from Coal Creek with four colored miners today. The crowd of white miners began to hoot and jeer, following the negroes up the street. One negro flourished a revolver, but afterwards promised that he would not go back to work. He later disappeared.

While keeping from the angry mob another of the frightened negroes suddenly fired at his pursuers. The mob showered the negro with stones. The police promised the mob that if they would stop throwing stones they would lodge the blacks in jail. Three of the negroes are now in the City Jail while the other is seeking his own safety.

One Time Congressman From Missouri Charged With Participation In St. Louis Insurance Scandal.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Harry Marcy Coudrey, who represented the Twelfth District of Missouri in the Sixtieth and Sixty-first Congresses and who used the letterheads of the House of Representatives to promote a $15,000,000 enterprise which he called the Lincoln National Holding Company of America, was arrested in this city today by special agents of the department of justice.

Coudrey is wanted in St. Louis, where he is under indictment with seven others in connection with the Continental Life Assurance Company and International Fire Assurance Company scandal. He was at one time president of both concerns.

The indictments were found by the Federal grand jury at St. Louis in October. Only one of the indicted men was in St. Louis at the time, and that was Grant Gillespie, a member of the Missouri legislature, who was general counsel for the two insurance companies. Coudrey was taken to St. Louis tonight.

This is the first time so far as known that this peak, which is 22,000 feet high, has ever been ascended.

Prof. Bingham has made several trips to Peru and other sections of South America. That the Yale expedition is meeting with the co-operation of the Peruvian government is apparent from the message received today by Yale from the Sub-prefect of the council of Cetahuast, Peru, which was as follows:

"Greeting: appreciate expedition."

Chicago Learned That New Yorkers Are Responsible For Boosting Price Nearly Five Dollars a Barrel.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Nov. 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Complaints made to Dist. Att. James H. Wilkerson that a corner existed in the cranberry market brought to light today that it is possible for producers to control the market.

Henry J. Cox, weather forecaster in Chicago, who has made an exhaustive study of the industry, declared that berries can be sold at $5 per barrel and the grower make a good profit. The price in Chicago now is $10.50 a barrel. This is an increase of $4.50 over the price a year ago.

Evidence was presented to the district attorney that the crop now ready in three States is absolutely controlled by a New York central organization.

Van Dyne Paid $10,000 Bonus for a Lease

Van Dyne Gone—Perrin Opens Monday

5 Car Loads New Merchandise Bought by Perrin Arrives Here

Read this Personal Statement by Francois Perrin

When my old friend George Van Dyne found himself without a lease and with a $100,000 stock on his hands he came to me as a last resort for a sublease of my store at Sixth and Spring Streets for two weeks.

Had I known that he would have remained for a longer period, I would not have, under any circumstances, allowed him the store. At the time Van Dyne saw me I was ready to put the carpenters to work on the installation of my beautiful fixtures.

At the end of the second week Van Dyne had an enormous stock on hand and I could hardly throw him into the street. My only salvation was to make my profit on the lease. This I did, netting a $10,000 bonus over and above what the lease cost me.

I now find myself with five carloads of the highest class merchandise on my hands and the season practically over. I absolutely must get my store fixed up for the holiday trade, so my only salvation is to throw this whole stock to the mercy of the Los Angeles public.

I do not like to boast or brag at this time, but I will say that no higher grade of merchandise can be found in the city. It is positively a shame to sacrifice it, but it's yours for practically the asking and carrying away.

Remember, I made my profit on the lease and you get the benefit. Van Dyne paid the way for you and I.

Yours truly, FRANCOIS PERRIN.

Balance of Van Dyne Stock Taken Over By Perrin

You know what this means, don't you? Van Dyne HAD to return to New York. He couldn't take his broken lines with him except at enormous cost. So he sacrificed everything at terribly low figures to enable him to get out. We jumped at the chance. All broken lines of the Van Dyne stock is selling tomorrow at about 15 cents on the dollar, and that's going some! But we have added five new carloads of the cleanest, newest, most stylish men's clothing it was possible to buy. So you'll find a complete stock to select from. It's just opened—never been picked over—never shown before. It will make your heart jump with joy when you come in tomorrow and actually see these hitherto unthought-of Bargains in Priced-Slashed Values.

THIS WAS THE CHANCE OF A LIFETIME FOR US! But it means the chance of a score of lifetimes to you. Never under any possible set of circumstances will such prices be made again. Our new goods are sacrificed, too. We were ready to open this store six weeks ago. But we let Van Dyne have the store. Now the season is practically over, we simply MUST NOT carry this swell clothing on our shelves for another year. We've made our profit out of Van Dyne. You, Mr. Man, get the benefit of it all. Are you going to jump at the chance? Well, we just guess you will!

So come early. Be here when the doors open at 8 a.m. You have the most wonderful selection of choice fabrics, colors and tailoring that ever came to Los Angeles.

SAILORS END GREAT SEASON.

Wind Up South Coast Year With Big Banquet.

Giving of Prizes a Feature of Final Meeting.

Dory Contest Scheduled to Be Sailed Today.

BY R. A. WYNNE.

The annual banquet of the South Coast Yacht Club was given last night at the club's handsome home at San Pedro with seventy-five members present.

The affair was the closing event of a year which has been unusually successful for the club. During the last twelve months there has been a substantial increase in the membership and in the interest and enthusiasm shown in the various sports of the club. There have been many interesting races held and the report of Commodore D. H. Laubersheimer showed the club to be in a rapidly growing and flourishing condition.

The clubhouse was beautifully decorated and in the big assembly-room the many silver trophies won during the year were displayed on a great table. The guests began to arrive in the afternoon and while there was no set programme for racing, many of the members had parties aboard their yachts and enjoyed the afternoon sailing about in the outer harbor. The day was ideal for sailing, with a light breeze and a clear sky.

In the evening when the banquet table had been spread and the guests were seated, Commodore Laubersheimer acted as toastmaster and following the discussion of the excellent menu, brought out the roll of honor for the year in which the winning yachts and their owners are mentioned and the various cups and other trophies are allotted.

The list of winners and their boats follow:

Ocean Park Cup, won by Morgan Adams in the Mah-Pe.

Rear-Commodores' Cup, won by F. H. Percival in the Sea Bird.

The Whitley Cup, won by Morgan Adams in the Mah-Pe. As this is the second time Adams has won the cup it becomes his personal property.

Nordlinger Cup for race around Bird Rock at Catalina Island, won by Warren Wood in the Mischief.

F. A. Garbutt Santa Catalina Island Cup, won by Joseph Fellows in the Campbell.

Three cups presented by the South Coast Yacht Club for motor boat races at Station "A" at Balboa, first won by Warren Wood in the Iroquois, second by Fred Beckwith in the Corsair and third by W. W. Wilson in the To-Mae.

Montgomery Cup for race around Catalina Island, won by Morgan Adams in Mah-Pe.

Commodore MacFarlane Cup for race around Santa Barbara Islands, won by Morgan Adams in Mah-Pe. This cup was won by Commodore MacFarlane in the race from San Pedro to Honolulu and was brought to the South Coast Yacht Club and posted as a trophy.

Santa Barbara Yacht Club trophy for yawls, won by R. P. Spaulding in the Minerva.

Trophy for "P" Class, won by Morgan Adams in Mah-Pe.

Trophy for "R" Class, won by Paul Jeffers in the Wasp.

Santa Barbara Club Cup for free-for-all, won by Paul Jeffers in the Wasp.

Santa Barbara Club trophy for arbitrary handicap, won by Warren Wood in Mischief.

Santa Barbara Club arbitrary handicap for motor boats, won by Warren Wood in Mischief.

Santa Barbara Club trophy for motor boats under rules, won by Frank Garbutt in the Mystery.

Vice-Commodore trophy, won by K. R. Bradley in the Idler.

South Coast Yacht Club trophy for arbitrary handicap, won by Warren Wood in the Mischief.

South Coast Yacht Club trophy for arbitrary handicap motor boat race, won by Joseph Fellows in the Campbell.

South Coast Yacht Club trophy for dories, won by Warren Wood in the Merrily.

South Coast Yacht Club trophy for swimming race, won by W. D. Whelan, Jr.

LAST RACE TODAY.

Today a match race has been arranged between Fred Lambourne and Warren Wood in their dories, the Chili Pepper of Lambourne and the Merrily of Woods. These two boats are very evenly matched and in their last meeting Wood defeated the Chili Pepper and Lambourne has challenged Wood for a return match to be held this afternoon in the outer harbor.

The clubhouse of the South Coast Yacht Club will remain open all winter and while the larger boats will be withdrawn from commission there will be many small boats still in action and races will be held during the winter from time to time.

STANFORD BABIES LOSE TO BRITONS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Nov. 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] British Columbia, 6; Stanford, 5.

Coach Presley put a bunch of substitutes on the field against the rugbyists from British Columbia this afternoon and the visitors proved too strong for the second team men. The Cardinal team opened the game with Louis Cass of Los Angeles acting as captain in the absence of Erb. There were only three or four other varsity men in the line up.

Cass was kicked on the ankle and Presley took him out. Before the end of the first period Reeves was the only "S" man on the field. In the second half Presley gave nearly everybody in the squad a chance. The Conacks registered two tries and Stanford secured one. The Cardinal's registered their tally in the first period when Worswick got the ball out of the ruck near the Canucks' line and ran in goal. Templeton converted. With the best Stanford players out of the game, the visitors made two well earned tries in the second half, Fox and Stross scoring. McGuigan failed to convert either try.

Presley kept the first team men out of the game in order not to take any chances of having the heavy crippled list enlarged or other minor injuries of Harrigan, Geissler, Kern, Partridge and Corbett aggravated.

The game was the last in which Stanford will engage before meeting California.

The second team defeated the U. S. Marines from Mare Island, 20 to 0.

COULON TURNS DOWN OFFERS.

Refuses Fine Offer to Meet Champion Abe.

Also Spurns McCarey's Bid for Danny Webster.

Brother Ben Puts the Ban on Heavy Pugs.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Nov. 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Ben Coulon, brother and manager of Johnny, bantamweight champion of the world, made his first real managerial move today when he turned down an offer of $3000 for a fight between his brother and Abe Attell.

The offer came from New Orleans and came in the form of a guarantee. It carried with it more than just the plain figures of $2000. This amount, with a privilege of 25 per cent., was the original bid, so if they drew a big house Johnny's end would overreach the guarantee.

"McCarey sent us a flattering offer to come West and fight Danny Webster," said Ben. "This also I turned down, for John is not fighting featherweights just yet."

RIVERS TO BEGIN REAL WORK TUESDAY.

Manager Joe Levy for Joe Rivers announced yesterday that he has leased the Eastside Club for Rivers to do his training for the Conley fight November 18. This means that Rivers will not train at Venice with Freddie Welsh.

Joe is to begin active work on Tuesday and he will have Louis Hahn, Battling Chico and Andy Rivers as sparring partners.

SAN GABRIEL GOLF HONORS FOR MRS. PIERCE.

BY ALMA WHITAKER.

MRS. D. W. PIERCE won the handicap tournament against Bogey at the San Gabriel Country Club yesterday morning, with a net score of 7. She had, however, a handicap of forty strokes, her gross score being 107. The cup for this tournament was put up by Mrs. C. B. Carter, a particularly nice cup of heavy silver and chaste design.

Mrs. Pierce is one of the newcomers to the game, and there was general satisfaction that the honors should go to a novice. The handicaps appear to be unusually high in this match but they were gauged from the men's Bogey, 78, and are therefore, a good deal more reasonable than they appear.

Even Mrs. J. V. Eliot, who made the best gross score of 93, had a 3-stroke handicap, and she has been a scratch player for a long time. Mrs. Eliot's net score of 90 took third place—she was by no means playing her best game, and the sand greens were in such poor condition that putting was a matter of sheer luck every time. They are as hard as concrete and it was rare indeed, for a player not to drive over the green.

Mrs. Eliot's long game was, however, in her old style. At the seventeenth hole she would have finished in three with any sort of luck for she was on the green in two. She did No. 5 in 3, and her card showed four 4's. The last green is real grass on these links now. Here Mrs. Eliot should certainly have taken a four, but by the perversity of fate, her ball elected to hesitate on the brink.

Miss Alice Tobey took second place with a net score of 83, her gross score being 100, and her handicap increased to seventeen under the new arrangement. This is the fifth time Miss Tobey has just escaped winning the cup, a most tantalizing "second" falling forever to her lot. This time she would surely have won but for some trouble she encountered in the arroyo, for which hole she took ten strokes. The sixth hole has proved the undoing of many a potential winner before now. Miss Tobey did no less than five holes in 4.

Mrs. Gabrielle Elliott made her debut as a golfer in this event, and the poor greens notwithstanding, putting would appear to be her strong suit. She made one or two very good straight drives, too, and the onlookers were enthusiastic in predicting a bright golfing future for her.

Another very promising novice is Mrs. Gifford, who has all the signs that go to the making of a good player. She is very new to the game but bravely entered for the tournament and produced the creditable net score of 87, gross score 126, handicap 39. Miss Kathleen Pierce, and Miss Craig are also novices of whom Miss Alice Tobey expresses great hopes. Mrs. C. O. Alkire played with Mrs. Eliot, and, as was her fate on a previous occasion, she became irretrievably mixed up with the trees in the arroyo, her ball planting itself in an inaccessible fork of the branches. Her score of 93 did not therefore represent bad play so much as hard luck.

Miss Shirley Burns showed some very good play, and did three holes in four. She was driving well and shows marked improvement since last season. When the new course is opened and the ground in better condition, Miss Burns will be expected to show some real "class."

It was a most successful meeting, so much so that it is proposed to hold a regular ladies' tournament if possible. The Western Women's Golf Association puts up a bronze medal for monthly competition, to be played for six times. The winner for each occasion wears the medal for the ensuing month, and at the end of the half year the best average score keeps the trophy. Miss Alice Tobey has notified Chicago of that club's intention to join the association and directly the medal arrives the next tournament will be announced.

F. Q. Story, the club's president, looked in to make sure that everything was happening nicely, and came in for Mrs. J. V. Eliot's emphatic protest anent "them greens." Mr. Story, whose initials stand for Fairy Queen, promised to wave his wand. Hitherto it has proved one of the most effectual wands in existence.

Place Blame.

CRIME IS CHARGED IN BALL TICKET SCANDAL.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

RICHMOND (Va.) Nov. 4.—A warrant charging grand larceny was sworn out yesterday by William F. Gordon for the arrest of Walter Calvin, alleged to have embezzled $1050 furnished him for the purchase of tickets to the world's series baseball games for speculating purposes.

Calvin is said to have claimed he would obtain fifty tickets to each of the seven games from Harry Davis, captain of the Philadelphia Athletics.

Before the series opened Gordon sent a certified check on the American National Bank of Richmond for $1050 made out in favor of "Captain Harry Davis, Philadelphia baseball club." This check was subsequently deposited in Philadelphia indorsed "Captain Harry Davis, Philadelphia baseball club."

There is, of course, no charge against Davis, but the matter will be presented to the National Commission.

DAVIS DENIES STORY.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 4.—Former Captain Harry Davis of the Philadelphia Americans denied tonight that he had furnished or agreed to furnish Walter Calvin with any tickets to the world's series.

WHITTIER HIGH SCHOOL WON THE GAME.

In a hard, fast game yesterday afternoon the Whittier High School defeated L.A.M.A. 11 to 0. The game was rather uneventful, Whittier having the best of the argument all the way through.

In the first quarter Raymond of the High School was pushed over for the first score. St. Johns failed to kick the goal. The military boys managed to hold the Whittier lads scoreless during the next quarter, but in both sections of the second half St. Johns kicked a placekick. Whittier made good use of the forward pass. The lineup was as follows:

FIREMEN TO PLAY POLICE NEXT SUNDAY.

The baseball teams of the policemen and firemen are practicing hard every day for their big game next Sunday afternoon at Washington Park. This is to be one of the few games of the season between these teams, and as there is naturally a great deal of rivalry it goes without saying that the game should be a hotly-contested one. The police of course have the advantage of the firemen, for if the latter win they are liable to be arrested on some fake charge out of revenge.

Chief Ely of the firemen and Chief of Police Sebastian are to start the game at 2:30 o'clock, when Chief Ely will pitch the first ball, and Sebastian will try to catch it. Hap Hogan is to stand behind Sebastian to lend reinforcements if the ball cannot be stopped.

Both teams are to be prepped for the big game and the entire receipts will be given to the Firemen's Relief Fund.

AGAINST LACROSSE.

An attempt to revive lacrosse as a minor sport is being made at Columbia, but apparently has not made much headway. The sport was abolished last year by the athletic association because of lack of interest. Several meetings have already been held this year with the object of enlisting a sufficient number of candidates to make a success of the game. Judging, however, from the editorial in the Spectator the student body at large does not care to receive the game into the fold again. The editorial follows:

"Attempts are being made to revive lacrosse at Columbia, and we hope they fail. The game was abolished by the graduate manager, with the full consent of the manager of the team, and abolished on account of lack of material and not on account of financial difficulties. Lacrosse is in good standing in very few colleges in this country; it is not a game for the Americans of today. One college, Swarthmore, recognizes it as a major sport. The others relegate it to the rear. Lacrosse at Columbia never was a money-making sport. The last years it was played, and played as a minor sport, it took the best shot putter in college and one of the best long distance runners away from track to make up a poor team of its own. Lacrosse is dead, and both financially and athletically it ought to stay dead."

GOOD MARATHON RUNNER.

The latest piece of original news from the seat of the next Olympic games is that the Swedes have unearthed an out-and-out wonder for the Marathon race, not to talk of what they will show in the other events. This long-distance phenom never tried a gait quicker than a walk till he was thirty years of age, and then he began to test himself in a most peculiar way. He fixed a little track inside of a large barn and began cantering round and round until he could go no farther. As soon as he found that he could maintain a fair jog for a period of about three hours he took to the open, and immediately surprised the natives with what he could do in the way of endurance. The man's name is Jacobson, and he is already booked for the big classic.

NAGS FOR AUSTRALIA.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 4.—Thirty race horses, representing some of the choicest stock matured in Kentucky and California, are now stabled at Tanforan track here, awaiting shipment to Melbourne, Australia. The horses have been purchased by Irving H. Wheatcroft, a multi-millionaire of British Columbia, and are being shipped to the Antipodes by him with a view to reviving the racing game there.

NEW BASEBALL STUNT.

Purdue University will introduce next May the first interscholastic baseball tournament ever held. There are at present 232 commissioned high schools in the State of Indiana, each of which will be invited to enter a team in the fight for the championship cup. Six diamonds will be available, thus making it possible to play eighteen games a day, or to see thirty-six teams in action within a single twelve hours. The best umpires and officials that the West can afford will be secured to handle the indicators and drawings for the diamonds will be made each day. The number of prizes will total almost one hundred for the leaders of the various rounds. The grand champions of the tournament will receive as their share a silver trophy cup, besides a gold medal for each man on the team. The runners-up will also be presented with a silver cup emblematic of their success.

PLAYERS WANT GRIFFITH RETAINED AS MANAGER.

The future begins to look rosy for Clark Griffith, manager of the Cincinnati National League baseball team. August Herrmann, owner of the club, has about concluded to reconsider his decision to let Griffith out, and in the meantime several other openings are offering themselves to the latter. The most enticing of these is a chance to buy a half-interest in the Providence Eastern League Club and take the management of that team.

It is said also that the St. Louis Americans are ready to sign him. Herrmann's present proposition in the matter is as follows:

"I haven't decided what I shall do, and I'm not going to be in a hurry. Griffith is a hard worker and is entitled to square treatment. I won't say whether I will keep him or not, but I received a letter a couple of days ago, that cuts a big figure with me. It was signed by every member of the Cincinnati Reds and protested against the release of Clark Griffith. There was not a name missing in the list of signatures. The players declared that Griffith was not to blame for injuries and hard luck, and that all of them desired his retention. It isn't often a manager receives such a strong recommendation, and naturally this letter has got me guessing.

"The Reds certainly played great ball in August and September, and many persons then were ready to give Griffith another chance."

SAN DIEGO BEATEN.

SAN DIEGO, Nov. 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Long Beach won today's football game from San Diego High School by scoring a touchdown in the first quarter, counting five points. For the remainder of the game San Diego held Long Beach scoreless. San Diego was unable to score. The game was fast and well played.

Dennis May Appear.

The chances are now that Eddie Dennis may be put on with Louis Hahn for the ten-round semi-final to the Rivers-Conley match. Fred Harlow is managing Dennis now and is very anxious to have him show his class in this city. He is so anxious that he induced Dennis to call off the match he had in Dallas, Tex.

STRENGTHENING THE SEA FORTS.

KAISER WILHELM BUILDS NEW ONE AT BRUNSBUTTEL.

Germans Take No Risk of a Foreign Foe Eluding the Watchers to Slip in and Damage the Locks of the Great Kiel Canal—Large Guns Placed Along Coast.

[A. P. CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

BERLIN, Oct. 17.—Most important additions to the defenses of the northwest coast of Germany have recently been effected, especially in the vicinity of the North Sea entrance of the Kiel Canal. The Naval Department has considered the strengthening of these works necessary in view of the great increase in the number of torpedo and submarine vessels in the French and British navies.

Leading naval officers, in order to bring influence to bear on the department, have used the argument that, although the almost impregnable fortresses at Heligoland and Coxhaven offer great protection to the mouth of the Elbe and to Hamburg, yet should a single small foreign vessel succeed in eluding their vigilance it would be in a position to cause enormous damage, and able to threaten, it not destroy, the entrance to the canal, which is strategically of such great importance. On this account a new fortress has been constructed at Brunsbuttel, and four extra guns of large caliber have been placed in position along the coast in the neighborhood.

FOR THE COLLECTORS.

Autograph Letters of Frederick The Great To Be Exposed For Sale To Leipzig Next Year.

[A. P. CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

BERLIN, Oct. 17.—In view of the 200th anniversary of the birth of Frederick the Great, early next year, the disposal at Leipzig at the end of November of autograph letters of that monarch, together with those of some of the most celebrated characters in European history, is attracting attention.

The collection is that of Carl Geibel, and is to be offered at the rooms of the dealer who recently sold the famous Martin Luther letter that was purchased by J. P. Morgan and presented by him to the Emperor.

Among other most important documents are a whole series numbering many hundreds of letters from prominent persons connected with the Thirty Years War, and there are also signatures and letters from Catherine de Medici, who caused the massacre of St. Bartholomew; the Marquise de Pompadour, who corresponded with Voltaire; the beautiful Ninon de Lenclos; the Countess Cossell, the friend of August the Strong; and the Countess Aurora von Konigsmarck, another friend of the same monarch, who changed his religion in return for the kingdom of Poland.

The document, however, possessing the greatest interest is a letter in Frederick the Great's own handwriting, written while he was Crown Prince, and sent to his father the king on March 28, 1737. It is expected that representatives of museums and private collectors throughout the world will participate in the bidding.

Alert.

BRITONS ARE ANNOYED BY GERMAN MANEUVERS.

[A. P. CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 17.—Public irritation in Denmark and Norway continues to grow over the maneurs of the German fleet in Scandivian waters.

This feeling has been increased ather than allayed by the publican of governmental inspired articles xplaining the maneuvers in the Danh "Berlingske Tidende" and the Norgian "Morgenbladet." It is believed at these explanations were made at e request of the German governent, but the people refuse to accept e assurance that the Baltic Belts re used only as the natural through assage for the German warships.

The visits of the German fleet have en made for the past five or six ars, and with one or two exceptions ve been undertaken without the forality of notifying Denmark and Noray.

Exercises have taken place in all anish waters and at night they have een held with shaded lanterns or ithout any lights. This has resulted considerable damage and the comensation paid has not proven adeuate. The chief damage has been done to fishing interests and submarine cables. The German boats themselves have not escaped, as two torpedo boats collided with such violence that one was destroyed.

This constant turmoil in Danish waters has excited much adverse comment from the public and it firmly believes that the exercises are being held in preparation for actual war. It is charged that the Germans have obtained as much information in regard to Danish waters as is possessed by the Naval Department of Denmark. Only a short time ago six German torpedo boats steamed boldly into Knobelvig, which, as "closed water," is supposed to be forbidden to all foreign warships. Even the inspired explanations do not deny that German fighting ships invade Danish seas where they are not supposed to go.

In the meantime the English authorities are maintaining the closest scrutiny over the movements of German naval vessels in Scandinavian waters. It is claimed that all of the British Consulates have received instructions to report promptly the arrival and movements of all German warships. In this connection it is reported that a retired British naval officer has been sent to act as Consul on a special mission for Jutland.

ARE IMPRESSED BY OUR FLEETS.

Foreigners Make American Review Their Theme.

Germans Think Pride in the Navy Is Justified.

John Bull's Cue to Protest Against Limitation.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Nov. 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] America's majestic demonstration of sea power in simultaneous reviews in New York and Los Angeles has been the inspiration to the advocates of big armaments of fresh arguments against either limitation or reduction.

In the face of the "majority opinion in the United States," they contend, "it is obvious that absolutely no headway is made in that country against the Rooseveltian doctrine, promulgated three years ago, 'Double the fleet of battleships that rounded the Horn.'"

Mr. Taft's "pious hopes for an early millennium when super-dreadnoughts like the Florida and the Utah can be converted into the dredging machines of a world-wide realm of peace," are contrasted with Secretary Meyer's implication that "John Bull would do well to guard the laurels of naval premiership lest they be snatched by his dear brother Jonathan."

Though sentiments like the foregoing are probably more or less cynical, the eyes of European navy men never before were directed with such critical scrutiny to the "large plans of the American Ministry of Marine" as a Paris paper puts it.

Foremost among reasons assigned for the allegedly "settled conviction of the Americans that they must build their navy swiftly up to the first place among the powers," is the completion of the Panama Canal at an earlier date than was expected and the "fast growing sense on the part of Washington statesmen in all parties of the indubitable fact that the canal will extend by 100 per cent. if not by 500, their outer line of natural defense."

German writers concede that the pride of Mr Meyer in the success of the mobilization is fully warranted and refer to the vessels in the Hudson as "showing the highest percentage of efficiency ever attained by modern navies."

HUNT WITH AEROPLANE.

One Frenchman Bags a Lot of Partridges and Rabbits While Other Runs the Machine.

[A. P. CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

PARIS, Oct. 18.—Aviators Legagneux and Martinet went shooting on board an aeroplane in the neighborhood of Compiegne recently. Legagneux piloted the biplane in dextrous circles and ovals above the coverts while Martinet did the shooting.

The machine cannot remain in the air and fly at a less speed than a partridge and, as Martinet is an experienced shot, he rarely missed birds whose line of flight was that of the aeroplane. He also killed two hares, the apparatus wheeling down just above them. The difficult part of the sport was finding the game after landing.

The public prosecutor at Rheims has brought proceedings against aviators for the first time in French criminal law for homicide through negligence, the defendants being Count D'Hespel, who, in alighting, struck down and killed a machinist, Germain Gardes, and Aviator Prevost, who ran into a soldier, Eugene Potin, imprudently and carelessly, the prosecuting attorney affirms.

NEWS REPORTS FROM CORRESPONDENTS OF THE TIMES.

Pasadena.

FIVE THOUSAND DISAPPOINTED.

Pasadenans Flock to Park to Greet Aviator.

Fancy Exhibition of Flying Promised for Today.

Gardener Drinks Carbolic Acid After a "Drunk."

[Office of The Times, 52 S. Fair Oaks Ave.]

PASADENA, Nov. 5.—Nearly 5000 people assembled at Tournament Park yesterday afternoon to see Aviator Calbraith P. Rodgers end his transcontinental air journey. So great was the interest that when it was announced that it would be 5 o'clock instead of 3 before he would arrive comparatively few left. When later it was learned that the birdman had met with reverses at Banning and that he would not be able to make Pasadena until this afternoon, there was a disappointed crowd.

Last night word came that he will come on to Pasadena this afternoon, and, that to repay those who went to the park yesterday for their fruitless waiting, he will give an exhibition of flying at the park. L Peters, his agent, who is now in the city, said last night:

"The trouble today was caused by the engine. It has now been repaired and Mr. Rodgers will leave Banning early in the morning and fly to a point near the city, when he will alight and again overhaul the machine. He will then fly directly to Tournament Park. He should reach the park between 3 and 3:30 o'clock.

"All who paid admission yesterday will be admitted free this afternoon," said D. M. Linnard, who has charge of the affair, last night. "The aviator was unable to reach the city yesterday, but he has promised to make the landing today more interesting by giving an exhibition of flying."

Linnard, Peters and L. F. Benton of the Simplex Automobile agency, will leave in an automobile this morning to meet the aviator about fifteen miles from the city. They will there consult him as to what exhibitions shall be made at the park.

POLO IS INTERESTING.

A polo game between the Reds and the Whites, the two practice teams of the Pasadena Polo Club, furnished amusement for the afternoon at Tournament Park. The game was fast and clean, and altogether one of the best that has been played this year. The Whites won with a score of 8½ to 5. There were but two fouls. Five periods were played. The line-up was:

Whites—Robert Neustadt, 1; John B. Miller, 2; Reginald Weiss, 3, and Thomas Weiss, 4.

Reds—Dr. Z. T. Mallaby, 1; Charlton Burke, 2; Percy Weiss, 3, and Dr. W. A. Boucher, 4.

ENDS HIS TROUBLES.

William Heuer, a gardener employed by Dr. Arno Behr of No. 432 Arlington Drive, committed suicide at 9 o'clock yesterday morning by drinking carbolic acid.

Attracted by the peculiar actions of a dog, Ernest Behr followed the faithful pet to a room in the garage which the man occupied and there found him lying on the flor with some rumpled awnings for a pillow. He was not then dead. Dr. F. C. E. Mattison was called, but the man died a few minutes after his arrival.

Heuer had been drinking heavily and his employer had urged him to take a liquor cure. This he had consented to do, and it was believed that he had determined to reform, when he suddenly destroyed himself. The poison was obtained from the laboratory of Dr. Behr.

Comparatively little is known about the deceased. He was a German 38 years of age and had been in Dr. Behr's employ for several months. The body is at the morgue of Turner & Stevens, where an inquest will probably be held.

CITY BRIEFS.

News of the death of C. H. Eaton, a former resident of Pasadena, in Azusa last Friday reached the city yesterday. He was 44 years of age and for many years had been connected with the Southern Pacific Railroad. He leaves a mother, with whom he lived in Azusa, two sisters, Mrs. J. W. Calvert and Mrs. Marchall, of Pasadena, and a brother, L. C. Eaton, of Hemet. The funeral will take place in this city at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning. The services will be held at the chapel of Reynolds & Van Nuys. Rev. John G. Blue will officiate.

The Crown City baseball team and the Los Angeles police team will play at the Raymond ball park this afternoon. The game will be called at 2:15 o'clock.

Special cars will leave the city at 7:15 o'clock tomorrow night to take Pasadenans to the Shriner's Household Show that is to be held at the Shrine auditorium in Los Angeles.

Rt. Rev. Joseph H. Johnson, bishop of the Episcopal diocese of Los Angeles, returned to his home, No. 415 South Grand avenue, yesterday from Fresno, where he went recently.

It was announced yesterday that the school children of Pasadena will furnish several of the handsomest floats for the Tournament of Roses on New Years Day. The children are already at work on the pieces.

Pasadena Masons will give a reception in honor of Superintendent of Schools Rhodes, a newcomer to the city, at Masonic hall tomorrow night. He will make an address and a large attendance of Masons is expected. A public reception will be tendered Dr. Rhodes by the Board of Education at the Young Men's Christian Association building next Thursday night.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SHOW.

Azusa Club Women Arrange Splendid Flower Show With Some Babies as a Variation.

AZUSA, Nov. 4.—The Woman's Clubroom was a scene of activities this afternoon and evening, when the baby show and chrysanthemum show were in full swing. The flower exhibit was magnificent, and the judges found their task a difficult one. The judges were Messrs. Ashenbreuner of Covina, Brunger of Monrovia and West of Glendora, all florists and growers.

Frank Kaufman received first prize for six blooms of four varieties; Mrs. R. F. Thaxter took prizes for best twelve blooms of one variety and also for most artistic arrangement; Mrs. La Verte for six blooms, white; M. Jones, six blooms, yellow; Conwell Smith, six blooms, pink and six blooms red; I. D. Roach for most perfect bloom and for longest stem; A. G. Owen for best "baby chrysanthemum;" Mrs. R. E. Smith for best buttonhole bouquet of three "baby chrysanthemums."

The lower end of the room was the scene of the mothers' hopes and fears, the babies' smiles and tears. The judges of the flowers had an easy task as compared with that of Messrs. Charles F. Richardson and W. C. Hendrick. Twenty-six babies were entered. The judges decided all points except "the best behaved baby during the afternoon." That they felt beyond them.

MARRY IN CITY.

At Immanuel Presbyterian Church in Los Angeles, Miss Clara Hoag and Harry Rasmussen were united in marriage by the pastor, Dr. Hugh K. Walker. They are spending their honeymoon in making a tour of Southern California.

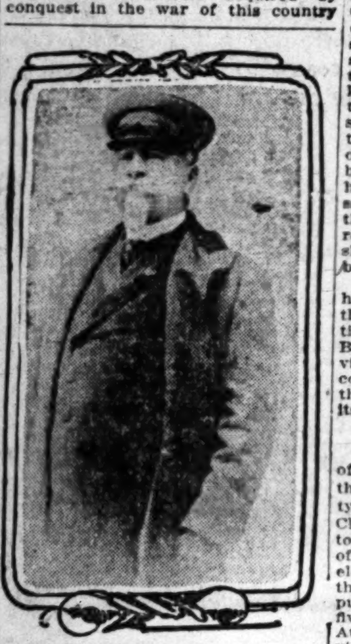
DISTINGUISHED SOLDIER DEAD.

Veteran of Two Wars Dies After an Extended Illness at Soldiers' Home.

SOLDIERS' HOME, Nov. 4.—On the death of Maj. George M. Barber at this place Friday afternoon there passed away one whose service in the Civil War and later conspicuous usefulness upon the occupation under provisional territories acquired by conquest in the war of this country with Spain, deserves more than passing notice.



Maj. George Barber,
Distinguished soldier in two wars passes away at the Soldiers' Home.

Maj. Barber's service in the Civil War was in Co. C, Third Massachusetts Heavy Artillery. He was a lifelong friend of the present commander of the United States Army, Gen. Leonard Wood.

When the latter entered upon duty as provisional Governor of Cuba, Barber was appointed sanitary commissioner of Santiago de Cuba—the oldest and, it has been quoted, the filthiest city on the American continent. By his tactfulness among an opposing community, and with the assistance of a thousand of the military and other help, he succeeded within a few months in creating a sanitary revolution, which resulted in a condition of cleanliness and health that earned for him world-wide commendation, and gave to its promoter an enviable place in history.

When Gen. Wood was assigned to duty as provisional Governor of the Philippine Islands, Maj. Barber accompanied him, and too up the same character of work as that in Cuba, as Chief of Police and Sanitation at Zamboanga in far-off Mindanao, bringing about sanitary reforms there, as also at Jolo, Sitouki and other places in that archipelago, and was for a long period Collector of Customs at Jolo.

In 1906, his health beginning to fail, he returned to the United States and with his wife made their home in Los Angeles, finally coming to this home in 1907. Mrs. Barber, in order to be near during his final illness, removed to Sawtelle and was by his bedside at the end.

Maj. Barber had membership in a number of clubs and societies in New York, Chicago and elsewhere East. In the armory of the First Illinois Infantry, N.G.I., at Chicago, is an exhibit of war relics known as the "Barber collection."

Besides a widow, Maj. Barber is survived by a daughter, Mrs. F. J. Forrest, Denver, Col. Deceased was a native of New York and aged 68. The burial, attended with full military honors, will take place next Tuesday morning.

ANNEXATION ELECTION.

Glendale and Tropico Again Set a Date on Which to Vote on Municipal Union.

GLENDALE, Nov. 4.—December 16 is the date which has been set for the consolidation election in which residents of Tropico and Glendale will participate with the view of merging both cities into one municipality. The announcement only has been thus far made, but the election will be called at the meeting of the Glendale Trustees next Monday night. Since the annexation election several months ago the annexationists claimed to have strengthened their cause greatly by their well-grounded arguments and accurate figures. In this campaign those favoring the move are confident of victory. This move is looked upon as a consolidation movement rather than annexation.

Should consolidation win there will be two tax rates, one being for the Glendale portion; the other for the present Tropico section. This will be done to equalize expenses. Tropico will retain its name just as West Glendale does since annexation. Also, in event of success of the move, Glendale, being the older city, will retain her Board of Trustees and other city officers. Tropico will not assume the past indebtedness of this city.

ADMIRAL ASKS FOR NEW MAPS.

Says Long Beach Does Not Receive Justice.

Was Amazed at Draught of Visiting Vessels.

Thief Steals Bonds and Big Sum of Money.

LONG BEACH, Nov. 4.—Rear-Admiral Thomas yesterday telegraphed the War Department asking that a new survey of San Pedro and Long Beach harbors be made and giving as his reasons that the existing maps are back numbers and do not show the ocean conditions as they exist today. In commenting today upon his request the admiral said that the existent maps show no kelp beds in the San Pedro harbor, while they are mapped as existing along the Long Beach water front, when the contrary is the case. There is no mention of the inner harbor at Long Beach or the ocean entrance and San Gabriel jetties, points which the admiral says should be on the maps.

This action of the admiral was made public today during a trip made by him in his launch through the inner harbor, accompanied by Mayor Windham, President Curtis of the Dock and Terminal Company and Secretary Camp of the Chamber of Commerce. He inquired into the depth of the harbor and expressed surprise at seeing vessels drawing sixteen feet coming to a river entrance where his maps showed only kelp beds. He was taken through all the channels and then made a brief survey of the Craig ship plant and the big dry dock and gave as his opinion that the marine targets used by the squadron should be brought here for repairs, as a considerable saving would be made by cutting out the long trip to Mare Island. At his request he was furnished with photos showing the development of the harbor.

It is believed that a survey of the harbor if it can be secured through the admiral's efforts will be an exceptionally important thing for Long Beach, as the War Department's previous knowledge of the harbor would coupled with the request lead to further steps that might be taken in its development by the government.

REGISTERS SHORT.

Because of the increased number of registrations in the county, due to the woman suffrage provision, County Clerk Lelande has notified City Clerk Boynton that he will be unable to furnish Long Beach with a copy of the great register for the municipal election in December and suggests that the city appoint deputies for this purpose. The Council has appointed five deputies and instructed the City Attorney to confer with the supervisors as to the responsibility of the expense entailed.

ADOPTION DEFERRED.

Because blue prints of the proposed Barndollar pier at the foot of Golden avenue show a strength of but 150 pounds to the square foot, their adoption by the Council has been deferred and the engineer of the structure asked to appear before the Council and explain the evident lightness of the structure.

VALUABLE HAUL.

The largest single haul ever made by a sneak thief in this city was reported to the police this morning when William O. Schroyer reported that some one entered his room on East Ocean avenue last night and walked off with a tan suit case containing among other things four $500 bonds of the Long Beach Water Company and $540 in cash. The water bonds are not negotiable. It is thought that the thief had no idea of the valuable contents of the suitcase when he "swiped" it.

WOMAN HURT.

Mrs. W. J. Hill, a tourist, last night assisted her daughter and baby from Los Angeles, on board an electric car, and after a vain endeavor to close a folding cart, boarded the car to learn how to do it. The conductor started his car and it was going at a lively clip, when Mrs. Hill walked off the rear platform, not noticing the car was in motion, and suffered a fracture of the left shoulder. She was taken to her apartments and given medical attention.

QUESTION RAISED.

The fact that Saturday is a legal half-holiday today caused a question as to whether petitions for municipal offices were legal if not filed before noon. City Attorney Long, however, held that although the City Clerk's office was closed, petitions would be considered legally filed if they were placed in the Clerk's hands any time up to midnight. So far as known, all petitions have been filed except that of Barney Brown, who had announced himself as an independent candidate for Mayor.

NEWS BRIEFS.

Francis W. Lowen, 75 years old, a retired farmer who came here two months ago from his farm in Missouri, died suddenly this morning at his home on East Ocean avenue. An autopsy showed that death resulted from valvular disease of the heart. He leaves a widow and two daughters.

During his absence from home last evening, some thief entered the room of Frank Watanabe, at Lemon and Lincoln streets and robbed his trunk of $45. The police have no clew.

A flat-bottom boat which had turned turtle came ashore on the east beach this morning. There is nothing to indicate its ownership or where it is from and the police think there may be a sea tragedy back of it.

City Attorney Long has notified the Council that a polling place for each ward in the municipal election will not be enough because of the probable increase in votes by the advent of women and has asked the allowance of additional polling places.

Jesus Besinio, employed at the Alamitos sugar factory, walked to Long Beach today seeking medical attention for severe knife wounds in the face and breast. He was unable to talk English, but it was learned that he was attacked by another workman.

The Federated Brotherhood of the city have secured Dr. John Willis Baer of Occidental College for a lecture Thursday evening at the First Methodist Church on the occasion of their annual banquet.

BACHELORS ARE ROUNDLY SCORED.

COVINA WOMAN'S CLUB PUTS ITSELF ON RECORD.

Young Women of Infinite Charm Told the Audience of Futile Efforts They Had Made to Net the Eligibles—Contractor Gets Jail Sentence for Disturbing Peace.

COVINA, Nov. 4.—Eligible bachelors are slow in taking advantage of the splendid chances offered in the city, according to a decision made by the Monday Afternoon Club of ladies. In the sketch put on last night at the clubhouse, entitled "The Old Maids' Club," more than two score promising young men were held up to scorn because they still remain in single cussedness. Their names were spoken right out in loud tones by the ladies engaged in the skit, and many a young man in the audience dropped his head in shame. A dozen women told of their individual efforts to win the eligibles and of the cold-heartedness of the men.

The sketch was given in connection with the annual flower show, and the building was gorgeous with chrysanthemum blooms and roses. While the ladies say that the hot weather has made it hard to present as fine a showing as in previous years, the chrysanthemums were a wonderful sight last night. The children are being entertained this afternoon.

The flower show was under the efficient management of Mrs. Daniel Reichard of Irwindale, assisted on the committee by Mrs. J. R. Elliott, Mrs. C. W. Potter, Miss Byrd Reynolds and Mrs. E. G. Prather.

WIFE OBJECTED.

Otto J. Edinger, a brick and cement contractor, was arrested today on complaint of his wife, for disturbing the peace. Edinger, it is alleged, came home from Los Angeles in an automobile with a bad breath and a lady's umbrella in the machine. The wife objected to both packages, and questioned her husband. Edinger became noisy and fired his revolver in the air. He was arrested by Officers Saunders and Fairly and Justice Wells fined him $25 and sent him to the County Jail for ten days. The fracas occurred on the old Thorpe ranch on San Bernardino road, where the couple have been living.

We Are Doctors of Proven Ability

Drs. Shores & Shores have successfully practiced in California as Specialists in Catarrh and all other Chronic and Private Diseases for many years, and have treated more than 100,000 Cases.

Now Is the Time For Best Results

Don't give up hope of being cured because you have been unsuccessfully treated by some other doctors. Even your family doctor may not know just what your trouble is, for he is a general practitioner for the most part in acute cases, and has not had the experience to become a specialist in the diagnosis or treatment of chronic diseases. Drs. Shores have the learning, the ability and the experience to make a cure a certainty, if your disease is curable. They don't patch up or give only temporary relief, but THEY CURE PERMANENTLY. Don't be skeptical, but give us the chance to prove our claim. A consultation or examination will cost you nothing. We will tell you honestly if and how you may be cured. If we are willing to take our time to do this, you certainly can afford to come to us for advice. The ravages of disease do not wait, and all delays in getting proper treatment only make it much harder for the most skilled doctors to effect a cure. Drs. Shores are not exorbitant in their charges. While they are entitled to the usually high fees of specialists, and knowing that the sick could not get more skilled treatment at any price, yet they are satisfied to make their fees so low as not to be a burden on anyone, and you can arrange to pay in installments as your case progresses. Make up your mind to be treated now and be well before winter gets too far advanced. Come today, come any day this week. CONSULTATION FREE, CONFIDENTIAL AND INVITED.

They have treated over 100,000 cases in the past nineteen years, an experience rarely ever granted any specialists, and have gleaned therefrom information that is invaluable to sick people. They would not attempt to treat Scarlet Fever or Diphtheria at any price, not because they don't know how, but because they have not given it the thought and constant study that other doctors have, and, in short, it is not in their line of specialties. Every moment is given to studying CATARRH, CHRONIC, NERVOUS and PRIVATE DISEASES. That is where they excel; that is where they can serve you better than most anyone else. Don't be a permanent invalid. They know what causes Catarrh. They know how to cure. They know what causes Stomach Troubles. They know how to cure it, instead of merely relieving it. TAKES MATTER TO GOVERNOR.

Dist.-Atty. Goodcell Writes Letter to Johnson.

Bonus of Eighteen Thousand for a Railroad.

Rialto Man Discovers Gold in the Desert.

SAN BERNARDINO, Nov. 4.—In a letter sent today to Gov. Johnson Dist.-Atty. R. B. Goodcell takes up the subject of this county's loss through the operation of amendment No. 1, and after expressing the doubt whether the county can maintain an action against the State to recover the actual amount of the loss sustained, without an act of Legislature permitting such suit to be brought, he suggests that the Governor include in the call for a special session of the Legislature to be held next month the passage of an act that will enable any county in the State to maintain an action against the State for any amount claimed to be due under section 14, article 13 of the Constitution. In the letter the prosecutor states that he is satisfied that the act of the Legislature providing for the re-imbursement of counties is unconstitutional, being in conflict with said section and article.

Mr. Goodcell believes that if suit is brought it must be in the form of mandamus against the State Controller. He construes the constitutional provision to mean that any county sustaining a loss, at any time prior to 1918, is entitled to be reimbursed by the State to the exact amount of the loss, and views the appropriation of only $52,987, covering the loss in this county, as unfair, arbitrary, and not equity in any sense, being not half the actual loss sustained by the exercise of Amendment No. 1.

TO RAISE BONUS.

Another effort to explain to the residents and property holders in the northwestern section of town the plan for raising a bonus of $18,000 for the Pacific Electric, to induce the corporation to build through that section of town, will be held in Danish Hall, Wednesday evening. While a large portion of the bonus has been subscribed there still remains a big deficiency. It is explained that the bonus will not fall due until the extension proposed is actually in operation.

HIGH POWER LINE.

The distribution of materials for the proposed high power line, to be built by the Southern Sierras Power Company between this city and Bishop, a distance of 250 miles, will commence Monday. Contractors McLean and Francisco, who have the big contract for distributing these materials, shipped in a trainload of horses and wagons today. It is expected that the materials for the line will commence to arrive Monday morning.

GOLD FIND.

Earl Ames of this city and Charles Weiser of Rialto, returned today from the Pipes, a desolate desert section, where they have uncovered a rich ledge carrying gold and silver. The ledge is twenty-two feet in width at a depth of forty feet, and is still widening as depth is attained. The ore is free milling. Samples shown here have aroused much interest among prospectors and miners.

Last Three Hundred Acres of Wild Land Near Santa Ana is to Be Reclaimed.

SANTA ANA, Nov. 4.—W. A. Zimmerman, J. A. Nunn, H. W. Lewis and R. J. Thompson today paid $50,000 for 100 acres between Santa Ana and Anaheim. The property has been in the hands of Mrs. Martha Shaffer for many years. When the new owners clear the land of brush and cactus, as they will do, the last piece of wild land in this section will be changed to orchard land.

NEWS BRIEFS.

The papers in the sale of the 135 acres of the Santa Ana Jersey Farm to the Morton Dairy Company of Los Angeles are in escrow. The Los Angeles concern paid $95,000 for the land, dairy, equipment and business. It will supply milk for local and Los Angeles routes.

Charges of grand larceny against H. Cohn, Joseph Fermin, Charles Levine and Robert Epstein of Los Angeles and Louis Zalercio, Caspino Orosco and Miguel Alvillo of Fullerton were dismissed today when the preliminary examination failed to fix upon the defendants the theft of nineteen sacks of walnuts from Henry Federman of Fullerton. Federman would not positively identify the walnuts found in Epstein's possession as the walnuts stolen from him.

MAN SHOOTS HIMSELF.

Anaheim Resident, Despondent Because of Poor Health, Ends Life. Newly Weds Harshly Treated.

ANAHEIM, Nov. 4.—Supposedly despondent through illness, E. H. Stahl fired a bullet from a 32-calibre revolver into his brain at 8 o'clock last night and succumbed to the wound a few hours later.

Stahl resided with his wife and two daughters on a ranch which he recently purchased near Benedict station. The family came here from Texas six months ago in the hopes that a change would be of benefit to the father. Stahl shot himself while in bed, the bullet entering his right eye and emerging from the back of the head. His family relations are said to have been pleasant and he was in comfortable financial circumstances. Ill health is the only known motive for committing the deed of self-destruction. The unfortunate man was 49 years of age.

Prior to coming to California Stahl had been employed for twenty years as a telegraph operator in Texas by by the M. T. & K. Railroad. The remains were taken to Los Angeles and burial occurred in Rosedale Cemetery.

CRUEL FRIENDS.

Robert Jefferson Ray of this city, who was married to Miss Grace Darling of Redlands, in Los Angeles, yesterday received a warm greeting when the two reached Fullerton for a number of Ray's friends boarded the San Diego train at that point and rode the three miles back to Anaheim with the young married couple. They not only congratulated the "newly weds" but distributed among the passengers on the train the following printed notice: Fellow passengers—We entrust to your care this young couple, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Jefferson Ray, who are journeying to San Diego on their honeymoon. They are subject to spasmodic fits of insanity, but are safe to handle. Be kind to them—and try to make their trip an interesting one."

JAPANESE SHOW LOVE FOR MIKADO.

REDLANDS ORIENTALS UNVEIL PORTRAITS OF RULERS.

Student Gives Marvelous Exhibition of Memory and Linguistic Accomplishment by His Readiness in Translating Speeches for the Audience of Mixed Races.

REDLANDS, Nov. 4.—The sixtieth anniversary of the birth of His Majesty The Emperor of Japan, was fittingly celebrated last night by the San Bernardino County Japanese Society at the Wyatt Opera House, a fourth of which was reserved for the Japanese, the remainder being filled with representative people to whom invitations had been issued.

The programme included addresses by S. Yokota, F. M. Nagai and I Takiguchi also by Mayor J. H. Straft of Redlands; Rev. Dr. J. H. Williams pastor of the Congregational church and Dr. W. P. Burke. One of the remarkable features of the afternoon was the translation of all of these speeches, the Japanese into the English and the English into the Japanese by a Japanese student, who took lightning-like notes and immediately after the speaker was seated took his place before the audience and delivered the speech in the other language, referring only occasionally to his notes. The portraits of the Emperor and Empress were unveiled and the imperial rescript was read.

Orchestral music was rendered and for the second part of the programme the Playgoers Club of Los Angeles gave scenes from The Taming of the Shrew and Midsummer Night's Dream. As a fitting close to the programme twenty-five handsome pieces of Japanese art were given away as prizes by means of ticket drawing.

REDLANDS NOTES.

While carrying a glass jar down cellar yesterday Mrs. A. E. Taylor slipped near the top and fell to the bottom of the stairs sustaining a broken arm and a badly cut nose, the latter from a piece of the jar which broke in her hand. The fracture was immediately reduced and she is resting easily.

In attempting to dodge another man on a wheel who was not looking where he was going, Robert Ferguson, a twelve year old boy ran into the rear of a wagon and was caught under the chin by the end gate and lifted clear of his wheel. He received an ugly gash in his neck and was quite badly bruised by being thrown to the pavement.

The annual meeting of the Yucaipa church was held Thursday evening at which time reports were made showing the church, which is undenominational, to be in good condition. The church has a membership of thirty-nine and it was organized a year ago with seven members. The Sunday school has increased membership from twelve to forty. During the year the pastor, Rev. F. J. Seeman has been paid $330.10. Other collections amounted to over $50.

ESCONDIDO.

ESCONDIDO, Nov. 4.—Arthur Jones, mangare of the Rochdale company, is to erect a reinforced concrete block on the north side of Grand avenue, east of Lime street.

For a consideration of $3000, U. G. Abell has sold the building and lot on the south side of Grand avenue, known as the Ohio street property, to Robert C. Sandell, who buys for an investment. The building is leased for two years to Capt. Agate.

The Ludwig Steindorf place, southwest of the city, has been sold to S. E. Rice. It consists of a block of land and a small residence.

The first meeting of the Parent-Teachers' Association for the winter season, was held in the high school hall last evening, with a large attendance.

The high school football eleven will play the San Diego Playgrounds team next Saturday, and on Thanksgiving Day they will play the San Diego High School eleven at San Diego.

COLTON NOTES.

COLTON, Nov. 4.—The residence of Mrs. Jennie Thrall on O street, South Colton, was entered by burglars last night and an eight-day clock, and other articles stolen. Clothing and bedding were found in the yard, the burglars evidently having been frightened while at their work. The entrance was made through a window which had been pried open. Marshal Weaver is working on a slender clue.

Among the delegates from the First Baptist Church of Colton who will attend the Baptist convention at Santa Ana next week are Rev. and Mrs. J. J. Banks, Mrs. E. E. Ward, Mrs. F. J. Foote, E. E. Moon, Miss Mabel Brown and Earl Bird.

The Colton B.Y.P.U. held a reception for the societies of the various other city churches and the faculty and pupils of the Colton High School last evening at the First Baptist Church.

Why I Lost My Job

Reasons Why Thousands Like Me Cannot Satisfy Their Employers.

I believe my fate is not unlike that of thousands of other workers who daily lose their places for reasons they do not know, and probably would not believe. When their last pay envelope comes along, it is usually, "Your services no longer required." If the truth were known, the reason for their unceremonious removal would probably be that their usefulness was destroyed because of some mental worry, bodily ailment or general indisposition. These things, as we all know, are the most fruitful causes of failure in all walks of life. The battle of Waterloo was lost because of a headache. In this quick age our minds must be clear, rapid, active and free from outside influence or worry, or else we go down to failure with the throng of "floaters" who go from one place of employment to another, giving no satisfaction to others or to themselves, constantly growing older and less useful, with no ambition, no will power, and no hope.

Every man requires from every other man the best that is in him. But no man can use or get the best that is in him until he is first free from all fretful indispositions and worries.

That was my trouble. I was full of troubles. That's why I lost my job. My stomach in the first place was always out of order, and I was worrying about it and my mind grew cloudy, and slow. I made mistakes, and grew grouchy. That was the end.

There are thousands like me, going about with "quick" lunch" faces, dyspeptic manners, and repulsive atmospheres. No employer wants such men's services.

Take my advice. A healthy stomach is half the battle, for it keeps your mind clear, and your face rosy. I have a healthy stomach now and hold a good position, and my employer is satisfied and so am I.

I started to take Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets which I was told, were good for the worst cases of indigestion and dyspepsia. The first two tablets made a wonderful difference in my condition.

One ingredient of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets digests 3000 grains of food. The stomach doesn't have to work at all. The Tablets do all the work, no matter how heavy your meal.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets cure brash, eructations, burning sensations, bloat, irritations, loss of appetite, nausea, heartburn, lack of energy, loss of memory and dyspepsia and indigestion in their very worst forms.

No other little tablets in the world can do so much. You should carry them around with you wherever you go and take them regularly after meals. Then you will realize what it is to be freed from stomach torment, and have a clear mind, a quick memory, a happy disposition, comfort and rest. Get Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets at any drug store for 50c a box.

Send us your name and address today and we will at once send you by mail a sample package free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

ORANGE, Nov. 4.—Yesterday Orange voted $50,000 for a new waterworks system and $5000 for new fire-fighting apparatus. The vote on the water-works bonds was 449 for and 87 against, and on the fire bonds, 446 for and 57 against.

EAGLE ROCK'S POSY SHOW.

The first flower show ever given at Eagle Rock was held in Symphony Hall yesterday afternoon and evening, and the crowd that gathered was so large that the available space was filled. The show was given in the interest of the women of Eagle Rock, who will use the money derived from the exhibition as a nest-egg toward a fund which they intend to raise for the building of a woman's club house. The splendid array of chrysanthemums and dahlias were especially attractive, and after the show these brilliant blossoms were sold at good prices to the visitors. The judges were Ernest Braunton and G. W. Chandler. The women of Eagle Rock intend to make the flower show an annual affair.

ON "THE MELTING POT."

Rabbi Isidore Myers will give his lecture, "The Melting Pot," founded on Israel Zangwill's play of the same name, at Gamut Auditorium on the evening of the 27th inst. The lecture will be given under the patronage of active club women and leaders of the women's suffrage movement, and under the direction of Impresario Behymer. "The Melting Pot" has been given twice before in this city by Rabbi Myers and was enthusiastically received. It embodies the essence of the play, eliminating all superfluous dialogue, and after each act the lecturer explains passages which would be readily understood only by the Jewish mind.

Not yet a week old and the talk of all Los Angeles

THE

Evening Herald

It's all there, and it's all true

Four days ago an unknown quantity---today Los Angeles' leading evening newspaper has an exclusive leased wire, all of its out of town news is telegraphed direct to the paper from the leading news centers of the world. Not alone is the Evening Herald in direct communication with Chicago, New York, Boston and all the other great news gathering points, but many of the happenings of the old world reach the Evening Herald before the press associations. This is the reason the Evening Herald has beaten its evening contemporaries an hour or two in some instances on "foreign" news the past week.

The Evening Herald's illustrations lead all Evening papers in Southern California. The same is true of its feature stories, its comics, its special stories, its society news, its sporting pages, its market reports, its local news, its everything—the whole making—A Newspaper.

As a prominent business man said yesterday in congratulating the Evening Herald—"The Herald is a REAL newspaper"

The Evening Herald prints the news without fear or favor. It has no axes to grind; no private interest to serve, no ideas of fanaticism hampering its usefulness to its great constituency—the public.

A leading attorney of the city, in writing the Evening Herald yesterday enclosing his subscription, was kind enough to say: "Your Herald last night was a wonder, there is no better evening paper in New York, Philadelphia or Boston." We appreciate the compliment, even if not wholly deserved!

Don't you think you would like to invest 25c in having the Evening Herald delivered to your home for a month? Don't allow the matter to pass from your mind, simply drop your Sunday paper for a moment and call the Herald office on the telephone, Main 8000 or Home 10211, leave your name and address and tomorrow the paper will reach your home or office. Do It Now!

If you are one of many not receiving the Evening Herald at your home yesterday or Friday, please bear with us in patience. The thousands—yes, literally thousands of subscriptions pouring in on the business office have about swamped the circulation department, but by tomorrow afternoon everything will be running smoothly and all subscribers will be served with the Evening Herald.

The Evening Herald invites you to join its family circle

One cent on the streets, delivered to the homes, by mail to the East, everywhere 1c

SAYS QUININE WILL NOT BREAK A COLD.

HOW TO CURE THE MOST SEVERE COLD AND END ALL GRIPPE MISERY IN JUST A FEW HOURS.

You will distinctly feel your cold breaking and all the Grippe symptoms leaving after taking the very first dose.

It is a positive fact that Pape's Cold Compound, taken every two hours, until three consecutive doses are taken, will end the Grippe and break up the most severe cold, either in the head, chest, back, stomach or limbs.

It promptly relieves the most miserable headache, dullness, head and nose stuffed up, feverishness, sneezing, sore throat, running of the nose, mucuous catarrhal discharges, soreness, stiffness and rheumatic twinges.

Pape's Cold Compound is the result of three years' research at a cost of more than fifty thousand dollars and contains no quinine, which we have conclusively demonstrated is not effective in the treatment of colds or grippe.

Take this harmless compound as directed, with the knowledge that there is no other medicine, made anywhere else in the world, which will cure your cold or end grippe misery as promptly and without any other assistance or bad after-effects as a 25-cent package of Pape's Cold Compound, which any druggist in the world can supply.

Harmony.

FOR GOOD DEEDS THEY ORGANIZE.

NATIVE SONS' LOCAL PARLORS FORM ASSOCIATION.

Accomplishment of Charities and Acts Looking to Preservation and Restoration of the Missions, Forts and El Camino Real Are Among Its Objects.

Native Sons of the Golden West representing the four Parlors of the order in this city got together Thursday evening and resolved to stay together and work in harmony for the ends and aims of the organization. The pipe of peace was passed around and the hatchet was buried. When the meeting broke up a central organization had been formed that is calculated to have supervision over affairs of general interest to the Native Sons as a body.

Officially, the organization is, to be known as the Associated Parlors of the Native Sons of the Golden West of Los Angeles. Its president is Harry G. Folsom; vice-presidents, M. B. Silberburg and Ray Howard; treasurer, William Rudolph; secretary, P. F. Johnson. The association is composed of Los Angeles Parlor No. 45, Ramona Parlor No. 109, Sierra Madre Parlor No. 235 and La Fiesta Parlor No. 236.

As the name would indicate, only persons born in this State are eligible to membership in the Native Sons. Patriotism is the corner stone of the order, and Parlors throughout the State are at this time making a special effort to preserve and restore old landmarks, such as the missions founded by the Franciscan Fathers, forts and objects of special historical interest. The restoration of Sutters' Fort in particular, the erection of the Donner monument, the Camp Far West monument, the purchase of the old home of Gen. Vallejo, the marking of the route of El Camino Real and similar projects are receiving the attention of the order. Development of the natural resources of the State also is being fostered.

Together with the Native Daughters, the Native Sons are interested in finding good homes for homeless children, and information in this regard will receive attention.

While the Native Sons and Native Daughters have accomplished a great deal in a charitable way in the past—notably at the time of the San Francisco earthquake—it is felt that this work has suffered for want of such an organiaztion as the one formed Thursday evening.

Many men and women go through life carrying an enormous load of excess baggage.

They are aware something is wrong with them, and attribute it to most everything but the right cause—EYE STRAIN. They simply drag along making a failure of whatever they undertake, whether business, social or other calling. Finally there comes a complete breakdown, with years of doctoring and expense and untold suffering. These cases if taken in time could be entirely relieved by

ASTHMA

Secrets of Marvelous Cures Exposed.

After a quarter of a century's research and careful study Dr. Owens discovered that ASTHMA IS CURABLE ONLY BY TREATING EACH INDIVIDUAL CASE WITH PRECISE DISCRIMINATION OF THE CAUSE. YOU MUST NOT CONFOUND HIS METHOD OF TREATMENT WITH THAT OF THE NOSTRUM PEDDLERS WHO DISTRIBUTE FREE TRIAL BOTTLES OF IMPOSSIBILITIES GUARANTEED TO CURE ALL CASES REGARDLESS OF CAUSE. Your skilled family physician will tell you that Asthma may be caused by diseases of the Heart, Liver, Lungs, Kidneys, etc.; and that the claim of the vendors of a one remedy cure all nostrum is as absurd and insincere as would be a one medicine cure for typhoid fever and all heart, liver, kidney and lung complaints. How simple if true. A sample bottle for each specific complaint, as a cure and protector, and an inducer to give your faithful old family doctor a long and much needed rest. These cure all commodities are compounded primarily to deceive and secondarily to enrich the vendor. It is not for lack of skill that your family physician has not treated your Asthma with curative results. His time and energy have been devoted to other special lines more to his liking, hence his preeminent success. Dr. Owens' treatment is of the same discriminating care that your physician bestows upon you in acute ailments, his method is scientific and rational, he eliminates Asthma and "Asthma cure," individualizes every case and removes the cause and complications which produce and maintain the disease. If after a careful examination he discovers your case is incurable, on account of organic complications he tells you so.

The worst cases are PERFECTLY FREE FROM ASTHMA AS A RULE IN TWENTY-FOUR HOURS WITHOUT OPIATES, SPRAYS, SMOKES, ATOMIZERS, MASSAGE OR HYPODERMIC INJECTION DOPE. His remedies are harmless, pleasant and easy to take.

An interview will cost you nothing. Office hours, 10 to 4.

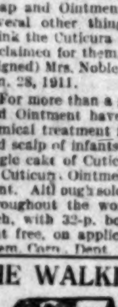
ERUPTION CAUSED TERRIBLE SUFFERING

Baby's Body Covered with Large Sores. Seemed to Itch and Burn. Finger Nails Fell Off. Little or No Sleep. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. In 6 Weeks Cured.



"When my baby boy was six months old, his body was completely covered with large sores that seemed to itch and burn, and cause terrible suffering. The eruption began in pimples which would open and run, making large sores. His hair came out and finger nails fell off and the sores were over the entire body, causing little or no sleep for baby or myself. Great scabs would come off when I removed his shirt.

"We tried a great many remedies, but nothing would help him, till a friend induced me to try the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I used the Cuticura Soap and Ointment but a short time before I could see that he was improving, and in six weeks' time he was entirely cured. He had suffered about six weeks before we tried the Cuticura Soap and Ointment although we had tried several other things, and doctors too. I think the Cuticura Remedies will do all that is claimed for them, and a great deal more." (Signed) Mrs. Noble Tubman, Dodson, Mont., Jan. 28, 1911.

For more than a generation Cuticura Soap and Ointment have afforded the most economical treatment for affections of the skin and scalp of infants, children and adults. A single cake of Cuticura Soap (25c.) and box of Cuticura Ointment (50c.) are often sufficient. Although sold by druggists and dealers throughout the world, a liberal sample of each, with 32-p. book on the skin, will be sent free, on application to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Dept. 18A, Boston.

STEINWAY

"---As Good as the Steinway" ---WHY?

STEINWAY must be the Standard by which all Pianos are measured. If it is "as good as the Steinway" you know it must be good indeed—but is it as good—and by what judgment or trial can any one say it is as good—until he has given the Piano years of trial under all climates and all conditions?

So let your decision be a Steinway, if you would have the best—and the standard Piano of the World.

STRETCHES OF BEAUTY CITY TO MOUNTAINS.

Arroyo Seco Project, as Now Definitely Outlined, Is a Large Unit in the Landscape Engineer's Plan to Give Los Angeles the Greatest Park System of Any Municipality in the Americas.

THE greatest park system of any city in either of the Americas is being designed, unit by unit, for Los Angeles by Landscape Engineer L. D. Cox of the Park Commission. Part of the plan, involving a parkway from Vermont avenue to Silver Lake reservoir, has already been agreed to and the assessment district mapped.

Now the greatest feature of the entire project, the Arroyo Seco, has been reported upon by Cox, and the document will be laid before the Park Commission in a few days, illustrated with maps and photographs that will bring out every feature of the treatment proposed for this great natural parkway. All these things will cost money, of course, but the commission hopes to get it from the people, and with that object has begun a campaign of education, in which Engineer Cox's maps and pictures are to play an important part.

If Kansas City can expend $10,000,000 in ten years for parks and beautifying its river frontage, if Rio de Janeiro can spend $60,000,000 in eight years for similar work, and Boston $15,000,000, the Park Commission thinks there will be no obstacle raised to building the drives and roadways, embankments and bridges required to perfect the Arroyo Seco, especially as this city has less than a thousand acres devoted to parks at the present time, excluding the great Griffith Park, which is really a reserve as yet.

The Arroyo Seco project will cost a lot of money—the Park Commission concedes that to be so, but thinks if San Francisco can spend $6,000,000 on parks, Seattle $3,500,000, and each of them make annual appropriations three and four times the amount this city does, Los Angeles will not lag behind.

NEARLY MILLION FOR LAND.

The land will cost nearly $1,000,000, and there will be a long ribbon of it—about ten miles long, perhaps fourteen, and anywhere from 300 to 800 feet wide, half a mile in some parts of Pasadena. Three hundred acres will have to be condemned in this city, costing perhaps $500,000. South Pasadena will have to raise $75,000 and Pasadena $250,000. About 300 acres in the county will cost probably $150,000. There may be as many as 1100 acres condemned in all.

The maps of Engineer Cox cover every detail and suggestion for the parkway. Contour maps show the lay of the ground—its topography, obtained by plane-table surveys and stadia work. Then block maps indicate the ownership of every acre and vara of ground throughout the proposed assessment district, the ground already owned by the city, the ground that will have to be condemned, and the streets that will have to be vacated. The possible tree planting is already outlined, and drives connecting with Elysian Park have been mapped. The railways are shown and the proposed embankment just below where the Arroyo Seco opens into the river.

The embankment and deepening of the Los Angeles river bed from the Buena Vista bridge to the mouth of the arroyo will probably result in a flow of water being visible on the surface all the year round. The railways approaching the city will run along the river banks and above the arroyo, and the first view of the approach to Los Angeles presented to the traveler will be one of striking picturesqueness and beauty.

OTHER CITIES INTERESTED.

The Park Commission hopes that the process of acquiring the land for this project will be begun at once.

This city is not alone interested, for Pasadena, South Pasadena, and in fact a large part of the county, have much to say about it, as it is proposed to carry the parkway straight up along the arroyo into the national forest reserve, affording this part of the State, as the commission says a parkway without an equal in the country. Pasadena has already procured over two-thirds of her share of the land for the park, and South Pasadena has a committee hard at work. The Board of Supervisors is favorable, and if the county can do so, will supplement the work of the city.

HOW IT'S PLANNED.

As explained in a statement by the Park Commission, the plans are outlined thus:

The parkway will begin at the

Parkway of the Arroyo Seco and the River,

As designed by L. D. Cox, landscape architect for the Park Commission, and glimpses of beauty spots by the way. The map shows the proposed treatment of the river bed from its junction with the Arroyo Seco to the Buena Vista bridge, and also the connections of Arroyo Seco parkway with Elysian Park.

PASSENGER DIES ON STEAMER.

Expires On Yosemite Bound South from Portland—Body Turned Over to San Francisco Coroner.

John Duncker, a through passenger on the steamer Yosemite of the West Coast Steamship Line, plying between Portland and San Diego, died at sea, according to advices received yesterday at the offices of Charles R. McCormick in this city.

The Yosemite put in at San Francisco, where the body was turned over to the Coroner when the steamer proceeded on her way south. From papers found on Duncker it would appear that he was a race track man. He was about 40 years old, stout in build. The remains will be held in San Francesco until his relatives are heard from.

ARMENIAN FAIR AND BAZAAR.

The Armenian branch of the First Congregational Church of this city will hold a bazaar in the Social Hall of the First Church, Ninth and Hope streets, on Thursday. Beautiful Armenian hand-work for Christmas presents, Armenian cookies, pastry, Turkish coffee, and other things will be for sale. They invite the patronage of the public.

JEWISH CITIZENS PLAN MODEL ORPHANS' HOME.

Splendid Institution for Parentless and Destitute Hebrew Children to Be Built at Huntington Park—Noble Philanthropy Backed by Many Leading Men and Women Will Be Started Next Week.

A NOBLE philapthropy for orphaned and destitute children of Jewish parentage is contemplated in a roject backed by some of the leading citizens of Los Angeles, and which has now taken the form of a definite enterprise. Architectural plans for the institution, which is to be started next week on a beautiful ten-acre site at the corner of Miles and Irvington avenue in Huntington Park, have been completed by the Milwaukee Building Company of this city.

The project is a comprehensive one and calls for building improvements and methods of management that embody the most modern ideas. Having in mind the great influence that environment has in the character development of children, the designers were early instructed that the artistic side of the construction details must not be sacrificed.

The style of architecture to be followed out will be the Italian Renaissance, this manner of treatment being modified only to the extent that the cottage plan of housing the children to be cared for may not in any way suffer in point of practicality. The home influence will be striven after throughout.

The complete plan as outlined calls for an administration building, six cottage dormitories, a hospital, a sloyd building, and a gymnasium. At the present time the administration building, two cottages, and the hospital are to be erected. The Milwaukee Building Company will build all the structures of the group.

FOUNDERS WELL KNOWN.

Among the founders of this important philanthropy are some of the best-known men and women in Los Angeles. The builders are incorporated as the Jewish Orphans' Home Committee of Southern California, the present officers of which are S. G. Marshutz, president; John Kahn, first vice-president; Jules Kauffman, second vice-president; Mrs. Berthold Baruch, third

OUR AQUEDUCT INCOMPARABLE.

Highest Authority Says So After Inspection.

Its Economy and Efficiency Seen by Newell.

Federal Reclamation Head Examines Closely.

There is not an undertaking of the kind in the United States that can be compared to the Los Angeles Aqueduct in efficiency and economy. F. H. Newell, says so, and if there is one man on the face of this earth who knows, he is F. H. Newell, director of the United States Reclamation Service—father of that service, in fact, for it was initiated under his direction in 1902, when he organized the department at Washington and throughout the country.

Newell completed a trip of close inspection along the aqueduct last Thursday. Writing to Chief Engineer Mulholland from Independence in the Owens River Valley, of the aqueduct and its construction, the reclamation director says:

POINTS THAT IMPRESS.

"The city of Los Angeles is to be congratulated on the remarkable progress and excellence of its work on the aqueduct. I have visited most of the large undertakings of this kind in the United States and have seen none which are comparable in the apparent economy and efficiency of the operations. Great care is evidently being taken in all details and yet there is no undue elaboration. I am particularly impressed with the saving resulting from the use of tufa cement and the ingenuity displayed in overcoming obstacles or turning them to advantage. Few undertakings of this magnitude can be found in which there is such a conspicuous absence of merely ornamental features. The more important or difficult works are safely installed out of sight and away from injury, or are plain and solid, designed for use and permanence. The engineering plans and organization show evidence of great care and skill, having the simplicity which marks the highest development. As time goes on the citizens of Los Angeles must appreciate more and more the forethought, devotion and ability of the men who initiated and have carried forward this work, upon which rests most of the future growth and prosperity of the city."

A WORLD AUTHORITY.

Newell's opinion carries weight throughout the world in engineering circles, and when he speaks his words are regarded by technical experts in every country as ex cathedra on the subject of hydraulic construction, dams, ditches, weirs and everything connected with the use of water. Twelve thousand men are at this moment employed by the government under his direction carrying out projects that involve the expenditure of $30,000,000, and in the past nine years he has directed the expenditure of $30,000,000 beside that now being laid out. All the plans of the government for the reclamation of the arid lands have been made under his personal direction.

Newell, who is accompanied by First Assistant Engineer Adams, of the Reclamation Service, is principally interested in the Los Angeles Aqueduct as an engineering project, as are other engineers, who have come from all parts of this country and from Europe to make a study of the work and the methods adopted.

His examination was a critical one and extended from Mojave north to the aqueduct intake, a distance of 135 miles.

METROPOLITAN CLUB DANCE.

The Metropolitan Club will entertain with an informal dance in the hall at Sixteenth and Flower streets next Friday evening. The affair is the first of a series to be given by the club. Committees are: Invitation—Thomas M. Hobgood, Dale M. Thurston, H. R. Goodwin; Arrangement—G. B. Schuler, H. R. Leighton, Cecil H. Beauchamp; Reception and Programme—Frank Westall, Ralph R. Twombly, A. J. Pearse; Refreshments—H. D. Benton, Fred Reed, John D. Dawson; Publicity—J. H. Sims, Jr., F. E. Andrews, Arthur J. Crommie; Patronesses—Mrs. Florence Walker, Mrs. Gavin W. Craig, Mrs. John L. Richardson, Mrs. Charles Burnell, Mrs. John McD. Mellen.

FAMOUS COLORED EVANGELIST.

An old-fashioned colored revival will begin today in Mt. Zion Baptist Church, Third and Hewitt streets, under the leadership of Evangelist McPherson, known as "The Fighting Parson," and one of the most remarkable black preachers in the country. There will be a chorus of 100 colored singers, chosen from all parts of the city, which will be a big feature in the meetings. Services will be held today at 11 a. m. and 3 and 7:30 p. m. The general public is invited to hear the picturesque colored man.

DINNER-DANCE RECEPTION.

A dinner dance was given at the Hotel Pepper Friday night to about 100 guests and friends. Preceding the dancing a reception was held in the parlors. The assembly room was beautifully decorated with green pepper boughs and the electric lights were covered with colored Jaanese lanterns. An orchestra was hidden in a bower of palms and flowers in one corner of the balroom and furnished the dancing music.

FIREMAN'S FINAL REST.

Services were held on Wednesday over the remains of Walthall Otero Fitch, the young fireman who was injured last May by a all through the pole hole at the Aliso-street engine-house, and who passed away suddenly on Monday afternoon. Interment was made in the firemen's plot in Inglewood Park Cemetery. The deceased leaves a father, mother, brother, sister and a 5-year-old daughter.

Like Lightning.

FLAMES FLASH THROUGH BODY.

Woman's Hair Made to Stand Straight on End.

Dogs' Skeletons to Walk in Sight of Crowds.

Astonishing Things Planned for Electrical Show.

A twinkling wonder will be the Los Angeles Electrical Exposition at Shrine Auditorium from the 25th inst. to December 9. The dazzling display will remain open to the public those fourteen days, including Sunday and Thanksgiving, from 8 a.m. to 11 o'clock at night.

Many thousand California people will see its blazing beauty and 5000 visitors from Arizona and Nevada are expected, and will be entertained by the luster and the sparkle of the unique sight.

Nearly 200 concerns and individuals will exhibit and fifty of them will offer spectacular attractions.

Two of the features were signed for yesterday. The success of both has already been demonstrated to the marvel of large audiences. One is the high-voltage, high-frequency machine made by W. B. Palmer to be operated by himself in demonstrating that a machine which produces a 50-inch open-air spark and which generates 400,000 volts of electricity can be handled with safety when one possesses the necessary technical knowledge.

It requires only 2200 volts to electrocute a condemned man at Sing Sing, but Palmer says he will pass the total of 400,000 volts through his system with perfect safety. He will sit and smile while there flashes through his body a current sufficiently strong to electrocute 200 men separately if the power were differently applied.

THE VACANT CHAIR.

Palmer has constructed an exact reproduction of an electric chair to which he will have a man strapped and clamped as they do it at Sing Sing, only lifting the crown a few inches from the head. 400,000 volts of electricity will charge through his body without any ill effect whatever.

When Palmer is so charged with electricity he can hurl bolts from his body that would knock a man down, light cigars, gas lights and tungsten burners with his tongue, fingers, toes, eyelids or any other part of his anatomy. Through all this he feels only slightly warmed up, but nothing more.

When the powerful current causes him to become a human lightning bolt and his hands, drawn several inches apart, shoot out blue flames of electricity like volleys of musketry, he is really enjoying himself. Expert electricians all agree that it takes 30,000 vots of electricity to jump one inch. Palmer shoots bolts from his hands through eight inches of space, and pointing his fingers at pieces of paper, cardboard, or wood, sends the live lightning through them, making charred holes and marks such as natural lightning does on the sides of barns and heavy trees.

Palmer also has another interesting demonstration showing the principles of a transformer without the use of iron. Without any electrical connection at all he takes an ordinary coil of wire in each hand to one of which is attached an incandescent lamp. By bringing the two coils together he illumines the lamp. This is done without any electrical connection whatever

SHOWS THEIR INNARDS.

The other exhibit is provided by E. J. Rose, president of the Electro-Mechanical Laboratory of Los Angeles, who has passed several months building the largest and most successful X-ray machine ever shown on the Pacific Coast.

He will have this machine so arranged that the spectators at the show will be able to look through it and see living skeletons of animals running about on a platform under the X-ray. With this machine Rose can produce atmospheric electricity and will give the spectators a genuine miniature lightning and thunderstorm. A young woman's body is charged with high frequency current from this machine making her a veritable magnet. Small objects will be attracted and repelled from her body.

While charged with this power, the girl's hair, which will be three feet long, will stand on edge like porcupine quills. The moment the contact is off the hair falls to its natural position.

WOMEN INVITED.

Rose extends an invitation to any of the women who visit the show to take this same treatment but will not be responsible for rats, puffs, or hairpins, but will guarantee the women against harm.

Rose also takes a gas blue flame burner which will eject a flame six or eight inches in height and create a temperature from 1500 to 2500 degrees Fahrenheit. This temperature will melt brass or steel instruments. He holds a platinum plate in this flame for a few seconds, then removes it, and shows on the bottom of the plate a collection of real frost.

He will also perform several extremely interesting and bewildering experiments with liquid air. He will make a peeled potato as hard as a billiard bal. He will freeze beef so hard that by hittin git with a hammer it will crumble to dust. He will make a snow-ball appear inside of an empty sack, producing it from the moisture of the surrounding atmosphere. With this snow and the further assistance of liquid air he will instantly freeze cubes of mercury.

DIXIE SOCIETY.

The Dixie Society which was recently organized, the members representing thirteen Southern States, will give a reception and entertainment next Saturday at the Womans' Clubhouse. One delegate from each State will have a place on a pleasing programme, which will be announced later.

The society is anxious to have every resident of Los Angeles who comes from the South to attend the reception and enjoy the programme.

To Quickly Gain a New Complexion

(American Family Journal)

The quickest way to get rid of a bad complexion is by the use of ordinary mercolized wax, procurable at any drug store. Just spread the wax over your face at night in the same manner you would use cold cream, and the beautifying work begins at once. Next morning, when you wash this off, tiny particles of old, worn-out skin are taken off with it. The following day more of the dead surface comes off, and so on until soon you have entirely discarded the faded, sallow, blotchy or muddy complexion.

The fresh, bright, healthy-hued skin underneath furnishes your new complexion. No process has yet been discovered that will give a woman such a rarely beautiful and youthful skin. Marks of age, weather, worry and disease which mar the skin, of course disappear with the skin itself.

juncture of the Arroyo Seco with the Los Angeles River, where it will connect with the proposed road along the face of Elysian Park and so become a close part of the city park system. The bed of the river will be beautified from this point to the Buena Vista bridge, as stated, thus forming an attractive railway entrance to the city. Throughout the parkway the windings of the arroyo will be followed and the banks will be wooded where natural vegetation has ceased to exist, so that the drives will pass in and out of a forest, crossing bridges that will span the stream—dry in summer but a fierce torrent in winter.

The views along the drive will attract thousands of visitors daily when the project shall be completed, which Cox thinks will be within two years. There will be nothing like it anywhere else in America.

The Arroyo Seco parkway proper will begin at the Avenue Twenty bridge, but the plans of the commission call for the parking of a stretch of land where the arroyo opens out into the river at Dayton avenue, where a bridge will be built. This will all be set out to trees. The triangular piece of ground between the Santa Fe track, the river and Avenue Nineteen, which is all city land, will be parked. This map as presented by Engineer Cox, covers only the approach to the arroyo on both sides of the river. Larger maps show its connection with the park system and an extension of the river drive towards Griffith Park.

Hard Luck.

DESERT RULING CAUSES WORRY.

ENTRYMEN ON UTAH LANDS MAY LOSE ALL INTERESTS.

Local Syndicate and Investors in Position of Embarrassment by View Taken by Secretary of the Interior—Homesteaders Must Personally Improve Properties.

The ruling of Secretary of the Interior Fisher in regard to desert land entries under what is known as the Enlarged Homestead Act of Congress, is likely to bring to grief the operations of a local syndicate recently organized to locate several thousand acres of land in Iron county, Utah, 250 miles west of Salt Lake.

The crux of the argument to induce would-be investors to make entries was that under the Smoot amendment to the act above mentioned it was not necessary for the entrymen to live on the land or personally to look after the improvements provided for by law, it was alleged. The ruling of the Secretary is that the land either must be improved by the entrymen, or such work must be supervised personally by such entrymen. The provisions of the law as to desert land entries in Utah are the same as in California, except that one person may enter for patent 320 acres instead of 160, as is the law in California.

Visitors come daily to the local land office for information and Registrar Buren and Receiver Robinson are kept busy explaining the recent ruling of the Interior Department. Some of these expectant ones are holders of stock in the syndicate which may be put out of business unless the entrymen fulfill the well-known provisions as to the patent of desert lands.

The original act of Congress, under the provisions of which these desert land entries were made, applied only to the States of Utah, Montana, Idaho and Nevada, excluding California, but it was afterward amended by Senator Reed Smoot so that entrymen could take up 320 acres of land in that State, and in cases where there was not a supply of water for domestic purposes, it was not necessary to live on the land.

With the passage of this bill the impression gained currency that it was not only not necessary to live on the land, but that an entry could be made and that the person making such entry could leave it forever, receiving a patent at the end of five years, providing he had certain improvements made in buildings, the cultivation of crops, etc. It was also imagined that this could be sub-let to others, just so the provisions of the law were carried out.

This was to have been the arrangement with the Los Angeles syndicate, and it was intended after entering thousands of acres to send a superintendent to the land and have him cultivate it under the law. It was argued that it would not be necessary for a single person interested in the plan to go to Utah. But this is all charged with the ruling of the General Land Office and other arrangements must be made if the company is to be placed in a position to secure a patent.

Quite a number of Los Angeles individuals have entered the limit of 320 acres of land, near Lund, Iron county, and they are making anxious inquiry as to their status. They have been told by the local officials that it is not necessary to live on the land, but that they must either personally make the improvements or personally (backed by an affidavit) see to it that the work is done. If they do not comply they not only lose their land but the right to enter other homestead rights and the money they have spent, if any, on the land, and the expenses so far incurred in making an entry that will finally be disallowed by the government.

The Result of Years of Progress in Shoemaking

The throb of the motor and the whiz of the airship overhead all testify to the strenuousness of modern business methods. In the past few years, old methods of business have been thrust aside.

This is particularly true in the business of shoemaking. When "Queen Quality" Shoes were first put on the market, the modern methods and marvelous machinery of today were undreamed of. "Queen Quality" has set the pace in advanced methods for all others. In their sphere they have made as wonderful strides in advance of competition as the automobile over the bicycle, and the aeroplane over the automobile.

Each season has marked "Queen Quality" progress—this season the advance is more obvious than ever. This you will admit, on seeing the beautiful new models on display at the Baker Stores. In variety, perfection of design and proportion they are unsurpassed. In comfort and fitting qualities, they are all you can wish for. The prices, too, are most conservative.

Progressive methods distinguish the Baker Stores from other stores selling shoes. We believe there is nothing too good in shoe values, store service and general treatment for Baker patrons. This policy has earned us a reputation that has forced us, repeatedly, to expand our store facilities to meet the ever-increasing demands of our trade. "Queen Quality"—"Baker's"—a progressive combination and hard to beat. If you don't already know this—try it.

AVIATOR LIKES SOLITUDE.

Danes Are Backing Thelen for the Future—He Says Accidents Are Due to Bird Men's Errors.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] In all Europe there is no aviator more confident of his future than Robert Thelen. He recently flew across the Kattegat, over seventy miles, in eighty minutes, in a small biplane—a German modification of the Wright model. Since then Scandinavians have been backing Thelen for a foremost place in the air.

Young and strong, he has qualities for the aerial profession. But his reason for taking to it is characteristic—he likes solitude.

Up there in the air, he says, he hears nothing but the motion of his own machine, and that is music to him. "Solitude is the mystic charm of flight" is the way he sums it up.

To Quickly Chase Away Wrinkles

(From Fashion Review)

The surest and quickest way to obliterate wrinkles of every description, from the finest lines to the deepest furrows, is by means of the saxolite formula, about which we've heard so much of late. Bathing the face and neck in the lotion at once tightens and tones up the skin, affecting every wrinkle as well as creased or saggy tissue aobut the cheeks, neck or chin. Any druggist can supply pure powdered saxolite, which is most effective. Dissolve an ounce of this in a half pint of witch hazel, and you have as perfect a solution as any expert can make.

SURELY CRAZY.

A man confined in the Los Angeles jail is accused of pretending to be crazy in order that he may get a free ride back to New York. The fact is that the man must be crazy. Any person who desires to leave Los Angeles and go to New York, especially at this season of the year, is as crazy as a bedbug, beyond the shadow of a doubt.

WON'T BE TAKEN IN.

Many sincere Socialists will refuse to be taken in by the local campaigners. They do not recognize a combination of labor unionism and business irresponsibility as a Socialist ideal. Men may cherish the ends of Socialism without wishing to demoralize business and disrupt civics by plunging the city into a maelstrom of extravagance and misrule.

REFORMED PUGILISTS.

Another pugilist—this time a featherweight of San Jose—announces that he is to become a minister of the Gospel. He also states that he means to take to the road as an evangelist. There is a good deal of money to be made by an evangelist who has the business instinct. But what we should like to see, once in a while at least, is a reformed pugilist who puts on sackcloth and ashes and repents his sins far from the glare and the glory of the limelight.

MOON OF CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

This is the moon of chrysanthemums in our golden California of the South. From hedges of flame and from the gardens of magic the feathery blooms glow in the sunlight under our faithful skies of blue. The rose still blossoms, it is true, the cosmos dances on the winds, the geranium is fadeless, the hibiscus is scarlet in the morning light; all seasons have all flowers for their own in this blessed land of sun and shine. But there are seasons when some certain flower rules as queen. And this is the moon of the chrysanthemum.

AN ARIZONA PROBLEM.

In view of the numerous dam disasters in Wisconsin, Pennsylvania and other States we have no doubt that Arizona will make ample State provision for the protection of its magnificent reservoirs when all government work is completed and these superb properties are placed in the hands of the farmers for whom they were built. The reservoir is always among the most splendid enterprises of the West, and Arizona has been too happily favored in these great assets not to protect them in the fullest measure.

THE TUG OF WAR.

Evidently the Democratic party is about to afford the spectacle of a great tug of war, not between New Jersey and Ohio, but between Dixie and the land that lies north of the old dividing line. The fight is much more likely to be between North and South than between Wilson and Harmon. There is a growing sentiment that if a Republican President could appoint a former Confederate soldier as Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, the Democratic party can again afford to honor a section which furnishes more than three-fourths of the Democratic electoral votes.

WHAT IS AN INFIDEL?

Our present divorce laws, even as they are, are considered somewhat lax. The decision of an Oklahoma justice has opened another and very convenient side door for those who find the matrimonial rooftree an unpleasant one to live under. Mrs. Roselyn Monze has been granted a decree nisi on the grounds that her husband is an infidel.

Should this ground for complaint become general, many interminable divorce suits will be the consequence, for to decide whether a husband is a duly qualified infidel will be as hard a matter as to select an impartial juryman in the McNamara murder trial.

Infidelity has always been a recognized reason for releasing the wronged party from the desecrated marriage tie; now we shall have to add a new impediment, and call it "infidelism." And between this new infidelism and the old infidelity there is all the difference in the world.

"LA CLOCHE DE BOIS."

A new club has been started in Paris under this name—and it means vastly more than the simple name implies. In French "Demenager a la cloche de bois" is the equivalent slang for "shooting the moon" in English—moving your household furniture at night without the landlord's knowledge and incidentally forgetting to pay the rent!

This "club" is therefore a brazen and impudent formation and humorously illegal. It is only in Paris they can do these things! Their excuse is the high cost of living, which they translate into meaning "Why pay rent?"

So any member whose landlord is a horrid, impatient, money-grubbing person can call upon the society to help him move in the middle of the night. If the landlord and his men appear the "club" will engage their whole and undivided attention, while the removal proceeds undisturbed. So far two removals have taken place under these conditions and everything went off swimmingly.

When taxed with the question of honor involved, La Cloche de Bois grins collectively and points to Italy, Austria and Germany as comfortable precedents.

THE OLD GUARD.

The stalwart Republicans comprise within their ranks much of the best brains and manliness of the political organization which, in every contest, whether national or local, has stood for good government and for freedom and obedience to law.

Occasionally the waves of a temporary misguided popular clamor have roared and rolled around the feet of the Old Guard, as the ocean rolls against a rock, and with like futile effect.

The Old Guard is responding as of old when the bugle call of endangered liberty summoned them to the defense of their country. They do not decline counsel from, or refuse co-operation with, insurgents, or progressives, or good governmenters, or even Democrats. They commend the pending movement of which some of our grand old stalwarts are at the head. They indorse the patriotic action of the Women's League. They march cheerfully alongside of the Good Government forces. They throw up their hats for the Democrats who will go to the polls and vote against Harriman and for George Alexander, for the sake of the fair fame, the homes and the prosperity of the city we love; but they preserve their individuality, nevertheless.

And there are a lot of the Old Guard who will emulate the example of old John Burns at Gettysburg. He didn't belong to the regular army, or to the volunteers, or to the militia, or the home guard. He just gathered his old brass-buttoned coat across his old patriotic heart, and crowded his old bell-crowned beaver upon his old white head, and with his old flint-lock rifle stood upon the hill and, while regiments of the boys in blue cheered him as they passed, he loaded and fired, and loaded and fired, and, as he told Gen. Meade, " 'fit' the whole damned Confederate army from dawn to dusk."

The Portland (Or.) Times is a reinforcement to the cause of industrial freedom, and liberty regulated by law. Its bright, strong editorials in favor of the open shop, of the right of free contract and freedom to perform contracts on the part of both employers and employed commend it to the support of the industrious, law-abiding, home-owners—whether capitalists or workers—of the great city on the banks of the Willamette, which has been built up by its workers and which owes none of its prosperity to its brawlers. The Portland Times recognizes the fact that a blacksmith is a benefit and a jawsmith is a detriment to any city. The motto at the head of its columns is

"Each man should have the right to earn his way,
To each for fair day's work a fair day's pay.
Each should governed be by justice's right
And gain his ends by peaceful means, not dynamite."

The Portland Times is not merely an organ devoted to a rightful cause. It is a newspaper in every sense of the word—bright, clear and strong. The Los Angeles Times welcomes its namesake to the ranks of Pacific Coast journalism and predicts for it the success which it surely deserves.

SOCIALISTS CANNOT RAISE WAGES.

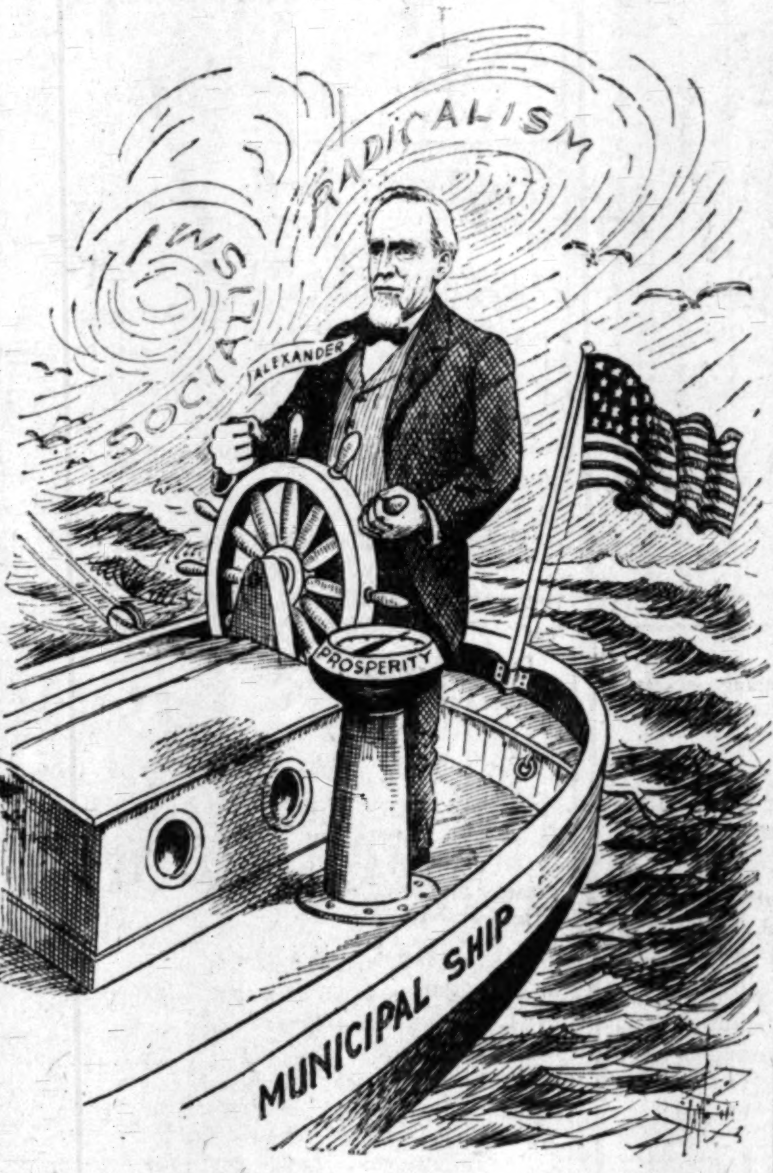
Los Angeles has thousands of women and girl workers in stores, offices and factories who are not related by blood or marriage to the Socialists (labor union and otherwise.) Determined and systematic effort is being made to induce these independent women and girl workers to promise to vote the Socialist ticket on the false assurance to them that the election of Socialist Harriman and a Socialist (majority) Council will result in their getting higher wages. This false hope is brazenly held out to them in spite of the fact that it is utterly beyond the power of any Mayor or City Council to raise the wages of any workers other than those who work for the city. These men and women Socialist agitators know very well that their action is deceitful. All they are doing, and knowingly doing, is to "make a promise to the ear only to break it to the hope."

The very contrary is what will happen if Harriman and his Socialist associates are elected. Credit will be paralyzed, and without credit, and large credit at that, hundreds of the stores, offices, and factories of Los Angeles will have to close up, and thousands upon thousands of our male and female workers will be walking the streets, vainly looking for a job.

In his speech before the 1910 annual convention of the American Federation of Labor, Harriman made a false and bitter attack on the capital behind our street-railway lines. Now, further capital, and millions of it, is needed for those very railways and for other of our great and increasing interests, all of which are large providers of work and wages. This capital is not here. It must come from outside. Is it likely that outside capital will seek investment here if our city is under control of a Socialist Mayor and a Socialist Council, particularly if that Mayor is Harriman, who is already on record as attacking capital? Further, in that same speech, Harriman (who was asking money support for a strike here) boasted that the reason why labor-union domination was successful in San Francisco was because it was the "power behind the court." Just fancy that power in Los Angeles if Socialist Harriman is Mayor with a subservient Socialist City Council!

Be not deceived, working-women voters of Los Angeles! You do not have to make any voting promises in order to secure registration, nor are any Socialist assurances of "higher wages" if you register and then vote the Socialist ticket worth even as much as "the baseless fabric of a dream." They are mere vaporings—as illusive and as intangible as the air you breathe. Register immediately (it will be too late after November 9,) and on December 5 vote the safe and sane Good Government ticket; vote for Alexander and the Council candidates. In voting that ticket you vote for continuous work and good pay, while voting the Harriman Socialist ticket means voting for intermittent (or no) work and poor pay. When you register (and this applies with equal force to male voters,) or if you have already registered, make up your minds not to split your vote in any way, but to cast it solid for good government, steady work and good pay, and for the preservation of the present good credit of the city and of all its interests individual and corporate. Bear in mind that the success of Socialist Harriman and Company means destruction of credit, loss of employment, loss of wages, destruction of the home, and a fearful blow to prosperous Los Angeles.

Keep Him at the Wheel.



"BALEFUL CAPITALISM."

"A promise for a promise" is, in law, a sufficient consideration to support a contract, unless the promise is such a one that it is manifestly impossible for the promisor to perform it. In such event the contract will be held to be void upon its face.

In the event of a triumph of Socialism at the coming election, the victors would escape moral responsibility for their failure to fulfill the promises of their platform, on the ground that it was impossible for the voters not to have known that those promises could not possibly be materialized into performances.

The Socialist programme, tersely stated, is first to raise hell, and next to raise $17,000,000. The Socialist platform pledges the party

"to continuous effort to complete the deep-water harbor at Wilmington and San Pedro."

Where, and in what form, will the "continuous effort" be made? A harbor cannot be excavated with speeches proclaiming that "property is robbery" nor yet by a platform declaration that

"the machinery of production, distribution, communication and exchange should be owned collectively and administered by the people."

The assurance accorded to capitalists that Socialism will, as soon as possible, take measures to confiscate their investments for the common good, will not turn a spadeful of earth at San Pedro. It will require money, and a good deal of it—ten millions of dollars—to complete the projected harbor improvements. Who will buy $10,000,000 or any lesser quantity of the harbor bonds, if the government which issues and promises to pay the bonds shall be controlled and its ordinances framed and passed by Socialists? Will the Socialist leaders who are piloting their followers on a road that leads to financial ruin and public and private bankruptcy induce them to congregate with picks, and shovels, and saws, and hammers, and trowels, and chisels at San Pedro, and there labor for love for six months and find their own food while they—in the language of their platform—

"build docks, and wharves, and warehouses, and landings, and an emergency hospital, and a municipal ferry system with boats constructed in a manner to be suitable for the transportation of horses and vehicles of every kind."

In what way will the Socialists

"improve the water system of San Pedro district, so as to facilitate the distribution of water to families"?

Will they carry the water in buckets to the houses, or will they lay pipes? And if pipes, then will the pipes be of the same temporary character as Socialist politicians have used in their efforts to secure office? Or will they be iron or steel pipes? And if the latter, who will supply the money with which to buy the pipes? Who will buy bonds issued by a Socialist government? In what castles in Spain or in what asylum for the demented may such investors be found?

The only promise of the Socialist platform that it is even remotely possible for the promisors to carry out is "to abolish the long-distonce telephone charges between San Pedro district and other parts of Los Angeles." But that would benefit but few people, for there would be but few people left in San Pedro to send or receive telephone messages.

The Socialist platform pledges the party "to hasten the work of completing the Owens River aqueduct and to take immediate steps toward bringing the Owens River water into Los Angeles, and to generate the electric power from the same which is to be held by the people for their use and not delivered now or at any time to any corporation of avaricious and exploiting capitalists."

In what direction will the "immediate steps toward bringing the Owens River water into Los Angeles" be taken? There are $4,218,400 of unissued aqueduct bonds, and $3,500,000 of unissued power bonds. Unless these bonds can be sold, the Owens River aqueduct cannot be completed, and the electric power of the aqueduct water cannot be harnessed. To whom is the $7,718,400 of bonds to be sold? Will the 20,000 Socialists who voted for Harriman each contribute $400 to purchase the aqueduct bonds, and $500 each to buy the harbor bonds? Or, when the Socialist leaders take "immediate steps" to secure $900 each from their followers, will not the latter make the same answer that De Mauprat made to Richelieu, when the cardinal told the chevalier that he "must pay his debts." "With all my heart, Your Eminence," was the response, "where then shall I borrow the money?"

Imagine a Socialist Mayor and a Socialist finance committee of the Council taking "immediate steps" to the offices of a syndicate of "avaricious and exploiting capitalists" to sell $17,000,000 worth of Los Angeles city bonds!

CANADIAN ANNEXATION.

Champ Clark as a joker added much to the gaiety of nations when he playfully pulled the extreme tip of the British lion's tail, and in doing so caused that outraged animal to emit a sullen growl of protest. As appeared later, there was considerable method in the joker's madness, for the effect of that royal rumble was to kill the arbitration treaty and to thwart the serious efforts of the President to accomplish something he honestly believed to be for the good of the North American continent.

Now Champ Clark has discarded the madness and acknowledged the method; in all seriousness the Democratic joker has declared his intention, if given the chance, to annex that pugnacious dominion on our northern borders, whether their people are willing or not; he has even expressed a desire to lock horns with President Taft on this sole issue at the coming Presidential election.

This may be tall talk for the "peanut heaven," but if so the Democratic Speaker has misjudged the gallery he is addressing as well as the length of his tongue. America is too great today to be moved by an uncalled-for display of spread-eagleism, and too powerful to act the part of the bully. Washington is not Rome, nor is Ottawa Constantinople. The American people are for peace and righteousness and will not draw the sword of liberty in a pure and simple war of territorial conquest. The very fact that we could forcibly annex Canada, were we so minded, is Canada's everlasting protection.

The idea that nine-tenths of the people of America are in favor of annexing Canada is evolved wholly from the inner consciousness of Mr. Champ Clark, the one-time jester. His chances of receiving the Democratic nomination must have received an unexpected setback to have forced him onto so desperate a plank as that of war with Canada. Nothing could suit the old Republican party better than to see Clark, champing at the bit, in single combat for the Presidency with the big unruffled standard bearer of the G.O.P. We fear the Democratic machine is far too shrewd to allow such a tilting tourney.

Most of us firmly believe that through the laws of evolution the United States must eventually dominate the whole American continent, but no nine-tenths of the people wish to see the issue forced at once with fire and sword, in order to secure a Democratic nomination for this man who laughs.

AMY'S BEAUS.

Since Amy Brown went out of town,
The world seems all turned upside down;
Her many beaus are filled with woes,
The buildings even seem to frown
To think that she—so fair to see,
So young and buxom and all that—'ll
Desert Los Angeles and flee
Away to dismal, damp Seattle.

Poor Fred—'tis said—has gone to bed
And wrapped red flannel round his head.
Vincent, so neat, no more you'll meet
On Broadway, Spring or Adams street;
Ambition in his soul is dead:
He's bought a place near Watts instead.

We never thought our English sport
Charlie, so fond of golf and cricket,
So choicely reared, would grow a beard
And vote the socialistic ticket;
Or Billy Walker, our New Yorker,
Would take a job at herding cattle
Like any clown, 'cause Amy Brown
Had gone to live in wet Seattle.

And Dr. Parr, our moting star,
Who speeded autos near and far,
Has bought an old Missouri mule
And sold his Fiat racing car.
Hal went the pace; he loved a race,
And never missed a lightweight battle;
But now—(what sorrow could be worse?)—
He drives an undertaker's hearse
And weeps at mention of Seattle.

The present pose of Amy's beaus
With every day yet greater grows,
It fills Los Angeles with fears
And gives a fillip to her foes.
And should, they say, poor Job some day
As city Mayor grow sleek and fat, 'll
Be all laid down to Amy Brown
Who went and voted for Seattle.

I HAVE no speci desire to engag actively in th present politi controversy whi appears to be a di tracting influen taking the minds the people aw from their acc tomed haunts of thought into the wild j gles of sociological discussion. As an Ea philosopher, it were more fitting that I vote my little time on the Sunday morn stage to subjects which are more funda tal in their character than politics. And am free to say, that if the scrimmage wh is now being waged were a mere scram for offices, I would pay no attention to whatever.

BUT, AS I SEE IT, dearly beloved, the litical campaign which is now absor Los Angeles has a deeper meaning be it than office grabbing, or even the savi the city from the temporary grasp of Harriman or the gentleman who was la a beer carrier in the Imperial Cafe, but is now one of the Socialist candidates the City Council.

YEA, DEARLY BELOVED, this attem make Los Angeles a Socialist strong means more than the things that appea the surface. We might even be able t main here were the Socialists to be their way as to making Los Angele "wide-open" town, the dance halls i restrained operation and the police changed from an effective organization a gang of loafers who would protect more than a band of Apaches imported Paris. A man might still defend hi against such situations as these and, his strong right arm he might also pr his women folk.

NO, BRETHREN, it is not so much things I have mentioned—though h knows they are ills not lightly to be bo but it is the deadly hatred and the ous opposition that Socialism di toward the Christian religion that a me when I consider the possibility triumph in Los Angeles and througho country.

NOW, IT IS a fact that Socialists a members of the Christian religion. moment a man becomes a Socialist he going to church. COPE AND AIMS: Independent, uncompromised, unshackled, unpurchasable, unafraid and unincumbered. THE LOS ANGELES TIMES is devoted to the great principles of Liberty under Law, Equal Rights in all fields of lawful human endeavor, Industrial Freedom, and to the upbuilding of Los Angeles, the State of California and the great Southwest.

TO LABOR: The Times champions the principle of "equality of opportunity," with all that it means to independent labor and the average good citizen. It is the undeviating friend of all honest toilers—of all unshackled law-abiding workers everywhere; and while never denying the right of workmen to organize lawfully, it is the unyielding foe of lawless, proscriptive, monopolistic and exclusive labor organizations, because they are the selfish enemies of their own class and the common industrial weal. Our position is unmistakable and will be maintained. The long record of The Times as a just, liberal, reliable paymaster is unassailable. During the period between August 4, 1890, and September 30, 1910, there was paid to our loyal and well-satisfied non-union workmen, in salaries and wages, the telling aggregate cash sum of $4,925,129.65—mainly to skilled labor.

ONSERVATION: The Times stands for the conservation of human life and character, with all their tremendous potentialities; for the conservation of home and country; of the Flag and its glorious traditions; of national life and national honor, with their pregnant possibilities; of true, old-time, advanced and enlightened moral conditions; for the conservation of a brave, virtuous, patriotic citizenship, without which no nation can be great and good.

THE LANCER.

An eminent physician, Dr. William owne of London, has just prounced his opinion that love is an linary disease which can be dealt h like any other complaint, grippe, rlet fever or appendicitis; that he also convinced that jealousy and red can be coped with in the same nner. In proof of his argument he been trying experiments on love- maidens, who had been caught the act of throwing themselves into Thames, which he maintains have n a distinct success! (Did he, I nder, cure them with a hair of the that bit them?)

But this opens up a deadly outk! What an impossibly dull old ce the earth is going to be!

And what will the poets and the nics do, with their whole stock in de rudely taken from them?

No more will the cynics be able to ure us that "love is the insane dee on the part of one man to keep other man's daughter."

That "love is like the Christmas dding—it looks inviting, but it es you the devil of a pain."

That "love is like angels pouring acle down your back."

That "love is a torment and a asure—having it no peace, lacking no pleasure."

And, so on.

And the poor novelists. How can build up a $1.50 thriller around a re disease? No, we must confess liking Dr. Browne better when he ures us, as he did a few weeks ago, at this starvation, vegetarian diet iness is all a mistake, that every an should eat three good meals a y, consisting of several courses, if expects to remain in good health. ut the most tiresome people are ones that are proud of their dy old furniture, which they are sed to call antique! It is mostly , always uncomfortable, and for e preposterous reason you are exted to be interested in its fraunt career and the inflated price it is supposed to be worth. And, as a mark of esteem, you are allowed to sit on the thing, if it happens to be a chair.

Yet, quite often the sort of people that own 'em also possess some really interesting things—a lovely garden, the arrangement of which they can justly be proud of—but that moldy furniture spoils all.

Those Poor Ancestors!

And the people that are proud of their ancestors—they are nearly always a rummy lot. It is enough to make the ancestors rise up and repudiate them. Yet this sort of man has nearly always achieved wonders in his own right, risen in the world against all odds, brought up a fine, healthy family and given them a splendid education. Any number of justifiable things to be proud of—and he brags of his ancestors!

And Actresses.

Actresses are the most exasperating of all. Those that are first-class comedy actresses yearn to play Juliet, and end by making some poor manager drop a fortune over them. But they will still maintain Juliet is their forte and the public was merely ignorant.

And I know one young woman who is a really first-class cook. Yes, really. But do you suppose she forthwith devotes her life to cooking and giving her friends interesting examples. Not she. She writes. Writes all sorts of rubbish and the only "interesting example" her friends come in for is some wretched cutting from some wretched paper!

If that young woman gave her mind to it she could be one of the greatest cooks the world has ever known, and command her own salary, choose her own job. But she writes. And I would hate to tell you what she earns at it—but it's all she's worth.

The Sulk Room.

Miss Cornelia Sorabji has just been lecturing in England on the status of women in India, declaring that they really prefer the secluded harem life (this to an audience of modern women, forsooth,) where their influence is by no means insignificant on the world's affairs.

And, among other things, she told them about the Sulk Room. This is a special room set apart for wives to sulk in when they are displeased with their lord. After a quarrel they retire ostentatiously and remain in hungry dignity till the gentleman capitulates! And, according to the fair lecturer, he always capitulates. Sounds quite occidental! But what happens when more than one wife wants to occupy the room at the same time? History is silent upon this delicate point, for it must spoil the fun when hubby has to capitulate to two fair spouses.

However, they seem to take things very philosophically in the Orient.

Contract Engagements.

As in the case of the little Japanese wife who is leased to the visiting European by the government. It is a business transaction and calls for no reproach on either side. The little wife returns to her people afterward as a matter of course, with her status improved rather than otherwise.

So there is at least a good deal to be said for the Sears-Vanderbilt contract engagement. To be engaged provisionally for a year before marriage seems to me very sensible. A proper deed ought to be drawn up, providing for the return of all presents, letters and each other's hearts, the latter in good condition, reasonable wear and tear excepted.

Then, at the end of a year, the lease could be renewed for ninety-nine years if everything was satisfactory, or the contracting parties could experiment in another direction before taking the final step.

I am quite sure it would promote the output of engagements. Many a diffident young man, who at present fears to take the dread plunge, would be ready enough to take an option. And, as for the girls, it is much more fun being properly engaged than being a sister.

ANOTHER SPLENDID COOK BOOK.

The Times Collection of Receipts, No. 4, from Best Cooks in California, Having Wide Circulation.

The publication of The Times Cook Book No. 4, has been hailed with delight by thousands of housewives, who have in their possession the three volumes previously issued. This latest one is equal to any of the others, and in some ways better as it brings things down to date, with 1763 recipes of every description, furnished by hundreds of good cooks, who participated in The Times 1911 Cooking Contest. The collection was made by a system of elimination, these appearing in the book having been selected from many thousands received, and there has been an effort to save all duplication.

It is probable that nothing in the book will be received with greater pleasure than the chapter on Spanish dishes, of which there are 133, and in addition to those given in the former issues of The Times Cook Book, form a veritable library of Spanish cookery. There are in No. 4, besides the Spanish recipes, 196 cakes, 163 meats, 159 puddings, 125 salads, 121 vegetables, 110 bread, 105 candies, 93 jams, 92 pies, 77 biscuits and buns, 75 hygienic, 57 cookies, 57 shellfish, 56 chickens, 54 fish, 49 game, 41 soups.

These 1763 recipes may be obtained for 35 cents, at The Times office, or for 40 cents, if sent by mail.

Public Service: City Hall, Courts.

SUMMARY OF THE DAY.

The City Council is being dunned by the Board of Public Works, which asserts that the city fathers have not lived up to a monetary agreement regarding aqueduct funds, entered upon in July.

The formation of a family council to regulate the disposal of property, the outgrowth of a divorce suit, was revealed yesterday when a son sued his father, alleging violation of a pact.

At the City Hall.

COUNCIL OWES AQUEDUCT CASH.

PUBLIC WORKS BOARD WRITES DUNNING LETTER.

Funds Promised Last July Have Not Been Paid and Power Distributing Arrangements Are Being Financed by Repeated Drafts on Other Account—Strong Hint.

The City Council is experiencing the sensation of being dunned. It owes money—owes it to the Board of Public Works for aqueduct construction, and the board wants the coin.

Chairman Chaffee of the Advisory Committee of the aqueduct is too diplomatic to tell the City Council that if "the account is not attended to at once, steps will be taken," etc., etc., or to garnishee the City Council's pay, or anything like that. Nevertheless, the Council owes the money, the aqueduct needs it, and the board is gently but insistently drawing the attention of the Council to that fact.

Recently the board wrote a letter to the Council resenting with considerable heat the intimation of the Harbor Commission that work on the outer harbor is going on too slowly. "The Harbor Commission knows we haven't any money, owing to the failure of the Council to sell the bonds," said the board, in effect.

That was the outer harbor. Now it is the aqueduct that has no money, and in a letter sent by the Board of Public Works yesterday to the Council, the board quotes Gen. Chaffee as saying:

3049 rgil 28798 6$5aoinfflfl

"It will be observed that liabilities on October 31 are in excess of cash in the amount of $206,020.15. . . . No power bond funds have been received. The work on sections of the aqueduct line to be jointly used for aqueduct and power purposes is now financed with aqueduct funds. The power fund is materially indebted to the aqueduct fund at this time."

That power fund consists of $350,000 promised on July 5 by the City Council. The $350,000 remains a promise—"no power bond funds have been received," says Gen. Chaffee in the letter quoted. Last July the Council adopted resolutions agreeing on the aqueduct work for the year beginning the previous February and ending February 1, 1912, on a scale of $4,896,000, in addition to which it agreed to provide $350,000 for aqueduct power. It has already provided $3,587,850, leaving still due to the aqueduct and aqueduct power $1,658,150. There will be plenty of money in the fund by February 1 to carry on the work since the sinking fund can be drawn from for that purpose.

The aqueduct funds in general are seen by the report to be in fair shape. On November 1 there was on hand $750,410.56 in cash, but against that amount there was outstanding indebtedness of $206,020.15. But of the total indebtedness, $385,800.45 represented salaries, subject to payment on demand, but the people who get the pay slips seem to be in no hurry to cash them and the slips stay out indefinitely. Again, as soon as the City Council shall prepare to pay the aqueduct fund what it owes on account of the power fund, the indebtedness will be cut down to $67,240.68. The debt, it is explained, is a matter of owing from one fund to another, and is not so bad as it looks.

Will Not Change Name.

The famous old Mission road is to retain its name. No new-fangled nomenclature is to be inflicted upon it, the Streets and Boulevard Committee of the City Council has decided, and on Tuesday the committee will turn down an application to have the road christened Huntington drive. There is a Huntington drive outside the city limits and it connects with Mission road, but Mission road is a thoroughfare by itself and has been such for many years. If there is to be any change, the members of the committee think the name of Huntington drive might be altered to Mission road.

New Boulevard.

Lake Shore avenue, Glendale avenue and Alessandro street will be wiped off the city map if a resolution shall be adopted by the City Council on Tuesday that will be recommended for passage by the Streets and Boulevard Committee. It is proposed to take these three highways, make one out of them on the map—for they all connect—and call the one Griffith Park boulevard.

LIVES, BULLET IN BRAIN.

Surgeons Are Amazed at Man With Two Serious Wounds—Eyesight is Affected but Mind Clearer.

Carlos Martini, who was shot at Fifty-fourth street and Compton avenue a week ago, presents a peculiar case for investigation and study by Dr. B. Sassella and the surgeons of the California Hospital. A bullet penetrated Martini's brain and another his abdomen and both were considered fatal, but Martini still lives, and according to Dr. Sassella he may recover.

Dr. Sassella talked with Martini yesterday afternoon and learned that the injured man is fast losing his sight as a result of a bullet lodging in his brain. His mental activities are increasing.

Though Martini has a clear memory in respect to all things which happened previous to the shooting and since, he can remember absolutely nothing of the affair itself. The only evidence he has that he was shot is that bandages have been placed over his wounds and his sight is impaired.

He apparently suffers but little if any pain, and manifests as much interest in daily events as he did before. He remembers walking hurriedly along Fifty-fourth street on the night he was shot and then the scene changes and his mind resumes its course in the hospital, with no appreciable intermission.

At the Courthouse.

FAMILY COUNCIL DEAL REVEALED.

FATHER IS SUED BY SON, WHO SAYS PACT WAS BROKEN.

Filing of Attachment Papers Which Tied Up Cash and Automobile Brings to Light Peculiar Family Agreement in Which Sons and Daughters Played Referees.

With the return yesterday to the County Clerk's office of attachment papers which tied up James H. Adams's automobile and cash in bank, the fact was divulged that the defendant's alleged violation of a pact which dissuaded his wife from suing for divorce has caused him a peck of trouble.

Adams is sued by his son, Robert H. Adams. The auto was seized and placed in a garage at No. 118 West Pico street for safe-keeping. The banks figuring in the proceedings are the Commercial National and the Merchants' National. In consequence the father has $362 in the latter institution which he may not touch.

The divorce suit pact out of which the attachment suit grows was entered into by James H. Adams and Sarah M. Adams in January, 1908. It was negotiated by Adams, it is said, to escape the publicity of open court proceedings.

Adams agreed to give up all direction and management of his property. Robert H. Adams was made a trustee and authorized to handle all moneys. The returns from the property were to be deposited by the son in two banks, half of the proceeds going to his father and the other half to his mother.

The actual management of the property itself was vested in the family as a council. The council included Mrs. Adams, her sons, Robert and Guy, and her daughters, Bertha, Eckert and Olga Adams. A vote of three of the council was sufficient to decide any question arising over the property.

Included in the Adams property is a big orange grove in the Phillips tract. Last July $6447 worth of the oranges was sold. It is alleged by Robert H. Adams that in connection with the sale the divorce suit pact was broken by his father and to secure the adjustment of his infraction of the trust the attachment suit was brought.

AEROPLANE SUITS.

OCEAN TO OCEAN MACHINE.

With Aviator Fowler winging his way East, the Wright Company of Dayton, O., yesterday instituted suits against two parties in an effort to secure payment for the aero in which he is negotiating his coast to coast flight.

The proceedings were begun yesterday by Norman A. Bailie of the law firm of Flint, Gray & Barker. He filed two actions. One is directed against the Grundy Motor Sales Company of this city for $4802.55. A check for this amount the Grundy company is alleged to have given for the aeroplane is declared by the plaintiff to have gone to protest. It was drawn on the National Bank of Long Beach.

The second suit is for the recovery of $1154.38, alleged by the Wright company to be due it from the Grundy company and C. Fred Grundy for aeroplane appliances, which Aviator Fowler is said to have laid in against emergency.

RELATIVES EXECUTORS.

WIDOW NOT GIVEN MONEY.

Carrying out the wishes John Cross expressed in a codicil added to the document shortly before his death, Judge Rives yesterday in Probate Court named John E. Loomis, Albert P. Cross, nephews, and Charles R. Diver, his brother-in-law, executor of the contractor's will. Mrs Cross was a contesting petitioner.

The action of the court relieves Public Administrator Bryson of the custody of the assets of Cross' estate, estimated at $50,000. This makes it necessary for Mrs. Cross to withdraw her suit for the recovery of $19,000 against Bryson and make the executors the defendants.

She demands the return of the $19,000 on the ground that it belongs to her personally and is no part of her husband's estate. The money, all in banknotes, was placed in a safety deposit box Mr. and Mrs. Cross used jointly, and was taken over with an additional $13,000 in cash found in the strong box.

ALIMONY ASKED.

COURT SPEAKS HIS MIND.

"The statute covering failure to provide wasn't drawn to provide alimony," exclaimed Judge McCormick in the case of Frank Clayton Bacon, the Long Beach man with a $225 monthly income, who failed to support his wife.

Bacon applied for probation. Attorney A. M. Cates said the defendant is willing to give his wife $25 a month, but Deputy District Attorney Blair contended the size of his income and the fact that his parents are wealthy warrants her receiving $75 a month.

At this juncture Judge McCormick touched on the alimony question. He said Capt. Dodds had not made his probation report, part of which will have to do with Bacon's financial standing, and continued the case until Tuesday morning.

GETS HALF ESTATE.

CONTEST COVERS YEARS.

After fighting in the courts for years over the estates of her father and mother, Mary Woodman Kilborn yesterday won a partial victory in the Probate Court, Judge Rives awarding her half of her mother's wealth, or $10,000. The remainder is to continue under the trusteeship of the Title Insurance and Trust Company.

The company has been holding both the estates of William Henry and Julia Ann Kilborn in trust for their daughter, who is sole heir, since their deaths. The alloting to Miss Kilborn of $10,000 by Judge Rives was the result of her having acted as administratrix of her mother's estate.

HURLS HIS CANE AND RAISES CAIN.

CITIZEN FINED FOR SMASHING TROLLEY CAR WINDOW.

"Take Next Car" Sign Angers Him and Walking Stick Used as Instrument to Show Displeasure—Betrays Himself by Boasting of Deed Following Day.

A man may be justified in losing his temper when in hailing a trolley car it passes him up, but according to Police Judge Frederickson, it is not permissible to throw a cane at the motorman.

George Ziegler, living near Western avenue and West Seventh street, was fined $5 yesterday in Police Court for having allowed his temper to get the better of him to the extent of throwing hs cane through a window when the car bowled past him.

Ziegler and his wife were certain that it was another man who had thrown the stick because, they reasoned, he had been standing on the corner waiting for a car longer than they had and he had a heavy cane in his hand. The defect in that theory was that the motorman declared emphatically Ziegler was the only man in sight.

The event occurred on the 29th inst., Motorman Rex of the West Seventh-street line said his car was late, and as there was another some distance behind, he dropped the "Take-next-car" sign and went ahead.

As he passed Ziegler and his wife a gold-headed cane crashed through the front window. He captured the cane, but it gave no clew to the identity of the owner.

The matter might have dropped with the motorman a cane ahead and the street car company a window out, if Ziegler had not in a happy mood told Conductor Wright of the same line the next morning how he had "fixed" a car the night before. The conductor reported the matter and Ziegler was arrested.

"I guess you threw the cane and we won't bother to look for the mysterious man you found standing on the corner," Police Judge Frederickson said. "I can readily understand how you lost your patience and did something when the car passed you. I have often felt that way myself, but I have always confined my feelings to words and not actions."

Boys in Trouble.

On charges of having stolen articles of little value from the Brunswick Drug Company, in whose establishment they were employed, four boys were taken before Police Judge Frederickson yesterday. R. A. Coldclaugh, 17 years old, was sent to the Juvenile Court, while the others, T. R. Chapman, Robert J. Davis and J. E. Curran, admitted their guilt and will be sentenced Monday. They were arrested by A. W. White, a special officer employed at the store. The value of the articles stolen varies from 75 cents to $3.

Punished Lightly.

Dr. E. D. Shields, a dentist charged with having practiced without a license from the State Board of Medical Examiners, was given a suspended sentence of ten days by Police Judge Chambers yesterday. Shields is ill and he showed that he had made a bona-fide attempt to secure a license. Several patients appeared in his behalf and testified to his ability. The court decided the case was not one to call for very severe punishment.

THE FOURTH INJUNCTION.

Millionaire Joins Others Who Have Sued Trader, With Brand New Contention About Negro.

Injunction number four against Ralph J. and Mary P. Leavitt was asked for yesterday by William G. Kerckhoff.

The millionaire, whose residence adjoins the home formerly owned by Maj. and Mrs. Horace Marvin Russell, No. 718 West Adams street, alleges that Leavitt, having been restrained by injunction from tearing down the house and erecting an apartment-house on the site, and also from converting it into a "football bungalow row," proposes to install a negro in the mansion.

In his suit Kerckhoff asserts that he has been unable to learn the name of the negro whom Leavitt would establish in his fashionable residence to spite his neighbors, and therefore cannot bring suit to restrain the man from entering upon the premises.

Leavitt secured the property in a swap with the Russells, he trading in a ranch at Porterville. Practically ever since the deal was made Leavitt has been the object of lawsuits, damage and injunction.

Harbeson have been elected members of the club. Secretary Freeman G. Teed has been notified of the death of Malcolm L. McDonald, of Tonopah, a non-resident member of the club, who died in New York last month.

COLLIDE AT A CROSSING.

A two-car train on the Santa Ana line of the Pacific Electric and a Maple avenue car of the Los Angeles Railway, collided at Seventh and Maple avenue yesterday morning. The cars were slightly damaged but none of the passengers were injured.

Limiting the Risk.

[Boston Transcript:] There's an old yarn about a fat and a lean duelist. The fat one complained that he offered a much larger mark to his antagonist's bullet, whereupon the lean man proposed chalking his outline on the fat one's body and no shot outside the chalk line would be counted. We were reminded of this story by the following notice which an accident insurance company has placed in the elevators of several office buildings: "This elevator is limited to fourteen persons. All over that number riding on this car do so at their own risk."

Where to Get Pure Water.

PURITAS—The Only Reliably Pure Drinking Water Hereabouts.

Possibly you've realized that just "ordinary" drinking water is bad for you.

Possibly you've felt a twinge of rheumatism, or suspected that your kidneys were not doing their work as Nature intended—and you've come to the conclusion that the water you are drinking has more or less to do with this condition.

There is no question but that many serious illnesses are primarily caused by impure drinking water—and of the further fact that PURE drinking water might have obviated many cases of sickness.

Now you may know all this, and yet not know exactly what to do about it.

Why not order a five-gallon demijohn of PURITAS Distilled Water—and give it a thorough trial?

PURITAS is absolutely pure, soft, distilled and thoroughly aerated drinking water. It contains no impurities, or minerals—or anything in the world, but just healthful, sparklingH2O.

Hundreds of Los Angeles Physicians, Nurses, hospitals, and private families will use no other water.

And if health authorities—who KNOW "what's what" about water contamination and that sort of thing, are practically unanimous in using PURITAS, surely it's the drinking water for you. Forty cents buys a five-gallon demijohn, delivered anywhere within the old city boundary lines. To outside points the cost is a trifle more.

PURITAS may be obtained through dealers in most towns throughout Southern California. If you cannot secure it readily, write or telephone us, and we will see that you are promptly supplied. Home 10053, Sunset Main 8191. Los Angeles Ice & Cold Storage Company.

Joys of Football.

[Philadelphia Record:] "Sailor" Burke, the pugilist, compared pugilism with football the other day.

"Why," said the sailor, "I'd rather fight than eat, but football is too rough a game for me. I wouldn't play in a game of intercollegiate football for 100 per cent. of the gate receipts. I'm not strong enough. Besides I haven't got the nerve."

He laughed and went on:

"Last year, at the height of the football season, I met a Yalevard boy one Saturday night.

"'That's a bad black eye you've got there,' I said. 'Did you get it in today's game?'

"'Yes, I did,' said he. He scowled and patted his pocket. 'But do you know what I've got here, Sailor?'

"'No; what?'

"'The ear of the chap that blackened it.'"

When Israel Won.

[Milwaukee Wisconsin:] He was quite evidently from the country and he was also quite evidently a Yankee, and from behind his bowed spectacles he peered inquisitively at the little Jew who occupied the other half of the car seat with him.

The little Jew looked at him deprecatingly. "Nice day," he began, politely.

"You're a Jew, ain't you?" queried the Yankee.

"Yes, sir, I'm a clothing salesman ——" handing him a card.

"But you're a Jew?"

"Yes, yes, I'm a Jew," came the answer.

"Well," continued the Yankee, "I'm a Yankee, and in the little village in Maine where I come from I'm proud to say ther ain't a Jew."

"Dot's wy it's a willage," replied the little Jew, quietly.

RECEIPT FOR WARDING OFF AGE.

Fat is commonplace—middle aged. It stamps a woman as unquestionably past the period of youth. Hence it lessens her influence. She may charm still—by nimbleness of wit—but that indefinite fascination a fine figure wields has fled from her.

For ever? No! for it can be regained, and that easily. Youth as expressed in the straight front, the lissome hip, the wavy outline, is not beyond recall. Let any woman who is too well filled out, take a Marmola Prescription Tablet after each meal and at bedtime. The straightliness of youth will come back rather. Off will go the fat, uniformly and smoothly, revealing the foundation of the lost youthful form beneath.

Try this method. No exercising or dieting is necessary to take off a pound a day. The Tablet will do it alone. No wrinkles or haggard lines will form; instead the health, the brightness and the litheness will increase. The Marmola Prescription Tablet is absolutely noninjurious (being made of the famous fashionable formula, ½ oz. Marmola, ½ oz. Fl. Ex. Cascara Aromatic, 3½ oz. Peppermint Water); and it is also inexpensive, a large case, enough to show results, costing, at any drug store, or direct from the Marmola Co., 235 Farmer Bldg., Detroit, Mich., only 75c.

Toot-toot!

LISTEN TO THE COP'S WHISTLE.

Many Juggle With Death on Street Crossings.

Near-Coroner's Jobs Because of Foolish Haste.

Fifth and Broadway Presents Object Lessons.

In this advanced day of automobiles, motorcycles and electric trains, it is remarkable that, with the ever-increasing crowds on the streets, so few persons are killed or injured at the crossing. The number who have startling escapes is legion.

An hour spent at almost any one of the busy crossings on Broadway, Spring or Main streets, during the rush periods of the day, is enough to bring about a case of nervous prostration. Most of the uneasiness is occasioned by the foolishness of the pedestrians themselves — usually women. Many of them either lack judgment or are foolishly reckless. Occasionally one is seen cornered in the middle of the street, who seems to think herself smart because she has compelled a street car or an automobile to stop in order that she may not be crushed to death, but she doesn't consider the nervous strain she has occasioned to the driver of the vehicle, the crossing policeman or the people who looked on.

There seems to be no question about the efficiency of the whistle system, but pedestrians should consider it obligatory upon themselves to obey, just as vehicles are required to obey—especially in the case of women or old persons. Occasionally the officer is careless and catches people in the middle of the street, but this would not occur if pedestrians habitually obeyed the signals.

A case of this kind occurred yesterday at Fifth and Broadway. One blast of the whistle opened traffic across Broadway, and among those who started to cross were two old ladies, and an old gentleman. Just as they got between the railway tracks, the policeman, his back toward them, gave two blasts of his whistle to start the traffic north and south. Instantly cars and automobiles, wagons and motorcycles, shot in both directions, "pocketing" the three old persons in a most dangerous position. In this instance, the motorman and chauffeurs at the south crossing seemed to have little or no regard for the lives of the unfortunates, who, stood there trembling while the traffic whizzed past them in both directions.

It wasn't a minute later when a case of the other kind occurred. The officer blew his whistle twice, starting two long lines of cars and automobiles north and south. At the same instant, more than a dozen women and half as many men started across Broadway, were caught between the two lines of vehicles, and had to stand between them while they passed, at the imminent risk of life and limb. Had the wind occasioned by a passing car drawn the skirts of one of the women against the step of the car on the opposite side, it might have cost more than one life. If these persons had waited on the curb for half a minute or less, one blast of the whistle would have permitted them to cross Broadway with ease and safety.

With utter disregard for the life of herself and child, a young mother deliberately pushed her baby-cart off the curb and started across the street at the moment the signal was given for traffic to move north and south. She pushed the cart right out in front of a car while several automobiles dodged, to save killing the mother and child, and the car came to a full stop for the same reason. Then she leisurely went on across, looking neither to the right nor the left, as if nothing unusual had occurred. Had she, waited for the proper signal, she could have crossed with her baby without the slightest peril, and saved others alarm and trouble.

A startling incident occurred at Fifth and Broadway, on Friday afternoon which so nearly resulted in the death of a woman, who in defiance of the signal and with an utter lack of judgment, attempted to cross Broadway after the traffic had been started north and south, that she has probably not yet fully recovered her equilibrium. A car going south had passed the middle of the street and one going north had just started, when the woman undertook to rush between them. That was bad enough, but what was worse, her feet slipped from under her and she fell prostrate between the two cars, both of which stopped almost instantly, with their fender-ends flush with the crossing. If the prostrate woman had rolled over to either side she would have been crushed. While everybody stood aghast, she got up and limped off into the crowd, anxious to escape the remarks made on every side, in which the word "fool" seemed to be conspicuous.

Incidents of this kind are multiplied over and over. People in general need to acquaint themselves with the extremely simple rule that one blast of the policeman's whistle means that traffic may move east and west and two blasts that it may move north and south. If pedestrians as well as vehicles obeyed nobody would be likely to meet with accident.

Damning With False Praise.

[Philadelphia Record:] William Dean Howells, the author, according to the Detroit Free Press, was talking about a criticism that praised him almost fulsomely.

"I don't like such indiscriminate praise," he said. "Such praise does a man more harm than good. It is like the enthusiastic policeman's remark about the genial new Mayor.

" 'Oh, he's a fine feller,' the policeman said. 'Why, it don't matter who ye are, he'll get drunk with ye.' "

Willing to Divide.

[Washington Star:] Dr. H. W. Wiley, the food expert, was talking at a luncheon in Washington about a food adulterator.

"'His first offer,'" said Dr. Wiley, "sounded, on the face of it, fair to the public, but it was in reality as unfair as the offer of the divorcee.

"A wife, after the divorce, said to her husband:

" 'I am willing to let you have the baby half of the time.'

" 'Good,' said he, rubbing his hands. 'Splendid.'

" 'Yes,' she resumed, 'you may have him nights.' "

AERO CLUB PLANS CONTEST IN LATEST FLYING AFFAIR.

Aviators to Compete for Percentages Instead of Receiving Guarantees as Heretofore—Wright Glider and Naval Gun to Be Secured for Exhibitions If Possible.

The Aero Club of California has obtained control of the Dominguez field for the purpose of holding an international aviation meet next January. It has also procured an option on the field until October first, 1913, through the contract recently signed with the American Aeroplane Company.

An application has been made to the Aero Club of America for sanction to hold a ten-day meet, the dates of which have not as yet been definitely settled. January 20-29 inclusive will probably be decided upon.

Preparations are now under way for the promoting of the meet and action has been taken to secure the best aviators, both European and American.

It is the purpose of the management to secure several novel features in conjunction with the regular events. A special effort is being made to have an aeroplane of every type yet flown. Actual racing over a mile course will be made a daily event.

Plans are being laid to secure a naval aeroplane gun and demonstrate its usefulness as a means of aerial attack.

It is planned to offer percentages only and the breaking of worlds records is to be made the special feature, making it a "WORLD RECORD-BREAKING MEET."

An aerial postal service will be installed between the field and Los Angeles providing the proper arrangements can be made with the post-office officials.

A series of features will be provided for the entertainment of the people before the flights and during the intervals of waiting. Balancing machines will probably be provided for persons desiring to do so can learn to balance in a high wind. These machines are pivoted in the middle and provided with fore and aft and lateral controls. A lever is fitted, for operating these controls and when the wind is blowing a person can sit on one of these machines and learn to balance it just the same as though it were in actual aeroplane flight. The antics of the would-be aviator in attempting to keep his balance are exceptionally amusing to the onlookers.

Every effort will be made to obtain if possible, a duplicate of the Wright Brothers latest, "motorless aeroplane. If one of these machines is secured it will be of world wide interest as with the exception of the brothers themselves and one other person, this type of machine has never before been seen.

A free-for-all race for women aviators is also assured with the promise of possibly four or more entrants.

The biggest event planned is a 150-mile-country race to be held on the last day of the meet. This will be known as the "SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA CIRCUIT." Starting from Los Angeles the flyers will proceed to Pasadena then to Monrovia, San Bernardino, Redlands, Riverside, Santa Ana, Whittier, and return to Los Angeles. Each town will have a controlling station where the aviator may land for supplies, if necessary. A conservative estimate places the number of entrants for this race alone at twenty-five.

The local club has the credit of having more licensed aviators among its members than any other organization outside of New York, thereby giving it an excellent foundation for a meet. With the experience both its directors and members have had in handling the technical and observation side of the two previous international meets held in this city they believe they can arrange and carry out a good programme.

Dr. Benjamin Ide Wheeler, of California, accompanied by Milton T. Farmer, graduate manager, and J. K. Moffit, of the alumni association, are to leave the campus soon for a tour of the State for the purpose of visiting all the University of California

Railway Officials Declare Influence Mighty.

Mayor Alexander has accepted the hairmanship of the Advisory Committee of the Land Show of the Pacific Land and Products Exposition, o be held under the auspices of the os Angeles Realty Board next arch. Last spring the Mayor headed similar committee here and his ork did much to make the first land ow of the Pacific Coast a success. The transcontinental railroads are be exhibitors in the coming show d their representatives are figuring floor space. William Sproule, the w president of the Southern Pacific, a letter to Secretary Wilson yesrday expressed the hope that he will able to come to Los Angeles and sult with the Realty Board Land ow committee concerning a big and mprehensive exhibit by the great rporation of which he is the head. The Southern Pacific exhibit will on the broad, comprehensive scale haracteristic of that company. Increasing business here has prompted A McAllister, land commissioner the Southern Pacific, to establish office in room 410 Grosse Building, in charge of C. E. Wantland, eral sales agent, who comes to Los geles after years of similar service h the Union Pacific.

"The big land shows are a wonder- illustration of newspaper initiative railroad co-operation," said Wantd last night. BIG CHOIR COMING.

Douglas White of the Salt Lake ilroad, who is in New York City nding the New York Land Show, studying the land shows of New k, Chicago, Omaha and Pittsburgh, get new ideas for a comprehensive beautiful display by the Salt Lake the coming Pacific Land and Prods Exposition. The exhibit of the Salt ke last year was one of the feaes of the show.

"No modern method has proved re popular in attracting the most irable settlers to a territory than land show," said Fred A. Wann, eral traffic manager of the Salt ke Railroad. "Its accomplishment the direction of centralizing infortion so as to present it to the spective settler in understandable is one of the best features of the show. Take the territory trad by the Salt Lake. It is so diified that a casual visit to one of two localities would give only the htest idea of the agricultuarl reces of the whole.

"Los Angeles and the land show fur- a clearinghouse for information arding all of this vast-territory and possibilities. No more logical or ural location for a land show could imagined than in Los Angeles, gely because of the importance of city as a distributing center for ndreds of persons that might be- investors in land. The popular now is 'back to the land,' and we are doing all that we can to meet the demand."

Negotiations are still in progress for the appearance at the land show of the famous Mormon Choir of 300 voices from the Tabernacle at Salt Lake City. At present the choir is appearing at Madison Square Garden, New York, and later the members will tour the country. Their appearance at the land show here will be their first visit to this city.

SALT LAKE EXHIBITS.

According to the Sale Lake Tribune, the Commercial Club and the Utah Development Company of Salt Lake are arranging one of the best exhibits that Utah can produce for the land show here.

"The results of the exhibit sent to the last land show at Los Angeles were so successful that it is proposed to make the best of this opportunity," says the Tribune.

Elaborate and extensive preparations are in progress in Salt Lake City for a series of excursions from that city during the land show, and it is expected that hundreds of members of the Commercial Club and other organizations will come here especially to attend the exposition.

General Manager Wilson is in receipt of a letter from Frederick Thompson, scenic artist, who designed Luna Park, Dreamland and A Trip to the Moon at Coney Island, stating that he will submit plans for decorations and entertainment which he expects to surpass anything heretofore attempted in the West.

Another Viewpoint.

BIG VALUES LIE IN TERMINALS.

PHYSICAL ESTIMATES OF ROADS FORM NO REAL TEST.

Publisher of Railroad Paper Says Facilities Form Real Basis for Determining Rates—Usually, When Figured Thus, Companies Are Entitled to Advance.

Samuel O. Dunn, editor of the Railway Age-Gazette, the foremost transportation publication in the country, talked yesterday in regard to making a physical valuation of the railroads, of which subject he has made a careful study. He said:

"I understand that there has been action in favor of the making of a valuation of the railroads of California, and that your Railroad Commission may undertake this work. The demand for a valuation seems here, as elsewhere, to be based on the belief that it will show the railroads earning too much money, and will justify a reduction in their rates. I predict with much confidence that if a valuation is made its results will be most surprising to those who favor it as a basis for rate regulation. It is much more apt to be so big as legally to justify increases in rates than so small as to justify reductions in them.

"Valuations have been made in several States—in some as a basis of taxation; in others as a basis for rate regulation, and in others as a basis for both. In some States, such as South Dakota, where the mileage is mainly single track, runs through a prairie country and there are no extensive terminals, the valuations have been less than the railroad capitalization assignable to these States on a mileage basis. On the other hand, in other States, such as Minnesota and Washington, where there are extensive and valuable terminals, the valuations exceeded the capitalizations.

"The idea that an appraisal of the railways will justify reduction in their rates and earnings is due to a lack of knowledge of the factors which the courts have held must be considered. For example, many persons think it should be based on what the roads originally cost. In his famous decision in the Minnesota rate case, Judge Sanborn specifically held that valuation must be based upon what it would cost to produce the roads at the present time. The investigation of the Minnesota Commission showed that it cost 75 per cent. more for land for railway terminals in cities and three times as much to secure it in the rural districts for railway purposes as for other purposes. Judge Sanborn held, contrary to the contention of the Commission, that valuation must be based on what it would cost now to secure the land for railway purposes. Similarly, the Supreme Court held that if the property of a public utility corporation had increased in value since it was acquired, this increase must be considered in determining the reasonableness of its rates.

"Now, the railways of California have valuable terminals at Los Angeles and San Francisco and other cities. They have built largely through a mountainous country where construction is expensive. Much of their right of way is through territory where land is worth hundreds and even thousands of dollars per acre. The roads are, taken as a whole, in extraordinarily good condition. Thousands of dollars per mile have been used in ballasting them, in laying heavier rail, in substituting steel bridges for wooden trestles, in installing block signals and in buying the most modern equipment. It is a safe guess, therefore, that, taking them as a whole, a valuation, if made in accordance with the rulings of the courts, would greatly exceed the part of their capitalization assignable to this State. If the valuation was not made in accordance with the decisions of the courts, litigation would nullify it, as it has already in Minnesota."

Freight Officials Promoted.

H. O. Wilson, general agent of the Union Pacific, has received a circular signed by J. A. Monroe, recently made vice-president in charge of traffic, announcing changes in the traffic department. Elmer H. Wood is promoted from general freight agent to freight traffic manager; and O. J. Lane is advanced from assistant general freight agent to general freight agent, H. G. Kaill is promoted from assistant to general freight and passenger agent with headquarters in Kansas City. The other officials will have headquarters in Omaha.

To Build a Station.

Notice has been given of the purpose of the Southern Pacific Railroad to build a station at Zelzah, a town on the line just north of Marian on the Van Nuys ranch. The new building will cost $6,800, the railroad company spending $3400, the balance being contributed by the Valley Homes Company and the San Fernando Development Company. The station will be built at once.

Olympic to Resume.

According to information received here yesterday the White Star Line's giant steamer "Olympic" will resume her trans-Atlantic trips, leaving England November 29, and sailing from New York December 9, in time for the Christmas rush from America.

THE WOMAN WHO CHOOSES HER MATE

It is said the woman does the courting. The male thinks he chooses, but, instead, he is guided, hither and thither (a merry game) by the invisible leading string of feminine art. Can this be true of fat ladies? Does the fat woman feel as safe her leading strings will hold as the girl with the line of beauty from toe to chin?

Mere man knows as little of this as of other things feminine, but he has done one famous thing. He has developed a harmless and elegant fat reducer, the Marmola Prescription Tablet. This tablet taken after meals and at bedtime relieves the fat girl's soul of fear of the straight front enemy, for it puts her on equal terms. Any one can get thin by its means—and quickly. It takes off a pound a day in some cases. Simply take one tablet daily, as indicated. The reduction is sure; it will be uniform; no wrinkles or harm will result. Fat will go as it came—quietly—off the fattest places first. The Marmola Tablet (made strictly in accordance with the famous fashionable formula, ½ oz. Marmola, ½ oz. Fl. Ex. Cascara Aromatic, 3½ oz. Peppermint Water) never injures. It is cheap, also, a large case, of the makers, the Marmola Co., 235 Farmer Bldg., Detroit, Mich., or any druggist, costing only seventy-five cents.

Tells Consumptives How He Got Well

Tuberculosis is said to be curable by simply living in the open air and taking an abundance of fresh eggs and milk. Undoubtdly, some persons are benefited in this way; ut the appropriate remedy for Consumption is Eckman's Alterative. Do all you possibly can to add to strength and increase weight, eat wholesome, nourishing food, and breathe the cleanest and purest air—then, to the sensible things of right living, add the tonic and curative effects of Eckman's Alterative. Read what it did in this case:

609 West Street, Wilmington, Del.

"Gentlemen:—In January, 1908, I was taken with hemorrhages of the lungs. My physician, one of the leading practitioners, said that it was lung trouble. I took eggs and milk in quantities, but I got very weak, and I kept on working in the store. The doctors said I would not gain in weight as long as I stayed in the store, but I kept on working and prayed each day that I might get well. I believe my prayers were answered, for Mr. C. A. Lippincott, my employer (Lippincott & Co., Department Store, 306 to 314 Market St., Wilmington, Del.,) had learned of a remedy called Eckman's Alterative that had done great good, and upon his recommendation I began taking it at once. This was about June, 1908. I continued faithfully, using no other remedy, and finally noticed the clearing of the lungs, which appeared to be old chunks of blood coming up. I now have no trouble with my lungs. I firmly believe Eckman's Alterative saved my life. I sent my spittle later to the State Board of Health to be examined for tuberculosis bacilli, and none were found.

"My mother died from Consumption when I was about two years old.

"I make this statement so that others may learn of the wonderful merits of Eckman's Alterative. I regard my recovery as being miraculous."

(Signed Affidavit) JAS. SQUIRES.

Eckman's Alterative is effective in Bronchitis, Asthma, Hay Fever; Throat and Lung Troubles, and in upbuilding the system. Does not contain poisons, opiates or habit-forming drugs. For sale by The Owl Drug Co.'s Stores, and other leading druggists. Ask for booklet of cured cases and write to Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for additional evidence.

Banker to Talk.

J. M. Elliot, president of the First National aBnk, will be the speaker at the semi-monthly luncheon of the Los Angeles Traffic Association at the Angelus Hotel tomorrow. He will talk of "Banks and Banking."

On to Van Nuys.

Construction is being pushed on the electric road the Pacific Electric is building from Hollywood to Van Nuys, and it is expected that the line will be completed and ready for operation within thirty days.

On the Scent.

FRENCH MAXIM IS TRUE HERE.

MISSING PAY CLERK KNOWN TO HAVE HAD COMPANION.

Man Who Stole Large Sum from Safe of the Cruiser California Is Reported to Have Fallen from Narrow Path as Result of Having Kept Bad Company.

The old French police maxim, "Find the woman," is employed in the attempted apprehension of Pay Clerk Charles A. Gibbon, who deserted the cruiser California when the vessel was at San Pedro, October 7, taking with him $2178.28 belonging to the government.

Yesterday Paymaster James S. Beecher of the California swore out a warrant for the arrest of Gibbon before United States District Attorney McCormick, and a warrant for his arrest was issued by United States Commissioner Van Dyke.

The get-away of Gibbon caused a great deal of comment in naval circles. He was well liked by his comrades. The robbery was not discovered until after the ship had weighed anchor and was well on its way to San Francisco, when notice of the disappearance of Gibbon and the theft of the money was sent by wireless to the local police. Special United States Treasury agents at once took up the search but until recently nothing was discovered as to the whereabouts of the missing man.

A few days ago information came to the government authorities that Gibbon had left Los Angeles with a woman, whose identity has not yet been disclosed, and that he was seen in Portland. The source of this information also volunteered the statement that Gibbon and his companion when last seen were preparing to leave for the East. The scent will therefore be taken up from Portland.

It is also known that for several days after Gibbon left the California he was seen in this city with a woman companion. He was then in civilian attire. Later on, the couple were seen in San Diego.

During a long term of service in the navy Gibbon had had opportunities to steal a much larger sum than he took from the ship's safe and in view of his previous good record it is believed that he got into bad company and went wrong without any real intention to rob the government.

Josephine Preston Peabody's play, "The Piper," is now being produced by the New Theater Company in the larger cities of the Middle West, after its successful season in New York last spring. A German verse translation of this play, recently completed by Miss Margarete Munsterberg, is to be issued at once in Germany by the publishers of the Suddeutsche Monatshefte.

Is Your Hair Streaked With Gray? Gray Hair Means Age

How often one hears the expression, "She is gray and beginning to look old." It is true that gray hair usually denotes age and is always associated with age. You never hear one referred to as having gray hair and looking young.

The hair is generally the index of age. If your hair is gray, you can't blame your friends for referring to you as looking old. You can't retain a youthful appearance if you allow your hair to grow gray. Many persons of middle age jeopardize their future simply by allowing the gray hair to become manifest. If your hair has become faded or gray, try Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy, a preparation which a chemist by the name of Wyeth devised a few years ago. It is simple, inexpensive and practical, and will banish the gray hairs in a few days. It is also guaranteed to remove dandruff and promote the growth of the hair.

It is a pleasant dressing for the hair, and after using it a few days itching and dryness of the scalp entirely disappear.

Don't neglect your hair. Start using Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur today, and you will be surprised at the quick results.

This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by all druggists. Special agent, Sun Drug Co., 300 North Los Angeles St., 434 West Seventh St., 200 South Broadway, 328 South Broadway, Second and Spring, 1657 Temple St.

LANGUAGE ASSOCIATION.

College and High School Teachers Meet at Luncheon and Organize for Mutual Benefit.

Forty teachers of modern languages, representing the colleges and high schools of Los Angeles and vicinity met Saturday in the Polytechnic High School cafeteria for luncheon. It was decided to organize the "Modern Language Association of Southern California." Valentine Buehner of the Manual Arts High School was elected president pro tem., and Miss Adele Meyer of the Polytechnic High School was made secretary. Dr. Wilson, principal of the Manual Arts High School, and Prof. Beckmann of Throop Polytechnic Institute spoke of the advantages which might be derived from such an organization.

In response to the invitation of Buehner, as president of the Association of Teachers of German of Southern California, the teachers of Spanish and French convened with the teachers of German to enjoy an interesting programme.

The direct method of teaching languages was discussed by Julius Behnke of Ontario, followed by an animated debate as to its merits. "The Relative popularity of languages in our Schools" was the subject presented by Buehner. Miss Elizabeth Meyerl reported on recent text-books, and Miss Adele Meyer gave an interesting account of her trip to Germany.

Prof. Schilling of the University of California, Prof. Havemann of the Los Angeles High School, and Prof. Von Fingerlin of the University of Southern California, were elected honorary members of theassociation.

The teachers of Spanish and French met briefly to organize as a section of the larger association and elected Alfred Ewington of the Los Angeles High School, president. The Modern Language Association will occupy an important place in the educational affairs of Southern California; it will meet again at the time of the teachers' convention in December.

STRANGE EFFECT OF ACCIDENTS

One Man Is Made Deaf and Dumb By a Blow, and Another Dumb Man Made to Speak.

[Topeka Capital:] Loren Bates of Hutchinson, Kan., who has been as a deaf mute ever since Friday night, when he was found lying by the roadside in a semi-conscious state near the Methodist Church here, sat with his father at police court last night and attempted to identify a man arrested by the police as his assailant.

Bates did not talk a syllable during the evening and he seemed to be unable to hear a thing that was going on about him. He sat and wrote upon a small booklet that he had with him and gave his notes to his father and officers to read. Bates succeeded in partially identifying Albert Bowen, who was arrested upon information filed by Bates, as one of the men whom it is claimed assaulted and robbed him of about $35.

Bates wrote that since Friday night he has been unable to hear or speak and that only at times can he hear a buzzing noise. He was examined by Dr. Hook and a blow which Bates is supposed to have received at the base of the neck is responsible for the paralysis of the organs of speech and hearing.

[Chicago Record-Herald:] A Pennsylvania Railroad locomotive passing Stoneham, near here, this afternoon struck and instantly killed Dr. and Mrs. James Gass of Sheffield, who were crossing the tracks in an automobile. Their 8-year-old son, Fred, who rode in the car with his parents, was hurled sixty feet, but not severely hurt. Until the accident he had never uttered a word in his life, but as he scrambled from a ditch and saw his dead father and mother lying near the wrecked automobile, he screamed loudly for help. At the emergency hospital it is believed that the boy will soon speak intelligently.

THEY'RE GOING TO SCHOOL.

The Engineers' and Architects' Association of Southern California will meet Tuesday at 6 p. m. at the Hollenbeck Cafe for supper, after which it will adjourn to the Polytechnic High School. The evening school will be in session and the Poly officials have planned a tour of the shops, the chemical, physical and electrical laboratories, mechanical and engineering drawing rooms, also the surveying and architectural departments, in order to show the nature of the work that is done.

ever Favored Administration but Will Vote for It.

People are asking how old Repub- an war-horses and people who rked for Mushet at the primaries e talking. The Times has inter- wed some of them and this is what y frankly say:

Leo V. Youngworth: in the prelim- ry primary I voted for W. C. shet, and think he should have n nominated. But with the nomi- tion of Job Harriman, and with issue before the people that is sented by his candidacy, I am for re-election of Alexander, and l do all I can to make him a win- . The city of Los Angeles can af- to take no step backward; it can- afford to have it heralded to the ld that it is a hot-bed of social- . But let me say that the big vote red by Job Harriman does not n that his supporters are all So- —there were other things that to his strength. The people to be getting tired of all sorts 'machines,' or perhaps I should said 'organizations,' that is the word in these days of reform.

m Quinn: Edwin T. Earl's news- rs have been preaching socialis- doctrines until the cows come , the initiative and referendum, ll of the judiciary, and all of the and follies first foisted upon the ple by the Populistic Convention in aha twenty years ago. Did you read of the story of the man took up a snake that had been led by the cold, that bit its bene- or when he had warmed it into ? The thing has gotten away m Mr. Earl. Oh, yes, I will vote Alexander—but it chokes me."

rank Buren: I voted for Mushet the primaries, but will support ander at the December election. is not my choice, but as between alism and Alexander citizens ld have no trouble in choosing. cannot afford to elect a Socialis- Mayr.

iver R. W. Robinson: My ward on Sixty-third street, is a hot-bed Harrimanism, and he carried the inct where I live. I voted for het, but will support Alexander, there is no man in this city who more reason to oppose Alexander I. But in this supreme crisis ll be a good citizen, in spite of personal views.

ward A. Began: On account of a ge in my residence I did not vote e recent primaries. I shall vote Alexander. It is not a question lexander so much as it is the sal- n of the city, and I am trying on the right side."

M. Smyser: I voted for Mushet e last primary election two years , and again this week, but I shall do all I can for Alexander. The t enterprises undertaken by the and being pushed to completion go on, and while I personally been opposed to Alexander when r issues were involved, in this su- e crisis I shall line myself up inst socialism, for to that com- ion has it come at last.

eorge B. Cryer: I vote in precinct 146, a stronghold of Mayor Alex- er, where Harriman polled but ten s. With the nomination of Har- ar, and the issues as presented, I t if he will get any votes in my inct at the election. Of course, I for Alexander.

lbert H. Sittel: I was for Mushet. It is now Alexander for me. Un- present conditions I cannot be rwise, and I know many more of friends who are of the same way thinking and will support Alexan- ."

eorge White: I will never support ocialist for anything. I voted for het at the primaries. Never heard such a mix-up as this when the guard were running things."

Ralph J. Dominguez: As everybody ows, I was for Mushet. I have not finitely determined, but expect to e for Alexander, as a sort of po- ical appetizer. But this condition political chaos makes me sick.

Thomas R. Rockwell: Alexander r me, though I shouted for Mushet the primaries. But it strikes me t if the friends of Uncle George ire the support of the men who ve been denounced like thieves dur- the past three years by the Ex- ss, it might be well for Mr. Earl use the soft pedal. Vinegar never atches either flies or men. But with l of the big enterprises on foot no p backward can be taken. The at- ck upon the credit of Los Angeles st be met by the election of Alex- der—but let everybody connected h what is known as the Good Gov- ment machine be good for a min- , at least.

Arthur C. Galloway: Mushet was choice at the primaries, but I shall e for Alexander. Los Angeles can- afford to be Milwaukeeized at this e. California will soon be known world over as the home of all the s and follies of the time, and we now securing a lot of unenviable ertising from the national press. I e to see Alexander win.

EMERGENCY LEAGUE RESPONDS WHEN DISTRESS CALLS.

Pasadena Organization's Chief Aim to Furnish Immediate Relief and Investigate Afterwards. Each Case Treated With Tact and Discrimination.

Poverty is a very destructive element and should be met with the same prompt action as that used with fire or flood. The Pasadena Emergency League appreciates this fact, and it rivals in expediency the fire department with its responsiveness in case of need.

This association was organized seven years ago by a little group of Pasadena matrons with a genius for womanhood. Today it comprises the Emergency League, the Day Nursery, Training School for Children and Home for Aged Women—which is a home in every true sense of the word.

The president, Mrs. William F. Knight, stated yesterday that the chief aim of this society is to furnish immediate relief and investigate afterward. Whatever the cause, it is treated with sympathy, tact and discrimination. Employment is also obtained for those who require it, and so far the association has never met with impostors or ingrates. The word charity is never used. Everything is done in a spirit of fellowship which has proven to be a very potent factor in restoring the courage of those who believed they were defeated in the battle which life means for many.

One case which illustrates the prompt action of the association was that of a destitute family, the mother bordering on maternity, the home lacking in every necessity. Within an hour after notification, the mother was in charge of a physician and nurse, the children were properly fed and clothed, and the father's desperate state alleviated.

A condition with which the league cannot at present cope is the crying need of numerous defective children. It is hoped that before long there will be a suitable home provided for these little ones, where they may be treated and, if possible, cured.

Mrs. Anna F. Luckey, the field secretary, states that 218 calls were made upon needy ones last month and that fifty-nine calls were made at the office of the league, No. 1 Cabrillo place.

The physicians who render free service to the Emergency League are Dr. Stanley P. Black, Dr. T. J. Orbison, Dr. William Hume Roberts, Dr. A. T. Newcombe, Dr. F. C. E. Madison, Dr. J. D. Condit. Attorney E. F. Hahn is a life member and contributes his services to the cause.

The officers are: Mrs. William F. Knight, president; Mrs. Frank Gaylor, first vice-president; Mrs. J. Dawson Thomson, second vice-president; Mrs. Revel English, secretary; Mrs. Frank Bartlett, chairman; Mrs. W. F. Kellog, director; Mrs. H. I. Stuart, director, and Mrs. Anna F. Luckey, field secretary.

COLLECTOR GOING EAST.

Collector Pendleton will start East tomorrow night, expecting to make an official visit to Washington and attend a meeting of the National Association of Appraisers to be held in New York on the 13th inst. The rapid increase of business at this port has made it necessary for the authorities to be well posted on the best manner of handling dutiable goods and collecting the proper amount of revenue. While away it is expected Collector Pendleton will be able to close up the matter of securing additional space for the accommodation of appraisers' stores in the building of the Los Angeles Warehouse Company. An additional floor space of 12,000 feet is desired for the samples of goods stored there for appraising purposes.

PECULIAR ACCIDENT.

H. D. Jaques, a policeman, living at No. 824 South Main street, was taken to the Receiving Hospital yesterday morning to be treated for a broken leg received in an unusual manner. The negro lurched up against him, snapping a bone in Jaques's leg.

The Cousins Shoe

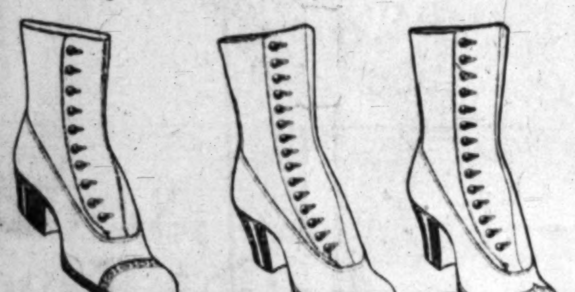
FOR DISCRIMINATING WOMEN

$4.00 - $4.50 - $5.00 and $5.50

THE PICTURE represents a Los Angeles hostess showing her visitor a "Cousins" Shoe, which she has recently purchased. It is apparent that both hostess and visitor are impressed with the shoe—its beauty of outline, its simple elegance. But, said the visitor, you surely paid a good price for that shoe. No, insisted the hostess, there is where you are wrong. I paid only five dollars—and they showed me others at four-fifty, and some at four, that were almost as nice—and some at five-fifty that were finer. I never realized that such shoes could be made to sell at prices so reasonable until I bought my first pair of "Cousins" Shoes. That was more than three years ago, when I was in New York, and since that time I always look for the "Cousins" label when buying shoes, and I always go to Gude's.

How many women are there who—if they only knew the all-around excellence of the "Cousins" Shoe—would wear it in preference to any other shoe at the same or even a higher price? The "Cousins" Shoe is in a class by itself—it is the one moderately priced shoe that is unhesitatingly accepted by the woman of critical taste. Modeled on the latest fashionable lasts, its dainty and graceful lines enhance the natural beauty of the foot, while its elegance of finish places it beyond criticism; and you will be pleased with the wearing quality of the "Cousins" Shoe, as well as with its good looks.

EVENING SLIPPERS—of incomparable beauty and excellence. A new department—at Gude's Broadway store. The exquisite designs embodied in this showing will appeal to women of most discriminating tastes. Prices $4 to $8.50.



SILK HOSIERY bearing the Gordon label is absolutely dependable—it never disappoints. All-silk is sold for "all-silk," and silk lisle for "lisle"—at 50c, $1.00 and $1.50 the pair.

JUST WAITING FOR THE WORD.

Shrine Household Show to Be Hall of Splendors.

Exhibits Certain to Delight Many Thousands.

Hundreds of Unique Features to Be Displayed.

In a blaze of 10,000 colored electric lights and with a fanfare of trumpets and cymbals, the big Shrine Household Show will open in Shrine Auditorium at 7 o'clock tomorrow night. In order that there may be no delay in the opening of the exhibition, 400 men employed by Motley Flint, chairman of the Executive Committee, and by the various exhibitors, have been working like Trojans for twenty-four hours getting everything in perfect order. The auditorium was a perfect bedlam of excitement, yesterday, and Flint and Keeran, in general charge of the work, did their best to be in every part of the city at once and to answer the hundreds of questions by which they were besieged.

"We have been working hard for this exhibition," said Flint, "and I think the results of our work will delight the hearts of the 500,000 or more persons who, in all probability, will visit the great show. The exposition, which is being given under the auspices of the Al Malaikah Temple in order that funds may be raised for the entertainment of the 40,000 strangers who will visit this city during the Shrine convention in May, will be the most unique and wonderful ever given in Southern California."

HANDSOME EXHIBITS.

In the richness of its exhibits the show promises to equal the recent Arizona State Fair. It will combine an electrical exhibit of remarkable beauty with the grandeur of an architectural exposition and the splendor of a Broadway fashion show. The entire 75,000 feet of floor space has been taken by various firms of Los Angeles, and something interesting will meet the eye at every step taken in the great building.

Five carloads of green boughs from the Santa Cruz redwood trees are being arranged in festoons and artistic designs throughout the building, and brilliant lights, half-concealed by the green decorations, will shine down on the throngs of visitors. In addition to the 7000 lights which will be suspended from the ceiling, every booth will be literally covered with electric bulbs.

One of the chief features of the show will be the automobile exhibit which will be held on the south side of the temple, and in which every prominent automobile firm in Los Angeles will be represented. The Indian Motorcycle Company, in addition to an exhibit of their machines, have made arrangements to secure a dozen or more of the famous riders throughout the country, and these men will also be on exhibition to tell about their victories in many big races.

The art department, which will be upstairs on the east side of the building, will be another splendid feature of the show. Nearly every big store in the city will have a booth in this department. On the south side of the balcony will be the booths of the retail clothiers and haberdashers, and on the north side the jewelers, chinaware dealers and cut-glass merchants will be represented. The members of the Ebell Club will exhibit a miniature bungalow, representative of the architecture of Southern California, and showing the style of house that can be built and neatly furnished by a man of moderate means.

More than 200 society women of Los Angeles have been working for several days to put the finishing touches to the mammoth country grocery store at which 50,000 different articles will be on sale.

SCHOOL WORK.

Fifty large cakes have been brought in from prominent hotels and clubs from Portland to San Diego, and many of these cakes will be given away to the man or woman who happens to hold the lucky number. The young women of the high schools of Los Angeles will have a booth all to themselves, in which they will demonstrate to the public the splendid work that is being done in the cooking departments of the city schools. Members of the Eastern Star have engaged a beautiful room which will be decorated in green and white.

On the first floor will be the booths of the sporting goods and hardware houses and booths of wholesale companies. The brewing companies will also be represented. Their booths are particularly attractive.

At the entrance to the building is the ladies' rest room which will be tastily decorated and furnished like a little palace. On Monday night the chef of the Hotel Alexandria will be on duty in the kitchen of the Auditorium, preparing dainties for the multitude.

Tuesday night will be turned over to the Chamber of Commerce, and the many members of that body are preparing to visit the show at that time. President James Slauson is arranging a special entertainment for Tuesday evening at the big Auditorium.

BABY SHOW.

The baby show should not be forgotten for it will be one of the most attractive features of the week. This show will be held Saturday afternoon, and prizes will be given to the fattest, the prettiest, and the youngest babies of all ages from three months to five years. The baby show committee includes Mmes. Elmer Hiner, chairman; Dr. W. K. Chambers, Paul Paulson, Dr. Howard Saeger, Bertha Z. Nelson, Laura McEwen, Ella L. Adams, Louise M. Swift, Richard G. Hillman, Robert Wankowski, W. D. Stephens, Grace Andrews, F. J. Zeehandelaar, Irving Mitchell, E. Ford, John Luckenbach, Max Roth, William R. Hervey, W. E. Bush, Kate Edwards, Lena W. Stannard, R. I. Follmer, Benjamin Nance, Charles Logan, L. W. Harman, Sarah Thatcher, Chloe Routzhan, Orpha Raymaker, Della T. Purdy, Delia Gilman, Perry Whiting, Motley H. Flint, A. R. Fraser, Ella I. Mitchell, Emma Rogers, Addie L. Winchester, Lavina Walkinshaw, Jeannette Beal, Arthur Reid and Mollie C. Stoddard.

Curing the Sick and Afflicte

By a Marvelously Successful Method of Treatment

Much interest is manifested regarding the TELEVIDA treatment since the opening of its offices here in Los Angeles. A great many people have called to consult the doctor and many are now on their road to recovery. The preponderance of evidence in favor of the treatment, as indicated by the wonderful testimonials on file, establishes confidence in this new treatment upon a firm basis. It is predicted that three thousand people will call within the next thirty days. Only a limited number will be accepted for treatment, however, and those who call at once will be given first attention. When the enrollment books for November are filled—a place upon the waiting list will be given those who are disappointed and they will be given treatment during the month of December. You do not have to wait years—not even months—to know whether you are going to get well. A few days tell the story by this latest, most scientific treatment of the day.

HOPE FOR THE SICK AND AFFLICTED.

The announcement that the wonderful Televida treatment has opened a large Institute of Healing, at 950 South Olive Street (corner Tenth and Olive,) will be greeted with joy by the sick and afflicted of Los Angeles. Never in the history of the city has such an opportunity been offered the public. This is the treatment that caused a sensation in the South by its wonderful power over disease. People came from far and near to take treatment. Doctors, lawyers and prominent merchants took treatment. The success obtained in all cases was remarkable.

Hundreds of people today owe their strong, vigorous health to TELEVIDA. In many cases men and women who have been helpless cripples for a number of years are made to walk in a few days' time, able to discard their wheel chairs and crutches as a result of the wonderful Televida treatment. Chronic sufferers of Rheumatism—that "Grim Monster" of Pain, feel an immediate relief and are cured in a few days' time. Hundreds of testimonials of cases of Rheumatism on file. Televida treatment never fails to bring prompt relief. Doctors have said that it is the greatest system of treatment for Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Gout and Lumbago they have ever seen.

The Televida "One Day" Liver treatment gives the body a thorough cleaning out, stimulates a sluggish Liver, clears up that yellow, sallow complexion and has, in many instances, made a surgical operation for Gallstones and Appendicitis unnecessary by instantly stopping all pain and removing the obstructions.

All forms of Kidney and Bladder trouble (except Diabetes and Bright's Disease) yield readily.

Televida cures Catarrh, Catarrhal Deafness, Blood Poison and Painful Urethral Discharges by eradicating the germ of the disease from the system.

Sufferers of Stomach trouble find immediate relief. Many cases of Gastric Ulcer, Gastritis, Chronic Indigestion, Dyspepsia and Catarrh of the Stomach have been quickly restored to health by the marvelous Televida treatment.

Victims of Nervousness, Hysteria, Insomnia, Mental Depression, Epilepsy and Spasms have been restored to perfect Nerve Control and complete possession of their mental faculties. No cases of INSANITY, however, are accepted for treatment. To illustrate Televida's great power over the nervous system, we will give an account of Case No. 4266—that of a society lady, who was treated in the South. She had a complete Nervous breakdown. She could not remember her own brother's name—her mind was a blank as far as memory was concerned. All knowledge of dates, names and incidents in her past life was completely obliterated. She could not recognize the faces of friends or relatives. She could not carry on a simple conversation and could not be trusted alone for a moment's time. Her case was sad, indeed. She had forgotten how to read and write. It was pitiful to see a one time brilliant minded woman in such a condition. A severe mental shock was responsible. Prominent physicians were called in consultation over her case. One and all declared her condition hopeless, for medicine and surgery were powerless to cope with this class of cases. It was wonderful to see how quickly she responded to Televida treatment. A gradual building up of her nervous system took place. Her mind cleared—memory was restored and one after another dates, names and past events came to her in quick succession. Soon she was in complete possession of her mental power. The change in her was wonderful. Bright and cheerful—she was the delight of all her friends. She feels that Televida saved her from a hopeless existence or a darkened life in a home for the weak minded.

Some of the worst cases of Eczema, Acne and various other Skin Diseases have been cured by Televida.

Below are given a few of the testimonials which demonstrate the quick results Televida treatment gives. They are bona fide in every particular. You are invited to write these cured patients.

RHEUMATISM CURED.

W. A. Ray, a railroad man in Greenville, Miss., suffered untold agony with Sciatica Rheumatism for a number of months. He was unable to work. Had to lie down most of the time, for he could not bear his weight upon his feet. He took a great deal of medicine and tried many forms of treatment. Nothing seemed to give him relief until he tried Televida. The intense pain immediately left him and he was cured in ten days' time. Write and ask him what he thinks of Televida.

Mr. M. M. Terrill, of 471 Trigg Avenue, Memphis Tenn., had one of the worst cases of Rheumatism imaginable. He was cured in TWO DAYS' time.

Mrs. T. L. Comer of McCrory, Ark., had a bad case of Rheumatism of a number of years' standing. She was almost insane (as she expressed it,) from the terrible pain. Televida treatment afforded her immediate relief.

LIVER AND STOMACH.

Mr. J. A. Harrington of 998 Pierce Avenue, Memphis, Tenn., suffered about one year in all. His ankles, feet and legs were badly swollen. Circulation of the blood was poor. His stomach was painful and bloated. Insomnia rendered him almost a Nervous Wreck. He spent five weeks in the hospital. Doctors treated him for Indigestion and Catarrh of the Stomach. He got worse instead of better. A few days under the Televida treatment brought about wonderful improvement. He slept that first night like a baby—the first good night's rest he had had in years. Televida made a new man of him.

Mrs. M. J. Lawrence of 1351 Adeline Street, Memphis, was relieved in a few treatments of severe Liver trouble. Praises Televida highly.

Mr. W. R. Harris of Earle, Ark., was nearly dead with Dropsy, caused by Liver trouble. He had given up all hope of relief. Televida cured him in a few days' time.

Mrs. Wm. G. Carpenter of Carollton, Miss., lived on a milk, raw egg and liquid diet for five years. Stomach trouble had made a physical wreck of her. She had frequent hysterical and fainting spells. She had wasted away to skin and bones. Televida treatment made a new woman of her. She is now able to digest the heaviest meal of meat, potatoes and vegetables without the slightest feeling of distress. She has taken on weight, feels happy and believes she owes her life to Televida.

Mrs. H. L. Wallace of Cochran, Miss., suffered a general breakdown due to Stomach trouble of ten years' standing. Restored to perfect, robust health in one month's course of Televida treatment.

LOCAL MAN RECEIVES BENEFIT.

Mr. J. H. Adelmeyer of Sierra Madre, Cal., a veteran of the Civil War, having served three years and ten months, for twenty-four years, has been crippled up with Rheumatism. The cords of his legs were cramped, drawn taut and pained him considerably, forcing him to walk in a bent over position—each step accompanied by pain, able to take but a few steps at a time, leaning heavily upon his cane. He was brought to the Televida Institute, 950 South Olive Street, Los Angeles, in an automobile just six days ago. The treatment afforded him immediate relief, banished all pain and today he walked without the use of his cane for the FIRST time in FIFTEEN YEARS.

When interviewed concerning his case Mr. Adelmeyer said: "I was surprised at the quick results of the treatment. I have never seen or heard of anything like it before. Improvement in my condition began with the first treatment. I feel twenty years younger and would not take any amount of money for the great relief I have received.

"This testimonial is gladly given in the hopes that some other unfortunate sufferer of Rheumatism may be led to the Televida Institute and there find the relief that I have experienced."

Any one wishing to verify the above statements may call upon or write Mr. J. H. Adelmeyer, Sierra Madre, Cal., enclosing a two-cent stamp for reply, and he will gladly answer all inquiries.

There are many sick people in Los Angeles and vicinity. To these TELEVIDA brings a message of hope and good cheer. The wonderful victories over disease achieved in the past will be repeated in Los Angeles.

A WELL-KNOWN MEMPHIS PHYSICIAN PRAISES TELEVIDA.

(From Memphis Press.)

In an interview recently with a Press representative, Dr. S. C. Frost of 207 Court Street, Memphis, Tenn., gave an interesting account of his personal investigation of the Televida treatment that was causing somewhat of a sensation in the South at that time. Lack of space prevents a full account of this interview. A few extracts will be given. "I became very much interested in the Televida treatment," said Dr. Frost, "when the testimonial of Mrs. J. E. Holland—the little lady whose back had been broken in a cyclone—appeared in the paper. Her case had received a great deal of attention from the medical profession as well as the laity. I am personally acquainted with a number of other patients who were restored to health and know positively that the testimonials printed in the papers were bona fide in every particular.

"The treatment is a combination of the best features of all prominent methods of healing the sick, with the exception of surgery. Massage, electricity, vibration and medicine play a prominent part. Televida treatment is a great alleviator of pain. It can be especially recommended in cases of Rheumatism, Partial Paralysis, Neuralgia, Gout and Inflammatory conditions. Certain forms of Stomach, Liver and Bladder troubles respond quickly to the treatment. It was my pleasure to see several severe cases under treatment and I was greatly pleased at the rapid progress toward recovery made in each and every case."

GORE, THE BLIND SENATOR, HOW HE TRAVELS ALONE.

Shaves Himself, Makes Change, Walks Through a Train—He Never Takes Any Exercise, He Says—His Story of Pluck, Starvation and Hard Labor Finally Ending in Sensational Success.

BY PAUL PALMER.

PRACTITIONER of pluck and professor of cheerfulness could properly be written after the name of Thomas Pryor Gore, the Oklahoma Senator, who visited Los Angeles last week. Initialized and punctuated, the title would stand for more than a college honor. Men subordinated to temperament, beaten by themselves, may reflect upon his case and obtain a mental stimulant.

Sightless at the age of fourteen—stone-blind, recollect—a book of biographies was read to him between the visits of a doctor. The author, whoever he was, will never know it, but the human and inspiring touch he gave to the stories of Clay, Calhoun and Webster lighted a darkened life with the joy of hope and made triumph sure amid disaster.

Only one citizen in a million becomes a United States Senator—not figuratively, but actually. Sometimes the office costs a startling sum of money, to say naught concerning reputation and character. Gore spent $1100, pledging his word to pay it back, after finding an experimental and friendly lender.

An article might be written about Gore as an orator. He can talk from noon until dark and give tables of figures from memory, and be interesting even when statistical. Now and then he is witty. "Persons who live in glass houses," he once warned his adversaries in the Senate, "ought to change their clothes in the dark." At another time he said he "would not place a meter upon the eyelids of the people and charge them for the joyous sunbeams." His illustrations and phrases are likely to locate his physical infirmity.

BLIND, BUT FIGHTS MAN-FASHION.

Also, an article might be written about Gore as a politician, or about Gore as a student and a political economist. But I have decided to write about Gore, the blind man. Everything else pertaining to him is conventional and ordinary. How could he read law and practice his profession? How could he stump a State against against several rich competitors and win an election to the Senate? How can he travel from Washington to Oklahoma without a companion?

Rejecting sympathy, he faces the toils, perplexities, troubles and disappointments of life man-fashion. How does he do it? Furthermore, he can shave himself every morning. When a liar comes along an alarm bell rings, and Gore, an exile in the dark, sees immediately and instinctively. Beside him any two-eyed man is physiologically dull, and in some respects personally dreary.

"If you were not blind," a political enemy once said, "I should knock you down."

"Tie a handkerchief over your eyes," Gore replied, "and you will have no excuse for not trying it."

A brother, who is also his secretary, rides with him to the Capitol every morning. A page takes him to the meetings of his committees. He sits in a large leather chair while at his office, his slender cane of heavy wood on the floor at his feet, and dictates letters to his stenographer, or talks with callers on business. His eyes are gray and his light brown hair is turning white just over the temples.

While his face is pale, for want of wind and sunlight, he looks like a strong man physically. His voice is good and his laugh has the ring of enjoyment and sincerity. I fancy he dislikes to be regarded as a curiosity. "I am sightless," he seems to say by his manner, "but what of it? Compute me by the everyday rule of humanity."

HOW HE LOST HIS SIGHT.

"My father," he said to me, in beginning his personal story, "was in very moderate circumstances. We lived at Walthall, a Mississippi village of 150 inhabitants. The nearest railroad was thirty-two miles distant. When I was 8 years old, I was hit in the left eye with a stick, while playing with a little companion. The sight of that eye was not entirely destroyed, but became so dim as to be practically useless. I continued at school until I was 11 years of age and until I was appointed to be a page in the Mississippi Legislature.

"Going to Jackson, I boarded in the home of Judge James Z. George, who had just been elected to the United States Senate. I bought a toy gun, a crossbow, to send home to my younger brother. Some of the children in the George family wanted to see how it worked. It didn't work and I looked into the barrel for the difficulty. Just then the arrow was released. It struck me in the right eye.

"After recovering from the injury, I discovered that I could read with the other eye by using a magnifying glass. I used the glass too much after returning to school, and so lost the little sight that remained. At the age of 14 I was totally blind, but I continued to attend school. A student who boarded at our house read the lessons, and I was thus enabled to keep up with my classes. I got along so well that I taught school myself for two or three winters at $32 a month. Later, with the student I have mentioned, I entered the law department of Cumberland University, in Tennessee, he reading to me as before and both of us studying together."

Thomas Pryor Gore, the blind United States Senator.

"Why had you chosen law as a profession?" I asked.

"I desired to stand on my own feet and to be independent of everybody. Blind persons are not expected to choose their work—they are limited to a few kinds of employment. I meant to break the rule and go ahead exactly as I would have done had my sight been good. My father thought of sending me to an institution for the education of the blind, but I objected. I am thankful now that I refused to go.

BLIND ASYLUMS ARE NOT GOOD.

"Blind asylums belong to a past age, and all of them should be closed. Children are sent to such places and taught music, broom making or weaving. They live a cloistered life and associate altogether with persons who have the same affliction as themselves. People come and talk kindly and they get a false idea of the state of things outside. They are coddled and helped, but a rough awakening comes when they go away and begin their work. Boys and girls with eyes would be unfitted for the world if they were shut away for years and restricted to weaving, broom making and music.

"Although I was only a youngster, I had very decided views about such matters. Then, too, I remembered the men whom I had seen in the Mississippi Senate, and I hoped to be a lawyer. Right after my second accident I was taken to New Orleans by my father for medical treatment. In some way I got a book containing the biographies of such men as Calhoun, Clay and Webster. My father read the book aloud, and, notwithstanding my blindness, I was more determined than ever to be a United States Senator. Back at home, the same boy of whom I have spoken obtained a stray copy of the Congressional Record and read it to me in our barn. I memorized the names of all the Senators. From that day to this I have always known the Senators from every State in the Union.

"I had thought of the Senate, as I said, even before I went to New Orleans. The book of biographies only fixed the ambition more firmly in my mind. I realized the disadvantages against which I should have to struggle, but I felt that I might succeed if I kept my object always uppermost in my mind. Since then my life has been governed in every respect by the decision I made at that time. Relatives and friends thought I ought to be a preacher. I liked to make speeches, had joined a debating club, and had taken part in a moot senate which I organized, representing Ohio, as I remember, but the pulpit, as a career, even though I could sermonize twice on Sunday and talk between times, had no attraction for me, either spiritually or intellectually."

REMEMBERS HOW FLOWERS LOOKED.

"What memories do you carry of the things you have seen?" I asked.

"It has been a long, long night. I have been blind for thirty years. Naturally, I have almost forgotten how the world looks. Still, if I could open my eyes right now, I think the sky, the trees and the sunbeams would seem like old friends. I remember colors, and how the flowers looked. I also vividly recollect my first sight of a railway train. It mysteriously swept across my vision when I was 8 years old. I can see the flaring smokestack of the engine, and the little cars hitched on behind.

"Going to Jackson, at the age of 11, after a journey of more than thirty miles in a wagon, I actually rode in a train. I had never thought of seats being in the cars. In the picture I imagined I saw a long narrow room on wheels, with no chairs but a plank against one of the walls. The object of the plank was not clear. Anyway, it was there. I was pleasantly surprised, therefore, to find seats in the car and a tank of drinking water near the door. I had supposed the courthouse at Walthall, fifty feet square, to be the largest building in the world. The capitol at Jackson, consequently, changed my architectural views. But all these scenes and experiences," Senator Gore said with a genuine laugh, "are pretty old. I have been so busy that I haven't thought of them for years."

"What is your theory about memory?" I inquired.

"Well, I knew that I simply had to recollect the things that I heard. I couldn't run to books, or make notes and then read them afterward. So the substance of matters that I heard was stored away in my mind systematically. I have never attempted any feats of memorization. I can quote figures, if I am making a speech on a financial subject, simply because I engrave them on my mind for a particular use at a specified time. After all, remembering things is just plain hard work."

JUDGES CHARACTER BY VOICE.

"Can you accurately judge a person by the voice?"

"I would not say that I can form a correct opinion, but I make an effort to do so. An explanation of my mental process would be impossible. Persons of sight are often attracted to or repelled by those whom they meet. They cannot tell why. They only know that they feel, and feeling cannot be adequately described. Men with eyes make mistakes in judging human character. So do I. I hear a voice. Possibly I distrust the man behind it. Afterward, I may find him to be an honest and very likable fellow. I cannot tell a man's age by his voice, unless he is old, but I am pretty sure of a woman's age," Senator Gore said, lowering his voice and moving his head as if looking around, "provided she is under forty. After she passes forty her tones seem to settle and I am compelled to guess with the rest of mankind."

"Can you spot a liar?" I asked.

"I have thought so. I don't want to be positive about it, however, because somebody might come along, put me to the test and prove that I am wrong. Men have tried to mislead me, but I have known it at the time. There, again, feeling gives the alarm. I suppose every man is surrounded by an atmosphere of his own. Men having eyes, think they see. Perhaps it is only feeling after all with those who have sight, as well as with those who are blind."

"Meanwhile," I said, "your sense of touch had become highly sensitive?"

"No; it has not. I learned to read raised letters, but reading in that way is so slow and the books are so few in number, and so costly besides, that I gave it up long ago. I do not rely on touch for anything, and my fingers are as blunt and unsensitized as your own. Singular as it may seem, I have known only a few persons who were blind. I have lived among people who could see, and I have followed their customs in all that I do."

"When did you begin to make speeches?"

"As a boy at the meetings of the debating club at Walthall. My first public address was delivered out of doors and concerned education. I talked away in depressing doubt, not being enabled to see my audience and not knowing whether any one was getting up and silently retreating into the woods. The subject did not call for applause, even if the speech had been worth it, and so I proceeded in silence. I blazed away, however, and didn't break down. Since then I have stumped a number of States and talked to all kinds of audiences. I think my speeches out, and then get up and talk. Once I spoke from 2 o'clock in the afternoon until sundown. I didn't hear anybody get up and leave, and so I kept right on. I have often wondered what the crowd looked like when I sat down."

WHY THE BLIND ARE CHEERFUL.

"A man deficient in sight," I remarked, "must naturally do considerable thinking?"

"Undoubtedly. One who is blind is necessarily much alone, but that does not mean he is lonely. Whether a person has eyes or not he can do a lot of intellectual loafing. As Junius observed one may indulge himself in thoughtless meditation. Everybody wastes time. I have wasted time. So have you. The mind now and then likes to be a vagrant, yet, I am bound to say that the blind are compelled to be reflective. Perhaps that is the reason they are usually cheerful as a class. There are so many things they cannot do, and, understanding their limitations, they become reconciled to their situation."

"How do you manage to travel alone for long distances?"

"It is the easiest thing in the world. I go each year to Oklahoma unaccompanied. Some one takes me to a street car, here in Washington, or I call a cab. Thus I get to the railway station. There, a 'red cap,' or porter, goes with me to the ticket office and then to the train. The train porter shows me to my seat. I know a train as well as I know my own house, and can go to the dining car as well as anybody. The next day I am in St. Louis. If I stay overnight, a 'red cap' takes me to the cab stand. A porter meets me at the hotel. A bellboy shows me to a room. Next morning, I shave myself and pack my traveling bag. After breakfast, I go to the train. In due time I am at home."

"Has any one ever tried to rob you?"

"I never had a pistol put into my face, but before I learned to distinguish $10 in gold from a 50-cent piece in silver, a man attempted to cheat me out of nine dollars and a half. A negro porter at a railway station stopped him. I can pay out coin without any trouble, but all paper money feels alike to a blind man."

"Tell me about an average day in your work and life as a Senator."

"I read the morning newspapers—that is, my brother reads them to me. Then I go to my office and answer my letters. If there are no sessions of the committees of which I am a member, I remain in my office until the meeting of the Senate, at noon. After the Senate adjourns, I answer the letters that have come during the day. The evening I give up to books. Mrs. Gore does the reading.

CANNOT READ FOR PLEASURE

"I like all kinds of literature, poetry, science, and fiction, but reading aloud cannot be done quickly and I am compelled, therefore, to confine myself to the books that are of use to me in my work—history and political economy. I am interested in the tariff question, in currency and in banking, and those are the subjects to which I give most of my time and reflection. My tariff views can be stated in one short sentence: 'Trade is good, not bad.' I would just as s fill a harbor with rocks and prev ships coming in as I would en laws that hindered commercial tra actions between nations."

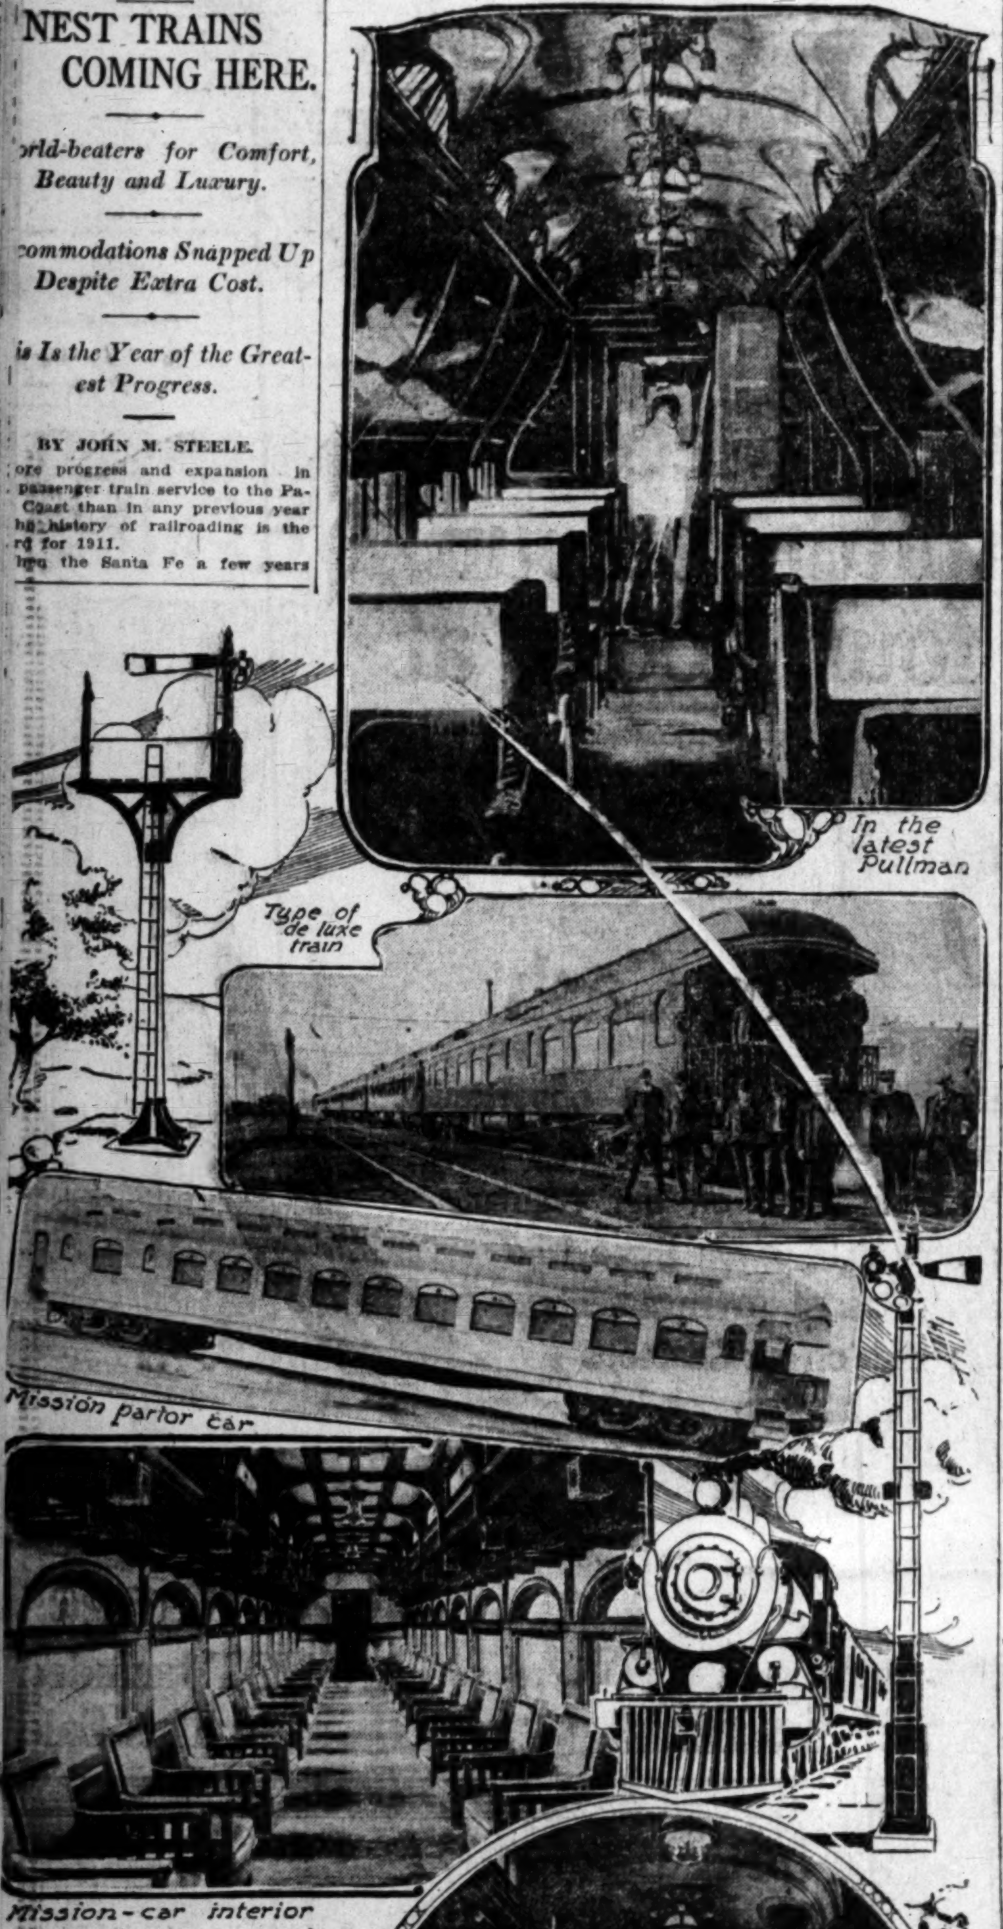
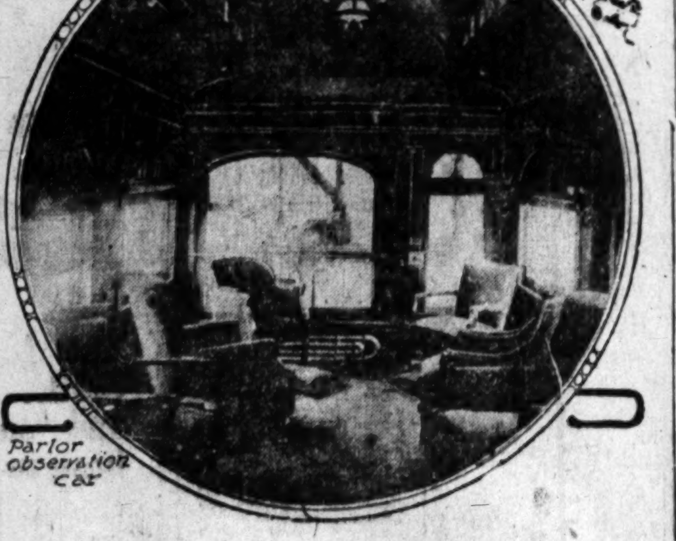
en the Santa Fe a few years





The Fine Trains That Come Here.

They're the most modern and luxurious in the world, and this year has broken all records for progress and expansion along these lines to and on this coast.

announced a through first-class n—which boiled down to its es- ce means no coaches or tourist ping cars—from Chicago to Los geles and San Francisco to be run e a week, there were many who that it was an unwise step and the train would never pay. Last ter this train was run every day two sections, frequently in three, on several occasions four of se first class trains followed each er at ten-minute intervals across continent.

he Union Pacific and Southern ific had previously pioneered with through trains but the action the Santa Fe put the Harriman s on their mettle, and on their lines and in conjunction with Rock Island limited trains com- all of the up-to-date comforts travel were put on, including the den State Limited.

hen ex-Senator Clark and his as- tes in the Salt Lake Railroad de a combination which resulted fast through limited train by of the Chicago and Northwestern Chicago to Omaha, Union Pa- to Salt Lake, and the Salt Lake te to Los Angeles. Forty news- er men from all parts of the ntry assisted in dedicating the through train and gave it an petus which is probably account- for its steadily expanding popu- ity since. That was several years and there are more fast passen- trains now running on the three scontinental lines centering here h can be counted on one turn of lliard string.

ast June, B. F. Yoakum, chair- of the Board of Directors of the Louis & San Francisco Railroad, ited Los Angeles and told The mes that the Frisco intends to ex- d its main line to this city. But akum and his associates couldn't it and a traffic agreement was de by which the Frisco will run ough passenger trains from St. is, Kansas City, Memphis and w Orleans here, using the Santa tracks for the western end of the rney, the service to start next ek.

THESE BEAT ALL.

While in average service and equip- nt the western lines are better an the eastern roads, two of the stems, east of Chicago, have op- ated so-called de luxe or extra- e trains. This service and the de- and prompted the announcement is summer that several of these ains were to be put in service to e Pacific Coast. Meanwhile the icago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Rail- ad had put on through trains be- een Chicago and the Pacific Coast th equipment and service that had the former features of western in service, and a feature that went all the other roads one better, the serving of tea to the ladies on the train each afternoon of the journey across the continent.

Next month two of these de luxe trains will go into service, one between Chicago and Los Angeles on the Santa Fe, and the other between New Orleans and Los Angeles and San Francisco on the Southern Pacific. The announcement made concerning these trains practically exhausts the catalogue of things that can be devised for the comfort of the traveler. They will have compartment sleeping cars, drawing and parlor cars, bath-rooms and barber shop, a lady's maid, a valet, a club car with a ticker in it, baseball and football bulletins, a library and pianola, observation balconies, a cigar counter and a wine cellar, which of course, means a full assortment of millionaires to provide local color. There will be electric illumination, and fans, throughout; upper and lower berth lights, vacuum cleaning, electric curling tongs, and numerous other up-to-date devices. The Sunset Limited, the de luxe train on the Southern Pacific, will start in service December 4, reducing the present running time from New Orleans to Los Angeles twenty-four hours.

Despite the fact that the finest de luxe train on the Santa Fe does not start in service until December 12, and for the time being is to run once a week, all of the space has been taken, even with the apparent handicap of a $25 extra fare. The extra-fare charge on the Sunset Limited is $10.

Besides its new de luxe train the Santa Fe has made other changes in its fast train service this year, which includes through train service between Los Angeles and San Francisco, which goes into effect next month. During the year the Santa Fe has put in new trains which reduce the time between Los Angeles and San Diego from four hours and twenty minutes to three hours and thirty minutes and a tourist flyer from Chicago to Los Angeles reducing the time from eighty-two and seventy-one hours. The time of the California Limited has been cut from seventy-two to sixty-eight and one-half hours to Los Angeles. The new de luxe train will make it in sixty-three hours. The new service to San Francisco will cut the present time from twenty-one and one-half hours to sixteen hours and forty-five minutes. The time to Phoenix has been cut from thirty hours and thirty minutes to seventeen and one-half hours.

The Gould lines reached the Pacific Coast this year with the Western Pacific providing a new out-let for traffic to Southern California.

EXPANSION BRINGS 'EM.

Of course it is the constantly-expanding passenger traffic that is back of these new trains, furnishing a zest in the pursuit of the latest and the up-to-date travel conveniences, affording a competition in the comfort and glory of equipment, speed, safety, and all of the other numerous considerations that enter into modern day traffic. It is a constant struggle with the railroads to get enough equipment to handle the business. Formerly it was considered that Los Angeles was an ideal winter resort and the fashionably inclined journeyed when ice and sleet made life a burden in colder climes. But now Southern California has an all-round-the-year rush of travel. If the summer traffic to the Coast continues to gain as it has in the last few years it will outnumber the winter movement.

There are all kinds of special rates to attract the traveler, the one-way colonist, the homeseeker, the winter and the summer rates, and any number of convention rates induced by the activities of the various commercial organizations, who have developed an exceptional knack of landing practically all of the conventions they go after.

A feature that has contributed to the upbuilding of passenger traffic and an influence that is to show rapid gain in the future is an arrangement entered into by the expanding coastwise passenger steamship companies for interchange of traffic with railroad lines making it possible for passengers to purchase a round trip railroad ticket which includes an enjoyable and pleasant journey in a modern floating hotel between any of the coast points on the Pacific Coast.

WITCHES AND GHOSTS.

Such spookish things as witches, ghosts and Jack o' Lanterns added to the eerie merriment of the Halloween party given by Miss Gladys DeWitt, president of the A. B. K.'s of Acacia Chapter, O. E. S. The guests were robed in sheets and pillow slips and enjoyed several Halloween games. A number of new members were initiated.

Unusual Reason Given to Escape Jury Duty.

By tomorrow it is expected that at least ten of the present temporary panel of jurors in the McNamara case will regain their freedom when peremptory challenges will be exercised by prosecution and defense. It is certain that Attorney Darrow, in charge of the defense, will not permit any of the men he previously challenged for cause to remain in the jury box.

George W. McKee, A. C. Winter, George W. Johnson, Walter F. Frampton and Byron Lisk are sure to be discharged by the defendant's legal experts. Lisk is apparently unbiased, but then he is a man of property and does not approve of violence.

According to statements frequently made by Darrow, who is a socialist, he is anxious to have men who have suffered, who have been "down and out," and who know what poverty and trouble are, upon the panel. The well-fed, prosperous gentlemen of recititude do not appeal to him, if his remarks to sympathizing newspaper friends are to be taken at their face value.

Dist.-Atty. Fredericks is concerned in getting twelve fair, impartial men who are not so deeply prejudiced in favor of labor unions and their methods as to be ready to distrust the testimony to be offered by the prosecution.

SPECULATION RIFE.

There are now eleven temporary jurors. Another man, W. H. Andrews, is under examination. It is generally expected that he will be excused because of his expressed conviction of the guilt of the accused and his deep-seated bias against walking delegates and strikes. But there are about twenty eligibles belonging to the fourth venire and from this number it is certain that the twelfth place will be filled. As soon as this is done the peremptory challenges begin. The defense will merely state: "We excuse 'John Doe.'" The District Attorney will say, "We excuse 'Richard Doe,'" and so on until each side has eliminated the talesmen they distrust.

Many of the court attaches figure that F. D. Green and Seaborn Manning will alone survive the legal trap-shooting. Some go so far as to say that the box will be entirely cleared. The defense has twenty of these peremptory challenges and the prosecution ten. Each side will carefully use them, as it might happen at the very last that some person particularly objectionable to one side or the other might happen to be drawn.

But the general records of most of the men whose names appear in the big county jury "wheel," have been gone over long ago. Each side has a pretty good idea of the leanings and characteristics of the talesmen before they enter the jury box.

Some seem to be under the misapprehension that the 900 to 1000 names in the jury wheel were put there for the McNamar case. This is not so. Each year the judges of the Superior Court prepare lists of property owners in the county, and the sum total of these lists, after duplications are eliminated, are turned over to the County Clerk.

WHO WERE EXAMINED.

As names are drawn for the case in Department Nine, it often happens that the men are disqualified because of some close connection with the case. They are not discharged from future jury duty, but will serve in other cases that arise from time to time in other departments.

Out of the forty veniremen summoned yesterday morning before Judge Bordwell, fifteen could not be located by the officers. The judge went over the list of those present and heard excuses. The excuses allowed were not as numerous as on the occasion of the former drawing. Only two or three professed to be hard of hearing.

Probably the funniest excuse of all was that of the man who said "high altitude" made him sick. He stated he feared to be so far from the ground. The judge treated the man very leniently, and asked him to return Monday to see if he could not become accustomed to the elevation eight stories above the street.

Among the individuals examined and their excuses were the following:

John S. Redfern, business reasons, ordered to return tomorrow; R. G. Beebe, served on jury within year, excused; J. B. Sexton, unpleasant sensation when at any elevation, to return tomorrow; W. J. Clark, business reasons, to return tomorrow; Prof. G. S. Sumner, needed in class work at Pomona College, excused; Clark McLain, business reasons, to return tomorrow; C. H. Knapp, injury to leg, to return Monday; Harry Chandler, witness, to report for service in another department; Alvan W. Miller, hard of hearing, excused; Howard E. Sweting, steward of a Pasadena hotel, to return tomorrow; Henry G. Burbank, sick wife, to return tomorrow; Otto S. Brandt, business reasons, to return tomorrow; G. J. Gilly, business reasons, to return tomorrow.

Others who wanted to escape jury duty for one reason or another included: Charles Roth, B. F. Sanborn, George Green and John S. Redfern. All will be in court tomorrow morning.

NEW EVIDENCE.

The temporary jurymen did not appear in court yesterday. They went out for a short automobile ride in the afternoon and will be taken to the country today. Several of the members are much exercised over the health of Seaborn Manning. He was one of the first to be selected and but for his physical disability would undoubtedly remain on the final panel. While out of doors and engaged in light work on his ranch he says he had normal health but he cannot stand confinement.

He may be allowed to go by mutual consent after a physician has examined him.

Some of the jurors gave an impromptu concert yesterday afternoon. They didn't know many songs, but all joined in the chorus of "Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight?"

According to present predictions testimony will not begin in the McNamara case until about December 1. The first witnesses, however, will be in readiness in case the lawyers suddenly agree upon a panel. As far as the preparation of the evidence is concerned, that was finished long ago. It is said that the prosecution has discovered several new links in the chain of circumstantial evidence that they are preparing. The District Attorney will not say what the supposed fresh evidence is.

MURDER FAKER YARNING.

Now Tells Police He Sought to Be Prisoner to Get Material for Book. Is Released.

Horatio Moses who startled the Chief of Police Tuesday night by confessing that he committed murder declared yesterday that the story was a fake. He says now he is gathering material for a novel and wanted to be treated as a prisoner to enable him to get "local color."

When he made a statement to this effect to the Chief yesterday the latter asked: "How do I know you are telling me the truth, now?" Moses said he had nothing to offer but his word. The Chief replied that in view of past occurrences he felt compelled to remark that Moses's word was not reliable. Word was received from New York stating that Moses was not wanted there and the Chief ordered his release.

Moses's original story was that he had shot a man in New York for having mistreated his sister. He overlooked many details and the police decided before word was received from New York that Moses was not telling the truth. They are at a loss to account for his action and do not place much credence in his latest yarn.

Washington State College and the University of Idaho have arranged a Rugby game. The contest will be the first attempt of either institution to play the English game.

WARNING.

In a futile effort to revenge themselves upon The Times for its effective advocacy of Industrial Freedom, paid labor-union emissaries — obviously sympathizers with the accused prisoners—are persistently engaged, in different parts of the city, in trying to induce people not to continue to patronize or read this journal.

These hired agitators deserve to be ignored and repelled, and Times patrons and readers are advised to refuse their impudent demands.

Any misconduct on the part of these paid emissaries of monopolistic organized labor should immediately be reported to the police.

The hysterical shrieks of union bosses and the cowardly tactics of their hirelings will not stop the onward and upward march of The Times, or abate its zeal to promote the true material welfare of Los Angeles and the State, protect the cause of the independent workingman and advance the best interests of all the patrons of this steadfast journal. The Times is and will continue to be the champion of all honest, independent workingmen who mean to be free, true and law-abiding.

vice-president; Marco H. Hellman, treasurer; Ludwig Baruch, recording secretary; M. J. Finkenstein, corresponding secretary, and Henry L. Klein, financial secretary.

The directors of the organization are S. G. Marshutz, Ludwig Baruch, Berthold Baruch, Maurice J. Finkenstein, Emil Firth, David A. Hamburger, Jules Kauffman, Henry Klein, John Hahn, Jacob Loew, and L. Zinnamon.

The Building Committee, which will have entire charge of the erection of the institution, is composed of L. M. Cole, chairman; and John Kahn, Jules Kauffman, Berthold Baruch, Jacob Loew and S. G. Marshutz.

HISTORY OF MOVEMENT.

The project has been long talked of. Several years ago numerous reports began coming to the Los Angeles Lodge of the Independent Order of B'nai Brith that poor orphaned and destitute Jewish children were being parceled out among the Salvation Army, the Volunteers of America and a number of private so-called children's homes. Some of the latter were unfit for children to grow up in. Other Jewish children were found to be playing loose in the streets, their parents, compelled to make a living, not being able to give them the proper care requisite to their development into good men and women.

During 1907, private individuals among the Jewish citizens founded a so-called Jewish Children's Home, where thirty or more children were crowded together in very unsatisfactory quarters and under conditions not at all desirable. This place was finally closed by the city authorities.

In December, 1907, the Order of B'nai Brith passed a resolution to the effect that a suitable orphans' home should be established, and appointed committee with full power to act in the matter. Under the chairmanship of S. G. Marshutz this committee incorporated for the purpose of actively fostering the building enterprise. The Jewish people of Los Angeles and Southern California responded at once to the appeal for funds, Harris Newmark setting a splendid example by donating $25,000 in cash to be known as the "Sarah and Harris Newmark Endowment." This generosity enabled the committee to purchase its magnificent site in Huntington Park.

The Ways and Means Committee of the Board of Directors, of which J. Y. Baruh is chairman, has raised a fund of $47,500 in addition to the endowment of Mr. Newmark. An additional $20,000 will be required for the completion of the institute.

NEED IS PRESSING.

The need for such an institute among the Jewish people is pressing. At the present time about seventy Jewish orphans are cared for in the temporary quarters of the Jewish Orphans' Home at No. 2033 East Fourth street. The demand for admission to this inadequate place is great, and neither the space nor the means of the home permit of extensions of the work. The new institution will be large enough to accommodate over five hundred children.

The ground will be broken for the erection of the splendid Huntington Park project in about one week. Appropriate ground-breaking exercises are to be observed on this occasion.

The designers of the institution state that all the buildings are to be constructed of brick, plastered with cement plaster. The roofs will be of red tile. Numerous avenues of escape are to be provided that will preclude danger from fire. The structures are to be so arranged that they will receive the maximum amount of light and air.

The Administration building will be two stories in height and will contain the offices of the superintendent and head physician, together with playrooms for boys and girls, dining-room, kitchens, library, clubrooms, auditorium, synagogue and roof garden. The basement will contain a complete heating plant, together with laundry and storage rooms.

Each dormitory will contain sleeping quarters for thirty-five children. Sleeping rooms and play rooms will also be provided.

AN APPRECIATION.

[The Argonaut:] The Appeal to Reason, published at Girard, Kansas, is the foremost Socialistic publication of the United States. It had, according to its own boast, printed October 21st, 463,751 regular subscribers, and its weekly edition usually runs up beyond the five hundred thousand mark. This paper has of late been giving close attention to California interests, first because of its sympathy with Governor Johnson's efforts to "redeem" California from a deadly conservatism; second because it is profoundly solicitous in behalf of the McNamara brothers on trial at Los Angeles. Of course the Appeal to Reason is delighted with the results of our late election, which it characterized as the destruction of "the first of capitalism's barriers in California"; adding the assurance that "the persistent, relentless work will be continued," and that, the situation being what it is—that eminent reformer, Hiram Johnson, having matters well in hand, "there can be but one result." Commenting directly on the election of October 10th, the Appeal to Reason says:

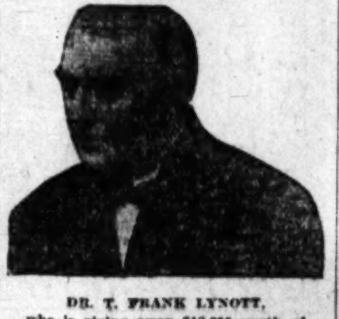
"The victory for the recall is one of the most important things that has happened in California. It is the one thing which the Appeal said was necessary to give labor control of affairs in that state. In its edition of May 20, 1911, the Appeal said editorially, relative to the solution of the McNamara case:

"'The fight at the polls this fall will centre around the adoption of the initiative, referendum and recall amendments to the constitution. Under the provisions of the recall amendment the judges of the Supreme Court of California can be retired. These are the men who will decide the fate of the kidnaped workers! Don't you see what it means, comrades, to have in the hands of an intelligent militant working class the political power to recall the present capitalist judges and put on the bench our own men? Was there ever such an opportunity for effective work? No, not since Socialism first raised its crimson banner on the shores of Morgan's country! The election for governor and state officers of California does not occur till 1914. But with the recall at our command we can put our own men in office, without waiting for a regular election!'

"This declaration on the part of the Appeal created a sensation at the time. Workers of California have shown that they understood the significance of the situation and have responded nobly. They are now masters of conditions instead of being puppets in the hands of a few capitalists. It will have its effect on the courts.

"It is a great victory, but it is only the beginning. Los Angeles is going Socialist. Many other towns in California will do likewise. The arrogance of the masters will be curbed. Whenever the workers unite with a determination to accomplish results it will be found that they have the power and will succeed."

This ought to be cheerful reading for many who, under the impulses of intellectual and moral enthusiasm and "fully understanding the significance of the situation" co-operated with Governor Johnson to give us the recall along with the initiative, the referendum, and the rest of the brood of theories and devices through which we are now plainly entering upon a political and social millennium.



I Am Willing to Prove I Can Cure You

To That End I Am Giving Away $10,000 Worth of Medicine

In order to show beyond all doubt that I am in possession of a medicine that will cure kidney trouble, bladder trouble or rheumatism, I will this year give away ten thousand dollars' worth of this medicine, and anyone suffering from these diseases can get a box of it absolutely free. All that is necessary is to send me your address.

I don't mean that you are to use a part of it or all of it and pay me if cured. I mean that I will send you a box of this medicine absolutely free of charge, a gift from me to the Uric Acid sufferers of the world, so I can show them where and how they may be cured. I will not expect payment for this free medicine, nor would I accept it now or later if you sent it. It is free in the real meaning of the word.

For twenty-five years—a quarter of a century—I have been trying to convince the public that I have something genuine, something better than others have for the cure of stubborn, chronic rheumatism, for torturing kidney backache, for annoying calls to urinate. But it is hard to convince people—they try a few things unsuccessfully and give up all hope and refuse to listen to anyone thereafter. Happily, I am in a position now to demonstrate to sufferers at my own expense that I have a medicine that cures these diseases. I don't ask them to spend any money to find out; I don't ask them to believe me, nor even to take the word of reliable people, but all I ask is that they allow me to send them the medicine at my own cost. That is surely fair.

To this end I have set aside ten thousand dollars, which will be used to compound my medicine. Much of it is ready now to be sent out; all of it fresh and standard. There will be enough for all sufferers, though there be thousands of them. And anyone who needs it can get some of it free. But in order that I shall know that you have a disease for which this medicine is intended, I ask you to send me some of your leading symptoms. If you have any of the symptoms in the list printed here you need my medicine and if you will write me I will gladly send you a box of it free with full directions for your use. Look the symptoms over, see which symptoms you have, then write me about as follows: "Dear Dr., I notice symptoms number"—here put down the numbers, give your age, full address, and send it to me. My address is Dr. T. Frank Lynott, 5050 Occidental Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

The ten thousand dollars I am spending for the compounding of my medicine is only a part of the money I am devoting to this cause, for the package of medicine I send you will be fully prepaid at my expense. From any standpoint you view it, YOU incur no expense or obligation. Just tell others who you know are suffering who sent you the medicine that cured you.

I am promising to give away ten thousand dollars' worth of medicine, and I will do that; I am promising to send any sufferer who writes me a box of this medicine and full directions free of charge, and I will do that. I can say further that this medicine has been vouched for according to law as complying in every detail with all requirements. It will stop rheumatism, it will stop pain and backache, it will stop too frequent desire to urinate; it will heal, soothe and strengthen. You will be better in every way for having taken it. There is not an ingredient that can injure; not one but will benefit. All that I ask is that you use it yourself so that you may be personally convinced.

Owing to the large number of requests, I have had ten thousand more copies of my medical book printed. This book is new and up to date and contains complete descriptions, symptoms, causes, effects and cures of kidney, bladder and rheumatic diseases. All who write for the free medicine will be sent a copy of this grand illustrated medical book—the largest ever written on these diseases for free and general distribution.

If you need medicine such as I have, if you are anxious to be cured and don't want to spend any money LOOKING for cures, write me. Read the symptoms over and let me hear from you today.

DR. T. FRANK LYNOTT, who is giving away $10,000 worth of medicine.

Herpicide makes the hair beautiful, allowing it to grow naturally and luxuriantly. Other preparations are claimed to be "just as good," but Newbro's Herpicide is the original remedy. POLITICAL TIPS.

Republican politicians of the regu- r brand, who give their allegiance President Taft, are of the opinion at the real goal sought by the La ollette boomers is not to be found the 1912 election, but goes beyond, the Presidential contest of 1915, nd they are not in fear of a third cket next year, says the Washington orrespondent of the Brooklyn Eagle. hey say that La Follette is too experienced a politician to believe that e can really control next year's conention. The progressive programme, they see it, is simply this:

To gather as many delegates in ext year's convention as possible and make an active and even bitter ght in behalf of La Follette; to ake every effort to obtain the adopon of a progressive platform, and fight the regulars tooth and nail each step; to walk out of the conention, not as bolters, but as men ho have not yielded an inch in eir beliefs; to sulk in their tents uring the campaign and watch the epublican ticket go down to defeat; continue their fight following the 912 election and capture as many ew representatives in the Congress hich will be elected in 1914 as it is ssible to get; then to go after the residential nomination in 1916, using the argument that the country is red of standpat Republicanism, that ey did their best to avert disaster 1912, and that now it is their turn be placed in charge of the fortunes the party.

There will be elections in thirteen ates and in a number of the leadg cities of the country next Tuesy. In Massachusetts, Kentucky, aryland, Rhode Island, Mississippi d New Mexico, a Governor and her State officials are to be chosen; New Jersey and Virginia a Legislare only; in New York several memrs of the State judiciary, and in Neaska a supreme judge, regent of e State University, and Railroad ommissioner.

Included among the Congressional stricts where elections will be held, cause of the death of Representaves, are the Fourteenth Pennsylnia, the Seventh Kansas, the Third ebraska, the First New Jersey and nth Tennessee.

The chief interest of national poliians in the State elections is dicted toward Massachusetts and hode Island. Both are industrial ates and are directly concerned in e tariff, which has been brought rward as a prominent issue in the mpaign. Gov. Foss is a candidate r re-election in Massachusetts on e Democratic ticket. Louis A. rothingham, at present Lieutenantovernor, is the Republican choice. hile Republican leaders appear nfident, many observers feel more an doubtful about the prospect, and ould not be at all surprised at the -election of Gov. Foss. For the rst time since the Republicans ben their long lease of power in the ay State, now more than fifty years o, their control of the Legislature seriously challenged this year.

A condition of uncertainty about e result in Rhode Island is also ported, in view of the fact that last ar Gov. Pothier, Republican, had t a small margin of victory over ewis A. Waterman, the Democratic ndidate. This year the same candates will head the ticket.

One of the seven political wonders Washington is the Progressive epublican Campaign Committee. arting quietly several months ago in o rooms on the top floor of a Washgton office building, with a maner and his stenographer and no her clerical force, the propaganda as grown until today it employs early fifty clerks, and it is said that will double its force in a few weeks. he managers now occupy eight ooms and have taken a lease on the tire top floor of the office building. Furthermore, arrangements are beg made to open branch headquarrs in Chicago and plans are under ay to open branches in Boston and the Pacific Coast. The query in ashington is, "Who is paying for is campaign?"

Neither the Democratic National ommittee nor the Republican National Committee has any such oranization. In numbers and activity suggests the heat of a Presidential ampaign. It is known that Gifford inchot has contributed very liberlly and Medill McCormick, the hicago publisher, is one of the mangers in Washington.

The expenses of these headquarters, ccording to the most conservative stimates, must be $3000 a week.

"La Follette," said a Republican olitician in Washington, "reminds ne of an old horse turned loose in ten-acre lot. Sometimes the horse eels frisky, swishes his tail, kicks p his heels and starts on a dead galop for the fence. Folks who watch he performance think that the old ellow is surely going to jump over. But he never does. He dashes up to the fence with a great show of indeendence, pulls up short, snorts a ouple of times, and then turns back o pasture again. It's always a bluff."

This view of La Follette's party egularity is consistently borne out by his record. More than once, in fact, almost habitually engaged in warfare with the regular leaders of this party, he has always been careful to maintain his own regularity. Three times beaten for the Governorship nomination in Wisconsin by the machine, La Follette never dreamed of organizing a third ticket. In one of these Governorship fights, following what his supporters believed to be a particularly atrocious turndown, many of them urged La Follette to stand as an independent candidate and thereby prevent the regular Republican from being elected.

"Not on your life," said La Follette. "We'll win this fight inside the party."

"The more I see of South Dakota the more hopeful I am that the entire delegation will be instructed for Taft," writes a staff correspondent of the New York Tribune. There is, of course, a chance that La Follette will capture the one district in the southeastern corner of the State which proved a peculiarly fertile field for vagaries in the days of Populism, and where the rampant style of oratory and the extreme radicalism which La Follette affects appeal to the voters to a large extent.

Will Gov. Harmon and his friends favor Presidential primaries? The Wilson and the Clark followers will urge this method of allowing the Democrats of the country to indicate to the delegates they send to the next national Democratic convention the candidate of their choice for the Presidency.

There are only five States, Oregon, Nebraska, Wisconsin, North Dakota and New Jersey, where such primaries are to be held under the State law, and, therefore, wherever such preferences are indicated it must be by authorization of the State committees when the delegates to the convention are chosen.

[Patterson (N. J.) Call:] Gov. Wilson wants to know what is the matter with business. That's easily answered. The matter with business is the lack of confidence, and the lack of confidence is caused by the everlasting tinkering with the tariff and the Democratic threat of free-trade.

There would be no business at all with a Democratic President and Congress. Such a calamity would be followed by one of the worst panics this country ever saw, and the "Cleveland hard times" would be nothing in comparison.

Dr. Harvey W. Wiley is talked of as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for the Vice-Presidency. The plans are, however, in a formative stage. The fact that he is an Indiana man and has a great popular following are urged in his favor.

Senator Joseph W. Bailey of Texas will serve out his present term, but has recently reiterated his intention of retiring at that time. The reason of his withdrawal from public life is largely because he has become tired and disgusted with the eternal interjection of the prohibition fight that must needs complicate all other matters that come before the voters of Texas. It is difficult to say who will succeed Bailey, but the candidate who now looks to be leading is Col. Jake Wolters of Houston. Col. Wolters is a fine lawyer, and has a tremendous personal following.

Gov. Foss of Massachusetts says he incurred no expense in securing his nomination and he will therefore make no return to the Secretary of State. Louis A. Frothingham, who secured the Republican nomination for Governor, reports his expenses were $2500. Speaker Joseph Walker and Representative Norman H. White who contested the nomination with Frothingham, report their expenses as having been $8,839.88 and $7778.22, respectively. Under the new corrupt practices act of the State the political expenditures of candidates is limited to $5000.

After refraining from speaking to Warner Hill, chairman of the Railroad Commission, for six years, except in cases where absolutely necessary for business reasons, Gov. Hoke Smith of Georgia has appointed him Associate Justice of the Supreme Court, to succeed Judge Horace Holden, resigned.

The appointment has a dramatic interest from the fact that it was not more than six years ago, in the course of Hoke Smith's first campaign for Governor, that he was attacked in most scorching invective by Mr. Hill. The attack came as the result of Gov. Smith's strictures upon the Railroad Commission, whom he identified with railroad politicians. Hill came back with a warm card, in which he declared that Hoke Smith made this charge "deliberately, falsely and maliciously." The card contained such references to the Governor as "unscrupulous demagogue" and "may the Lord have mercy upon his malicious and hypocritical soul."

Hoke Smith by this appointment secures control of the Railroad Commission by appointing to the vacancy Paul Trammell, one of his strong friends, which may have been his real purpose in the appointment of Mr. Hill to the Supreme bench.

Maryland has had only one Republican Governor since the Civil War. Democratic politicians are wondering today whether this year's election will mark the second break in the long string of party victories. They are none too optimistic concerning the chances of Arthur Pue Gorman, the Democratic candidate. Certain it is that the Republican organization stands a better chance of winning the governorship than it has had in a good many years.

Three things militate against Gorman in his candidacy. One is the fact that he is regarded as a reactionary Democrat. A second is that his nomination has been clouded by the primary scandal in Baltimore. The third is that Gorman is the son of his father.

The Republican candidate is Philips Lee Goldsborough, who is a descendant of an old Maryland family. Goldsborough makes no particular appeal to the independent voter of Maryland, for he is a straight organization Republican from the Eastern Shore. He has been State's Attorney, State Comptroller, and for the last several years Internal Revenue Collector.

Lieut.-Gen. Nelson A. Miles, retired, says he has been approached with the suggestion that he permit the use of his name as a candidate for Vice-President on the Democratic ticket. Already it has been hinted that the Republicans of the North would, in the event of he nomination of Speaker Clark, make a bitter fight upon the issue of his connection with slave holding. Since Gen. Miles comes from New England and fought in the Union Army, the association of his name with that of Mr. Clark would, in the event of the nomination the feeling, politicians believe.

SUCCESSOR OF LOCAL SUCCESS.

EAST INDIAN PLAY UNDER WAY ON TULLY'S TYPEWRITER.

Will Be Written for Ruth St. Denis and Will Be Her First Acting Role of Importance—Dancer to Play a Girl of Modern India. Henry B. Harris Behind Venture.

BY JULIAN JOHNSON.

Richard Walton Tully, Crown Prince of the atmospheric new-thought drama, is about to subjugate another empire.

He has been engaged by Henry B. Harris to write an East Indian play for Ruth St. Denis, and will accordingly freight his imagination from Hawaii, where it is in storage at present, to the coral strand often chanted out of the old hymnal.

"The Bird of Pasadise" will be succeeded by a Yogi fantasy not yet named.

This is quite a departure for Miss St. Denis, too. With the exception of a small role in Mrs. Carter's company, one season, she has never been seen in a speaking part. It has always been her ambition to undertake a real role of size and importance, however.

After her Carter engagement Miss St. Denis concentrated, with true Hindoo zealotry, upon her oriental dancing. In her hall-bedroom in New York she sat on the floor and practiced her cobra dance with a home-made but docile and highly intelligent serpent constructed out of tinfoil, green tissue paper and two pieces of glass bottle for eyes.

American managers thought her interpretative stuff next to lunacy, and they gave her a hearing no longer than the time necessary to excuse her from their offices.

She went abroad, and the Europeans thought her great.

On returning she found the American managers waiting for her. She did not have to wait for them.

Of late she has been dissatisfied with the dancing as a sole performance, and has longed to combine real drama with interpretative posturing.

Miss St. Denis is particularly enamored of Los Angeles, and, after the conclusion of her last tour, she came here and spent nearly two months, recuperating, sight-seeing and planning for her present season.

Upon reading a scenario of "The Bird of Pasadise," Henry B. Harris sent for Mr. Tully and told him that he had been looking for a man of his especial bent for a year. Miss St. Denis required an East Indian play, and no one seemed able to get far enough into Nirvana to inhale the mystic atmosphere and behold the seventh-heaven vision.

Harris had an idea that Dick was clairvoyant, esoteric, reincarnate and a lot of other things.

But Miss St. Denis herself was melancholy and skeptical. She had been jarred out of her exalted plane too often by the well-meaning but crude exhalations of rough-neck dramatists to pass into rapt ecstacy at the literary proposition of the Californian.

But at any rate, she bade him try.

He tried, and she was intensely interested, and told him to proceed still further.

He proceeded, and during her San Francisco engagement he worked two whole weeks on an East Indian scenario, which she produced without flaw and quite capable of combining dramatic practicality with a subtle vision of the higher philosophic life.

Tully won't tell any of his plot. Miss St. Denis doesn't wish revelations and he doesn't believe in them, either.

Mr. and Mrs. (Elinor Gates) Tully have made up their minds to live in Southern California. They have placed their northern ranch on the market, have transferred their Arabian horses to Arcadia, and are going to delve in and enjoy Southern California sunshine for the rest of their natural existences.

Next Wednesday Mr. Tully will leave for New York to make arrangements concerning the metropolitan production of "The Bird of Pasadise," which is scheduled to take place about January 1. It is said that Oliver Morosco will be the producing manager.

After "The Bird" is safely out of the way - or on its way, as the metropolitan verdict may be, a trip to East India is in order.

Richard of the Atmosphere is going to follow exactly the plan of his Hawaiian drama—namely: He will write the play in America, and will then go to the land of its location and see how much of his material must be pulled out, altered and changed.

In the Luana play he had to change nothing, but he is not so sanguine of East India.

He expects to return to the United States, via London, in June, 1912.

The try-out production of the East Indian work will be in Los Angeles, with Miss St. Denis.

"I am not going to write anything foolish, anything vast, or anything full of vague, meandering religious or philosophic twaddle," says Tully. "My heroine is of modern India. I will make her a very real girl, imbued not only with a desire for education and a longing to see the world, but with a spirit of youthful good nature and humor—really, a very modern girl but with her intelligence backed by all the mysticism, yearning and religious and sceptical philosophy of Asia's thousands of years of early-world culture."

THE GERMAN COMPANY.

New Stock Organization Speaking Language of Fatherland to Play at the Auditorium.

Los Angeles is, perhaps, ahead of any American cities, save Chicago and New York, in having a theatrical organization formed with an idea of permanency to present, in an alien tongue, the drama of another land.

The German stock company of Los Angeles, under the direction of G. A. Barth, will make its bow next Wednesday evening at the Auditorium, presenting "Liebes-Manoever," by K. Kraatz and F. Von Schlicht, as its first offering.

It is not the aim of this association of zealous Teutons to merely present one play and then be heard of no more. On the contrary, they are confident that the support they will receive on their initial endeavor will enable them to hold the company together, and present a play by one of the popular German authors every month.

Miss Malvina Lampadius, well known locally as a writer, teacher and lecturer, has written a prologue for the German organization, which she will deliver before the curtain in the historic costume of Germania.

Mason.

"Seven Days," one of the laughing hits of a decade, will be the next attraction at the Mason Operahouse. The engagement is for one week, beginning Monday, November 13, with matinees Wednesday and Saturday.

The Week.

FORBES FARCE AT THE BURBANK.

STONE IN "THE MELTING POT" AT THE BELASCO.

Ida St. Leon to Return in "Polly of the Circus," at the Lyceum. Hartman Will Revive "Dolly Varden"—Orpheum, Empress, Pantages and Hyman.

James Forbes's dramatic glorification of the commercial "drummer," known to thousands of theater goers as "The Traveling Salesman," will have its first stock company presentation at the hands of the Burbank company this week, commencing with the matinee today.

Forbes is essentially a writer of comedy and his two other efforts—"The Chorus Lady" and "The Commuters"—are pretty substantial proof that as a writer of the sort of plays the public wants, he stands at the head of the procession. In "The Traveling Salesman" Forbes's fancy for bright, clever, up-to-the-moment dialogue takes full flight, with the result that although he has an interesting story for the foundation of his play, the breeziness, the buoyancy and the bright, crisp things we have been taught to expect from the suave and modest "drummer" are all amplified well nigh unto the nth power—all of which is equivalent to saying that Forbes's hero, Bob Blake, is a very manly sort of a fellow who finds lots of opportunities for fun-making, even if he does interrupt his proclivities for having a good time long enough to fall in love with a charming young woman who happens to be the telegraph operator and station agent in a small town where a crowd of traveling salesmen are "stalled" on a Christmas day. There is a parcel of land which this young girl owns and which is wanted by the villain of the piece—and no little amount of the play's interest centers around Blake's efforts—successful ones, of course—to defeat the machinations of the bad man who covets the real estate of the heroine.

Just to add good measure to the merriment of "The Traveling Salesman," Mr. Forbes has supplied a poker game scene in which the participants are several happy-go-lucky traveling men, with a colored hotel porter as an additional reason for hilarity.

Belasco.

The patrons of the Belasco Theater are promised a treat tomorrow, when Lewis S. Stone and the others of the Belasco Company offer Israel Zangwill's remarkable play, "The Melting Pot." Few dramas of recent product have been received with the same degree of enthusiasm that has been accorded to the Zangwill play, and certainly nothing that the Belasco company has offered in months contains so much that is really good and profitable as is to be found in "The Melting Pot." The play reaches beyond the mere personal emotions of group of local characters, engrossed in selfish joys and contests of wits, and lays hold on a great generic subject, while at the same time the characters plied by the author as the tools of his argument are so locally human, so thoroughly familiar, that they carry the broader story along by the momentum of their personal events, without any suggestion of being parts of a mere abstract treatise.

Zangwill's "Melting Pot" is this great America of ours—this country of tremendous possibilities where all unnatural differences are to be reduced and all human sympathies fused in a splendid new people. The author picks out examples of the extreme of racial differences and prejudices—the Russian Jew and the Russian Christian—and works out his theory in the intense story of David Quixano, a high-minded young Hebrew musician who makes his escape to New York after the massacre of his whole family in Russia, and Vera Revendal, the daughter of a Russian nobleman and army officer. Vera has been banished from her native land because of her open disapproval of the inhumanity of the Russian government, and, all but disowned by her own father, has come to New York and taken up settlement work in the East Side.

Here she learns to know and to love the gentle Jewish musician, whose absorbing ambition is to compose a symphony that shall express his gratitude to and belief in the regenerating powers of the American republic. When the Jew-hating Baron Revendal comes to New York to effect a reconciliation with his daughter, David recognizes him as the officer who directed the Czar's troops in the terrible massacre when he saw those dear to him killed before his eyes, and the hates of generations rise up in him to smother for a time his heart's love and his political ideal. There are numerous strong, gripping, tense scenes that are built with splendid balance—built as only such a thorough master of dramaturgy as Zangwill is capable of constructing them.

Besides Mr. Stone, who will have the important role of Daxid Quixano, the cast will include Bessie Barriscale, who will be seen as Vera.

Lyceum.

Just a true, clean, American play is perhaps the best description that can be given of Frederick Thompson's "Polly of the Circus," with Ida St. Leon, which will be the attraction at the Lyceum Theater for one week, beginning Sunday matinee, November 5. There are no high sounding dissertations on marriage and divorce, no acute analysis of emotions, but just compelling human study of a tender child, born and reared among the garish life of the circus tent, thrown by accident into the home of a young village clergyman, and awakening to love, to knowledge, to hope and to God. The vain endeavors of misguided women to separate the girl and young minister, the eager self-sacrifice of the little circus rider when she realizes that the clergyman's career may be imperiled by her love, and the final happy ending of the story after the stress, combine to make a play that has brought tears and laughter to thousands of theater-goers.

Grand.

"Dolly Varden," comic opera which made Lulu Glaser famous and which scored a triumph all over the United States when she appeared in it, will be the offering of Ferris Hartman and his company at the Grand for the week beginning Sunday matinee, November 5.

The book is by Stanislaus Stange and the music by Julian Edwards. The date of the action is supposed to be 1730. This allows of gorgeous costuming and makes of "Dolly Varden" a costume play in the strictest sense of the term. The gay colors worn in those days were exceptionally beautiful, and Mr. Hartman has had more costumes which will carry out the ideas of that time. Pretty girls and dashing officers will back up the principals in their efforts to amuse. The story of "Dolly Varden" relates the adventures of an unsophisticated young country girl, who goes to London to attend the wedding of her guardian's sister. "Dolly" soon loses her naive ways in the city and becomes a thorough-going society queen, her beauty and charm aiding her. Her guardian, Jack Fairfax, wishes to marry her on account of her wealth, but her hand is sought by Capt. Richard Belleville of the King's Guards. In the end love triumphs, and Dolly becomes the wife of the officer. A counter-plot runs through the piece. Lady Fairfax is sought by Lord Gayspark, an exquisite of the Beau Brummel school, but impecunious and more or less of a roue. The fair lady is willing to trade her money for Gayspark's title, but she is finally won by Capt. Horace Harcourt of His Majesty's ship "Scorpion." The poor naval officer also triumphs in the end, and the finale is happy for all. Miss Lucile Palmer will have her first big opportunity to show her vocal talent as "Dolly Varden." To Percy Bronson has been assigned the part of Capt. Jack Belleville. Lord Gayspark will be played by Ferris Hartman. Miss Myrtle Dingwall will be Lady Letitia Fairfax, a London belle. Miss Vilma Stech will appear as a lady of fashion. Others in the cast will be Robert Ryles as Capt. Harcourt, Joseph Fogarty as Jack Fairfax, Charles Dudley as Lieut. Marlowe and John Billings as Lieut. Cragsby of the English navy.

Orpheum.

Mirth and merriment will characterize the Orpheum bill opening on Monday matinee, in that almost without exception every act is made the basis for fun.

Although the stage spectacle, "A Romance of the Underworld," is retained, the incoming acts are all funny, and most of those holding over are sprinkled copiously with mirth.

The new bill is topped by Maud Hall Macy and her company in "The Magpie and the Jay." Miss Macy is not a stranger here, but it has been a long time since she has appeared. Her vehicle is a rural comedy of much hilarity, giving her a good opportunity in the type-creations for which she is noted. She stays only one week. Charles and Fannie Van have their status established at once by the mere announcement of their engagement for two successive Orpheum road shows. They bring again their laughter-making affair, "A Case of Emergency," in which the stage carpenter, the girl and the other man figure so merrily. Both the players their impersonations are truthful and lifelike. The Nichols sisters, "The Bluegrass Belles," are a pair of comely misses who have the courage to hide their pretty faces under a coat of burnt cork for the purpose of making fun. As typical shiftless "coons" on the southern levee, they give a melange of dance, song and pert chatter. The Four Floods, who include a woman in their number—an oddity in itself—are gymnastic comedians who do seemingly terrific feats with the nonchalance of the old veteran, and with an accompaniment of frolic that makes them seem easy. "A Romance of the Underworld" will remain another week, with its remarkable types, its thrilling story and its portrayals of character and existence in the slums. The Avon comedy four in their farce. World and Kingston with some new stuff and the international polo teams in their new game, indoor polo on wheels, will be the other holdover acts. The motion views of world news will show recent events and will include a new series of fashion pictures for women, and the orchestral concert will include a fine series of excerpts from "Carmen."

Empress.

The new bill which comes to the Empress Theater tomorrow afternoon is a decidedly attractive one, for it is made up of acts, all well known to the vaudeville loving public, which have attained success both East and abroad.

What has been generally considered as the most spectacular gymnastic sensation the Empress circuit has ever known, is the offering of the Four Baltus, and it is this act that will be found as the particular feature of the new bill. For a gymnastic offering of this character the Four Baltus are absolutely alone in the field today, and they are returning over the circuit after a phenomenal success at the New York Hippodrome, where they were engaged by the Messrs. Shubert as one of the features of the Hippodrome's big summer spectacle.

Second in importance comes John R. Gordon and his company of five, presenting the comedy "What Would You Do?" What "he" does proves a rapid succession of funny situations.

Another interesting feature will be found in transfigurator Robert Fulgora, who offers a series of characterizations of peculiar types and personages of fame. George DeAlma and Ethel Mae, two banjoists, who have a reputation of being real musicians, will furnish much of the musical portion, while Sheck and D'Arville are gymnasts, singers, dancers and character change artists who have an offering that should succeed in delighting any one.

Completing the bill will be Kramer and Ross, two nimble-footed boys who have deviated in more ways than one from the ordinary "song and dance" act. Together with this list of acts will be found the new comedy motion pictures.

Pantages.

Of all the pretty ladies who ever came trailing their chiffons and laces across local vaudeville stages, twinkling their diamonds in local footlights and trilling their tuneful lays to Los Angeles ears, Mrs. Bob Fitzsimmons is one of the welcomest. This very pretty and very talented young woman, who has a great deal more than the name of the freckled giant to commend her to public attention, will be back again at Pantages next week, playing a return engagement over the circuit where she was given so hearty a welcome a year ago. Mrs. Bob is as pretty as ever, and sings with the same delightful artistry.

Two other acts equally entitled to headline honors are included in the new show opening, Monday afternoon. First of these is Alice Raymond, who pears in a spectacular production under the title, "A Night in Egypt." The name of the act is taken from the scenic local enforced by their principal number, the "Aida" grand march. In this number the horns employed are identical with those used in the Covent Garden production of the opera. Other operatic numbers are introduced, and Miss Raymond is heard in solos on cornet, trumpet and French horn. The third special feature is "The Man From Minnesota," with Charles Lindholm in the title role. Lindholm has a rattling good farce, in which the comedy possibilities of the Swedish dialect are thoroughly exploited. The Hassmans, man and boy, are described by the vaudeville critics of the northern end of the Pantages circuit, as the first of their class to appear in the West. Their work is said to be entirely new and highly interesting. Jack Taylor, the monologist, is the sixth number on the list. Taylor is known as "The Tricky Talker," in allusion to his introduction of sleight of hand and illusions with his conversational comedy. The orchestral and pictorial features will be up to the Pantages standard.

Hyman.

A comedy bill that has seldom been equaled at his local houses will be presented by Arthur S. Hyman for the delectation of his patrons, starting Monday.

The first and foremost purveyors of merriment are the Bowen Brothers, comedians. They will talk a little, dance a little, sing a little and make themselves generally popular with the Hyman audiences.

"Blondy" Robinson is known wherever a vaudeville theater exists as a fine eccentric dancer. Endowed with a keen sense of humor he can keep an audience in laughter for fifteen minutes, with his grotesque facial contortions, acrobatic dancing and clever parodies.

Beatrice Warde is a singer who is very popular in the North. It is said that her voice is faultless and her selection of songs unimpeachable.

Max Fisher is called "The Entertaining Kid," and he will be heard in a repertoire of "raggy" songs and selections on the violin. He plays this instrument with talent.

The four first run pictures will be carefully selected with an eye to perfect photography, entertaining subject and artistic acting.

By a special arrangement the pictures at this house can be seen at no other place of amusement.

The Hyman Orchestra will play selections from the latest successes.

NEW LYCEUM BUREAU.

Egan Adds New Branch to His Industries in the Hamburger Majestic Building.

The Egan Lyceum Bureau has just been formed.

This newest departure of the Egan school in the Hamburger Majestic Theater building is designed primarily to exploit through the Southwest the work of Los Angeles musical and platform artists.

Frank C. Egan is president of the bureau and A. H. Fitz is general manager. Mr. Fitz, who was formerly a musical composer of considerable renown—renown, in fact, of international nature, as he wrote some of the most popular songs of the past decade—has also had a good deal of experience as a Lyceum manager.

The booking list is large, and a number of the foremost artists of Los Angeles have been entered upon the office catalogue. In fact, a great deal of pains has been taken to exclude any mediocre or unsatisfactory "tallent," so called.

Inquiries have been received from towns and cities, not only in California, but as far north as Oregon and as far east as Oklahoma, and some quite extensive tours are now being booked.

One of the leading features of the new bureau is a department in charge of an expert producer, who will devote his entire time to the planning, rehearsal and performance of plays, spectacles and allegories for clubs, lodges and various societies.

A composer of considerable reputation has also allied himself with the bureau, it will have its own costuming and scenic department and will also make up complete vaudeville programmes.

Luna Park.

Far more than the usual quota of free attractions will be offered today and continued all week at Luna Park, with the customary afternoon and evening performances. Chief among the new features, which will be introduced by General Manager Snow, is Tiny Broadwick, the youngest and smallest parachute jumper in the world, and the Dare-Devil Daltons, who perform a score or more perilous feats on a threadlike wire, eighty feet above the ground.

Diminutive Tiny Broadwick is only sixteen years old, but since she was a child of 9, she has been making balloon ascensions and jumping from the clouds. This pretty child is slightly over five feet in height and weighs less than ninety pounds. Tiny has been twice around the world in her brief career and made something more than 500 parachute jumps. In India, whence she comes direct to Los Angeles, the sobriquet of "Little Feather" was bestowed upon her by the Rajah of Bengal.

One of the sensational stunts performed by the Dare-Devil Daltons is a "Slide for Life" down their cobweb wire, which will stretch over Luna Park's lake for a distance of 450 feet. The "dare-devils" will be enveloped in flames during the journey.

The baby lions, which are growing apace and which evince an amount of pugnacity so incompatible with their infancy, as to keep their visitors constantly amused, will hold a reception, assisted by the numerous other "babies" contributed to the attraction of Luna Park by the wild creatures in the big menagerie—notably the buffalo calf and the newly-born seals.

The Mississippi Minstrel Mokes will appear in laughable sketches and musical numbers, besides reproducing many of the quaint and comical scenes incidental to the southern plantation and river levee.

Gregory's band will offer a programme of instrumental music and the free vaudeville bill with its innovations will continue from early in the afternoon until the park gates close.

LAMBARDI ONCE AGAIN.

VETERAN IMPRESARIO BRINGS BRAND-NEW COMPANY.

Guerrieri, Antola, Bosetti and a Few Others Only Ones Remaining of Old Organization—New People Will Make Their Debut During the Coming Week.

BY JULIAN JOHNSON.

Once more the Lambardi opera season is imminent; and from the apparent strength of the company, and the manifest interest of the public the season of two weeks at the Hamburger Majestic Theater should be a distinct success.

Mario Lambardi occupies a position unique in American opera. For many seasons he has been the only dependable opera purveyor the West Coast has had. In good times and in bad, sometimes in season and sometimes out of season, Lambardi has invariably turned up with his cluster of principals, his thrice-veteran chorus, and an orchestra almost invariably directed by a musician superior to all but the greatest chefs d'orchestre of the Metropolitan Operahouse.

"Old man" Lambardi has brought us some great singers, too, as every resident music lover knows.

Where have we ever heard the equal of that Titanic young bass, that veritable vocal Wotan, Olinto Lombardi?

The luscious-voiced Adaberto, recently triumphing in Russia, is another of his American introductions.

Attilio Salvaneschi, lyric tenor, is now triumphing in Italy, and is being introduced by the Edison Phonograph

You cannot drag a perfect [illegible] principals, a great operatic [illegible] and a resplendently youthful [illegible] choristers around the country [illegible] plus scenic productions a [illegible] more—even at $5 or $7, much [illegible] $2, which is about as large a [illegible] as Lambardi ever expects.

Persons patronising these [illegible] tions will do well to find an [illegible] great voice, an occasional [illegible] tion of unusual dramatic art. [illegible] rule, they have found [illegible] more than that. Some of the [illegible] productions, chorus, principals [illegible] chestra and all, have really been worth Metropolitan Operahouse [illegible] while others, as we very well [illegible] have not been as valuable as a [illegible] ville show. THE MUSICAL and dancing par ties Saturday afternoons an evenings at the Los Angeles Coun try Club, during the winter, are to b season society features. Each evening society matrons will chaperone the debutantes.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Avery McCarthy were host and hostess at a dinner party last evening at the club, covers having been laid for four. Ygnacio Mott had as guests Mr. and Mrs. Frank Griffith, Mr. and Mrs. William T. Bishop, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Barker and Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Dunn, Mr. and Mrs. Shirley C. Ward and Mr. and Mrs. Gregory Perkins, Jr., also presided at tables.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Sartori have also chosen the Country Club for their large ball, to be given for Miss Juliet. This will be a debutante party and November 15, has been selected as the date. No prettier setting could have been chosen than the new club with its beautiful large rooms.

Complimentary to three young brides, Mrs. Louis Tolhurst, formerly Miss Jane Rollins; Mrs. Samuel Knight Rindge, formerly Miss Agnes Hole; and Mrs. Forest Stanton, Mrs. C. Q. Stanton entertained at her new home, No. 448 Andrews boulevard, with a smart luncheon Thursday. In the center of the table a pond of water representing a lake was arranged with pink pond lilies. In the centers of three of the blossoms tiny cupids peeped out saucily. Surrounding the water was a bank of delicate maidenhair and wild ivy, extending from which were streamers attached to dainty cards bearing the names of Mrs. Hamilton Bowman Rollins, Miss Virginia Walsh, Miss Sally Bonner, Miss Ruth Larned, Miss Juliet Borden, Miss Cora Ives, Miss Annette Ives, Miss Mildred Burnett, Miss Katherine Stearns, Miss Virginia Nourse and Miss Mary Walker. During the afternoon much merriment was afforded by a real fortune teller.

Miss Florence Smith,

Whose engagement to Leroy Stanton was announced last week at a luncheon given by Mrs. Charles von Breton.

During the afternoon much merriment was afforded by a real fortune teller.

Miss Marcella Thompson of St. Louis, is the house guest of Miss Mary Belle Peyton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Valentine Peyton of Westlake avenue. Miss Thompson arrived Wednesday with Miss Peyton, who returned from an extended absence in the East. Both young women were students at Mt. Vernon Seminary in Washington, D. C., and their return will be the inspiration for a number of pretty affairs.

Bride-elects are the most popular young people this month and Mrs. Stephen Hubbell of No. 1000 Arapahoe, is another hostess to compliment one. Miss Anna Rhea Walker, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Hugh K. Walker of South Flower street, whose engagement to Ford Prior was a dainty morsel for society several weeks ago, is to be the honoree at this affair, which will be in the nature of a dinner party on the 9th inst.

Mrs. Ralph Williams of Manhattan place, presided at a box party at the Mason followed by a Cecil Brunner tea party at Hotel Alexandria yesterday. Miss Marguerite Drake, whose debutante party was a smart affair of recent date, was present as special guest. Others who shared the fun were Mrs. Louis Tolhurst, Miss Adelaide Gillis, Miss Sally Bonner, Miss Juliet Borden and Miss Pinita Drake.

The wedding last evening of Miss Sarah Goodrich and Judge John Anderson Street of Salt Lake City, was solemnized at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. W. C. Read of Thompson street. Mrs. Robert Davis Clarke of Peoria, Ill., who came for the nuptials, assisted as matron of honor, and was attired in apple green chiffon, embossed in velvet flowers. She carried an arm bouquet of white roses. Miss Goodrich was attired in white satin and chiffon, trimmed with Duchesse lace and her bouquet was a shower of orchids and lilies of the valley. Judge Street was attended by T. M. McCauley of San Francisco. Rev. Baker P. Lee read the service in the presence of 200 guests. Chrysanthemums were used entirely in decorating. Judge and Mrs. Street will pass their honeymoon in Japan.

Members of the society vaudeville held a meeting, Friday afternoon, at Hotel Alexandria. Although much work has been done and great things accomplished the different acts have not been completed and in nearly every case many more names are to be added.

The piano artists, in charge of Mrs. John G. Mott and Mrs. Nat Myrick, are complete, and the following young people will take part: Miss Juliet Borden, Miss Marguerite Drake, Miss Katherine Johnson, Miss Virginia Walsh, Miss Georgee Off, Miss May Rhodes, Paul Herron, Paul Bucklin, Mr. Lane, George Zimmer, Paul McGuire and Jack Bucklin.

Matrons who compose the executive board are: Mrs. Ernest A. Bryant, Mrs. Charles R. Drake, Mrs. J. C. Drake, Mrs. Mary Longstreet, Mrs. Hancock Banning, Mrs. Granville MacGowan, Mrs. Randolph Huntington Miner, Mrs. Joseph H. Sartori and Mrs. Michael J. Connell.

Several interesting engagements announced for the first time today include Miss Earlda Baker and W. J. Wallace. Miss Baker, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Baker of Pasadena avenue, was introduced to society recently, at a large tea party, given by her mother. Mr. Wallace is a popular young man of Alhambra.

Mrs. John W. Bowler of Beverly Hills announces the betrothal of her daughter, Miss Mabel, to Samuel Newbold Bonsall, son of the late Maj. William H. Bonsall. Miss Bowler was graduated from the Girl's Collegiate School and Stanford University. At Stanford she was a member of the Delta Gamma Fraternity, and the Phi Beta Kappa. During the past three years Mr. Bonsall has been acting as timber agent for the Pacific Electric Railway Company and Los Angeles Railway Company, but is now in Los Angeles. Owing to the recent death of the bride-elect's father the wedding will be marked by extreme simplicity. It will take place at Christ Church, November 22, at 4 p.m.

Mr. and Mrs. Melville T. Whitaker announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Belle Brigden, to Jaspar Mott.

On the afternoon and evening of November 16, Mrs. George Merrick Munger of No. 1922 Hobart boulevard will give a large tea for the bride-to-be.

Invitations Out.

Mrs. George Lafayette Crenshaw and her daughter, Mrs. Joseph Carlisle Wilson, have issued 300 invitations for a reception to be given the afternoon of Tuesday, November 21, at the home of the former, No. 1419 Wilton place.

Auction Bridge Luncheon.

One of the smart affairs of the current week was the auction bridge and bridge luncheon given by Mrs. Robert W. Kenny and Mrs. Riley J. Rouse, at the home of the former, No. 1975 West Washington street, which more than one hundred guests attended. All the appointments for the affair were carried out in yellow, the golden chrysanthemum gracing the small tables, and the favors were chrysanthemum cups filled with bon-bons. Place cards were yellow with dull gold letters, and during luncheon a stringed orchestra discoursed sweet music in the conservatory.

Assisting ladies were: Mrs. Lewis Clark Carlisle, Mrs. William Edward Sheppard, Mrs. Samuel Knight Rindge, Mrs. George W. Walker, Mrs. H. H. Malloy, Miss Lorita Rouse, Miss Marie Nichols, Miss Belle Hutchinson and Miss Ethelwyn Walker. Following luncheon tables were arranged for the games, and prizes of the later books were awarded the winners.

At Hotel Virginia.

Mr. and Mrs. Allington Hemming, nee Miss Viola Henck, have returned from their wedding trip, and have gone to Hotel Virginia, Long Beach, where they will stay one month before locating in this city.

Large Reception.

Mrs. Joseph Howard Miles and her daughter, Mrs. Marion Robert Gray, have issued two hundred or more invitations for a reception to be held on the 15th inst., at the home of the former, No. 43 Westmoreland place, Mr. and Mrs. Miles having recently moved into their beautiful new home.

San Gabriel Country Club.

The Halloween dance at the San Gabriel Country Club was attended by more than 150 members. The cosy little clubhouse was decorated with delightful effect, and somehow its low-beamed ceilings and great fireplace reminded one irresistibly of an old English manor house, with a big family party in full swing.

And there were all sorts of interesting people to be seen, the dinner hosts including Messrs. Wm. Hale, A. P. Chipron, J. C. Howard, W. W. Wartron, C. H. M. Tobey, Augworth, Dr. G. Whomes, C. O. Alkire, J. A. Parker, Ross Hitchcock, Whalley, W. G. Leuber, Louisher, Mrs. McNeale and Miss Pierce.

Each of the hosts had a well-filled table and merry guests who all appeared thoroughly to enter into the spirit of the occasion.

At the dance afterward the usual habitues of the club were present: Mr. and Mrs. Silas Burns and their daughters, Guthrie Clark, Miss Shirley Burns's fiancee; the Misses Clark, the newly-announced fiancee, Miss North Purcell; several other Purcells, Jim Parker, whom one must please remember to call James in future; Edwin Parker, lady-like as ever; Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Fowler, Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Gortner, Mr. and Mrs. Steinfiat, and the perpetual bride and bridegroom, young Mr. and Mrs. Phelps Reed.

Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Wallace, Mr. and Mrs. Seales, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Sanborn, J. A. Bell, the latter looking a good deal less serious than usual. The Los Angeles members were well represented, too, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Leiber, Dr. and Mrs. W. H. Whomes, Richard Duningan, Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Chipron, Mr. and Miss Hazlett and Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Hill all being among their number.

New York Guest.

Mrs. Edgar Kellar, wife of the New York portrait painter, left for San Diego yesterday morning, where she will join her husband, after passing a round of visits with various Los Angeles friends. Miss Pauline Curran, Judge Groff and his family, Mrs. W. Swift Daniell and Mrs. O. P. Clark were among the hosts of Mrs. Kellar, and in company with her various hostesses she attended all the gay functions for which last week was famous.

Mrs. Kellar is a very charming woman, a celebrity in New York society, and very well known throughout California, where she has indulged in any amount of mountain climbing. As an example of the modern athletic woman, young Mrs. Kellar is delightful; unaffected, slight and exceedingly good looking, she makes a host of friends wherever she goes. For mountain climbing she adopts the only sensible dress, khaki breeches and leggings, and it must be confessed she looks most bewitching in them.

Miss Emma Bumiller also entertained Mrs. Kellar, giving a theater party in her honor. After the "Dawn of a Tomorrow" at the Belasco they lunched at the Alexandria, the party including Mrs. Bailey and Miss Pauline Curran, among others.

Mascot Club.

A profusion of red carnations was used to ornament the beautiful home of Mrs. Van Horn, Thursday, on St. Andrews boulevard, when she entertained the members of the Mascot Club with a luncheon. Following same, tables were arranged for five hundred, and prizes were captured by Mrs. Markwell, Mrs. Kelly and Mrs. McArthur. Present were Mrs. S. M. Myall, Mrs. G. L. Butterfield, Mrs. W. F. Leck, Mrs. J. L. Markwell, Mrs. Frank C. McArthur, Mrs. Nellie Minnier, Mrs. H. H. McCord, Mrs. Van Zandt, Mrs. Collette, Mrs. Henry Parlee and Mrs. Franz Bischoff.

Bride-Elect Honored.

Miss Marguerite Seymour, who has chosen November 14 as the date of her wedding to Harrison McDonald, was the complimented guest at a large bridge party and surprise handkerchief shower, yesterday afternoon, given by Mrs. Earl Whitney at her home, No. 2703 Raymond avenue. The appointments were carried out in pink, the pink enchantress carnation combined with asparagus fern lend-

Magnificent Garments for Opera Wear

In a word, they are sumptuous! The richness of the voluminous wraps; the graceful, subtle draperies; the elegant furs used for trimmings.

The key-note of the evening wrap is the "reversible" effect. The combinations of color and materials are daring.

Broadcloth plays an important part, and in one particularly lovely wrap is combined with rich paon velvet.

Another magnificent coat is in rich rose brocaded velvet with cut figures standing out in relief. Coats and Capes from $35.00 to $175.00

Among the gowns are distinctively new imported models in crepe chiffon, gold brocaded meteors, velvet brocaded meteors, satin majestics, marquisettes, etc., artistically trimmed with rich laces—such as Point Venise, Point Lierre, Gold Fillet, Macromie and Rose Point.

Every shade now in Fashion's favor. Gowns from $45.00 to $350.00.

Noteworthy Novelties in Millinery

Shapes in which crown and brim are in one are having a vogue and are developed in many new materials. The smaller shapes are the Fez, the Bosnian Turban, the Pierrot; and in the larger shapes, the Coolie, the Mandarin and the Manon.

Draped Turbans in velour, velvets, tinselled and metallic tapestries and laces need very little trimming, but that of the highest quality.

The dainty Poke, with its draped or Corday crown, is lovely for young ladies, crown and brim being often made of contrasting materials.

Picture Hats were never so popular and with their wide brims slightly curving up, finished in lace, fur or feathers, they are especially becoming.

The Breton Sailor is very strongly featured, also modifications of this shape, with its rolling brim; in all kinds of materials, they are suitable for street or dress wear.

All these and many others we will be pleased to show you. (Second Floor, Rear.)

Gossard: The Last Word in Corsetry

The time has gone by when a woman who is particular about her appearance and her comfort, and who has proper regard for her health, can afford to take a chance on the garment which is the very foundation of her wearing apparel. Every woman realizes that she should have her dress fitted to her. We would emphasize the fact that it is far more necessary that the corset should be fitted even than the dress, since it may be reduced to a plain matter of comparison. A dress can certainly not injure a woman or make her suffer in health. A badly fitted and badly constructed corset can do both, and the fit of the corset is more important than the fit of the gown, because the appearance of the latter must essentially depend upon the figure's foundation—which is the corset.

Many a woman may believe that she is satisfactorily corseted, yet she may be wearing a corset that is poorly constructed and actually concealing the best lines of her figure. It requires a correct fitting of a GOSSARD to bring out such lines. Eight expert corsetieres here to see that you are properly fitted. And plenty of roomy, comfortable fitting rooms.

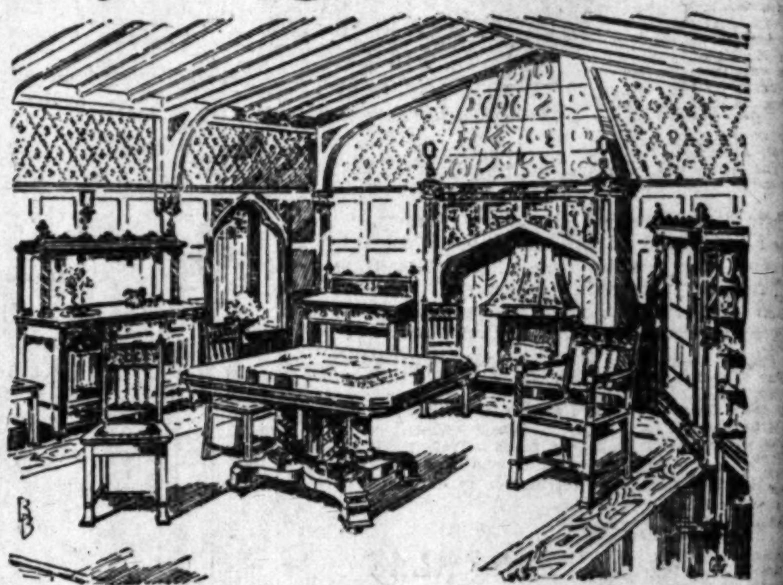
—A sale held in accordance with our established policy, to keep our stock constantly moving—in every department—to completely turn all goods at least within a year's time. This sale, however, is one entirely removed from the ordinary—completely overshadowing all special selling events of furniture of this high character which have ever been held in the West.

—This furniture is all of highest possible grade and character. A great number of the pieces were secured specially by our Art Department for their particular beauty, rare grace and superb quality. It is furniture, without exception, designed for the very finest type of homes. Those who appreciate beautiful furniture will find this an opportunity not only to gratify their desires, but to do so at a reduced cost which, in its liberal savings, has never before been duplicated in an event featuring such a magnificent collection from which to choose.

—There is an aristocracy—inherent qualities—about the furniture which is included in this most remarkable sale, that marks it as indisputably above the ordinary.

—It is the kind of furniture that is a never-failing source of pleasure to its owner, and a type you are proud to have your friends see, because it is so evidently superior, so beautiful in design and finish, and so well made. In fact, it has that charm of quality besides which there is nothing more to be desired in furniture. It represents a standard in the correctness of reproductions of the various Periods, including Colonial types, which are authoritative.



—The Gothic Period, 13th and 14th Centuries

—In the dining-room suite shown in the illustration above—an excellent example of this Gothic period—constructive beauty is at once conceded. The spacious, sturdy table, inviting chairs, very ornate crystal cabinet, and the unique and beautiful sideboard show a perfect understanding of ornament in relation to construction. This $845 ten-piece suite, a pure reproduction which perpetuates the Gothic period and tradition, sketched by our own artist from the pieces upon our floor, together with other pieces for both dining-room and living-room use, now subject to a reduction of 40 per cent.

—We wish to invite all who have a love for the beauty and adornment of the home, to visit our store to see this beautiful furniture. It cannot fail to interest. And the surprising values must impress all who come with the desirability of taking advantage.

—As an exhibit alone, this display is an educational exposition in its representation of authentic furniture styles worthy the attention of all who desire to be correctly informed.

—Flanders Period, 1558 to 1649

—This style originated in a province of that name, composed of a part of Holland, Belgium and northern France. It was a style particularly popular during the reign of Queen Elizabeth, and again during the time of James I and Charles I. The sturdy oak wood was used and finished in a beautiful old brown color.

—In this exceptional sale, we shall offer many ideal pieces in this beautiful Flanders style for the living-room, dining-room and for hall use, at

—Louis XV Period 1715 to 1774

—The furniture of this period has a distinct charm of its own. The spirit of the times of this pleasure-loving king is reflected in its daintiness and beauty. There is no suggestion of heaviness in its construction. Its sweeping curves —graceful and subdued—are brought out with faultless execution. Particularly characteristic and among the distinguishing points are the Rococo carving treatment and broken shell. The magnificent Circassian walnut eight-piece suite shown in the illustration above is one upon our floors which our artist has beautifully sketched from the pieces themselves, and is one which, together with other pieces in bed-room furniture of this period, will be offered during this exceptional sale at extraordinary reductions. Boyce of Camden, N. J., Mrs. Bennett of Cleveland, Mrs. Ward and Miss Ward.

Mrs. John N. Hunt, the retiring president of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Methodist Church, was the honoree at a large reception given Thursday afternoon, at the home of Mrs. Z. L. Parmelee, No. 919 Fair Oaks avenue. Pink and yellow were the prevailing colors used throughout the handsome home. Pink chrysanthemums were used in the drawing and living-rooms, potted ferns in the reception hall, and in the dining-room a profusion of the large, yellow chrysanthemums. A large brown basket, filled with the flowers, rested on a handsome embroidered luncheon cloth, and other features of its decoration were the cut glass dishes, filled with bon-bons and the cut glass candelabra. Mrs. Parmelee was assisted in receiving by the guest of honor, Mrs. John N. Hunt, Mrs. Rebecca Cairns, Mrs. Arthur Walker and Mrs. Albert J. Hoffman. About seventy-five enjoyed the afternoon.

This occurs again and again and again. We consider it "the best proof of value." We know that our merchandise is "right"—and our entire Organization—all the people who are making this Department such a success, are enthusiastic with the garments and the values we offer. We feel confident that YOU will be.

El Monte.

THE home of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Kauffman was the scene of delightful Halloween festivities Tuesday night when Mrs. Kaufman entertained in honor of her sister, Miss Emma Schobe. The house and grounds presented a picturesque appearance with decorations suggestive of the frolicksome saint. About fifty guests were present and a thoroughly enjoyable time had by all. A phonograph throughout the evening rendered Halloween selections and special piano numbers were furnished by Miss Schobe and Miss Lucile Rhodes. A unique feature of the entertainment was the turning of the garage into a refreshment room, where in a subdued and ghostly light the guests were regaled with sandwiches, chocolate, pumpkin pie, apples and nuts served from long tables down either side. The decorations were palms and Jack o'Lanterns.

A Halloween party was held at the home of Robert and Willie Piercy on Tuesday evening and a pleasant evening spent.

Papers have been read by Mesdames Irvin and Farrington at the two meetings since vacation. The last meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Farrington, Lexington road, at 2 o'clock Friday. The travel talk on "London" by Mr. Oliver Freer was much enjoyed. Current events were discussed by all present.

View, one mile east of El Monte. The united congregations will be known as the First Presbyterian Church of El Monte and meetings will be held at the church here. Rev. A. M. Prewit, formerly of Los Angeles, has been called to fill the pulpit and the first service will be held next Sabbath at 11 o'clock.

Duarte.

ALL Hallomas was celebrated in keeping with the spirit and history of the day by the Misses Alice and Nellie Wilson, at the home of their parents on Mountain View avenue, with an out-door party. An improvised tallyho, driven by Charles Wilson, was used to convey the guests "atween the dusk and dark o' Halloween" to the Wilson home, where shady nooks in the garden were lighted with many gay Japanese lanterns. A huge bonfire added cheer to the scene. The evening was passed with the happy diversions of the night when goblins and ghosts perform and the spell of mischief was evidenced. About the bonfire supper was served and the popping of corn and roasting of apples and merry songs completed the evening. The guests were: Mr. and Mrs Herbert Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Gordon Maddock, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Miller, and Misses Ruth Roy, Alice Thompson, Florence Blain, Bessie Fairley, Rose Maxwell, Retta Blain, Venola Marquis, Dollie Fee, Milly and Irene Roy, Lucile Virtual, Doris Patterson, Dora and Flossie Blain.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Carter entertained at their foothill home "Colwell" Tuesday evening with an informal 6 o'clock dinner, followed by an evening at bridge. The ladies of the Duarte Reading Circle, of whom there are thirty-five, were hospitably entertained Tuesday afternoon by Mrs. John Dickie. ENGLISH PARSON BELIEVES WOMEN CAN KEEP A SECRET

Rev. Dr. Cobb Has Founded the Honorable Fraternity of Ancient Masonry to Which He Admits Women—He Maintains that Term "Brotherhood" Is a Contradiction if It Does Not Include Sisters.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

Founder Feminine Masonry.
The Rev. Dr. Cobb of London, Eng., who believes that women can keep the great secret as well as men.

LONDON, Oct. 21.—There is nothing in Masonry, says Rev. Dr. Cobb, founder of the Honorable Fraternity of Ancient Masonry, that forbids the inclusion of women, and e adds that they are quite as capable of preserving the secrets of the ociety as the men. So women are admitted to his fraternity—and the rest of the Masonic world is laughing.

Dr. Cobb is the vicar of St. Ethelburg's, a tiny, picturesque, ancient church in the heart of the old city of London, and it was here I found him.

"I belonged to the Grand Lodge of England for many years," he said, "but I saw that few people took it eriously. Though, of course, they eep up a large number of charitable stitutions, they do little else but eat inners. Originally Masonry was a reious movement which insisted that piritual life was the most important. the process of time, the spiritual de of Masonry has been lost to ht, and it has become too materialic. Some years ago I was attracted a form of Masonry practiced by nie Besant, and becoming interest in it, I joined. But I found her autocratic altogether. All memrs were bound in obedience to her, d this seemed inconsistent with the rit of Masonry as I understood it. I left her society, and some time er I and a few friends—we were in all—decided to found a lodge our own. Now we number 150.

"The aim of our fraternity and the n of the church are identical. I take that aim is to deepen the spiritual . This being so, there is no argunt that can be brought forward to hold the exclusion of women. The m 'brotherhood' is a contradiction it does not include them. There a large number of unattached Masons who, like myself, take no part in ge activities owing to the failure English Masonry to satisfy their ritual needs. Our order should meet ir requirements, and in ad ables the Mason to bring his wife daughter into his Masonic life.

"What does the Grand Lodge o gland say to your innovation?"

"Of course, they have called us to k severely about it. But I maintain t I have done nothing to violate ancient traditions of Masonry. ording to the rules, I took an oath reveal the secrets of Masonry to e but Masons, and this I have kept. members are duly initiated and the proper ceremonies are reverly carried out. The objection raised by the Grand Lodge of England that no one is at liberty to establish a lodge without its consent is an old one. It is the plea that whatever is is right and that all attempt at reform is wrong. Such objections have been raised through all ages, dating from the time when the Pharisees objected to the preaching of Christ in Palestine.

"Furthermore, the feminist movement cannot be ignored. Looking back on the events of the last few years, it can be seen how disastrous has been the absence of a policy as regards this movement, and the result has been a course of events of which no nation can be proud. Such a position is not one that Masonary can afford to risk. To exclude women as a sex is to court early disaster, so let us be beforehand and welcome her gladly."

"And you find that women keep the great secret perfectly?"

"Perfectly," replied Dr. Cobb. "The secrets of Masonry cannot be told."

ENATOR'S WIFE IS PROUD OF MONTANA.

rs. Henry L. Myers, Who Has Gone to Washington to Reside Within the Past Few Weeks. Many Newcomers.

Y MARGARET B. DOWNING.

Washington is all that I hoped expected from hearsay and read- said Mrs. Myers recently; "still ay be excused if I draw a few parisons. There is that nightmare of the rican nation at present, the food tion. It is no nightmare at all us and we have always been to the best in the food line, and still accept nothing else. Here in national capital the public seems ed and subdued. They take what can get and make no comments. our way we are a wonderful e-producing country and love of fruit which caused so much ry in the world is as deeply rootpride in our State. We must apples, even as we eat bread, I tried various places for such es as we raise habitually in Mon- I got apples, but nearly all had ns, blights or some blemish, and I complained the dealer was utastounded. Evidently he had r before heard a complaint from customer because apples had ns. Now, there is no need for s to have worms, or blights. can be raised and put on the et absolutely perfect and that is we people in Montana insist We raise fruit in a scientific er. There are State inspectors spend their lives going among orchards, suggesting, directing, ring as need be. If a tree shows ign of deterioration it is treated if it proves a hopeless case it is own and removed from where it infect other trees. Every one s this programme, not only who have vast orchards where is raised for shipping, but for who have small family estates have fruit for their own comfort. pple raising is rather a new iny in Montana, but it has been n that the crop yields a golden ntage on the money invested, so n the portions of the State where flourish, we are making plans ds rivalling or perhaps surpasOregon, as the apple market of orld. But we do our work after ost approved methods and we nly the best of everything. The is that we feel unhappy away home so far as creature comare concerned. No other portion e globe seems to have such wonl food as to size, flavor and pern. One potato of the Bitter Root y brand is sufficient for four peor a meal, and each may have a portion large enough to suit the healthiest appetite. One baked potato will give my family all desired for breakfast, with a goodly portion remaining. Our pumpkins, beets and other vegetables are equally heroic in size and matchless in flavor. I pity the easterner on the food question and would really like some of those who think the whole universe centers about the Atlantic sea board to have some of our fine apples, our splendidly raised and well prepared beef, our berries and game.

"The size of everything East really seemed amusing to me as I passed through the Middle West on our journey here. Orchards of which the owners appeared quite proud would be a mere patch at home. Our apple orchards sometimes cover thousands of acres and their beauty in the blossoming time is past description. They are even more glorious when the fruit is ready and the odor of the ripe apple permeates the air for miles. We have a great corn and wheat belt in my vicinity, for Hamilton in Nevada county is one of the richest sections of the State from the agricultural standpoint. My home in Hamilton is very pleasant. Our town is made nearly all of eastern people, so that our social customs differ but little from here, though, of course, we are simpler and our lives are closer to nature. Every one has a garden for flowers and for vegetables and the small fruits, and we are engrossed in the cares of our home and in making them happy for husbands and children. We hear much of the progress which women are making in the world. [illegible] in Hamilton we keep to the traditional path and take but small interest in the big movements, so-called, of the sex. Recently we started a branch of the American Woman's League and already our club numbers about 105 members. The league is educational and broadening and it fills many otherwise idle hours with pleasant, profitable occupation. My departure for Washington ends my career as president of the club, but I am interested in its success, and shall always keep up my membership."

Senator and Mrs. Myers may be named among the younger people set in the grave and distinguished wing of Senatorial society. They were married less than fifteen years ago and have always lived in their present home in Hamilton. Senator Myers was born in Copper county, Missouri, and educated in Booneville, and his wife is a native of the flourishing little city of Springfield, but they never met until after Senator Myers had removed from Booneville and begun the practice of law in Hamilton, Mont. Mrs. Myers is a daughter of Thomas Doran, a native of Virginia, who went to Missouri soon after the war and located for many years in Springfield. His wife, born Mary Summers, is a native of Springfield, and frequently pays visits to her old home. Mr. and Mrs. Doran reside near the home of their daughter, Mrs. Myers, and they are among the vital forces which have helped to make the wilderness bloom. Their farms are among the finest and most productive of Nevada county, as they were in Missouri.

"Our first home in Montana was Butte," said Mrs. Myers, "and I can remember the great mining city when it was only a small and straggling outpost of civilization made possible by the rumors of the enormous wealth in the mines. We lived there for many years and I frequently return. Butte, as every one knows, is in the heart of the richest and most productive copper district in the world. It is indeed the greatest mining camp in the United States, or perhaps in any other country, and is one of the most interesting towns. But the smoke of the great smelters make it rather a dismal place in which to live, though with characteristic energy, the people have grasped that problem and solved it satisfactorily. Now there are tall chimneys in the mountains which imprison the smoke and carry it so high that it no longer poisons the air and destroys the vegetation. Time was when grass and trees were killed by the enveloping smoke and one may imagine its effects on the human system, when even sturdy vegetation of the mountains could not survive. In damp weather, conditions much resembled those in London and Britishers should feel quite at home in Butte fog.

"But Butte is only one of the many mining centers and to talk about the resources of Montana would be very verbose. Recently we made long strides in the production of gold and silver and precious stones. Just now the State produces more sapphires of first quality than any other commonwealth of the Union and is one of the coming sapphire markets of the world. It is only forty years since the mines of Montana began to be worked and in that time more than $1,000,000,000 in gold, silver, copper and other precious stuffs have been taken from the earth. So we believe that our State deserves its name, which in the soft Indian language means the Treasure State. We have coal mines yet undeveloped which would furnish fuel to the nation for many years had all other supplies been exhausted.

Senator and Mrs. Myers are members of the Presbyterian church and will attend the Church of the Covenant, which is adjacent to their home. In their own home they have always been members of that faith and were prominent in all the affairs of the congregation. Just now they are using their leisure visiting many Washington churches and renewing acquaintance with some people of Montana who have located in Washington. Seeing the sights also takes up some of their leisure and their daughter is proving to all the spirit of investigation which the westerner develops.

Sammy and High Living.

By HERBERT KAUFMAN.

Copyright, 1911: by Herbert Kaufman

The mint's making mighty small dollars nowadays. Money still talks but its voice has dropped to a whisper and the butcher and the baker and the landlord can hardly hear it speak.

It hasn't cost so much to live since war time, and if prices keep rising you'll soon be using your market basket for purse and you'll bring back your marketing in a pocket book.

When you were a boy, a dollar had a long ways to go, but it managed to make the journey without limping.

Heaven knows the family needed every penny you could earn, but you were well fed and warmly clad—

At which point in your memoirs we'll change the subject and consider Sammy, the errand boy.

In the midst of all your fiscal cogitations you hadn't thought of him.

He's such a very insignificant factor in your affairs that you forget that you're a mighty big consideration in his.

You're the man who pays him $5 per, and anent these very wages, his mother is spending as much time today pondering over the high cost of living as you are.

Automobile up-keep isn't disturbing her in anywise. She isn't wasting time considering whether she can afford to redecorate her house this season, but the winter's coal is a most decided problem and so is the winter cold.

She's reached the conclusion that Sammy's breakfast won't be as big as it was last year, nor his parcel of lunch as fat as formerly—there'll be more cotton than ever in his near-wool suit (thanks to Schedule K)—

But fill in the details yourself. You can probably think up a few additional points.

You're an expert—You were a poor boy, too, and because you were and because you have felt the fangs of poverty and still wear the scars in your memory, you can picture what it would mean for your boy to take Sammy's place and go Sammy's pace—to rise by the light of the North Star—to fight the chill winds of dawn and tramp the frosty pavements, bitten to the bone, blue and numb—to wear the yoke of routine under rules and regulations that try the souls of husky men—with a peppery bully snapping at his heels—

The idea isn't appealing, eh?

But don't dismiss it because it's unpleasant. Dwell on it until you thoroughly appreciate the contrast between Sammy's lot and the cozy surroundings of your sons, and then, in the name of God and Humanity and in their name, too, give Sammy a better deal.

When creation was planned, the Almighty allowed for a few carefree years in every life.

Sammy's been cheated. His mother can't afford to let him have them.

And from the brutal standpoint of dollars and cents you can afford to do better, but that isn't the sense in which to look at it.

You'll never grow rich grinding a child down to the last penny, and you won't grow poor by making less profit out of his time.

The most he can earn is a pitiable pittance. He isn't old enough for a bigger job. You can't raise his age, but you can raise his wage.

High living hasn't shrunk your many dollars one half as much as his measly few.

LAMBARDI ONCE AGAIN.

larger, has been strengthened by Italian additions imported especially for Los Angeles and San Francisco, and the autumn patronage has been sufficiently generous to enable this artistic, kindly old man, whose whole soul and substance have been poured out to music for many years, to maintain his operatic entertainment upon a plane more nearly consistent with his ideals.

The novelty of the first week will we "Thais," in Italian. To the best of my recollection this great French music drama has never been done in Los Angeles. It will feature Deanette Alvina, an American girl, in the title part, and Giuseppe Maggi, an extraordinarily intelligent actor-singer, as Athanael. "Thais" will be first presented Thursday evening.

The opening tonight will mark the debut of two principals with the Lambardi company, and, in fact, with the exception of Elvira Bosetti, a dramatic soprano of enormous voice, none of the principals has ever been heard in Los Angeles. The bill is "Trovatore," and Mezzo-soprano Casazza, who has just come from Italy, and Tenor Carlo Cartica, recently with the Boston opera, are making their bow under the Lambardi banner. The baritone is Viovacchini, said to be a very fine actor and singer.

Tomorrow, Monday evening, "Rigoletto" will be given, its scintillant music offering a good initial oportunity to one Lydia Levy, a diminutive soprano whom the north called "the little Tetrazzini," and proclaimed the pre-eminent star of the troupe. Giovacchini is the baritone, and another strange tenor, Sciaretti, will play the Duke.

Tuesday night "Madama Butterfly" will be given, and friends of the little baritone Antola will doubtless applaud his return as Sharpless. Miss Alvina will make her debut with the company as Cio-Cio-San, and still another tenor that we don't know—the South American Manuel Salazar—will play Pinkerton.

Wednesday, matinee and night, will be devoted to repetitions of "Trovatore" and "Rigoletto."

Thursday night, "Thais."

Friday night Bosetti will try her luck as Carmen, a role which has proved a "Jonah" of most soprani essaying it. But she stands as good a chance as any, at least.

Saturday afternoon "Thais" will be heard again, and in the evening little Lydia Levy will be heard in the prima donna's immortal favorite, "Lucia."

It is a great source of satisfaction to note that Chevalier Fulgenzio Guerrieri is again the captain of the orchestra. Guerrieri, a remarkably finished musician, a magnetic director, and altogether a leador of authority, would do credit to an orchestra of any size, anywhere, at any time.

Whether the singers 'turn out" or not, we are sure that Lambardi has one star—that's Guerrieri.

Symphony.

The Los Angeles Symphony Orchestra's opening concert of the season is announced for Friday afternoon, November 10, at 3:30 o'clock, at the Auditorium.

The orchestra is now in its fifteenth year of successful endeavor. Mr. Hamilton has increased the number of men and the programmes this year are to be divided between the classical composers and the modern writers. Little by little the instrumentation has been advanced, and it will be possible this year to play the intricate Tschaikowsky and Strauss compositions, the heavy Wagnerian numbers, as well as works of the Mendelssohn, Debussy, Grieg and other schools.

The home of the symphony is the Auditorium, where the acoustics are sufficient, the seating comfortable, and sufficiently large to make the prices reasonable.

The soloist for the opening concert will be Lilly Dorn, dramatic soprano from Vienna. One of the numbers, "Elsa's Dream," is taken from the opera in which Miss Dorn made her debut at the Court Theater in Prague, five years ago. Since that time she has been heard in grand opera, in Austria, and recital work throughout America.

Drill Recital.

Thomas Taylor Drill, Chicago baritone and conductor, who recently arrived from the East, to head the vocal department of the affiliated Egan School Conservatory, will give his premier local recital next Thursday evening, November 9, in Egan Rehearsal Hall, Hamburger Majestic Theater building. Mr. Drill will be assisted by Mrs. Mae Orcutt-Brooke and Miss Harriet Crane, accompanists, and Miss Theodosia Harris, solo pianist.

Mr. Drill's renown in the Lake City has been almost equally divided between his artistic performances as conductor of two of Chicago's biggest choral societies, and his solo renditions. His baritone is said to be rich, dramatic, of range and power, and splendidly used.

His programme covers a great range of musical subjects.

It will comprise the D'Hardelot "Dawn," Allitsen's "Love Is a Bubble," Sarjeant's "Blow, Blow Thou Winter Wind," a recitative and aria from Haydn's "Creation," Tosti's "No mi lo dite," and "Serenata," the "Preghiera" from Verdi's "Nabuco," Schubert's "My Resting Place," and as the finale Liza Lehmann's great song-cycle, "In Memorian," set to Tennyson's immortal verse.

Miss Harris will play the Chopin Polonaise in C Sharp Minor and the Grieg "March of the Dwarfs."

Organ Guild.

On Monday evening, at 7:45 o'clock, there will be given, in Christ Church, Twelfth and Flower streets, a free public service, under the auspices of the Los Angeles Chapter of the American Guild of Organists.

The following organists will participate in the programme: Charles H. Demorest of the Third Scientist; Perry Richards of St. John's Church; Alfred Butler of Pomona College, Claremont, Cal.; and Miss Minnie Jenkins of Pasadena, Cal.; William E. Strobridge of Christ Church, will accompany the choir.

This recital is the first of a series of three or four to be given this season.

Warden Writes.

In connection with the public service and recital to be given at Christ Church, under the auspices of the Guild of Organists, the following by Frank Wright Warden, in regard to the history and purposes of the guild may prove interesting:

"The American Guild of Organists was started in 1896, for the purpose of providing a standard of organ playing and musicianship, similar in character to that of the Royal College of Organists of London, Eng. The objects are: (1) To advance the cause of church music. (2) To raise the general efficiency of organists by a system of examinations and certificates, and by the fostering of solo organ playing. (3) To provide opportunities for intercourse among organists, for the discussion of questions of interest connected with their work, and for hearing model performances of sacred compositions.

" 'To advance the cause of worthy church music' involves, of necessity, the effort 'to raise the general efficiency of organists.' To this end the guild provides a system of examinations similar in character to those conducted by the Royal College of Organists. Such examinations have been held annually since 1896. Forty-nine fellowship and 149 associateship certificates have been awarded since the formation of the guild. Examinations of such scope surely carry out the objects of the guild in its efforts to raise the efficiency of organists. Those who have won certificates, or have taken similar examinations, have increased their efficiency by exactly the amount of preparation involved. In preparation for examination lies the only value of a degree.

"To foster solo organ playing, series of organ recitals have been given in all chapters. These recitals produce results on the organists, who spend time and thought in preparation of programmes, and on the audiences that have the opportunity to become familiar with the best music written for the organ.

"The local chapter was officially organized in June, 1910, though the organization was formed a couple of years before. There are now about thirty-five members. This organization has surely done a great deal to raise the standard of organ playing in Southern California in the short time of its existence. Its recitals last year were well attended."

Demorest Rises.

An organist who has well earned an enviable position in local musical circles since coming here about two years ago is Charles H. Demorest, who will be heard as one of the soloists at the public service and recital Monday evening.

Since last January Mr. Demorest has held the position of organist of the Third Scientist. He was at Westlake Methodist for about six months, preceding Sibley G. Pease, who has held that post for the last fourteen months. Mr. Demorest substituted a few months last year for Mrs. Harry Clifford Lott at the Second Scientist.

He was recently awarded the associate degree from the American Guild of Organists, having passed the examinations conducted here a few months ago. His former home was in Chicago where he held several important posts and gave quite a number of very artistic recitals.

De Chauvenet.

The De Chauvenet Conservatory of Music has recently made a very desirable addition to its faculty in Oscar Werner, who has recently returned from a two-years' trip of observation and study in the musical centers of Europe. Previous to his trip abroad Mr. Werner was known here as an instructor in the Occidental College. The violin and orchestral departments will be under the immediate control of this artist and instructor, and with the aid of his valuable direction the conservatory proposes to greatly enhance and perfect the work of the free orchestra which proved last year to be of such practical value to students of orchestral instruments. A feature of this educational work is that it is not confined to pupils of the school but offers these advantages to anyone desiring ensemble practice, which opportunity is given Saturday afternoons.

Of Local Interest.

Mrs. W. N. Tiffany, soprano, and Fred G. Ellis, baritone, will be heard in recital Tuesday evening, November 28, at the Women's Clubhouse. France Woodmansee will be the pianist.

Henry Efmond Earle has just returned from several months in New York City, where he visited his parents. On his way across the continent Mr. Earle visited Charles Wakefield Cadman, in Denver, and arranged to have one or two of his works composed for the Ellis Club given in the mountain city this season. Mr. Earle has resumed his studio in the Blanchard building.

Mrs. Grace Widney Mabee, soprano, gave a programme of oratorio songs in San Diego Friday evening of last week. She supplemented her recital with a talk on oratorio.

A complimentary recital by members of the faculty of the California College of Music and Arts will be given next Friday evening in the Starr Recital Hall, No. 628 South Hill street.

The Fillmore School will give a studio musicale next Friday. The programme will be given by Leona Mannon, piano, and Hilda Brown, violin, supplemented by a talk by Mr. Fillmore on "How to Understand Music."

The Davis Musical College, students and members of the faculty, gave an interesting programme last Thursday evening in Starr Hall.

ART AND ARTISTS.

BY ANTHONY ANDERSON.

Art.

"Let art be all in all," one time I said,
And straightway stirred the hypercritic gall.
I said not, "Let technique be all in all,"
But art—a wider meaning. Worthless, dead—
The shell without its pearl, the corpse of things—
Mere words are, till the spirit lend them wings.
The poet who wakes no sound within his lute
Falls short of art; 'twere better he were mute.
The workmanship wherewith the gold is wrought
Adds yet a richness to the richest gold;
Who lacks the art to shape his thought, I hold,
Were little poorer if he lacked the thought.
The statue's slumber were unbroken still
In the dull marble, had the hand no skill.
Disparage not the magic touch that gives
The formless thought the grace whereby it lives!

—[Thomas Bailey Aldrich.

Stark's Impressions.

In the eight pictures and ten sketches from the brush of Jack Gage Stark now on exhibition in the Steckel gallery, we have the last word of this brilliant young impressionist.

Educated in Paris, surrounded by the mad artistic iconoclasm of the twentieth century, the talented American still kept a level head, and though his art is "new" it is not a wild and fantastic revolt against all tradition, but a vigorous grafting of the impressionistic expression of Manet and Monet. Like them his search is for more light and atmospheric vibration. He is the most modern of moderns in technique, and belongs to the school which is known as the Luminarists.

Visiting the gallery this week, those of us who have been carefully nurtured on the old traditions would better keep our noses at least ten feet away from the canvases. These careful mosaics of red and blue and yellow these whirls and stripes and crosshatchings of the primary colors may offend all our preconceived notions of what art is.

However, if you will step back to a respectful distance—and that's as far as the gallery's dimensions will permit, and even a little more—you will find that Jack Gage Stark knew perfeltly well what he was about at every deliberate stroke of his flamboyant brush, and that a Luminarist is also and all the time a Synthetic Analyst. You will admit, I think, he found light and put it into many of his pictures.

There's light in "Pont de l'Estacade," in "The Mountain," in "Granada," and even in "Late Afternoon Sunlight," though it seems to me that in the last named our painter has forced his note and made his trees mere phantasms of the living. The forest may be peopled with leafy ghosts by night, but never by day—at least, never when the sun shines brightly.

"The Mountain" is a masterpiece of painting, subtle, exquisite. Here is light indeed, suffused yet all-pervading, here the air rests cold and still. The pyramidal peak is covered with snow, the shuddering gorges below are filled with it. Over all broods the loneliness of majesty. The picture is a remarkable study in values.

It is when our Luminarist courts the sun—as in "Late Afternoon Sunlight"—that he is least successful, for after all his palette is not a spectrum and paint is not light. So let us turn to "Granada," a moonlight of thrilling beauty and velvet splendor. Two lovers are seen upon a wide stone balcony. Below them lies the city athrob with lights. We feel the mystery of the vast night, a touch of that poetry which hints of danger and death.

"Noche de Luna, Cuautla," is like a bit of gorgeous tapestry, perfect in design and color. Note the precision with which the pigments have been laid into this lovely mosaic. And the effect is moonlight on a street and a church, lurking, sinister shadows along the walls.

We see the Pont de l'Estacade through a greenish yellow fog, in which the sun is a swirl of saffron. The bridge, a long, gaunt specter in the mystery of the drifting fog, is yet perfectly drawn, every beam and trestle in its proper place. Studying it in detail, you can no longer doubt the fine craftsmanship of this particular Luminarist. He has learned his trade well in the schools.

"Faywood Flats" is the New Mexico desert in epitome, the long and lonely foreground flat and solid, the wide sky piled high with clouds, the air as vital as wine. "Yuccas," the only pastel on the walls, is a study rather than a picture, but a good example of the Luminarist's boldest methods, and a successful one withal. It will repay investigation—and some of you, I fear, having investigated, will go away scoffing. You will be wrong, of course, as most scoffers at serious things are. And Stark's work is nothing if not serious.

The ten sketches, each of them only a few square inches in size, are delightful—"Cottonwoods," "The Plain in Spring," "Tree on a Hillside," "Clouds," "The Table Mountain," and so on, important artistic problems done in little in a big way.

The exhibition, which opened last Wednesday, does not close till November 15. Jack Gage Stark is now in New Mexico, where he lives and paints through most of the year. I wish you might find him in the Steckel gallery, for he is as interesting and intelligent as his pictures.

Water Colors by Theiss.

A group of water colors by J. W. Theiss is now on exhibition in the Cannon Art School, Copp Building, near the City Hall. Besides the water colors there a number of drawings in pencil and pen and ink. These drawings are exceedingly good, done with a lightness of touch that is admirable.

Theiss has been a city missionary in Los Angeles for the past twenty years, and has never been able to pursue painting in a strictly professional way. Nevertheless, many of these landscapes and shore studies in water colors are amateurish only in the sense that they were done "for love." The artist draws very well, his sense for composition is excellent. He almost never makes a mistake in choice of subject, though now and then he puts in a detail that might with discretion have been left out, as in the curving bark of the tree in "Millard Canyon," a picture otherwise delightful. The moving water is well studied, the gray rocks are well done, there is mystery in the glooming wood beyond the rocks.

Another fine picture is "Road in Millard Canyon," showing the sunlight falling in bright bars across the road, which is lined with tall trees. Still another is "Creek Bed of the San Gabriel," the color being less raw than in many of Theiss's pictures; indeed, the autumnal coloring of this picture is charming.

A good study of sky and sea and shore is "The Point at Clifton-by-the-Sea," the long arm of land being topographically exact, yet artistic, the sky gray with clouds stretching above a still grayer sea. Good also is "Near Clifton-by-the-Sea," painted on a sunnier day.

Rembrandts for America.

A reliable London correspondent declares that P. A. B. Widener has added to his remarkable collection of old and modern masters three exceptionally fine and typical examples of Rembrandt.

These pictures are said to be those which formerly hung in Canford Manor, England, and were owned by the Earl of Wimborne. They are all on canvas. One is entitled "Saint Peter at a Writing Desk," the second, "Portrait of a Man." The third canvas is a scriptural subject.

The price paid by Widener is not given by the correspondent, but it is said to be a record one.

California Art Club.

The second annual exhibition of the California Art Club will open at the Blanchard gallery on November 23, to continue till December 2. Works in sculpture, oil, water color and pastel will be received for exhibition, but not more than three works will be accepted from each active or associate member. No works heretofore shown in a general exhibition in the city of Los Angeles will be considered by the jury. One work will be accepted from each honorary member who cares to send, the same to be considered "hors concours," and so marked in the catalogue.

The following members of the club comprise the jury of selection: Hanson Puthuff, Mrs. Helma Heynsen Jahn, Jean Mannheim, A. C. Conner, C. P. Austin, F. A. Bischoff, Benjamin C. Brown, J. W. Smith, A. E. Kilpatrick. All communications in regard to the exhibition should be addressed to Charles Percy Austin, secretary, No. 2843 North Sichel street, Los Angeles.

ART NOTES.

An exhibition of the recent works of Jean Mannheim will open at the Blanchard gallery next Thursday, to continue for two weeks.

Fifteen or twenty oils and water colors by L. P. Latimer, the San Francisco painter, will be shown in the Kanst gallery, beginning a week from tomorrow.

The Ebell Club has decided to hold an exhibition of arts and crafts by Los Angeles artists on November 20, and for the two following days.

The Hoover Art Company of Hollywood opened yesterday with its first exhibition at No. 221 East Hollywood boulevard. A private view and a reception were given.

The exhibition of landscapes by Elmer Wachtel, which was held at the Daniell gallery, Copp Building, will be continued for one more week, and will be followed by water colors landscapes by Marion Kavanaugh Wachtel.

Among the 1200 pictures in the Kanst collection now being sold at greatly reduced rates are works by the following well-known painters: Henry Mosler, Guy C. Wiggins, Louis Aiken, Frank P. Sauerwen, J. K. Bacon, William Ritschel, Benjamin Brown, Granville Redmond, Irving E. Couse, H. E. Potthast, M. Braun, William Merritt Post, William Lees Judson, Edward Gay, E. A. Burbank, Frank Girardin, David Gue, Grace Hudson.

The Arroyo Art Colony, near Avenue 60, has lost its most important member. Warren E. Rollins, recently returned from a two months' sketching trip in Arizona, has just opened a studio at San Gabriel near the mission. The studio, built by Lucile Wall and occupied for some time by Helma Heynsen Jahn, the portrait painter, is a commodious and artistic bungalow, with plenty of room for housing the large and important Indian subjects Rollins is about to begin painting, the first of his historical series.

FAMOUS PAINTER COMING TO AMERICA

Madame Poznanzka.
By H. Caro Delraille.

PARIS. Oct. 20.—America is soon to have the opportunity of making the acquaintance of H. Caro Delraille, who at the age of 35 has attained the enviable position of being about the most fashionable painter of women in the French capital. He is hard at work now clearing up his commissions on this side of the water and expects to cross the Atlantic this winter and gather material among the leaders of American society for a number of fascinating pictures.

Something like a sensation has been created in the art world of Paris by three portraits which he has just finished, and which are reproduced herewith. Each one shows in its own way his mastery of drawing, color and the interpretation of feminine drapery. That of Madame Norbert, a famous Parisian beauty, is particularly attractive. She reclines on a divan supported by pillows of a soft green shade. The dress is gray and old gold and a touch of warmth is supplied by the roses at her waist.

Another extremely striking portrait is that of Madame Poznanzka, a beautiful Pole, who is as well known in London society as in the Faubourg St. Germain. This is a three-quarter length and a startling effect is produced by the plain black gown against the background of ivory white. Color is supplied in this picture by the scarf of green gauze tissue thrown over the left arm, but not concealing the warm flesh tones beneath.

The third of these remarkable portraits is of Madame Maire, a Parisian society woman. Here again, the dress is exceedingly simple, being plain white and the color and contrast are supplied by the green of the divan, the old gold of the tunic which partially covers the gown and the conventional black roses appliqued on its edge.

Caro Delraille's reputation was made literally in a day. In 1901, the Salon des Artistes Francais was as usual a jumble of pretty good and very bad, and a group of critics and judges was making the rounds, trying to separate the wheat from the chaff. Suddenly they all stopped before two canvases, "Le The" and "La Manicure."

"Whose work is this?" everyone asked. No one knew, and it was necessary to search the catalogue to get the information that the painter was named Caro Delraille, that he was born at Bayonne, twenty-five years before, and that his masters were Bonnat and Maignan. From that day he was famous.

This doesn't mean, however, that he had no difficulties to surmount, for his father, a staid business man, intended to make his son a banker. The boy rebelled, and perhaps he inherited his taste for art from his mother, a literary woman whose charming little stories full of beauty and local color often appeared in the "Petite Gironde." Finally, his father's objections were overcome and he was sent to an art school, but strange to say, he was rather a lazy student.

Then came his military duty. He was assigned to the Sixth Hussars at Bordeaux, and he at once became a devoted worker at his chosen profession. Corporals, lieutenants and captains were cajoled into posing for their portraits. When these failed him he used his own horse as a model After leaving the regiment Caro Delraille came direct to Paris where he entered the Ecole des Beaux Arts. The two paintings that attracted attention at the salon were his first completed works.

His success in Paris was followed by asojourn in London where he spent much time in study of the matchless collection of classical Greek statuary in the British Museum. This turned his attention to the nude and he has succeeded wonderfully in combining the classic line with the art of the modern French school. This combination is especially noticeable in the three pictures reproduced here.

IN THE LIMELIGHT.

Constructor Washington L. Capps of the navy has been granted leave of absence for four months, with permission to go abroad. It is expected he will spend his vacation in Europe. As he has also been granted permission to apply for a five months' extension of the leave just granted, if he cares to do so, it is expected that he will not return to the United States for about nine months.

It is understood that Maj.-Gen. Leonard Wood, chief of the staff, will recommend that Brig.-Gen. Clarence Edwards, chief of the Bureau of Insular Affairs be appointed a brigadier general in the line. It is Gen. Wood's desire to then have Gen. Edwards assigned to duty as assistant chief of staff. This position is now held by Maj.-Gen. William H. Carter, who will then probably be assigned to command of the central division, with headquarters at Chicago. Brig.-Gen. Ramsay D. Potts is now in command of that division.

J. J. Wheeler, the Crown Point, Ind., editor, is so absent-minded that he recently created a sensation in society circles by wearing a coat hanger to a banquet. When he put on his dress coat he failed to remove the hanger. Wheeler admits that a year ago he "forgetfully" screwed himself into two dress suits and appeared in society so stiff he thought his rheumatism was coming on again.

Maj.-Gen. Daniel Edgar Sickles, New York's "grand old man of the Civil War," was extremely elated last Friday when he passed his eighty-sixth milestone on a journey filled with big incidents. The veteran warrior enjoys good health, and, according to one of his octogenarian friends, "is still able and ready for a fight or a frolic."

H. Tuck Sherman, American Vice-Consul-General at Antwerp, has arrived in New York, after twenty-five years' absence from his native country. Mr. Sherman said that Antwerp was coming to the front as the greatest diamond market in the world. It will soon surpass Amsterdam, he thought.

OVER THE SEA.

The King of Italy is an impassioned automobilist. Moreover, he is, perhaps, the only one among great rulers that has passed a thorough examination in driving and repairing. He is a skilled mechanic and can repair his car readily, whenever trouble comes.

The Duchess of Albany is said to be responsible for the popularity of rowing among English women. She arises early each morning and drives in her trap from her home at Claremont-Esher to Hampton Court Bridge, where she rows one measured mile on the Thames.

At 60 Sir William E. Smith, who began life as a ropemaker's boy, takes over Sir Philip Watts's job as director of naval construction for the fleets of George V.

Prof. Alfred Binet, of the University of Paris, whose death was recently noted, was a distinguished psychologist and physiologist, whose name is encountered in many fields of research. In this country it is specially associated with the Binet-Simon system of standardizing the intelligence and development of school children.

JOHN BEDDOE'S GARDEN OF GOLD

A Story of the Welsh Hills.

BY JOSEPH KEATING.

THE pitiless noonday sun shone on the man as he limped along the dusty road. He was big and londe. But he looked ill. His huge ody seemed to be a burden to him. John Beddoe had sinned. He knew now.

He had seen his own reflection in ayside pools. The dust of the roads had tramped covered him. He ore a battered silk hat, and the emnants of a frock-coat. They were uite fashionable in style, and his ained collar and tie had an air of anished smartness. Originally they ould have suited a successful city an.

He saw Barbara's cottage ahead, ad his crime loomed larger with ery step he took toward her garen gate.

Was it not Barbara who had lent im the first 300 pounds? Why had e asked her to marry him? When e had said to her: "Barbara, will ou be my wife?" had he not really eant: "Barbara, will you let me ave 300 pounds?" He remembered at in order to raise the sum she ad had to sell one of the two cotges which her father had left to er. Beddoe knew that she would ave also sold the roof over her head prove her love for him.

And how had he rewarded her? h, he had behaved scandalously! urse the exciting gamble! Not a tter had he sent her. He had not ven repaid her the 300 pounds she ad lent him. He had ignored her istence till now, when he was omeless, without another friend in e world, and so shattered that he as afraid of himself.

He clutched at the little gate which e had struggled so far to reach, and aned over it, resting his huge frameork of a body upon it in sheer exaustion.

He wondered if Barbara would pity ch a forlorn object. He had not en the courage to open the gate beuse he saw her standing at her cotge door.

She was not looking in his direcon. Apparently her own affairs deanded all her attention. He was ware that while he had been livg luxuriously she was entirely deendent on the profits of this garden hers down among the South Welsh ills.

He heard her talking in a dissatfied tone to her two gardeners. heir awkwardness irritated her.

"Nothing will be ready in time," e declared, and she came from her oorstep into the garden itself, bareeaded, notwithstanding the sun, and ut her own hands to the piles of egetables, talking rapidly as she orked.

She was a small, dark woman, bout 30, with the faintest touch of ray in her black hair, and the shadw of a tragedy in her brown eyes nd pale, little face. A woman's agedy is always a man.

"At the rate you are going on," e warned her slow-going workmen, the market will be over before we ll a head of cabbage tomorrow orning."

The elder gardener, taking no heed all of her admonition, straightned his aching back.

"There's somebody at the gate, a'am," said he.

She wheeled around impatiently.

"Those wretched tramps!"

Beddoe felt ashamed. She waved er hand: "Be off!"

The man at the gate did not ove. Much annoyed, she strode own toward him determinedly, and e saw the smudged, unshaven face, nd straggling, fair mustache.

She gasped: "John Beddoe!"

He gazed at her dejectedly.

"I'm done for, Barbara," he anwered. "I have lost everything. I m ill. Give me food and shelter, arbara. I have no other refuge in e whole, wide world."

The faltering, imploring tone made still more difficult for her to reale the truth of this change in him. as this the great John Beddoe hose confidence in himself had been supreme? How she had admired is large ambitions and bold, domiering way of boasting of the wonerful things he was going to do in e city! They were to be married soon as he had made his first big oup. That was seven years ago. arbara was a pretty girl then. His eglect had made her a faded pinster.

She had imagined him as a mighty ersonage surrounded by wealth and ower in great London City. And he had realized that his silence eant that he had only played with er.

"And this is the return of John eddoe!" she said, tremblingly, pityngly.

"Don't turn me away, Barbara," e said, despondently. "I am almost ead with hunger and weakness."

If he had come to her in all the ffluence he had fought for she would ave hated him, and driven him way as a villain who had wasted the est part of her life. But, because he saw the terrified look in his face nd, perhaps, because of the divine nd unfathomable tenderness of a oman's nature which can feel sorow for the most faithless man, she ould not behold this change in him without wanting to cry. And Barara Pryce opened her gate to the romise-breaker who had forgotten er in his prosperity and remembered er only in his poverty.

In the cottage he collapsed. She ad wheeled a big arm-chair to him. e sank back in it, and burst into ears.

Barbara made him some tea, rought him her daintest cakes, and resh fruit from her own orchard. he told her servant to fetch her bowl of clean water, soap and ponge; and she washed his hands and face, combed his hair — which was really fine and glossy — and rushed away all the dust that covered him.

The man was weeping like a child under the touch of her kind hands.

He remembered how boastfully he had once talked.

"He would go to the city—the garden of gold! He would compete successfully with all the shrewd speculators. He would make a fabulous fortune out of her paltry three hundred!"

And he had made a brilliant fight at the beginning. He had almost realized his big scheme. In the first two years he had cleared seven thousand; in five years he had increased it to twenty. His flat in Cadogan Crescent had begun to assume the hallmark of luxury in its furniture and decorations. This was nothing to what Beddoe intended: a town house, a country mansion, many servants, motor cars, most probably a yacht. Riches and power were great things, and the city gamble fascinating. How could he be expected to spare time to visit or write a letter to Barbara?

Finally, in seven years—how quickly they had passed! — by wile and guile, he had piled up forty thousand pounds. Then he prepared the tremendous coup which would bring him an immense fortune at one stroke and enable him to gratify his enormous ambition. He had considered the new scheme carefully, had decided that it had the true jingle, staked all he possessed — that is, gambled all he had won — and the boom ended in a crash. In twenty-four hours John Beddoe lost all that he had made in seven years.

He could not recall exactly what happened after that, except that he thought the tape and telephone had tried to murder him, and he had fled from his office at the back of the stock exchange, shouting in terror: "I'm ruined! This is my end! I'm ruined!" Nor could he remember how long ago that was — a year, a month, a week — nor how he had found his way to Darran Village, which was surrounded by mountains, and fully 200 miles from his office. He must have lost all his nerve in the sudden smash and did not know what he was doing. Had he made his way instinctively, like a wounded animal, to the only place where he might expect refuge and protection from the horrors that were haunting him?

No other picture of himself could he bring before his eyes but that of a helpless, broken-down man who had been beaten in the fight for success. It was not physical pain he felt, but a terror of the past and a fear of the future. He told himself over and over again: "You are strapped, John Beddoe. You are finished. You tried and failed. Fail, fail, fail again! You are among the wrecks. Sink, and be forgotten." His fall had left his body whole, but had dashed his soul and courage into pulp. All his thoughts were tombstones.

He was not specially to be blamed. Have you ever lost your world and found all your days and nights turned into a dance of demons? The only pleasure he had was brooding over his tremendous failure.

And this was just the one luxury which Barbara Pryce would not let him enjoy.

"Isn't it dreadful," deplored Barbara to her servant, "to see a man so subdued? I'd rather hear him loudly boasting of future success, domineering me, as in the old days—swearing at the stupidity of the world in general."

But, no; he wanted to sit in the arm-chair, with a scowl on his big face, indifferent to the beauty of the sunshine and mountains around, which were offering him strength if he would only take it.

He was too limp to desire anything, but Barbara wanted evidently to rouse his fighting quality once more; and he had not the strength to oppose her. The backbone of his will power seemed to have been broken. He had to do what she told him; and to find himself obeying this bit of a woman was the greatest humiliation of all to John Beddoe.

She drove him into the garden every morning on one pretense or another; or, sometimes, she insisted on his accompanying her on an expedition to the village shop. Always he wanted to be left alone, and always she would do nothing of the kind. In the house she anticipated his wants. In fact, she created wants, and he was forced to take an interest in himself. Her excessive attention irritated him so much that one day he swore in a smothered growl.

"He is getting better," Barbara told her servant that night.

To escape her efforts to please him, he was goaded into activity. Instead of lolling listlessly in the chair after breakfast, he cleared out of the house and remained in the garden. He walked about or rested under the shady branches. A slight tint of ruddiness came back to his cheeks. But he was not conscious of any wish to improve his condition.

"We'll keep him in the garden," Barbara decided; "that will do him good."

And, before Beddoe knew what was happening, he was being drawn into giving opinions on market gardening. He resented being troubled by her questions, but it had the effect of directing his attention to the work of the two old men. He took his revenge by finding fault with Barbara's arrangement of the various items grown there. This batch of vegetables was worthless; that one was in the wrong place. He was displeased with everything. The gardeners straightened their backs and opened their eyes. Their mistress made them understand that they were to do what Beddoe told them to do. He was hopelessly ignorant about gardens. But she was delighted to see him, as of old, daring to know all there was to be known on any subject that he took up.

He startled Barbara the morning she was going to market with her garden produce by asking what prices she was able to get. Her replies made him scoff.

"You are giving the things away," he declared. "I'll go with you. I'll get much higher prices than you."

Barbara hardly knew how to take his suggestion. But Beddoe was in earnest.

At the market—amidst all the piles of cabbages, carrots, turnips, potatoes, plums, apples, pears, in the center of horses, cows and sheep, the babble of farmers and wives, and the high-pitched voices haggling about prices, the squealing of pigs and all the noises of market day in a country town—John Beddoe stood beside the little, dark woman controlling the sales. Miss Pryce saw very clearly that, although he knew little about the article he was selling, he had an extraordinary gift for getting more than a purchaser had originally intended to give for it. That was the business instinct at work. It seemed to operate unconsciously in him. At the close of the market Barbara was astonished to find that her profits were one-quarter higher than they had ever been before, and Beddoe was walking homeward beside her, erect, buoyant, looking down at her supremely, overbearingly vain.

For the rest of the time he was perpetually in the garden. He could hardly spare an hour for meals. His huge body was recklessly active. He volunteered for the coming market. He had tasted blood, and his business instinct was on the trail. Again and again he increased the profits. Every week he became more blusteringly self-confident.

"You stay at home," he said to Barbara. "I'll do better at the market without you."

He was right. He had learned the values, and was as eager in selling carrots in the market as he had been in selling gold mines in the city. He came back with nearly double her former takings. That was his special genius: getting the highest prices in competition with sellers of smaller build. He boasted loudly about his success.

But Barbara began to fear that she had given him back his strength too quickly.

The little, dark woman had not entirely forgotten the long years of neglect and slight she had endured, neither did she ignore the possibility that, should her efforts succeed, John Beddoe might ride away out of her life as he had done before.

He, after a busy day planning tremendous enlargements of the garden, had washed and put himself into clean clothes. His fair skin glowed with health; his eyes were clear and smiling; his great body was erect and firm. The cottage was scarcely more than a comfortable nest for him. Barbara gazed at him in wistful admiration. There was anxiety in her voice as she said, indicating the neatly-laid table:

"Your tea is quite ready."

"Aha!" he exclaimed, striding across the floor, apparently with an edged appetite.

Barbara stood ready to place his chair for him at the table. This attention no longer displeased him. He liked it.

Quite unexpectedly the words came from her, as if without her will:

"I suppose, John," she said, "now that we have made you strong again you will soon be chafing to leave us?"

He had been on the point of sitting. He turned, and looked down at her with a rather startled expression.

"Leave!" he exclaimed. "I don't know."

His voice was slightly uncertain. Barbara's steady brown eyes, so used to watching every change of his features during the cure, noticed even a hint of fear in his face.

"Do you wish me to go?" he asked.

"Oh," she answered, smiling, with a little gesture, "I don't think my wishes have anything to do with the matter! Now that you are strong again, I mean."

"Why should you think that?"

"Well," she explained, "that is your nature, John."

"What is my nature?" he demanded. "Barbara, you are accusing me of something, though you don't put it into words."

"John," she made answer slowly, "I did not intend saying anything, but I suppose I have been thinking too much, and it comes out in the mere tone. I have seen you becoming more like your old self every day, and I was bound to conclude that sooner or later you would be off to the fight again, forgetting everything and every one that helped you. I have done all that you needed. Now that your wings are strong you can fly alone."

Beddoe's hands were grasping the top of the chair as he faced her.

"I know what you think," he said, a flush of shame upon him. "I know that in the years gone I treated you badly. I admit that I have been selfish. To have forgotten you who had given me the first start, and—But suppose I say that I could never again forget?"

She laughed, a little doubtingly.

"I am in earnest," he declared, wincing a little under her laughter. "I have very little right, I know; but couldn't you forgive my thoughtlessness? Barbara, I don't want to go away; I feel all sorts of terrors at the thought of the cut-throat city! Perhaps I was not made for the big world, after all. Heavens, if you only knew the horror I have gone through! I don't want any more of it. Why should I go? I am happy here. Barbara, you used to be fond of me——"

"Ah," she interrupted rather sadly, "but were you ever really fond of me? You forgot all about me in the excitement of the big world."

Beddoe flung the chair from between them, and audaciously took her in his arms in his old masterful way.

"Well," he said, boldly, "that was my first mistake. Since then I have learned values. This is my real garden of gold! I know now that your love is worth more to me than I can figure out. I want you—and I don't want anything else. Never mind what has happened."

"It is easy to talk of never minding," she protested tremblingly. "You are a man, and look as young and strong as if seven years were only twenty hours. But how can I take the wrinkles out of my face?"

"There are none there," he declared. "You look as charming as ever."

Undoubtedly this was the most brilliant thing John Beddoe could have said. It put a halo around all his huge faults. The little woman gasped, and her smile and look radiated. She saw that he meant what he said.

"Besides," he went on, "can't you see that I belong to you and that you have no right to try and get rid of me? I may be a blustering, blind fool, but I can see that you were my first help and my last. I had to come to you in the beginning, and I should have been a dead man if I had not come to you in the end. I am strong now. But who gave me my strength? Wasn't it a little woman?"

"That is true," she said very thoughtfully. "It was I who pieced you together when the fall broke you."

"The truth is, Babs," he declared impulsively, and he put his great arms entirely around her, "I don't feel like facing the world again without a little woman to back me up. Let me stay. Barbara, you don't hate me?"

She smiled very pleasantly.

"I did!" she declared.

The emphasis on the past prompted him to draw her closer to him.

"When did you forgive me?" he asked eagerly.

"When you came to me because you had no other refuge in the world," she replied, rather pathetically.

And her answer made him kiss her with passionate tenderness.

"Let's be married soon!" he urged. "Babs, I'm going to make a big success of your garden."

EDUCATORS, CHURCHMEN.

Prof. James M. Williams of Hobart College, Geneva, N. Y., has been regularly designated as a policeman, and is on night duty about the college grounds. Prof. Williams, who teaches economics at the college, volunteered to act as policeman and patrol the college grounds, provided he was designated as a patrolman. The result was that he was designated as a deputy, and equipped with badge, helmet and stick. He is now doing duty nightly in the vicinity of the college.

A church for women only is proposed in Philadelphia. The Rev. Russell H. Conwell, pastor of the Baptist Temple, and president of Temple University, is at the head of the movement. The church is intended especially for women students, who have no church conections in Philadelphia. It is to be kept open day and night as a social center.

Miss Anna J. McKeag has been elected president of Wilson College, Chambersburg, Pa. She was formerly professor of education in Wellesley College and later dean of Wilson. She holds a doctor's degree from the University of Pennsylvania.

Announcement has been made at Purdue University, Indiana, that George Ade, author and playwright, would build a chapter-house for the Purdue Chapter of the Sigma Chi Fraternity, of which he is a member. Mr. Ade's offer was the cause of much rejoicing.

Eyes That Do Not See.

[The Christian Herald:] Turner, the celebrated English landscape painter, whom Ruskin eulogized, was one of the greatest masters of color and one of the profoundest students of nature that ever lived. An incident is told of one of the early exhibitions of his paintings at which the artist himself was present and overheard the comments of a casual visitor. After gazing a while at the beautiful sea views and the gorgeous sunsets the critic remarked: "These are all fanciful, the product of the artist's imagination. I never could see anything in the sea or the sunset like that." Turner immediately looked at the man keenly, and said, "No, you could not see anything like that, but don't you wish you could?"

If these two men were both to look at the same time into a shallow pool by the roadside, one would see the mud and refuse lying at the bottom, the other would see the image of the heavens above. The difference is not in the things themselves, but in the vision of the men who behold them.

FRESH LITERATURE—BOOK REVIEWS.

By Willard Huntington Wright.

DAS EINFACHE LEBEN.

A LIVING WITHOUT A BOSS. Anonymous. Harper & Bros., New York. (Price $1.)

IT IS NOTHING new to receive a book advocating back to Nature. The cities are full of them — pamphlets dealing with the glories of bucolic existence, chap-books entreating the weary city dweller to fare forth into the bosky glades; duodecimos insistently wheedling us to emigrate to the green fields; octavos patiently setting forth the advantages of the country. Of all sizes and shapes they have been. On the whole, these books have been foolish or sentimental. Not that one should not go forth into the country occasionally (or even permanently for that matter,) but that they were written by people whose knowledge of the problems in the country was largely gleaned from beholding the passing fields through a plate-glass window on a suburban railroad.

Therefore, it is good that this little book, "A Living Without a Boss," should make its unpretentious appearance at just such a time, for it treats in a sensible and uneager manner the question of the city versus the country. The hero of this book and his dutiful wife don't amass a large fortune by raising fryers; neither do they grow mushrooms and become financiers over night. The book (written anonymously) sounds like a veritable account of some earnest fellow's experience in making a go of it in the country after the city had squeezed him of all his vitality. The man who thus emigrates to an $8-a-month house forty miles from the city, who puts in his own garden, becomes an agent for fence materials, is local correspondent for a city newspaper and achieves modest success in real estate, is not the callow youth who figures prominently in so many tales of this kind, but a city man with a strong mind, over 40 years old, who turns his experiences into new channels.

A curious and interesting book.

EXCELSIOR!

HIS RISE TO POWER. By Henry Russell Miller. Bobbs-Merrill Company, Indianapolis. (Price $1.25.)

"HIS RISE TO POWER," by Henry Russell Miller, author of that very moral novel, "The Man Higher Up," is another story of politics and virtue and love.

The hero of this present story, John Dunmeade, is one of these perpendicularly upright gentlemen (age 30,) who sets out manfully to reform all the corruptions in politics. John never has to fight with the devil to stand erect. He has no bad habits to overcome. He is born upright and noble and through some mysterious power he has been predestined so to remain. This noble book tells how John, the political reformer, through a lofty desire to serve the people, accepts the nomination for the District Attorney and starts to revolutionize things.

Of course, it turns out that one of the blackest and most devilish of all the political bosses, against whom he is to wage his righteous warfare, is none other than Senator Merchell, an old family friend. But John's troubles don't end there. His own father becomes wrathful at the young man on account of his reformative ways. This would seem almost too much for John to bear. But pause! It is not all. His duty compels him to start a searching investigation of some banking conditions which involves the father of the very woman he loves.

Well, well, well! Poor John!

PLEASING STORY.

TWO DEMANDS. By F. Syndor Cartmell. Roycroft Press, 12 mo., 132 pp., twelve-point type, twelve illustrations in duotone, chapter initials in two colors, toned paper, antique paper cover. (Price $1 net, postpaid.)

THIS is a pleasing story, which begins in old Virginia and ends happily, as all good stories should. It deals with pleasant people of the present day, and their adventures and love affairs are discussed with more than ordinary ability. There are many clever things within its pages, for instance:

"An ideal is the ecstatic soul of things hoped for; invisible yet real, unknown yet adored—always elusive. It is just beyond the sunset; or at home on the most vivid star that shines in the mystic entrancing blue of earth's heaven."

GLORIFIED GARBAGE.

THE careful housewife, who heretofore has mothered a fond illusion that in order to economize she will keep a dozen hens on the rear of the lot and feed them exclusively on the scraps left over from the family table, may need turn no more to Biddy as a means of disposing of her left-overs.

There now comes to us from the press a cook-book containing 400 recipes, the ingredients of which are those odds and ends which are left over from the preceding meal. Every housewife, of course, is familiar with more or less of these economic devices for cutting down grocers' and butchers' bills—such as slicing the morning mush and frying it in butter; boiling yesterday's leg of lamb and making soup; chopping up the tail ends of the dinner's beefsteak with the cold potatoes left over from luncheon and transforming them into hash for breakfast; saving the crusts and the stale pieces of bread, adding eggs and the like for the purpose of making that deadly dish known as bread pudding. But such devices are merely the first groping steps of the amateur.

Helen Carroll Clarke, former instructor of cookery in the Pratt Institute in Brooklyn, and Phoebe Deyo Rulon, former instructor in invalid cookery and diadetics in Bellevue Hospital, New York City, have here set forth many wondrous and remarkable concoctions, arrangements, amalgamations and collaborations for left-over meals, left-over poultry, left-over vegetables, left-over bread, left-over cake, even left-over bones. Each chapter of this book has a few plain introductory words on the best way to care for that particular food with which the chapter deals.

Let it be stated here that there is no intention on the part of these two lady experts of tit-bits to write a cook book which will in any way substitute the regular kitchen concordance. "The Cook Book of Left Overs" has other aims. In the average family (that does not support a dozen hens on the rear end of the lot) there is, of course, necessarily left-over food which one not versed in all of the intricacies of cookery throws away. This book teaches such families how to transform their garbage into savory dishes.

To my astonishment, I find that many of the dishes named in this book of left-overs are those mysterious French combinations that we buy at restaurants and pay large prices for. In fact, I learn that many of the dishes over which French chefs have made international reputations are nothing more than esthetically arranged and delicately flavored left-overs.

BOOK NEWS.

Owing to the heavy advance orders for Lillian Whiting's invaluable addition to biographical literature, "The Brownings: Their Life and Art," a second edition was necessitated before publication. Hodder & Stoughton, the London publishers, issued the English edition of "The Brownings."

Houghton Mifflin Company report that the demand for Henry S. Harrison's novel, "Queed," continues unabated, and the editions have now reached a total of 83,000 copies.

"The Power of Tolerance," by George Harvey, is announced for immediate publication by the Harpers. The book contains some two-score speeches and addresses delivered by the author on various occasions during the past few years. They cover a wide diversity of subjects. Among the titles are: "The Conversation of Common Sense," "A Government of Laws," "The South and the Nation" and "The Problem, the Solution and the Man."

A compilation of the booksellers' reports in seven numbers of the Bookman, representing sales of novels from January 1, 1911, to September 1, 1911, shows the following as the six best sellers for the entire year thus far:

(1) "The Broad Highway," 1217 points.
(2) "The Prodigal Judge," 1209 points.
(3) "Molly Make-Believe," 823 points.
(4) "The Long Roll," 722 points.
(5) "The Rosary," 681 points.
(6) "Queed," 652 points.

Richard Barry, whose magazine articles on woman suffrage have attracted such widespread attention, has been spending the summer at Briarcliff-on-the-Hudson and in Virginia, where he has completed a new novel, "The Bauble," which his publishers hint involves the suffrage problem. It will be interesting to see the result in fiction of his association with the woman suffrage movement. Barry's articles have been translated into German by Prof. Dr. Franz Sigismund of Weimar and are being widely read in Germany, where the question is much agitated.

Houghton, Mifflin Company is to publish next month a book entitled "The Musical Amateur," by Robert Haven Schauffler, which should make a strong appeal to the large public of intelligent music-lovers. The author considers that the listener is a most important factor in musical creation—not as important, perhaps, as the composer or the performer, but still indispensable. Mr. Schauffler, who is a well-known performer on the cello, has been spending the summer at Seal Harbor, Mt. Desert.

The scene of Mrs. H. A. Mitchell Keay's new novel, "The Marriage Portion," is said to be Cambridge, and many of the characters in the story are said to find their prototypes in familiar figures in the university and its surroundings.

Romain Rolland's Jean-Christophe, having made a success with the discriminating in both the new world and the old, is to be followed by Jean-Christophe in Paris, consisting of three books, respectively entitled, "The Market Places," "Antoinette," and "The House." The hero's attempt to conquer Paris may remind many of Wagner's hard experiences there. Perhaps the author may be speaking feelingly from some early experiences of his own, as a writer in the London Daily Mail says this volume possesses "pages of superb and bitter irony and poetic fire." This same writer thinks that many will think the love story in "Antoinette" makes it the best volume of the series.

Miss Mary Johnston, the author of "The Long Roll," is having the inevitable experience of one who puts a great historical figure into action during the lifetime of men who knew him. Miss Johnston's Stonewall Jackson is already condemned as a "caricature" by a southern clergyman who served on Jackson's staff, and she is constrained to say in reply only that the clergyman's "personal idea" of the general must be compared with her own "composite historical picture" of him. Which is the truer? Nearly fifty years have passed since Jackson's death, and are personal memories of him to be esteemed as more faithful to life than the composite picture constructed by one who never saw him, from an immense amount of historical and autobiographical material?

An example of the conscientiousness rarely met with in this day of grinding books out in large numbers may be found in the forthcoming work from the pen of Bishop Charles H. Brent of the Philippines. The title, "The Sixth Sense," may be familiar to our readers, for the publisher, B. W. Huebsch, has announced it and postponed it several times in the last few years. The delay was due to the demands on the author's time, for he is a busy man. Besides being occupied with his duties as the head of the Episcopal Church in our far off possessions, he served as president of the Opium Congress last year, and he is called upon to take part in the many activities for which a man of his ability and personality is equipped. At about the time when his manuscript for "The Sixth Sense" was ready for the printer, Bishop Brent read for the first time Von Hugel's book, "The Mystical Element of Religion." This bore so strongly on the subject of his own book that Bishop Brent determined to work over his manuscript in the light of the research of Von Hugel, to whom he gives due credit. In consequence, and owing to the difficulty of communication between New York and Manila, the publication was deferred for an entire season. The book will at last appear early in November.

LITERARY GOSSIP.

O. Henry, the last of whose published writings was, curiously enough, a poem, but who did not esteem it sufficiently to have it printed during his lifetime, once addressed the following characteristic letter to William Griffith, whose "City Views and Visions" is announced for October publication by Moffat, Yard & Company:

"Dear Colonel: I hear, but just can't make myself believe without assistance, that you've written a book. Why don't you leave that sort of drudgery to us fellows who have to work for a living, instead of editing magazines? We need the money. Besides, whoever heard of an editor writing anything. The fellow who told on you is a liar, in my opinion—otherwise send me along the book to read myself to sleep over tonight."

The next day came a second letter from the humorist:

"Book received. Manuscript very legible and full of fine poetry, but hard to read. Everytime I got interested in a line, it would break off with a soft snap—just like that."

A cable dispatch from London announces that Frederic Harrison has celebrated his eightieth birthday. His physical and mental vigor are evidenced by the long walks and the fifteen hundreds words of his memoirs he gets through daily. Like Swinburne, with his "Love's Cross-Currents," Mr. Harrison once interrupted the current of his customary writings—legal and historical—with one book of fiction, "Theophano"—a history of the crusade in the tenth century.

Mr. Claude Grahame-White, whose book, "The Story of the Aeroplane," has recently been published, tells an interesting episode of his first attempt to win the $50,000 Daily Mail prize for a flight from London to Manchester. After his first day's flight, which ended at Litchfield, he spent the night resting in a hotel. The following day happened to be Sunday and turned out to be a fine day but very windy so that it was impossible to start. Mr. Grahame-White, therefore, went to church with his mother and sister, and for the first time, probably, in history, prayers were offered for "those who travel by land, sea and in the air."

Hugh Pendexter, who has just published the first of a series of boys' stories of the Maine lumber camps, is spending the fall in Rangly Lake country, finishing, on the spot, a new volume in the series, which will be ready in the winter.

Another curious resemblance between fact and fiction is exemplified in the careers of Dmitry Bogroff, assassin of Premier Stolypin, and Razumov, the hero of Joseph Conrad's recently published novel, "Under Western Eyes." Bogroff was both a member of the social revolutionary group and a police spy. Razumov, in "Under Western Eyes," is believd by his fellow-students at the St. Petersburg University to be an active and enthusiastic revolutionist. But in reality he has denounced to the police a comrade who has sought his protection after committing an assassination, and later, having become a government spy, is in the confidence of both sides. Mr. Conrad, who was born in Russia, makes plain in "Under Western Eyes" to the western reader the extraordinary difficulties which beset the ambitious liberal Russian youth.

The character of a doctor in "The Return of Peter Grimm" may be considered a follower of Frederic W. Myers, whom Theodore Flournoy in his just-published book, "Spiritism and Psychology," calls "one of the most remarkable personalities of our time in the realm of mental science." At the age of 26, says Flournoy, Myers "Proposed to establish the certainty of another world, of another life. . . . no longer, as in the past, on the uncertain dogmas of the articles of faith or of abstract reasoning, but upon the unshakable foundation of an experimental demonstration rigorously scientific." It is not possible to foretell what the future has reserved for the spiritistic doctrine of Myers is the conclusion reached by Prof. Flournoy in "Spiritism and Psychology."

Walter Prichard Eaton, whose volumes of dramatic criticism, "The American Stage of Today," and "At the New Theater and Others," have won him an enviable reputation, recently responded to a request for "facts" about his life, as follows: "Walter Prichard Eaton, born in Massachusetts in 1878, son of Warren E. Eaton, for more than thirty years the head master of the Harvard School in Charleston. Suffered in early infancy with a bad attack of the Puritan Conscience, which he never fully recovered from. Was educated at Phillips Andover Academy and Harvard, which latter institution he has never fully recovered from, either. From 1900 to 1902 was a reporter on the Boston Journal. From 1902 to 1907 was assistant in the dramatic and later the music department of the New York Tribune. During the season of 1907-8 was dramatic critic of the New York Sun. left that luminary during the fall of 1908. Has contributed frequently to the periodical press of these United States. Ambitions—to own a potato farm in the country and to go 18 holes at Garden City under 80. Figure—directoire. Face—like a hatchet. Politics—would be a socialist if he knew what socialism was."

Sea Burial.

Lay him not in the earth with whom the earth
Has dwelt so harshly;—there no peace is found,
Where tree roots blindly pushing in the ground
Would clasp his coffin in their moving girth;
Or where the soil, in labor at the birth
Of some fierce city, would molest the mound
Of his low tenement, or muffled sound
Of tunneling mole trouble the dreamless dearth
Of sleep eternal. Rather lay him deep
In that low grave undigged by any spade,
Where never sable mourner comes to weep
And tend with pious hand the flowers that fade—
The many-peopled grave down in the free
Untrodden cemeteries of the sea.
—[Martin D. Armstrong, in the Atlantic Monthly.

THE HELPING HAND.

"How far that little candle throws his beams!
So shines a good deed in a naughty world."

He who walks through the world leaving bright memories upon the minds of those he meets is like a gardener who plants the seed of a flower, whose blossoms are sure to gladden his own heart and the hearts of thousands of others. For pleasant memories are living, growing things and their influence is creative. They are the dew drops of peace and the sunbeams of beauty.

Mrs. E. L. Strong recently invited a woman, whom she had met at a reception, to visit her at her beautiful home on Huntington Drive near Los Angeles. When they arrived at the home of Mrs. Strong the hostess began to show her guest the plants and flowers in her yard.

"There is a story connected with these geraniums," she said. "A few years ago when I was visiting in Long Beach, I met a little girl carrying a bunch of sweet geraniums. She asked me if I wanted to buy the bouquet, saying that she wished to earn money with which to buy her baby brother a birthday present. Of course I bought them and then I stood and talked to her for ten minutes. She was very beautiful and her face was alight with the joy that ever floods the heart of one who goes on a mission of love. Her name was O'Leary, she said, and she lived far, far away, nearly ten blocks. I brought the geraniums home and set them out. To me it seemed they grew in gladness, because her baby hands had touched them. You see how they hedge in this little porch. I never look at them, that I do not think of Jennie."

The visitor bent over and lightly touched her lips to one of the brilliant blossoms. Then she smiled and grasped the hand of her hostess.

"My maiden name was O'Leary," she said. "I was acquainted with the first part of your story, and you have told me the happy sequel."

Twenty years is sufficient time for ordinary courtesies to be forgotten, but it was not so by the late Mrs. Helen Amelia Marsh of New Haven, Ct. Because Everett W. Marlowe of New York surrendered a sleeping car ticket to her on a trip from New York to Washington after she was unable to obtain a berth. Mrs. Marsh bequeathed to him the bulk of her estate of $110,000. At the time he met Mrs. Marsh young Marlowe's ambition was to go to Harvard, and when Mrs. Marsh learned of this she insisted that his education be completed at her expense. Marlowe finished his course at Harvard and later was graduated from the Columbia Law School.

F. B. Knapp, a motorman on the electric railroad at St. Paul, Minn., has received word from Spokane that he is to be the beneficiary to the amount of $84,000 from the estate of Thomas Lynch, who recently died in an Alaskan hospital. It is another instance of the possibility that may result from a kindly action. Mr. Knapp explains the instance in this way:

"My father and I lived near Ferris, Minn., in the winter of 1898. One day Lynch was brought in from the woods a very sick man. I took him to my home, as there was no hospital, and I rode to Graceland, a small town, to get some medicine. We nursed Lynch for a while, and when he got well he went away. I never heard anything more from him. I suppose he appreciated our attention."

Policeman Edward Eisenberg of Chicago risked his own life beneath the feet of an excited team of horses that he might rescue a child from having its life crushed out by the animals' hoofs. The child had been knocked down and lay unconscious in front of the hind feet of the plunging horses when Eisenberg crawled beneath the animals and although he was knocked over and kicked on the forehead, he emerged with the child in his arms.

One of the most pathetic sights in Brooklyn, N. Y., is the annual distribution in cash of $25,000, to the dependent blind people of the borough. Each person receives $50. At the recent distribution 511 persons presented themselves, eligible under the rule requiring that they be totally blind and residents of Brooklyn. Most of the blind were aged people who can do nothing to help themselves, and had to depend upon relations or friends to conduct them to the charities building. Many of them were suffering not only from the lack of vision, but also from the infirmities of age, and in some instances it was necessary for two persons to help each one of them every step of the way taken.

Louis Swift of Chicago recently donated $2000 toward a fund for the erection of a $25,000 home for motherless children in Waukegan, Wis. The erection of the home is thus assured, as about one-half of the required amount has been pledged.

As Chief Justice White, of the Supreme Court, was on his way to his office in the Capitol at Washington one morning recently, he came upon Harry Davidson, a court page, lugging a large package of books, and court documents, tied together with a cord. The bundle was more than the lad could carry handily.

"The kitten carrying the cat," said Chief Justice White. "Let me help you." Then he hurried forward and caught hold of one end of the load and he and the boy went through the corridor laughing and talking.

"Too much for a small boy," he said. "You must have help."

John Marshall, the first chief justice, helped a frail woman carry her market basket home one day.

Bishop Alexander Mackay-Smith of the Protestant Episcopal Diocese of Pennsylvania has announced the intention of himself and his wife to present to the diocese their home in Philadelphia for an episcopal residence to be occupied by the future bishops of the diocese. The house, a large double brick building, trimmed with brownstone, is assessed for taxes at $125,000, and is valued at a little more than that amount.

"I want to leave something to be remembered by," said the bishop, "and I shall offer my house to the diocese as an expression of my esteem and affection for the clergy and people here."

The bishop will probably take up his residence in Washington in a few months.

Professor of Sociology in the University of Wisconsin, and author of "Sin and Society," "Social Control," etc.

The first presentment, by a sociologist of adequate modern equipment, of the conflict of Oriental and Western cultures in China.

An interpretation of Chinese society, by the method of first-hand observation—Professor Ross declares, and gives his reasons, that the race mind of the Chinese is not appreciably different from our own.

A vivid and fascinating picturing of Chinese life and customs, and so a book of extraordinary interest for the general reader as well as for the student.

WOMEN'S WORK, WOMEN'S CLUBS

BY SYDNEY FORD.

THAT GREAT outpouring of women at the interdenominational missionary mass meeting last Tuesday, a full account of which appeared in these columns the following morning, gave strong evidence of the power of women when they work with united purpose for a definite end.

That gathering, which represented nine different denominations, each of which has anywhere from five to fifty different churches in this city, may safely be said to represent at least 50,000 women—consecrated Christian women—who think it worth while to put their best energies into work for the uplift of women, not only in foreign lands, but in the home land.

The number of club women in Los Angeles—less than 2500—dwindles into insignificance when compared with this great host—one single denomination of which reported almost a million dollars raised for foreign missions and $700,000 for home missions during the last twelve months.

The manner in which that meeting was conducted, the neatness and dispatch with which the business order of the day was put through, and the enthusiasm which marked the social part of the programme when 500 women flocked to the banquet, indicated that these loyal, consecrated women are past mistresses in the art of doing successful work—and work that is very much worth while—that will tell, not only in time, but through all eternity.

It is a matter of note in this connection, that the first public speech made by President Taft after his election was before the branch executive woman's missionary meeting of the Methodist church then in session in Cincinnati, and the Chief Executive of the nation was so impressed with the splendid ability of these women that he complimented them upon the neatness and dispatch with which they transacted business.

There is no doubt about it, when you come right down to brass tacks, in the way of getting things done, the church women have all other women's clubs and organizations beaten.

Suffrage and Socialism.

It is no wonder that the Socialists were shouting for suffrage. They understood better than anyone else exactly what it would mean to their party, as was again and again pointed out in this column. However, it would be in poor taste at this crucial time to say, "I told you so," neither is it necessary, for the suffragists who espouse the cause of good city government realize now as never before how strong is the force they have turned loose upon themselves; and they are working as never before to stem the tide.

The Socialist and labor union vote carried suffrage in Los Angeles; it carried its entire ticket into the field the other day. Will it carry it through at the final election?

Upon the political fate of Los Angeles, doubtless rests the issue of woman suffrage in the six States now struggling for it. Encouraged by the result in California, both Ohio and New Hampshire have joined the other four States, which have entered the arena, in the battle for the ballot during the coming year. The eyes of all are now fixed upon Los Angeles to see if it makes good at this first municipal election in which women take part. If the Socialists win, is it likely that the men of these other States will place the ballot in the hands of women with such an example before them?

Women, it's up to you.

She Has Her Study.

Mrs. C. M. Carter, wife of the successful pastor of the First Baptist Church, has been made superintendent of the Sunday-school, and, in order to facilitate this and other work in her husband's church, to which she is devoted, has fitted up a cosy study in the church building—on the same floor, and opposite that of Dr. Carter. Here she has her desk, her telephone, her books, and on certain days, at regular hours she may be found here. Her three children are all in school—one is taking her master's degree at Stanford—and Mrs. Carter finds that this plan of having a study at the church, where she may be free from the interruption of domestic concerns for a few hours, expedites things wonderfully.

Mrs. Carter, as is well known, has traveled extensively in foreign lands with her husband, and frequently gives most entertaining lectures concerning these countries through which she has journeyed. She is booked for one of these entertaining travel talks before the Y.W.C.A. this season.

Notwithstanding her deep interest in church and public work, Mrs. Carter is essentially a home lover, and is always glad to greet her friends at the family apartments at Douglass Terrace, on the fourth Friday afternoon of each month.

Matinee Musical Club.

The young women of the Aeolian Club furnished a delightful musical programme for the Matinee Club at its meeting last Thursday afternoon, when Mmes. Harry Underwood and Henry Garren acted as hostesses. Preceding the musical programme the following delegates were elected to go to the Federation of Women's Clubs at Ventura, which opens November 16: Mrs. Samuel A. Selover (president of the club,) Mrs. Eugene E. Davis and Miss Helen Judson.

Mrs. C. S. Delano gave the current events in the world of music and then Miss Mable Post opened the musical entertainment of the afternoon with a piano solo. Miss Grace Helen Tease played a harp solo, Miss Josephine Neil sang delightfully, Miss Ida Weber played the saxophone and Miss Helyn Osborne Henry gave a reading. A violin solo by Miss Ramona Little and an instrumental trio by Mrs. Harry Underwood, Misses Ida Weber and Helen Judson, closed the programme, after which refreshments were served, concluding a most enjoyable afternoon.

The Dickens Club.

The Inglewood Dickens Club has outgrown the average private parlor and will hereafter meet at the Masonic Club headquarters in the Masonic building of that town, instead of in the homes of members as heretofore. This and other business matters occupied the greater part of the afternoon at the meeting last Tuesday, so that the regular programme was not carried out. Mrs. James F. Farley read "Dickens, the Many-Sided," and Mrs. T. B. Kirk a chapter from Pickwick Papers. Next week—this club meets on alternate Tuesdays in the month—Miss Harriett Pownall will discuss some of the great characters of the English novelist and there will be readings from his works.

Complimentary to Club.

The Averill Club was delightfully entertained at its last meeting at the handsome home of Mrs. George M. Munger, who, while not a member of the club, is a lifelong friend of its president, Mrs. F. B. Nance, and therefore extended her hospitality to the forty members. She was assisted in receiving and entertaining her guests by her daughters, Mrs. William Riggle of Piru and Mrs. George Munger, Jr.

Mrs. Anna Averill, founder of the club, was a guest of honor, and gave a short address. A paper on American literature by Mrs. Elizabeth Adams and several choice musical numbers, which included a whistling solo by Mrs. Watterson, made up a pleasing programme.

Guild Ingathering.

There is one women's organization in Los Angeles that meets just once a year. It exacts no cash dues, and its club creed consists in the simple labor of love and sympathy towards the sick and unfortunate in this vicinity.

This great and only meeting of the year of the Needlework Guild comes off tomorrow afternoon at Kramer's Hall, No. 932 South Grand avenue, where, if you go, you will see the greatest array of garments and household linen anywhere outside of a big dry goods store. Last year the annual ingathering resulted in nearly 8000 garments—every one perfectly new, as that is the only condition on which they are accepted. These garments are distributed among the more than fifty charitable organizations of the city, without regard to creed or color, as the guild is entirely non-sectarian. Will you be there with your offering of two garments for the sick and suffering, and thus constitute yourself a member of this great guild?

The women who are responsible for this splendid work are Mrs. S. S. Salisbury, president, and the following women, who are section presidents: Mmes. S. K. Lindley, W. F. Barnett, Mary E. Hartwell, J. W. Dawson, T. Frank McGrath, L. E. Arnold, Alfred W. Morgan, F. Winstanley, S. Grant Goucher, Charles Hay, J. E. Fullwood, A. Boyle Workman, W. S. Bott, Percy Wilson, A. Pioche Robinson, W. D. Whelan, Kitty Walbridge, S. M. Mudd, J. Clifford Page, Jr., Harry Rae Callender, Harcourt Wilson, R. H. Lindsay, J. M. Clute, John F. Andrews, L. A. Craig, O. P. Clark, Virginia Twigg, J. H. Drain, C. E. Walton, C. A. Bashford, Minnie Brydges, F. Alles and J. T. Drew.

Ventura Entertains Federation.

Ventura club women are making great preparations for entertaining the Los Angeles District Federation November 16-18. There is to be an auto ride through the lovely country reaching round about this charming city by the sea, and all sorts of social functions, including a big reception, are being planned.

The Los Angeles district comprises the counties of Los Angeles, Santa Barbara, Ventura and San Luis Obispo, and within this territory there are eighty-six women's clubs with a total membership of over 8000. Delegates are appointed from every one of these clubs, the number sent according with the size of the club.

Delegates from the Friday Morning Club include Mmes. O. P. Clark, Charles E. Shattuck, Mary H. Gridley, I. W. Phelps, W. A. Spalding, A. W. Rhodes, H. L. Story, C. B. Nichols and Miss Munn.

The Ebell Club, by reason of its numbers, will send the largest delegation of any club in the district, led by the president, Mrs. E. C. Bellows. Others elected are Mmes. C. C. Cottle, A. B. Cass, C. B. Dickson, E. C. Deiter, J. M. Hale, Guy L. Hardison, Elizabeth S. Hutchins, George W. Jordan, M. J. Monnette, Florence Collins Porter, Sarah J. Smith and Eliza Tupper Wilkes.

About Women by Women.

Half a dozen members of Highland Park Ebell read interesting papers on the lives and characters of as many famous women at the club meeting last Tuesday. It was, therefore, essentially a woman's day. Mrs. Frank E. Trask told of the life of Mme. Modjeska, of her ambitions for her native people and her dreams of establishing a colony for them near her beautiful home, Arden.

In the absence of Mrs. R. M. Whitney, whose subject was Mary Wilkins Freeman, the story teller, Mrs. M. G. Maury, a new member of the club, spoke of the writer and her realistic New England characters so perfectly pictured in her stories that always end with a wedding and a bride with a long veil—and always a pretty bride, at that.

Mrs. Sarah F. Judson dealt with the character and work of Mary Baker Eddy and the growth of Christian Science, not only in America, but in all parts of the world.

Mrs. J. Fremont Church paid a beautiful tribute to that noble woman—Frances E. Willard, and Mrs. James R. Riggins told of the philanthropic work of Mrs. Russell Sage, who is so ably disposing of the millions that her husband was so many years in accumulating. Miss Elizabeth Packard gave a delightful talk on the work of Jane Addams at Hull House, and this concluded the interesting symposium. A. Rae Condit whistled the Swallow's song with charming effect, and Mrs. William Barnhart rendered several fine solos. An informal reception followed with refreshments, when new members were given an opportunity to get acquainted, the president, Mrs. Jane Beatty acting as hostess.

What's Going on This Week.

Bruce Gordon Kingsley, who spent last summer in Europe, will address the Ebell Club tomorrow afternoon on "European Music in 1911."

Queen Alexandra Chapter, Daughters of the Empire, will hold its regular meeting tomorrow afternoon at the Woman's Clubhouse and will perfect plans for the ball to be given November 14, in honor of the visiting British officers.

Miss Pearl Herndon will entertain the Hollywood Woman's Club next Wednesday afternoon at the regular meeting. Mmes. George H. Given, Curtis H. Kent, W. C. Booth and Cassius Smith will act as hostesses.

Lillian Burkhardt Goldsmith will give Bernard Shaw's "The Doctor's Dilemma" before the Cosmos Club next Wednesday afternoon. The regular monthly business meeting of the club was held last Wednesday morning, when plans were laid for the reciprocity day, which will be on November 29, instead of a week earlier, as was originally planned. The Sierra Male Quartette, composed of Messrs. E. C. Boynton, A. A. Macurda, F. C. McPherson and E. J. Ruenitz, assisted by Mrs. Hernando Lee, pianist, and Miss Eleanor Miller, reader, will render the programme.

The second regular meeting of Eschscholtzia Chapter, D.A.R., will be held next Tuesday at the Ebell Clubhouse at 2:30 in the afternoon. A feature of the programme will be an address by Mary Foy on a subject which, in the light of the strenuous fight now confronting this suffragette leader, is funny, to say the least. Her topic is "Day Dreams of the Past." Fruitful subject considering the nightmare of the present for the suffragettes. The Regent of Santa Paula Chapter will be a guest of honor and Mrs. Emily Morgan and Charles E. Lewis will contribute readings and Mrs. S. Grant Goucher will sing. Dr. Helen Anderson and Mrs. Frank Walsh will be hostesses, and the programme is in charge of Mrs. F. R. Cady.

Mrs. Jane Beatty will address the club of which she is president—the Highland Park Ebell—next Tuesday, on current events. Mmes. S. O. Green and S. J. Brimhall will sing.

Twilight.

How many things are like this sad sweet hour,
  When neither light nor darkness rules the world—
And nature lulls to slumber ev'ry flower
  Before night's dusky banners are unfurled.
A solemn hour when all things bright must die,
  That made the world so radiantly fair;
The sun's pale crimson fades upon the sky,
  The breath of night is in the perfumed air.

Perchance there's some desire in our hearts
  That, like this dying day, will never see
The light that hope to everything imparts,
  And never blossom to reality.
Some secret love that never must be told—
  Some hidden wish—some thought of ungained fame,
All sink on life's horizon, dark and low,
  Just like the sunset's dying evening flame.

Whose life is there this twilight does not mark,
  Whose heart is there that does not hold within
Some poor, dead hope that once burned like a spark,
  And struggled hard its victory to win?
So struggles day against the coming night,
  Till, weary with the shadows on her breast,
She yields to darkness all her treasures bright,
  And slowly sinks, just like our hopes—to rest.
—[Joseph P. Galton, in Ainslee's Magazine.

OLD AND YOUNG.

Miss Winifred Stoner of Pittsburgh, Pa., is thought to be the youngest author in this country. She was a student of poetry and typewriting at 3, published a book of verse at 7, and at the age of 9 speaks five languages.

Mrs. Elizabeth Thayer Adams of Hopedale, Mass., who has just celebrated her one hundredth birthday, is said to have no sympathy with women who complain of family cares. Mrs. Adams reared eight children, and yet found plenty of time to continue her social and educational life.

August Wilcox, the oldest resident of Shiawassee county, Mich., who, for nearly 70 years has been trying to collect $5.04 from the United States, has at last succeeded—minus the interest. Mr. Wilcox was postmaster at Bridgewater, Mich., under President Tyler, and sometime after he was succeeded in the position he learned he had some money coming to him.

The Rev. Robert Brandon, Baptist, minister, tailor, poet and author, who has just passed his ninety-fifth birthday, is the oldest officiating minister in London. He preaches on an average only once a month, but in rain or sunshine he never fails each Sunday to make his way in a Bath chair to the place he has ministered at in Chelsea for sixty-four years.

And yet this wonderful man, whose record has been one of amazing activity and energy, has been a cripple since he was two years old, when one of his legs became paralyzed. He practically educated himself, paying for his tuition out of his earnings as a tailor, till he passed the necessary examinations to make him a minister.

Former Associate Justice John Currey, 97 years old, and one of California's pioneer jurists, is making his twenty-fourth trip across the continent. He is accompanied by his wife en route from his boyhood home in Peakskill, N. Y., to San Francisco. For many years Judge Currey was an associate justice of the California Supreme Court. He came to California in '49 by the Panama route.

Capt. Jackson de Neal, 65 years old, of Bar Point lightship, near Toledo, O., has just made what is declared to be a record in that section by rowing a small boat fifty miles in nine hours.

DO ODD THINGS.

At the age of 63 years, Samuel Cooper of West Chester, Pa., has cut four new teeth, his third set.

It is said that Seth H. Kenney, a farmer of Waterville, Minn., is successfully growing twenty varieties of apples on one tree.

Charles Hupman of Saginaw, Mich., 23 years old, suffering with water on the lungs, watched the surgeons cut him open, break the fifth rib with a mallet, and then take three quarts of water from his lungs—all without taking an anaesthetic, which he thought would make him sick for days afterward.

That it is possible to recover from the effects of a knife thrust in the heart is being proved by Frank Grover of Moorehead, Minn., who was stabbed in a controversy over a poker game. Although Grover had five ribs removed and several stitches taken in his heart, he has a good chance for recovery.

William Stephens, 11 years old, of Bloomfield, N. J., is reported by his physician to wear his heart and liver on the right side of his body. The physician said that he has had cases where the heart was on the right side, but that this is the first case of misplaced liver. Mrs. Stephens says her son has enjoyed good health, and is one of the brightest pupils of Sacred Heart School.

Riley Wootan, who is serving a life term in the Nevada State Prison, solely on his word of honor and without a guard of any kind rode thirty-five miles on a train to a road camp to repair a steam roller. He works in one of the road camps, and when the roller got out of order the warden gave him a ticket, and, on his promise not to escape, permitted him to make the trip alone.

IN THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

Pets in School.

PETS in school have an educational and humanitarian value, and many are the lessons which the children learn regarding kindly care of dumb creatures, but occasionally a miscue is made, and things don't turn out according to Froebel.

The other day a kindergarten teacher told me about a little girl in her school—let's call her Jennie—who was constantly asking if she might bring Mamie to school. Of course, kindergarten teachers are delighted to have children bring their little brothers and sisters to school, and never did teacher doubt for a moment that Mamie was a little sister. "Why, certainly, bring Mamie to school, dear," said teacher. "Oh, I don't think you'll want Mamie," gravely expostulated another child. "Of course, we want Mamie," cried teacher earnestly.

So finally, one morning, Jennie appeared. Behind her dragged a rope. Teacher looked on surprised. What was at the end of the rope couldn't be seen, because it was around the corner. Teacher watched curiously, while Jennie pulled and tugged. Then at last, the long-heralded Mamie appeared—a goat. Well, the children had always been encouraged to bring their pets, and what could teacher do? She suggested that Mamie be tied to the fence outside; but, having come to see the teacher, nothing would do but she must come in. So she was tied to teacher's desk. Then came the dreamy hour, when soft music is played with the shades pulled down. Mamie had been very tractable, up to this time, so hopes were entertained that she would be good right along. The remnants of her lunch of grass had been placed high and dry on top of teacher's desk, and it was hoped she had forgotten all about it. But, lo! no sooner was the last little head obediently lowered, no sooner was the last sleepy eye closed, than—bing! Mamie with one grand leap cleared the intervening space, and landed on that grass on teacher's desk. Needless to say, the nap came to an untimely end, and one little boy was so cross during the rest of the session he forthwith announced that "if anybody called him a birdie, he'd slap their face!" Teacher tried to be polite, and assured Jennie that she was very glad to see Mamie. Evidently Mamie believed it, for it took the efforts of twelve strong little boys to assist Mamie out of the school yard.

"I guess," said one small boy mischievously, as troubled teacher watched the painful egress, "I guess you got Jennie's goat a' right."

In making her rounds as official story teller, Mrs. Murray happens on many funny experiences. Of course, as illustrated above, children are encouraged to bring their pets to school, and all have one big "love together," and as also happens above sometimes it's very embarrassing to teacher. Said Mrs. Murray:

"At a school where I visited last week, the teacher asked the children to bring their pets. So, next morning, Elizabeth came with an old hen under her arm. Teacher couldn't bear to hurt her little feelings by putting the old hen out, so the odd visitor stayed till recess. But she wrote a tactful little note to Elizabeth's auntie, thanking her for sending the dear, sweet old hen to school, but telling her that she was compelled to ask Elizabeth to leave Biddy at home the rest of the day. So Elizabeth took the old hen and the note under her arm, and went home. But auntie had gone uptown, so Elizabeth merely tucked the note under the door and went out in the yard to put the old hen down. Now, as teacher had been so glad to see Biddy, of course, she'd just love to see Bill, the rooster, too. So, smiling happily at the surprise she'd give teacher, she tucked Bill under her arm, and five minutes later teacher viewed little Elizabeth tripping along sweetly with Bill held close to her tender breast.

"'I knew you'd just love to see Bill, too,' said Elizabeth innocently. And for the rest of the afternoon teacher attempted to retain her poise amid the joyful crowings of Bill."

Story-Teller.

Los Angeles has a professional story-teller in her schools.

Mrs. Mary Belle Murray is the teacher who thrills young audiences with deeds of valor, makes them weep over dead canaries, laugh at quaint happenings and wonder with the fairies.

Mrs. Murray's profession is a development from small beginnings. Years ago, when she taught kindergarten at Castelar Street School, she was recounting some of the doings of her class to the teachers at lunchtime. One of the teachers said: "Why don't you tell stories to your school?" Mrs. Murray proceeded to do so, and found that she held her classes spellbound. Afterward it became the fashion for her to donate her afternoons to the telling of stories to the wearied little fifth and sixth-graders upstairs; and finally, within the last few months, since Superintendent Francis asked that kindergarten teachers remain in the afternoons and help principals, Mrs. Murray found her whole time occupied, not alone in the school in which she teaches kindergarten regularly, but in other schools, as well.

Mrs. Murray has a vivid and fascinating manner, whether she is suiting the deeds of Greek heroes to the up-to-date imagination of a street waif, or telling the perfectly good stories of Elizabeth Harrison to the curled darlings of the west end. Quick of wit, if she finds to story not striking home as she wishes, she instantly changes her tactics, watching the youthful faces till she strikes the keynote of their interest. She says story telling has decided advantages, not only in stimulating the flagging faculties of the children, when weary, but in exercise of concentration and attention.

"There is too much serious stuff told children in the form of stories—and they do so enjoy the humorous. A moral loses nothing for having a little of the piquancy of humor about it.

"When you tell a story to a street waif, you get your response right away," said Mrs. Murray. "But when you tell a story to the more fortunate children; surrounded at home with temptingly bound story books, and satiated with stories told around the fireside, the response is sometimes lacking at school, or is often critical. But give that same story to the fresh faculties of the poor child, whose imagination is starved at home, and he gives back full measure of appreciation. The poor child has sharper wits and a keener sense of humor—even his sense of the moral and its application is just as good as that of the other class. One instance I remember to have seen on the playground. A small boy said to another, who was misbehaving badly: 'You know what will happen to you if you do that! Don't you remember Mrs. Murray's story?'"

Nature Study Progressing.

Nature study and school gardening are progressing with enthusiasm among the school children.

At Seventh-street school Mrs. George E. Larkey is conducting the work, the school gardens are in full bloom, and the rosy children working among them are a pretty sight. At each hour of the day some class is out working its particular plot. The garden is 100 by 150 feet. Old buildings are covered with vines, and the street has been cleaned all round the building.

Mrs. Larkey conducts scientific experiments in the class-room, in regard to the chemistry of soils, budding, etc., and then the children troop forth to apply their knowledge. The Germain Seed Company kindly donated a large variety of seeds, and various vegetables are being planted.

Viewing the grounds, the other day, the writer was delighted with the sight. The drinking fountain was completely hidden with graceful cannas, the walks, which form a Maltese cross, were edged with silver-leaf genanium and mignonette, and the old fences are covered with sweet-pea vines. The instinct for gardening is natural to the Italian child, and many of the Seventh-street pupils are Italians.

Said Mrs. Larkey: "The children are taught to use all gardening tools. They have cleaned up an old shack in the yard, and made it into a tool house. They are taught transplanting, too. Every boy and girl has a garden at home, and transplants from his own little school garden, to his garden at home."

Mrs. Larkey is a member of the City Beautiful Commission, and many owners of vacant city lots have offered them to the youngsters to practice on.

Over at Marengo Heights the young hopefuls were delving industriously in the hard adobe surrounding their school, while perspiration streamed from every son and daughter of Adam.

"What are they raising?" I inquired.

"Principally dust at present," their principal, Mrs. Merrill, answered, but we expect great things, this year, being encouraged by last year's crop of vegetables, which the children proudly bore home. We are planning on a big rose garden, too."

Teachers' Institute.

Teachers must go to school in December, at institute time, but the newer educational ideas have leavened that difficult educational lump, and, thanks to Superintendent Francis, the rigidity of the programme has been lessened by some merciful limbering up of the rules regarding attendance on section meetins, and choice of visiting high schools, museums, etc., as alternative work.

Said Superintendent Francis: "We shall give a short programme each forenoon, consisting of lectures by our imported talent, and in the afternoon teachers will have the opportunity of visiting our school exhibit, school playgrounds, school buildings, library, museums, or any other places they see fit, for educational purposes. Certain sections will be announced for those who care to attend, and these will be conducted wholly by the teachers, themselves, with no formal programmes. Regular educational classes included in the teachers' courses will be conducted during the week, and those who choose may attend these. If any choose to continue work at the university, this will be allowed. Some lectures will be given in the afternoon, at which attendance will be voluntary. We plan to make it a week of opportunities and eliminate as far as possible all arbitrary requirements."

Well, I can hear a lot of teachers saying, "Hurray for Mr. Francis!"

This is in accordance with a general movement throughout the State, to make institutes less of a drudgery for the teachers, who come fagged with their half-years' work, and rebel at the notion of being tightly packed in suffocating lecture rooms for six or seven hours a day.

Some of the institute speakers are as follows: Dr. Guy Potter Benton of the University of Vermont, Miss Louise Arnold, president Simmons College, Boston, and Robert Watchorn of this city.

Polytechnic High School.

The practical nature of the work at Polytechnic High is what strikes the visitor most strongly.

Mr. Hatherell confesses that he and Mr. Twining hold a daily forum at lunch over the nature of the ion, the tricks and manners of the elusive corpuscle, and the sub-ether—why not? Yet, there is no school that is doing more practical work in applied physics than Poly. Mr. Twining is working on a monoplane, and even on the problem with which the Wright brothers are experimenting, viz., the flight without mechanical aid, save wings.

In the mechanics art department a boy was mending the lawn mower, according to scientific principles, and Mr. Hood reported that his department is planning to make for the use of the schools, elementary and high, the following articles: A hundred paper-cutting machines for sloyd department; 200 locker doors for gymnasium; one bookcase for history department; two book stacks for library; six filter stands for chemical department; four oak sewing tables for sewing department.

In the surveying department, Mr. Evans reported that the class is running a series of levels from San Pedro Harbor up to Polytechnic High, doing the work on Saturdays. The boys cover about four miles a day. The line is being run over the old narrow-gauge road, following the city bench marks, and the class checks in about every mile and a half, and compares with the city's elevation. It will probably take five or six Saturdays to complete the work.

Calls are frequent on the class to do private surveying, often of valuable property. The last one was on Tenth street, near Figueroa. Superintendent Francis has asked the class to survey the school lot on Vigil and Commonwealth avenues.

The class goes twice a week to the hills in the Garvanza district for hillside practice.

The work up to the present has been with the level, but the class is just entering on the transit work. During the year the work will include various chain problems, level problems, transit work, plane table work, polar planimeter work, involving calculations for areas. A new plane table has been added to the equipment of the department, which adds great efficiency to the work.

Mr. Evans reports many calls for graduates from employers. Some of those who have gone out to fill good positions are William Hall, Deputy City Surveyor, Santa Monica; William Althouse, with the City Surveyor of Glendale; Frank Lockwood, in railroad surveying in British Columbia, and Neil Dougherty, surveyor with a party at Bakersfield; Adolph Ritter, on the aqueduct, and Rex Hamaker, doing surveying and bridge work with a surveying company in Garvanza.

I found Mr. Winterburn, head of the art department, teaching a class in advanced drawing, and a pretty girl was posing on a chair with a vase in her arms, for the class to sketch. The sketches on the walls by the pupils showed clever technique and beauty of coloring. In Miss Kjelland's room, the class was taking up color as color, color combinations and harmonies, to be applied later in stenciling, weaving, etc.

Said Mr. Winterburn: "We are working for an American art, and this we never can have until we instill the love of the beautiful into the people as a whole. You know when somebody asked Whistler if art paid, he said yes, if you never made a cent."

Mr. Winterburn's copy of the famous Louvre painting "Returning From Labor," which hangs in the superintendent's office, has been admired by many visitors, and was executed by him during his two years' stay in Paris.

In Miss Lowd's classroom we found the applied leather and metal work, and she stated that she was endeavoring to teach her pupils better ideas of color in clothing and interior finishings. She also showed me some handsome designs to apply to pillow tops and towel ends, which many of the girls will doubtless work out during vacation.

Agricultural High School.

The girls of Miss Leland's household economics course, have organized a Home Economics Club, for the purpose of discussing and solving the problems which they find in their own homes. The questions they bring before the club relate to kitchen equipment, labor-saving devices, sanitation, sick-room ventilation, and conflicts in cook-book recipes, and kindred questions. The club also reads various articles on household subjects, and discusses the same. The president is Marion Jones; vice-president, Grace Slosson; secretary, Florence Granger; treasurer, Esta Simmons.

Miss Leland said to Miss Jones, after the first meeting: "I am delighted at the skill with which you presided, and I also noticed the same quality in the temporary president who preceded you." Miss Jones answered: "You can give the credit to the oral English work. When I took it, the teacher said I would need it some time or other. I confess I didn't think I ever should."

Principal Lillard received two letters from eastern principals last week. One of them said: "I understand that you are teaching agricultural botany and zoology and chemistry, instead of the traditional chemistry. I think that you are taking the lead in this respect, and I believe that in time all the high schools in the country will have to articulate with the industries, each fitting its environment."

Hon. Dick Crosby, of the Department of Agriculture at Washington, visited the school last week. He said that he came into Southern California for the sole purpose of visiting the Agricultural High School, and remarked: "Even, though you are educating your boy away from agriculture, or your girl away from home work, you use the material of the farm and the home for presenting the subjects—the materials with which students are familiar."

The school is being used for social center work for meetings of the Farmers' Club, Parent-Teachers' Association, and other organizations designed to help the community. The dairymen and poultrymen held their meeting there last week. Said Principal Lillard: "The community is beginning to feel that the school building is the center of its activities."

Manual Arts High School.

On Wednesday the Manual Arts Rugby team romped for a time with the U.S.C. Preps, but there was not a great deal of high class play in evidence. As soon as Manual Arts had made a couple of touchdowns, one of which was converted, they eased up and held themselves back for the Saturday game at Hollywood. So the score of 8 to 0 may be regarded as a partial one. It might have been worse. At the same time, it is fair to state that the Preps are holding together better and putting up a better game than they did the last time they visited us.

The Faculty baseball nine is again in the field, getting ready to play all comers. Rea, the captain, says they will give at least respectful attention to challenges from a reputable team, including "he Giants" or "The Tar Flat Bruisers." Just to show that they really mean business, and incidentally with a view to getting a little unnecessary practice, the Brain-crammers were out for a little frolic with some of the boys of the school team on Thursday afternoon. Of course the score of 40 to 0 in favor of the faculty is not to be taken seriously as an indication of what the has-beens can really do.

The positions of the faculty team so far as they have been determined are as follows:

Catcher, Rea; pitcher, Hague; first base, Hyde; second base, Nihart; third base, Bailey; short, Whitely; left-field, Rilliet; center, Hap Hogan Donaldson; right, Beswick.

Manual Arts is planning to make itself a social center for the Southwest Side. The responsibility of getting the work started has fallen on Mr. Bailey, who will doubtless receive the co-operation of the other teachers. An organ of publicity has been found in a weekly paper, which will be published by the Suburban Publishing Company, and will contain in each issue a column or two devoted to Manual Arts and the interests of the social center.

Los Angeles High.

The big event was William D. Stephen's visit and address on the practical workings of Congress. He was witty and entertaining, and gave a graphic picture of the methods which Congress employs in doing its work.

The literary students are all working on the prize stories for the "Blue and White," to be issued in February. Four stories will be selected for publication. Four poems will also be chosen—one old English, one ballad, one sonnet, and an epic. These are passed on by a committee of the faculty.

The boys have formed a rooting club, to revive the old spirit of Los Angeles High. No one has noticed anything the matter with Los Angeles High's spirit, either from a lung or energy standpoint; but if there is anything extra vociferous doing on the bleachers next Saturday, at the U.S.C. football game, why it's the extra "pep" which the Los Angeles High have given their rooters permission to employ.

The debate with Hollywood High will come off sometime in December. The subject is "Resolved, that Canada acted against her own interests in rejecting reciprocity with the United States," with L. A. on the negative side. Byron McFadyn and Clarence Bruns will represent L. A.

To pay or not to play, is the question agitating the temperamental breasts of the students belonging to Miss Leno Cooper's oral expression class, where the embryonic actors are quivering with suspense as to whether they are to be chosen to play Hamlet, which is the play selected to be given in December.

Miss Ethel Jones, teacher of domestic chemistry, who has been out since last summer because of typhoid fever, has returned to her work. While she was gone her classes were taught by Miss Ruby Kimble.

The senior class debate will take place next Wednesday and the novel plan has been adopted of having alumni members act as judges. The question is "Resolved, that the Initiative and Referendum should be applied to Federal Legislation."

Hollywood High.

Hollywood High last week had an exhibition arranged by the art department of a collection of water-colors and block prints by Miss Margaret Patterson of Boston, who has exhibited in New York, Philadelphia, the Art Institute of Chicago and many places in this country and abroad. These water colors were painted in Spain, and show scenes along the Spanish coast and views of quaint old Spanish villages. The block prints are taken from studies made in the north of Europe, in Holland and Germany, the motifs of which are picturesque windmills and cottages. The pictures were loaned by James E. McBurney, at whose gallery they have been exhibited.

The Dickens Centennial will be observed by the Hollywood High School with the presentation of "The Cricket on the Hearth," on Friday evening, November 10. The play will be given by members of the dramatics class in the following cast: John Perrybingle, Gerald Sparling; Mr. Tackelton, Henry Enders; Caleb Plummer, Leonard White; Old Gentleman, Jay Perrin; Porter, Harold Shugart; Dot's father, Jack Hoch; Dot, Esther Fry; Bertha, the blind girl, Ray Feeman; Mrs. Fielding, Stella Messengen; Tilly Slowboy, Mildred Tracy; Mrs. Dot, Louise Dorsey. Business manager, Robert Jardine; stage manager, Jack Hoch.

There is a great deal of interest in debating this year. In the tryout, held last Wednesday, for the first interschool debate, with the L. A. High, there were a dozen contestants. Of this number four were chosen, from whom the final will be picked for the debate. The four chosen were Gertrude Young, Leonard White, Walter Corey and Phillip Postell.

The above illustration shows one of the very latest millinery effects, in which ostrich feathers are exhibited to good advantage.

A striking characteristic of the season's millinery is the wide variety of styles and colorings in which ostrich feathers are being shown.

For a Beautiful Form.

Exercising in itself is good, but is of no avail for developing the bust or rounding out hollows, as this disfigurement is due to starved, underlying tissues, and to correct the fault it is necessary to properly nourish these sensitive glands and muscles. A galliol tonic (which is the Vaucaire treatment,) is very beneficial, because it goes right to the seat of trouble and so energizes the delicate tissues and glands that they quickly respond and soon assume their correct size and proportions. Any woman can easily prepare her own Vaucaire treatment by making a syrup with a cupful and a half of sugar and a pint of water, then adding one ounce galliol. Take a tablespoonful before meals, and in a short time the figure will be plump and symmetrical as nature intended. Galliol is a little expensive, but for this purpose it has no equal.

Answers to Questions.

Ruth S.. The electric needle is painful, slow and uncertain. Apply a delol paste to the hairs you wish removed, and after two or three minutes rub off and wash the skin. Any druggist can supply the powdered delol, and while it costs seventy-five cents an ounce, rarely is it necessary to use more than one application to permanently remove even a heavy growth of hair.

Betty: Your "muddy," oily skin will not cause worriment very much longer if you make up and use this amarol retiring lotion: Buy two ounces amarol at the drug store and dissolve it in one pint hot water, then before retiring at night thoroughly cleanse the skin and apply the amarol retiring lotion generously, rubbing lightly until it disappears. Do this every night and before long your skin will be clear and smooth and take on the natural rose tint of youth and health.

Anita: Little good results from applying olive oil to the scalp. To overcome the itchy, scaly condition, it is necessary to employ a tonic to stimulate the hair-sacs and tender tissues. You can make a pint of the best tonic by pouring one ounce beta-canthol in a half-pint alcohol, then adding one half pint water. For best results use frequently and plentifully, each time giving the scalp a thorough massage. Using this beta-canthol tonic soon corrects scalp and hair troubles, encourages the secretion of coloring matter, necessary to restore the former shade and brilliancy, and induces a heavy growth of soft, silky hair.

Ida: Nature is kind to the complexion when her laws are not abused, but where powders and cosmetics are used to excess the harvest is a wrinkled, aged, mottled, unsightly skin. Stop clogging and smothering the pores, and try this simple treatment, if you would regain a soft, velvety skin and wholesome complexion. Use plenty of good soap and warm water to remove the dust and dirt, then after drying, apply a cerol cream, massaging in well, and soon your skin will be free from impurities and the true beauty of youth-hood in all its charm and loveliness will be yours to enjoy. To make the cream, dissolve two ounces cerol in three-fourths pint boiling water, stir till smooth.

C. D.: Shampooing can be made a pleasant incident of the toilet if you employ eggol for cleansing hair and scalp. Get a package of eggol from your druggist for a quarter (which is enough for a dozen shampoos) and dissolve a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water; massage briskly as you pour a little at a time on the scalp. You will find shampooing with eggol soothes and invigorates the scalp and puts it in a healthy condition. After rinsing, the hair dries quickly and takes on a rich, even gloss and fluffiness. Occasional shampoos with eggol greatly benefits the hair-sacs and keep the scalp clean and healthy.

THE NEW ITALY;

B. REV. DR. NEWELL DWIGHT HILLIS.

REV. DR. NEWELL DWIGHT HILLS, pastor of Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, lectured on is observations in his extended Eu- opean trip the past summer. His ibject was, "The New Italy and the elebration of the Fortieth Anniver- ary of Her Liberty." The text was these words from the Book of oshua: "And these stones shall be e memorial."

Italy is now completing her six onths' celebration of the fiftieth an- iversary of her independence. The ternal City was founded 753 years efore Christ, and during these twen- -six centuries time has performed its reatest exploits. With all these cen- uries behind Italy, it seems incredible at the mother land has enjoyed but fty years of Italian unity and liberty: he great celebration was held in ome, in a "world's fair" that ap- ealed to the interest of many coun- ies. England sent to Rome the orks of Watts and the Pre-Raphael- e school; France loaned her exam- les of the old Italian masters, as id Spain; Germany made an exhibi- on of her achievements in chemistry nd electricity, while the United tates and South America confined its xhibition of their resources to fruits nd grains and minerals, that would xcite the interest of Italians and pro- ote immigration. But, great as was e exhibition in Rome, after all, the hief exhibit was the Eternal City it- elf. What chance had the new uildings in a modern world's fair, hen placed over against St. Peter's, ith its approaches, galleries, library nd palace that cover forty acres of round! and holds the priceless crown easures of five and twenty centuries! ow can a modern stucco building, lled with machinery, compete with e Forum, the Palace of Caesar, the olden House of Nero, or the Appian Way? "Oh, Rome, my country, city f the soul! All orphans of the heart ust turn to thee, thou mother of ead empires, thou Niobe of nations. he Goth, time, war, flood and fire ave wrecked the seven-hilled city's ride! Palace and tower have be- ome a chaos of ruins. A city is at ur feet, as fragile as man's clay." ur new land has a scanty stock of uman associations.

It could not be otherwise — the ountain States have but one or two eople per square mile. Strike a pade anywhere in Italian soil, and he workman brings up old coins, a ragment of a vase, a chip from a tatue. Rome is the city of Caesar— he greatest soldier, the greatest tatesman, the greatest speaker and he greatest narrative writer the Im- erial City ever produced. In Rome welt Virgil, one of the five great epic oets; in Rome dwelt Lucretius, the ather of modern evolution; in Rome welt Marcus Aurelius, the Emperor, nd Epictetus, the slave; to Rome ame Constantine, to proclaim Chris- ianity, and from Rome went August- ne, to transform North Africa. Dante, ather of the Renaissance, was of Italy, as was Galileo, father of mod- rn science; and Columbus, our great iscoverer. The world's greatest rchitect, Michael Angelo, was Italian, s was Raphael, its greatest lyric ainter. Arnold of Rugby, on the orning after his arrival, wrote: "Again this date of Rome, the most olemn and interesting that my hand an ever write." Hawthorne found is heart strings mysteriously at- ached to the Eternal City, and draw- ng him thither more strongly than did he spot where he was born. For he stones that crumbled under his eet spoke to him, and the dust un- ler his feet rose upon associations of uman grandeur, as if from broken hrones and empires. For Italy her- elf is an enlarged Louvre, a vast mu- eum, a gallery, crowded with art reasures, a British museum, multi- lied infinitely for the inspiration of mankind.

THE OLD ITALY AND ITS ABUSES.

What is the explanation of the en- husiasm of the Italians over this fif- ieth anniversary of Italian unity and ndependence? The answer is that hunger lends sweetness to the bread, sickness and pain enhance the medi- cine, and its value, while the memory of oppression and wrong has sharpened the Italian's appreciation of his independence. Fifty years ago Italy was a broken and dissevered land, the fragments having been distributed among foreign nations. Austria ruled Northern Italy, a foreign Emperor controlled Sardinia, the French King ruled another fragment, the Pope had four small States, where he was a temporal King, and Ferdinand was King of Naples and Sicily. A map of Italy, with its different colors, standing for foreign governments, made it look like a patchwork quilt, and gave meaning to Mazzini's word, "Let us wipe all these colors from the map and stain the map one color—if need be, red." All government imposed from without is more or less unjust, by reason of a failure to understand the people. To be just and fair, government must be based on self-control. To what extent foreign abuses had developed may be seen by a page torn from the career of Gladstone.

In 1850 the English statesman went with his two daughters to Naples for a brief outing. One night an Italian patriot came to Gladstone's hotel and spread out before the Englishman the story of the wrongs of the political prisoners who were dying in the dungeons of Naples. In that hour Gladstone sent his daughters out for the usual sight-seeing in Capri, and Pompeii, and Sorrento, but himself plunged into a series of personal investigations. Upon one plea or another he obtained access to the prisons. He visited the dungeons, saw men reeking in filth, starved into skeletons, bleached white as death through long staying in underground cells. The sight of vermin and cockroaches and rats crawling over prisoners whose only crime had been that they had made a plea against tyranny and in favor of liberty stirred Gladstone to the depths. Having verified all of the statements, Gladstone hurried home to London, and presented the whole subject to the Prime Minister, Lord Aberdeen, and his Cabinet. But the English government did not see its way clear to trouble with Austria and the King of Naples, and the Pope of Rome. After a fortnight, when nothing had been done, Gladstone published his letters. Within a week they were the sensation of Europe. The rulers in every capital were discussing the wrong of Italy. In his anger, the King of Naples retaliated by new and more severe rules, but the protesting voices became so insistent and so angry that, in alarm, counter orders were issued. Riots began to break out; the Austrian soldiers were stoned in the cities of the North; French soldiers were mobbed in the streets of Paris; the soldiers of the Pope and of the King of Naples were attacked in the night; all Italy began to rock with revolution, and heave as with an earthquake, preparatory to the great conflict and the final victory for Italian unity and independence.

MAZZINI, THE ORATOR.

In every political and social revolution, there have been the educators and orators who have inflamed the people against tyranny, and inspired the people with the love of liberty. Later come the soldiers who have led the people into battle, and the statesmen who have organized the revolt into permanent laws. It was Adams, Patrick Henry and Fisher Ames who roused our Revolutionary forefathers. It was Garrison and Phillips who started the movement in Boston against slavery. It was Mazzini who was at once the William Lloyd Garrison and the Wendell Phillips of the Italian' campaign. Mazzini was a prophet, a dreamer and a visionary. He was born in 1809, in the year that gave the world Lincoln the Emancipator and Darwin the scientist. From his childhood patriotism was the one passion of his life. He was reared on Dante, and took the fiery poet's thoughts into his mind like bread and meat into the physical system. His antagonism to aristocracy and privilege was so intense as to make him unfair to the autocratic landowners. It is not hard to understand his intense democracy. Every town and city was filled with foreign soldiers, holding the people in subjection. Spies and informers were always upon Mazzini's track. The whole land was in a ferment. On the street corners the citizens were muttering their indignation. The spirit of revolt burned day and night like a hidden fire.

Young Mazzini finally established a liberal paper in Genoa. He then organized a secret political society called Young Italy. One morning he published an editorial reflecting upon the Austrian government, and that afternoon he fled in disguise to avoid arrest and probable death. Then from across the border line in France he sent his pamphlets back to Italy. When protests were made to the French government, Mazzini found himself proscribed in France, and then fled to Switzerland. In disguise, he returned to Genoa in 1833, but for lack of money the revolution started failed, and he escaped to Berne. In 1837 he reached London, but in such a state of poverty that he was obliged to pawn his overcoat. His writings sent out from his garret, the poorest quarter of London, attracted the attention of Thomas Carlyle, who became his admirer and friend. As a man of genius, he won recognition in the most exclusive literary set of London. Rosetti, the poet and artist, was at that time coming to influence in London, for the Italian group collected money and scattered their pamphlets revolutionary all over Italy. The spirit of revolt became a contagion. It was the spirit of '76 in our Boston, the spirit of Cromwell and Milton in England, that had reappeared in Italy in Mazzini and Manin, and the young revolutionists who followed them.

But if Mazzini was the man who wrote and spoke for liberty, it was Garibaldi who fought the battles for the new movement. France never loved Napoleon, nor England Wellington, as Italy had loved Garibaldi. A few of his veterans still survive, men who lived with him, marched with him, starved with him, fought with him, and who now idolize and all but worship his memory. Garibaldi came of a family of sailors. At 13 his father made him captain of one of his own ships, and for ten years he carried freight and passengers from one port to another. By travel he came to know every section and seaport of the land, and knew at first hand the abuses of foreign governments. In his anger and indignation he joined a secret society of patriots. Thereon the government put a price on his head. Escaping, he fled to South America, where he remained for fourteen years as drover, cattle farmer, builder of roads, soldier of fortune. One day, lifting his eyes from the street, he saw a young woman standing in an open window. Always a believer in destiny, he returned to seek her out and make her his wife. Dressed as a boy, she rode with him up and down the land on his expeditions, meeting all his perils in the city and his perils in the wilderness.

In 1850 Garibaldi came to New York and for three years lived on Staten Island. Learning our language he became intensely interested in the anti-slavery movement, heard Beecher here in Plymouth, Phillips, met Frederick Douglas and Garrison and the other leaders. Every month he was more and more impressed with the success of 3,000,000 American colonists in their revolt against England. He began to dream his dream of a rebellion of the peasants in Italy. Beginning to correspond with revolutionary societies, and Mazzini, Garibaldi suddenly determined to return to his native land and lead a rebellion. His "Call to Arms" is one of the striking documents in military history. One morning a placard was found on the walls of the Italian cities. It was Garibaldi's Call to Arms. What he offered men was rags to wear, crusts to eat, ditches for beds, no pay, forced marches, scant rations, and for medals sword gashes and bayonet thrusts and death—but with one accord the Italian peasants rushed to Garibaldi. Without military training, not a student of tactics, Garibaldi won victory after victory. Soon Sicily and South Italy were free, and he moved on Naples. Then there was a coalition between the forces of Victor Emmanuel, the leader of the royalist army, and Garibaldi, the leader of the revolutionists. Kings are proverbially ungrateful, and when Victor Emmanuel was safely seated on his throne, the Italian King sent Garibaldi, not to the head of his army, but back to his peasant's farm. But if this act lessened the popularity of the King, it enhanced the fame of Garibaldi.

As an illustration of his people's devotion to the soldier, we may recall an incident of the time when Garibaldi was in hiding because of a price set on his head. His wife was ill and dying, and Garibaldi was hidden in the mountain fastness. To visit his wife it was necessary to ride straight across the land, through country, village and town. For an Italian to see Garibaldi and not denounce him, was to suffer imprisonment. The hero started, boldly, across the land. Word went on in advance that he was coming. The farmers beside the road turned their backs and shielded their eyes, speaking only words of affection as the silent soldier passed. The people in the villages went in the houses and pulled down their blinds, and at high noon Garibaldi rode through the deserted towns that were as silent as graveyards. He closed the eyes of his wife in death, and returned in safety to his hiding place. History holds no finer tale. What Garibaldi gave the people in devotion, they returned in loyalty, and were willing to suffer unto blood, striving against tyranny. For years he lived in his little rocky farm, tilling the soil, without recognition or reward from his government. Once the farmer went to England, to find a half-million people in the streets, while he received an ovation that has never been equaled in enthusiasm, unless it was the one given to Kossuth by New York in 1850. But the wonderful monument to Garibaldi in Rome was an attempt to do justice to the memory of the dead soldier. But it is the United States and independent Italy, cleansed of foreign soldiers, that is the real monument to Garibaldi.

CAVOUR, THE STATESMAN.

But it was not enough for Italy to celebrate Mazzini, the agitator and orator, and Garibaldi, the soldier and hero. Italy has also been celebrating the achievement of Cavour, the statesman. Count Cavour was born a patrician, the owner of rich estates. He fell heir to all the wisdom of Italy, was widely traveled, knew every foreign capital. He was essentially a man of intellect, cold, shrewd, far-sighted, courageous, of great initiative, of marvellous resources. What Bismarck did for Germany, that and more Cavour did for Italy. The Iron Chancellor won many victories by mailed hand and sheer brute force. Cavour relied upon the intellect, and superior wisdom for his great diplomatic battles and victories. Few men have ever tried so patiently to fit themselves for a great mission. He went to France, and to England, to study at first hand the revolution in both countries. He met every man in Europe whom he could possibly meet, who could give him any guidance and counsel. Finally he adopted the policy of playing the interests of one nation off against another. He was successful, and succeeded finally in forming an alliance of the strong nations against the enemies of Italy. He detached both England and France from their relations with Austria. The task seemed an impossible one. There were Austrian armies to be expelled, French armies to be controlled, the armies of Naples to be defeated, the Pope's temporal power and his soldiers to be broken down, and he had the unorganized revolutionists of dissevered Italy to support him and yet Cavour was victorious. It was a marvellous achievement. And when at length Italy was one nation and free, and the capital was moved to Rome, and instead of four foreign banners the people followed one flag, Italy went into transports of gratitude and joy. This is the explanation of the glowing enthusiasm of the Italian people during this summer, when they have celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their Italian independence.

ACTIVE WOMEN.

William H. McCleerey, a Salt Lake shoemaker for twenty years, has finally been discovered to be a woman. When her husband died twenty years ago, she succeded to his business and adopted male attire, and so well did she preserve her disguise that she was employed for years as instructor in the industrial department of the University of Utah and the Ogden School for the Deaf and Blind. Mrs. McCleerey declares that she had many interesting experiences with her own sex, several of whom, she says, fell desperately in love with her.

Miss Seruya, a young Portuguese woman, is said to have the only shop in the world selling only feminist literature. Her collection is international, with papers and magazines in almost every written language. She is reported to be working toward an international bureau in woman's work.

Mrs. Howard A. Colby, of Plainfield, N. J., is said to be the first woman to use colored photography in the Maine woods. She has photographed a pair of wild moose. There are five pictures showing the cow and bull moose together, and one of the bull alone.

Mrs. Ida Ireland of Madison, Me., is proclaimed the smartest woman in the State. Mrs. Ireland keeps a boarding house in that town, and during September she made more than 300 loaves of bread, more than 100 pies, cooked three meals a day for sixteen boarders, did all their washing and even found time to help some of the neighbors clean house. Mrs. Ireland's net earnings for the month were $180.

Elizabeth Carpenter of Castine, Me., a freshman at Smith College, was awarded the $200 prize for the best entrance examination. She is the youngest student in the class of about 400, being scarcely 15 years old.

Mrs. Willa G. Hulett, captain commander and pilot of the steamboat Mary, is the only woman steamboat master in the St. Louis section of the Mississippi Valley. Several years ago, when her husband failed in his examination for a pilot and master's license because of defective eyes, Mrs. Hulett came to St. Louis and passed with credits to spare. She took charge of the steamer, and with the husband acting as the engineer they have been successful in competition for the moving of the heavy fruit crop this season.

Exhibit of School Work.

Exhibits of articles made by pupils of the parental and truant special schools, as well as from the model cottage and day nursery at Utah-street school, were placed on view at the Y.M.C.A. building, this week, in connection with the Playground and Recreation Institute. Visitors were much pleased with the manual work of these pupils, some of which showed positive genius for design and good technical skill in execution.

Simon Senman, a Pottsville (Pa.) junk dealer, who is a great-grandfather, has taken out a license to marry his third wife, whose marriage to Senman will be her second matrimonial venture.

THE NEW ITALY;

B. REV. DR. NEWELL DWIGHT HILLIS.

REV. DR. NEWELL DWIGHT HILLS, pastor of Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, lectured on his observations in his extended European trip the past summer. His subject was, "The New Italy and the Celebration of the Fortieth Anniversary of Her Liberty." The text was in these words from the Book of Joshua: "And these stones shall be a memorial."

Italy is now completing her six months' celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of her independence. The Eternal City was founded 753 years before Christ, and during these twenty-six centuries time has performed its greatest exploits. With all these centuries behind Italy, it seems incredible that the mother land has enjoyed but fifty years of Italian unity and liberty! The great celebration was held in Rome, in a "world's fair" that appealed to the interest of many countries. England sent to Rome the works of Watts and the Pre-Raphaelite school; France loaned her examples of the old Italian masters, as did Spain; Germany made an exhibition of her achievements in chemistry and electricity, while the United States and South America confined its exhibition of their resources to fruits and grains and minerals, that would excite the interest of Italians and promote immigration. But, great as was the exhibition in Rome, after all, the chief exhibit was the Eternal City itself. What chance had the new buildings in a modern world's fair, when placed over against St. Peter's, with its approaches, galleries, library and palace that cover forty acres of ground! and holds the priceless crown treasures of five and twenty centuries! How can a modern stucco building, filled with machinery, compete with the Forum, the Palace of Caesar, the Golden House of Nero, or the Appian Way? "Oh, Rome, my country, city of the soul! All orphans of the heart must turn to thee, thou mother of dead empires, thou Niobe of nations. The Goth, time, war, flood and fire have wrecked the seven-hilled city's pride! Palace and tower have become a chaos of ruins. A city is at our feet, as fragile as man's clay." Our new land has a scanty stock of human associations.

It could not be otherwise — the mountain States have but one or two people per square mile. Strike a spade anywhere in Italian soil, and the workman brings up old coins, a fragment of a vase, a chip from a statue. Rome is the city of Caesar—the greatest soldier, the greatest statesman, the greatest speaker and the greatest narrative writer the Imperial City ever produced. In Rome dwelt Virgil, one of the five great epic poets; in Rome dwelt Lucretius, the father of modern evolution; in Rome dwelt Marcus Aurelius, the Emperor, and Epictetus, the slave; to Rome came Constantine, to proclaim Christianity, and from Rome went Augustine, to transform North Africa. Dante, father of the Renaissance, was of Italy, as was Galileo, father of modern science; and Columbus, our great discoverer. The world's greatest architect, Michael Angelo, was Italian, as was Raphael, its greatest lyric painter. Arnold of Rugby, on the morning after his arrival, wrote: "Again this date of Rome, the most solemn and interesting that my hand can ever write." Hawthorne found his heart strings mysteriously attached to the Eternal City, and drawing him thither more strongly than did the spot where he was born. For the stones that crumbled under his feet spoke to him, and the dust under his feet rose upon associations of human grandeur, as if from broken thrones and empires. For Italy herself is an enlarged Louvre, a vast museum, a gallery, crowded with art treasures, a British museum, multiplied infinitely for the inspiration of mankind.

THE OLD ITALY AND ITS ABUSES.

What is the explanation of the enthusiasm of the Italians over this fiftieth anniversary of Italian unity and independence? The answer is that hunger lends sweetness to the bread, sickness and pain enhance the medicine, and its value, while the memory of oppression and wrong has sharpened the Italian's appreciation of his independence. Fifty years ago Italy was a broken and dissevered land, the fragments having been distributed among foreign nations. Austria ruled Northern Italy, a foreign Emperor controlled Sardinia, the French King ruled another fragment, the Pope had four small States, where he was a temporal King, and Ferdinand was King of Naples and Sicily. A map of Italy, with its different colors, standing for foreign governments, made it look like a patchwork quilt, and gave meaning to Mazzini's word, "Let us wipe all these colors from the map and stain the map one color—if need be, red." All government imposed from without is more or less unjust, by reason of a failure to understand the people. To be just and fair, government must be based on self-control. To what extent foreign abuses had developed may be seen by a page torn from the career of Gladstone.

In 1850 the English statesman went with his two daughters to Naples for a brief outing. One night an Italian patriot came to Gladstone's hotel and spread out before the Englishman the story of the wrongs of the political prisoners who were dying in the dungeons of Naples. In that hour Gladstone sent his daughters out for the usual sight-seeing in Capri, and Pompeii, and Sorrento, but himself plunged into a series of personal investigations. Upon one plea or another he obtained access to the prisons. He visited the dungeons, saw men reeking in filth, starved into skeletons, bleached white as death through long staying in underground cells. The sight of vermin and cockroaches and rats crawling over prisoners whose only crime had been that they had made a plea against tyranny and in favor of liberty stirred Gladstone to the depths. Having verified all of the statements, Gladstone hurried home to London, and presented the whole subject to the Prime Minister, Lord Aberdeen, and his Cabinet. But the English government did not see its way clear to trouble with Austria and the King of Naples, and the Pope of Rome. After a fortnight, when nothing had been done, Gladstone published his letters. Within a week they were the sensation of Europe. The rulers in every capital were discussing the wrong of Italy. In his anger, the King of Naples retaliated by new and more severe rules, but the protesting voices became so insistent and so angry that, in alarm, counter orders were issued. Riots began to break out; the Austrian soldiers were stoned in the cities of the North; French soldiers were mobbed in the streets of Paris; the soldiers of the Pope and of the King of Naples were attacked in the night; all Italy began to rock with revolution, and heave as with an earthquake, preparatory to the great conflict and the final victory for Italian unity and independence.

MAZZINI, THE ORATOR.

In every political and social revolution, there have been the educators and orators who have inflamed the people against tyranny, and inspired the people with the love of liberty. Later come the soldiers who have led the people into battle, and the statesmen who have organized the revolt into permanent laws. It was Adams, Patrick Henry and Fisher Ames who roused our Revolutionary forefathers. It was Garrison and Phillips who started the movement in Boston against slavery. It was Mazzini who was at once the William Lloyd Garrison and the Wendell Phillips of the Italian campaign. Mazzini was a prophet, a dreamer and a visionary. He was born in 1809, in the year that gave the world Lincoln the Emancipator and Darwin the scientist. From his childhood patriotism was the one passion of his life. He was reared on Dante, and took the fiery poet's thoughts into his mind like bread and meat into the physical system. His antagonism to aristocracy and privilege was so intense as to make him unfair to the autocratic landowners. It is not hard to understand his intense democracy. Every town and city was filled with foreign soldiers, holding the people in subjection. Spies and informers were always upon Mazzini's track. The whole land was in a ferment. On the street corners the citizens were muttering their indignation. The spirit of revolt burned day and night like a hidden fire.

Young Mazzini finally established a liberal paper in Genoa. He then organized a secret political society called Young Italy. One morning he published an editorial reflecting upon the Austrian government, and that afternoon he fled in disguise to avoid arrest and probable death. Then from across the border line in France he sent his pamphlets back to Italy. When protests were made to the French government, Mazzini found himself proscribed in France, and then fled to Switzerland. In disguise, he returned to Genoa in 1833, but for lack of money the revolution started failed, and he escaped to Berne. In 1837 he reached London, but in such a state of poverty that he was obliged to pawn his overcoat. His writings sent out from his garret, the poorest quarter of London, attracted the attention of Thomas Carlyle, who became his admirer and friend. As a man of genius, he won recognition in the most exclusive literary set of London. Rosetti, the poet and artist, was at that time coming to influence in London, for the Italian group collected money and scattered their pamphlets revolutionary all over Italy. The spirit of revolt became a contagion. It was the spirit of '76 in our Boston, the spirit of Cromwell and Milton in England, that had reappeared in Italy in Mazzini and Manin, and the young revolutionists who followed them.

But if Mazzini was the man who wrote and spoke for liberty, it was Garibaldi who fought the battles for the new movement. France never loved Napoleon, nor England Wellington, as Italy had loved Garibaldi. A few of his veterans still survive, men who lived with him, marched with him, starved with him, fought with him, and who now idolize and all but worship his memory. Garibaldi came of a family of sailors. At 13 his father made him captain of one of his own ships, and for ten years he carried freight and passengers from one port to another. By travel he came to know every section and seaport of the land, and knew at first hand the abuses of foreign governments. In his anger and indignation he joined a secret society of patriots. Thereon the government put a price on his head. Escaping, he fled to South America, where he remained for fourteen years as drover, cattle farmer, builder of roads, soldier of fortune. One day, lifting his eyes from the str[illegible], he saw a young woman standing in an open window. Always a believer in destiny, he returned to seek her out and make her his wife. Dressed as a boy, she rode with him up and down the land on his expeditions, meeting all his perils in the city and his perils in the wilderness.

In 1850 Garibaldi came to New York and for three years lived on Staten Island. Learning our language he became intensely interested in the anti-slavery movement, heard Beecher here in Plymouth, Phillips, met Frederick Douglas and Garrison and the other leaders. Every month he was more and more impressed with the success of 3,000,000 American colonists in their revolt against England. He began to dream his dream of a rebellion of the peasants in Italy. Beginning to correspond with revolutionary societies, and Mazzini, Garibaldi suddenly determined to return to his native land and lead a rebellion. His "Call to Arms" is one of the striking documents in military history. One morning a placard was found on the walls of the Italian cities. It was Garibaldi's Call to Arms. What he offered men was rags to wear, crusts to eat, ditches for beds, no pay, forced marches, scant rations, and for medals sword gashes and bayonet thrusts and death—but with one accord the Italian peasants rushed to Garibaldi. Without military training, not a student of tactics, Garibaldi won victory after victory. Soon Sicily and South Italy were free, and he moved on Naples. Then there was a coalition between the forces of Victor Emmanuel, the leader of the royalist army, and Garibaldi, the leader of the revolutionists. Kings are proverbially ungrateful, and when Victor Emmanuel was safely seated on his throne, the Italian King sent Garibaldi, not to the head of his army, but back to his peasant's farm. But if this act lessened the popularity of the King, it enhanced the fame of Garibaldi.

As an illustration of his people's devotion to the soldier, we may recall an incident of the time when Garibaldi was in hiding because of a price set on his head. His wife was ill and dying, and Garibaldi was hidden in the mountain fastness. To visit his wife it was necessary to ride straight across the land, through country, village and town. For an Italian to see Garibaldi and not denounce him, was to suffer imprisonment. The hero started, boldly, across the land. Word went on in advance that he was coming. The farmers beside the road turned their backs and shielded their eyes, speaking only words of affection as the silent soldier passed. The people in the villages went in the houses and pulled down their blinds, and at high noon Garibaldi rode through the deserted towns that were as silent as graveyards. He closed the eyes of his wife in death, and returned in safety to his hiding place. History holds no finer tale. What Garibaldi gave the people in devotion, they returned in loyalty, and were willing to suffer unto blood, striving against tyranny. For years he lived in his little rocky farm, tilling the soil, without recognition or reward from his government. Once the farmer went to England, to find a half-million people in the streets, while he received an ovation that has never been equaled in enthusiasm, unless it was the one given to Kossuth by New York in 1850. But the wonderful monument to Garibaldi in Rome was an attempt to do justice to the memory of the dead soldier. But it is the United States and independent Italy, cleansed of foreign soldiers, that is the real monument to Garibaldi.

CAVOUR, THE STATESMAN.

But it was not enough for Italy to celebrate Mazzini, the agitator and orator, and Garibaldi, the soldier and hero. Italy has also been celebrating the achievement of Cavour, the statesman. Count Cavour was born a patrician, the owner of rich estates. He fell heir to all the wisdom of Italy, was widely traveled, knew every foreign capital. He was essentially a man of intellect, cold, shrewd, far-sighted, courageous, of great initiative, of marvellous resources. What Bismarck did for Germany, that and more Cavour did for Italy. The Iron Chancellor won many victories by mailed hand and sheer brute force. Cavour relied upon the intellect, and superior wisdom for his great diplomatic battles and victories. Few men have ever tried so patiently to fit themselves for a great mission. He went to France, and to England, to study at first hand the revolution in both countries. He met every man in Europe whom he could possibly meet, who could give him any guidance and counsel. Finally he adopted the policy of playing the interests of one nation off against another. He was successful, and succeeded finally in forming an alliance of the strong nations against the enemies of Italy. He detached both England and France from their relations with Austria. The task seemed an impossible one. There were Austrian armies to be expelled, French armies to be controlled, the armies of Naples to be defeated, the Pope's temporal power and his soldiers to be broken down, and he had the unorganized revolutionists of dissevered Italy to support him and yet Cavour was victorious. It was a marvellous achievement. And when at length Italy was one nation and free, and the capital was moved to Rome, and instead of four foreign banners the people followed one flag, Italy went into transports of gratitude and joy. This is the explanation of the glowing enthusiasm of the Italian people during this summer, when they have celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their Italian independence.

ACTIVE WOMEN.

William H. McCleerey, a Salt Lake shoemaker for twenty years, has finally been discovered to be a woman. When her husband died twenty years ago, she succeded to his business and adopted male attire, and so well did she preserve her disguise that she was employed for years as instructor in the industrial department of the University of Utah and the Ogden School for the Deaf and Blind. Mrs. McCleerey declares that she had many interesting experiences with her own sex, several of whom, she says, fell desperately in love with her.

Miss Seruya, a young Portuguese woman, is said to have the only shop in the world selling only feminist literature. Her collection is international, with papers and magazines in almost every written language. She is reported to be working toward an international bureau in woman's work.

Mrs. Howard A. Colby, of Plainfield, N. J., is said to be the first woman to use colored photography in the Maine woods. She has photographed a pair of wild moose. There are five pictures showing the cow and bull moose together, and one of the bull alone.

Mrs. Ida Ireland of Madison, Me., is proclaimed the smartest woman in the State. Mrs. Ireland keeps a boarding house in that town, and during September she made more than 300 loaves of bread, more than 100 pies, cooked three meals a day for sixteen boarders, did all their washing and even found time to help some of the neighbors clean house. Mrs. Ireland's net earnings for the month were $180.

Elizabeth Carpenter of Castine, Me., a freshman at Smith College, was awarded the $200 prize for the best entrance examination. She is the youngest student in the class of about 400, being scarcely 15 years old.

Mrs. Willa G. Hulett, captain commander and pilot of the steamboat Mary, is the only woman steamboat master in the St. Louis section of the Mississippi Valley. Several years ago, when her husband failed in his examination for a pilot and master's license because of defective eyes, Mrs. Hulett came to St. Louis and passed with credits to spare. She took charge of the steamer, and with the husband acting as the engineer they have been successful in competition for the moving of the heavy fruit crop this season.

Exhibit of School Work.

Exhibits of articles made by pupils of the parental and truant special schools, as well as from the model cottage and day nursery at Utah-street school, were placed on view at the Y.M.C.A. building, this week, in connection with the Playground and Recreation Institute. Visitors were much pleased with the manual work of these pupils, some of which showed positive genius for design and good technical skill in execution.

Simon Senman, a Pottsville (Pa.) junk dealer, who is a great-grandfather, has taken out a license to marry his third wife, whose marriage to Senman will be her second matrimonial venture.

WHEN You Deposit Your Money in a savings bank it is safe, but it pays you only a small amount of interest. The stockholders of the bank take their share of the profits which your money earns.

Now if you could have the same security that a savings bank affords, and, at the same time, get both the depositors' and the stockholders' profits you would have an ideal investment.

This is the proposition I have to offer. Isn't it worth your while to see me?

PERSONAL—

PROF. C. IRVIN ALTHOUSE,

NOTED ASTROLOGER AND PALMIST OF NATIONAL FAME AND REPUTATION.

305½ S. SPRING, NEAR THIRD ST.

A RESIDENT OF LOS ANGELES 28 YEARS.

PROF. ALTHOUSE is an experienced practitioner in the science of modern ASTROLOGY, by which he has made many REMARKABLE PREDICTIONS. The horoscope shows the powerful influence of the planets in all affairs of life. It shows diseases, deaths, love and marriage, financial affairs, talents, environments, about children, relatives, when and where to travel, what to seek or to avoid, when in danger of losses, troubles, etc., etc.; also your good periods coming—GIVING DATES OF THESE EVENTS FOR THE FUTURE.

Your Horoscope is also a key to the character of others, and in this respect can be of the utmost use to you.

PROF. ALTHOUSE read E. H. Sothern, Nat Goodwin, Mary Mannering, Gadski, Admiral Schley, David Starr Jordan, ex-Gov. Pardee, ex-Senator Clark, Gen. Chaffee, Edison, Sousa, Modjeska, Julia Marlowe, Anna Held, Jefferson, Capt. Hobson, Lillian Russell, Calve, Admiral Evans, H. E. Huntington, De Wolf Hopper, Maxine Elliott, Ethel Barrymore, etc.

PROF. ALTHOUSE'S SKILLED WORK, with his trained judgment, must in no wise be classed with that of other readers. Therefore, do not waste your money on the idiotic advice and warning of HUMBUG astrologers, palmists, psychics—those doing dishonest work.

PROF. ALTHOUSE is an expert PALMIST, and WITH EACH PALM READING gives also an ASTROLOGICAL READING.

DR. J. A. LARSON writes: "I want to say that your reading was the most satisfactory thing I have ever had in my life. I know a great deal about these sciences, and I consider your work as the most THOROUGH and reliable of any reader in the United States."

LOUIS JAMES says: "I wish to say that your reading was entirely SATISFACTORY."

FREDERICK WARDE says: "Your reading was most SATISFACTORY. Your knowledge and skill is REMARKABLE."

MME. SCHUMANN-HEINK says: "I was greatly surprised to find how many of your warnings were well founded. YOUR READING WAS MOST MARVELOUS."

MME. BALDWIN writes: "The Horoscope you wrote for me is absolutely CORRECT. My friend, MME. NORDICA, the singer, first showed me her Horoscope, and recommended your work to me. Inclosed find check for four more Horoscopes—all friends of mine."

The interpretation of a horoscope is a fine art; the percentage of "GENUINE" astrologers is exceedingly small. To know a little of astrology out of books, and to be a skilfully trained, EXPERIENCED ASTROLOGER, are two entirely different things. Therefore, in this work, it depends largely WHO it is that reads you, as to the RESULTS obtained.

PROF. ALTHOUSE'S wonderful proficiency in the casting of HOROSCOPES and hand reading has brought him a LARGE AND SUCCESSFUL PRACTICE. The most private confidences are reposed in him, and his advice is sought in the most difficult and critical circumstances. Personal attention. Strict privacy. HIGHEST GRADE OF WORK that skill and many years of experience can produce; therefore HIGH-CLASS PATRONAGE SOLICITED.

Daily and evenings; Sunday, 10 to 2.

50c & $1. ARE YOU IN TROUBLE? 50c & $1.

DO YOU NEED ADVICE?

IF SO, CONSULT

THE WORLD'S GREATEST PSYCHICS,

BYRON STANLEY,

247 S. HILL ST.

READINGS FOR THE NEXT 7 DAYS ONLY

50c. $1.00. 50c. $1.00.

Cut this adv. out for reference.

DO YOU WANT TO KNOW ABOUT YOUR BUSINESS, HEALTH, MARRIAGE, LOVE AFFAIRS, OR HOW TO IMPROVE YOUR CONDITION FINANCIALLY AND SOCIALLY?

ALWAYS CONSULT THE BEST. IT IS THE CHEAPEST IN THE END. IT IS BETTER TO CONSULT NO CLAIRVOYANT THAN ONE WHO IS NOT ABLE TO HELP YOU.

If you want the truth, with reliable advice, you will consult Stanley on past, present and future.

BYRON STANLEY

fully appreciates that in this day of sensational advertising there are more false claims and misrepresentations chaperoned through the columns of the daily press than the most hypential tongue could utter in a lifetime, until one cannot be blamed for doubting almost everything they read. Therefore, he says to you—come to him this very day and let him give you a complete reading, telling you every hope, fear or ambition, better than you could explain yourself. He will tell you the bad as well as the good, keeping nothing hidden from you. He will tell you everything upon matters of love, marriage, divorce, business, health; in fact, he will read your life like an open book.

NO NEED TO TELL HIM.

There is no need to tell Byron Stanley your story. There will be no "quizzing" or asking of questions. His talent enables him to instinctively know your wants and troubles. Without any attempt at mystification, but with unerring sight into the inner nature of things, he reveals that which you most want to know.

To whom it may concern: We take great pleasure in recommending our brother, PROF. BYRON STANLEY, as a life reader of good standing, having to our knowledge been fully developed in all the various phases of mental mediumship. We cordially recommend him to any individual or society that may need his advice.

DR. JOHN WESTERFIELD,
President Indiana State Association of Spiritualists.
Chesterfield, Ind., Sept. 4, 1896.

Don't struggle with a burden you can divide. A troubled mind begets a morbid conscience. Sympathy, consolation and timely advice heal the worst of wounds. Be advised and relieved of anxiety.

Readings, 10 to 8, daily and Sundays.

Byron Stanley does not read by mail, and has no time to wait on people who call through curiosity.

MRS. MASSON,
the noted palmist of London, Eng., may be consulted at 322 S. SPRING ST., (over Owl Drug Store) by those desiring CAREFUL CONSCIENTIOUS AND SCIENTIFIC HAND READINGS FROM ONE OF THE FOREMOST PALMISTS OF THE DAY.

The earnest student and thinker will soon learn in his investigation along psychological lines that that which pertains to occult phenomena proper can readily be distinguished from crude and oft-exposed SLEIGHT-OF-HAND TRICKS, the most common of which is the telling of the subject's name, age, etc., AFTER HE HIMSELF HAS WRITTEN THAT information.

PALMISTRY, HONESTLY PRACTICED, WILL NOT tell you your name, but it WILL give you information of considerably greater value in every-day life.

Your vocation, your present line of work, matters of health and domestic life, financial conditions, and ways and means of climbing out of a rut of ill luck into wide paths of success and prosperity can all be told you through scientific palmistry WITHOUT A SINGLE QUESTION, WRITTEN OR VERBAL.

MRS. MASSON DOES NOT APPEAL TO IGNORANT SUPERSTITION, BUT TO THE FINEST INTELLIGENCE.

HIGH-CLASS PATRONAGE SOLICITED.
(Daily and evenings: Sundays, 9 to 5.)

His salary and opportunities will be circumscribed only by his ability to produce. He may be employed, but perhaps his present employment does not give him the opportunity for growth that big men crave. We are in the real estate and investment business in a large way and are doing a big business and need a man who is capable of becoming a big man. If you feel the "power within" address, with full particulars concerning yourself, DD, box 57, TIMES OFFICE. If you can convince others, you can us.

All we require is honesty, ability, ambition and willingness to learn a lucrative business. No soliciting or traveling. This is an exceptional opportunity for a man in your section to get into a big paying business without capital and become independent for life. Write at once for full particulars. Address E. R. MARDEN, Pres. The National Co-Operative Real Estate Co. L 704 Marden Bldg., Washington, D. C.

FITZGERALD MUSIC COMPANY
SELLING OUT
ENTIRE BURTON MUSIC CO. STOCK OF PIANOS, PLAYER-PIANOS, ETC.

The selling out of the entire stock of Pianos, Player-Pianos, Organs, Talking Machines, Small Goods, Sheet Music, Fixtures, etc., makes piano buying NOW a pleasant duty, a conservative investment, or a splendid speculation at the ridiculously low prices at which they are being sold.

A MASTER SCHOLARSHIP FREE.

Fitzgerald again takes the initiative in distributing Master Scholarships. Heretofore, whenever really valuable scholarships were offered to piano buyers, the conditions imposed were usually prohibitive—the purchasers were required to buy a new and expensive piano. Not so with our proposition. You get your scholarship in the Columbia Musical College if you only buy a $50 piano, and you don't have to pay one penny extra in either price or terms.

What's the Cause?

EXPLOSION AND FIRE AT STORE AND HOME.

THE police were called upon last night to investigate the origin of a fire in a grocery store and dwelling at No. 3640 East Sixth street, owned by an Italian whose name they were not able to learn. Previous to the outburst of the flames there was a terrific explosion, and a moment later the entire building was ablaze. When the firemen arrived it was impossible to save the property, owing to the start obtained by the fire.

The owner of the place was questioned by the police, but being unable to speak English the officers were balked in ascertaining the facts.

Whether the explosion was due to powder or gasoline is a point that will be settled if possible today.

The loss on the building is estimated at $400, and an equal amount on the contents, but the owner could not understand the questions about the insurance carried by him, and an interpreter will be required to aid in the investigation.

Revelation.

VERMILYA "DEATH FLAT" UNCOVERS POISON MYSTERY

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Nov. 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] From an ordinary pepper box filled with enough arsenic to kill one hundred men was poured the grewsome secret of Mrs. Louise Vermilya's "death flat" this afternoon.

The pepper shaker that now is credited with sprinkling death to Arthur T. Bissolette, and at least six other victims, at their meals, was wielded by Mrs. Vermilya, and an all but fatal quantity was dusted over her food.

Only the most vigorous action of nurses and physicians saved the woman from following her supposed victims to the grave in identically the same manner that they went.

But it was not the hand of retribution that placed the woman within the shadow of the grave. It was her own calm request that caused an unsuspecting nurse to give her the poison-filled box.

Today dramatic doing's in the Vermilya flat, No. 419 East Twenty-ninth street, came in the midst of revelations that were being told to the accused woman one by one.

It was by a remarkable chance that two detectives and three nurses, who are guarding Mrs. Vermilya, were saved from the fate of the men whose deaths they are investigating.

For three days the deadly pepper box had sat side by side with a talcum powder box, filled with pepper, in the pantry of the flat. Day after day, meal after meal, the watchers have taken one of the boxes at random and seasoned their food from its contents.

In some inexplicable manner they selected the harmless talcum box each time. Some guiding influence that the detectives have been unable to explain, led them to select the box least likely to contain pepper, thus saving them from poisoning—possibly death.

PARK MOVEMENT IN PROMOTION.

CITIZENS INDORSE PROJECT OF COMMISSION.

County and City Will Unite in Effort to Secure and Beautify Arroyo Seco—Committee Authorized to Act in Conjunction With Officials in Accomplishing that End.

The free stereopticon lecture given last night in the Auditorium by Park Commissioner Lippincott on the subject of the proposed park and boulevard system for the city, was well attended and full of interest.

Preceding the lecture Meyer Lissner, president of the City Club, presented Mrs. Lobingier, president of the Women's City Club, who spoke enthusiastically of the work and plans of the Park Commission and solicited the interest and activity of all the people in support of their efforts to improve the Arroyo Seco and connect all the parks with an adequate system of boulevards.

County Supervisor Pridham spoke for himself and Supervisor Butler, saying they would stand behind the Park Commission in their efforts to get possesion of the Arroyo, and gave it as his belief that the entire board would do the same.

Park Commissioner O'Melveny briefly set forth the disadvantages faced by that body, because it has been shorn of all its powers except to make rules. It cannot hire or discharge an employee, buy a keg of nails, a rare plant, or make the purchase of any property considered necessary, and he asked the support of all the people when a charter provision is presented, giving them executive powers. He said that even the money for the concessions in the parks, instead of going to the park fund where it belongs, goes into the general fund of the City Council. He anticipates that the new Charter Revision Committee will grant them the desired powers and solicited their ratification at the hands of the voters.

Mr. Lippincott delivered an instructive lecture, in which he outlined the proposed boluevards and some of the desired park improvements. He then showed on the screen views in the parks of many cities showing how far we are behind in the general development, and closed with a number of splendid scenic views of Griffith and Elysian parks, and also made a plea that adequate powers be given the Park Commission that it may be able to work out plans worthy the city and the natural possibilities.

Before adjournment, the meeting adopted a resolution, authorizing the City Club to appoint a committee of nine "to work for the improvement of the present parks, the adoption of an adequate plan, the acquisition of such additional areas for parks and parkways as may be necessary for the perfection of this enterprise, and for such modification of the laws governing the Park Commission as may be essential to efficiently carry out these betterments," and particularly to work for the consummation of the Arroyo Seco enterprise and the connection of Elysian Park with the National Forways.

FLIES OVER WARSHIPS.

Los Angeles Aviator Takes Pleasure Jaunt and Surprises Boys of the Fleet by Beautiful Exhibition.

Many of the boys in blue aboard the warships remaining in Los Angeles harbor saw their first aeroplane, yesterday, when D. C. De Hart flew from Hyde Park on the outskirts of the city near Inglewood to San Pedro and Long Beach and back.

De Hart was in the air one hour and twenty minutes, making but one stop, to take on gasoline, as he only had a small tank. He reached an altitude of 2000 feet, and when over the fleet was about 1500 feet in the air. In passing over Terminal Island De Hart looked directly down one of the great chimneys of a ship-building plant.

De Hart passed over Dominguez field going both ways, and coming back alighted in a field near by for his gasoline supply. His first flight was for fifty minutes.

The sailors aboard the warships cheered lustily when De Hart passed near them. The seat of this particular biplane is advanced far in front of the planes, so that the aviator looks like the great head of a bird. He looks down and to either side with nothing to interfere with his view.

De Hart's flight yesterday was a mere pleasure jaunt, and was made neither at the solicitation nor under the auspices of any one.

TO RECLAIM SWAMPS.

Advisory Board Meets and Declares Southern Delegates to Irrigation Congress Will Attempt to Capture Organization.

The advisory board appointed by the Governor to co-operate with the officials of the nineteenth National Irrigation Congress, which will assemble at Chicago December 5, met in this city yesterday in response to the call of the chairman.

Various parts of the State were represented, the full membership of the board being as follows: William E. Smythe, San Diego, chairman; W. F. Chandler, Fresno; W. H. Carlin, Marysville; Benjamin Ide Wheeler, Berkeley; L. L. Dennett, Modesto; James F. Peck, Berkeley; Ernest Weyand, Colusa; F. G. Vivian, King City; Miguel Estudillo and Francis Cuttle, Riverside.

The board adopted measures intended to secure the presence of a large delegation at Chicago. Members of the board say delegates from the Southern States, assuming that western deserts have now been largely reclaimed, will attempt to capture the Chicago congress, change its name, and direct its future energies to the reclamation of vast swamps in the South. This will be fought by the West, which believes that the irrigation work must be continued and enlarged and that the great prestige of this congress should be retained within this interest.

Every city and county is urged by the advisory board to send delegates to Chicago to protect the interests of this State.

Mr. Vivian of King City brought to the attention of the board the project in Monterey county for reclaiming a vast area of Salinas Valley by government enterprise. He was assured that the California delegation will stand as a unit in urging this project upon the United States reclamation officials at Chicago in December.

OPPOSE WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

San Francisco Women Will Try to Repeal Law by Vote of Women Themselves in Next Election.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 4.—The Women's Inative League of California, which proposes to bring the question of woman suffrage again before the voters of the State, this time with the women themselves empowered to express their will at the polls, opened headquarters in this city today and will start canvassers out to obtain signatures to a petition asking a reconsideration of the Constitutional amendment recently adopted. Miss K. Croney is president of the league and stated today that it had a membership of 125 women at the present time. She stated that volunteer canvassers would start work tomorrow and that later the league hoped to employ experienced men for the work. Equal suffrage she predicted, would be overwhelmingly defeated if presented again, now that women may vote on the question.

It is proposed to bring the question up at the Presidential election next year and Miss Croney declared the league expected no trouble in securing the 30,000 or more needed signatures to the initiative petition.

GOVERNMENT'S INTEREST.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—Officials of the Department of Justice say the government is taking no hand in the case of the labor officials now on trial at Los Angeles for alleged dynamiting outrages.

It has been charged that some of those men transported into interstate commerce explosives not marked as such, in violation of a Federal statute. The government's investigation concerns that charge alone, and it is said the fact that the same men are under trial for dynamiting outrages is merely a coincidence. The government had no interest in that feature of the case.

DATE FIXED FOR SPECIAL SESSION OF LEGISLATURE.

November 27 to Be Named in Call by the Governor. Hopes Entertained that Session Will Last but Three Weeks—Members at Conference Differ on Advisability of Considering Many Subjects at Time.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, Nov. 4.—Following his two-days' conference with about seventy members of the Legislature, the Governor announced today that November 27 has been definitely fixed for the meeting of the special session of the Legislature. This date was selected for two reasons, one to complete the reapportionment of legislative districts, before the new registration of voters in January, and the other to permit the members to complete their work in time to spend the Christmas holidays at their homes. The Governor is confident that the session will last not more than three weeks.

The conference was formally adjourned at noon after the entire morning had been given up to a discussion of the new system of separate State and county taxation, which came into use with the adoption of a constitutional amendment at the last general election. According to some of the members present there is an immediate need for changing this amendment since many of the counties are suffering a great loss of revenue under the new tax system. It was declared that San Bernardino county loses $100,000 this year, Nevada county at least $25,000, while smaller counties are experiencing a similar decrease.

NYE SAYS WAIT.

State Controler Nye strongly opposed any action on the amendment at the special session. He urged the legislators to wait until after the first of the year when all of the data on the working of the new amendment will be obtainable, all of the taxes collected, and affairs in shape to determine definitely just what results have been produced by the new tax system. It was his recommendation that the matter be left over until the next regular session of the Legislature.

The suggestion was made that taxation be made the sole subject of a special session of the Legislature to be held in the spring, but a strong majority, including the Governor himself, objected to this.

It is certain that he will include in the call reapportionment, further action on the State Printing Office investigation, making the newly adopted constitutional amendments and State statutes conform, legislation making irrigation district bonds security for bank loans and primary election legislation.

It is understood that the wording of the call in relation to primary law legislation will purposely be made general in scope.

So that the advisability of having a Presidential primary may be further discussed between now and the time that the session meets.

SHORT SESSION WANTED.

If the sentiment of the present conference were taken, it appears that there would be no doubt about the passage of such a law. The Governor favors it. Lieut.-Gov. Wallace speaks most strongly for it, and practically all of the seventy legislators who were here accord with these sentiments, so expressing themselves at the meeting held on Friday afternoon.

The free text-book constitutional amendment is a matter still to be decided. Senator Shanahan is backing the measure. When he had presented his argument and called for a rising vote every member of the seventy or more present, except two, stood up. The Governor did not state definitely, however, whether this matter will be included in the call.

The committees appointed Friday to work up bills on the subjects to be considered, began their work today. It is to these committees that the Governor is loking for a consummation of his plan for a short session, for he believes that with all the bills in shape when the Legislature is convened, little time should be lost.

Important Point.

PRECINCT FINDS A WAY TO GET VOTERS OUT.

AT A ROUSING meeting of more than 100 voters in Easton Hall last night, the Citizens' League of Precinct No. 162 was organized and the members pledged themselves to the support of Mayor Alexander. O. L. Galbreath, who was elected president of the organization, and W. M. McCoy, secretary, delivered ringing addresses to the audience, which was composed of both men and women.

As a result of the meeting a committee of ten was appointed to take charge of ten districts, into which the precinct was divided last night, and each of these ten was empowered to appoint five men to assist in carrying on the work. The committee, with the assistants to be appointed, will make a house-to-house canvass of the precinct this week and will see that every voter registers. The men forming the committee are O. L. Galbreath, R. E. Newes, W. M. McCoy, Peter Nolan, William C. Tyler, T. E. Nelson, E. L. Crump, Dr. H. C. Gates, U. S. Frye and J. E. Dixon. This committee, together with the forty assistants who are to be appointed, will hold a meeting in Easton Hall Tuesday night to report on the work they have accomplished and to plan for future campaign work.

A call was made by the chairman for automobiles to be used by the committee and a dozen men offered their machines, free of charge, to be used in the work.

The interest in the meeting rose to a pitch of enthusiasm and after the audience left the hall several men and women were registered by M. W. Hixon, a druggist at Sixteenth and Arlington streets. Only 206 men out of the 365 qualified voters in precinct No. 162 voted at the primaries, and it will be the business of the members of the new organization to see that every man goes to the polls at the December election, and that he also take his wife, mother or daughter with him.

Others who spoke at the meeting were Judge McCormick, U. S. Frye and Attorney Frank H. Pratt.

Judge McCormick told the audience that it will take active work to win; and he told the women that as they have been given the responsibility of suffrage, they must not fail to do their duty. He advised them to register and vote for the future welfare of Los Angeles.

"God bless the women! I am glad they have a right to vote," said Attorney Pratt, "and I do not doubt that they will vote to save their homes from the red wolf of socialism. I believe every man and woman here tonight wants good government, in its broadest sense, and that being the case, I believe every patriot in this precinct will cast a vote for George Alexander. We cannot afford to go back on Uncle George. He has given us a splendid administration. He is a good man, a clean man, and I admire him for his rugged Yankee honesty. He has been in politics for thirty years, and no man can say that he has ever stooped to a dishonest act. Our Socialist friends will find out one day how they have been wronged. It is our duty to speak to these men and women and sow them the errors of their ideas. We all fill different niches in life. We cannot all have exactly the same amount of money, nor the same amount of any other property, any more than we can all do exactly the same work or wear the same cut and color of clothes."

Frye said that the people of Los Angeles cannot afford to vote for a man for Mayor who is the apostle of a man who stands upon the American flag to deliver an address, and who makes light of the Constitution of the United States.

Banning.

BIRD MAN WILL TRY IT AGAIN.

Rodgers to Leave for Pasadena This Morning.

Defective Engine Almost Causes Serious Accident.

His Machine Has Been Rebuilt Seven Times.

BANNING, Nov. 4.—Aviator Calbraith Perry Rodgers's coast-to-coast flight was temporarily brought to a halt here today when a leaky radiator developed while flying high over the peaks of the San Bernardino range, threatened to work serious injury to the engine of his aeroplane. Rodgers landed in a field on the edge of town, at 12:55 o'clock, dropping in a beautiful spiral glide from an altitude of 1000 feet.

After landing Rodgers discovered that his gasoline tank had sprung a leak and that its contents were nearly gone. Had he failed to alight at Banning it is believed he would have met with a serious mishap through having to land in the mountainous region to the westward.

In an attempt to continue his flight to Pasadena, where he had been informed that several thousand people had gathered to welcome him, Rodgers assumed charge of the work of repairing his craft. For more than two hours he toiled and at 4 o'clock announced that he was ready to go. But an attempt to rise failed because of a faulty carburetor, and after several ineffectual attempts to remedy the fault had been made, further flight for the day was called off. Rodgers and his men toiled until almost dark over the balky engine. At that time it was announced the machine was in good condition again and that flight would be resumed early tomorrow.

When Rodgers arose at Imperial Junction this morning he was confident that before night he would have brought his long journey to an end at Pasadena. He tried for an early start, but found the place where he had landed not suitable, owing to an adverse wind, and accordingly more than an hour was lost while members of the party scoured the surrounding plains in search of a more level place. This was finally found at the edge of the Salton Sea, three miles away, and after the aeroplane had been trundled there he got away to a good start at 10 o'clock. He came down a few minutes later to correct a fault in his engine, and at 10:45 was off on his way west.

In the face of a strong headwind Rodgers made good time until his stop at Banning. Banning is eighty-one miles from Pasadena.

Rodgers planned tonight to fly the rest of his journey by easy stages, reaching Pasadena some time in the afternoon. Should he carry out this schedule he will have flown 4212 miles in approximately eighty hours. As a joke, he weighed today, and found that he had lost twenty pounds on his trip, although he has enjoyed the best of health since he started. He weighed 172 pounds. Unless further mishap should rob him of one or the other, Rodgers will complete his flight with the same vertical rudder and the same drip pan with which he started. All other parts of his machine have been remodeled or replaced. His biplane, a Wright baby racer, was rebuilt seven times on the journey.

True Heroism.

HERO IS RECOMMENDED FOR A CARNEGIE ME

MONROVIA, Nov. 4.—With glowing words of eulogy the Board of Trade in regular session last night recommended Joe Omans, the Arcadia towerman, to the consideration of the committee which awards the Carnegie medals for heroism. G. A. Barry was delegated to draft the resolutions embodying the sentiments of the Board of Trade and these, together with The Times of October 24 and October 25 and photographs of the Santa Fe crossing and derailed cars, will be filed with the Carnegie committee.

The majority of those present had viewed the chaos of the wrecked train and tower and the full significance of the choice made by Omans, who had an instant in which to weigh death and duty against life and the probable sacrifice of others, was fresh in their minds. When W. N. Monroe offered his resolution of intention every other member on the floor was eager to second it and though inarticulate and held back in the secret places of self-communion there was vibrant in the air for an emotional moment "Greater love hath no man than this that a man lay down his life for his friends."

Prosperity the Issue.

Prosperity is the issue in the present campaign. All other issues that have been and may yet be intruded are by comparison inconsequential. The man or woman who lets any minor bias or preference induce him or her to withhold a vote for the present Mayor and for the men on his ticket or to cast a ballot for the Socialist candidates is in the opinion of the editor of this department guilty of a great shortsightedness. Los Angeles at this time, more probably than any other city, enjoys the confidence of outside capital. The advent of socialism here would deal a crushing blow to this confidence.

Even if the Socialist party in Los Angeles stood for the political principles of pure socialism, which most certainly it does not, it would be disastrous to the credit of the city abroad to have the word go out that the Socialists had swept the boards at a municipal election. As a matter of fact the Socialist ticket now before the electorate of Los Angeles does not stand for even socialism as socialism is understood in Milwaukee, the one city of any real consequence in which the Marxian visionaries have obtained a foothold.

Socialism here means nothing more nor less than the turning over of the city to the type of men who have hampered the advance of San Francisco for the past few years. It is unthinkable that Los Angeles should at this time be saddled with such conditions. San Francisco, only recently freed from the incubus of the McCarthy crew, has already begun to spurt ahead. Los Angeles at the threshold of her greatest opportunity must not be fettered and shall not be fettered by that which in Southern California now goes under the name of Socialism.

Citizens Already Alarmed.

Even the possibility of the success of the Harriman ticket at the coming election has served to alarm capital in this city. The effect locally is quite patent. The Fact and Comment man knows of several important real estate transactions which are being held in abeyance pending the decision of the voters on December 5. The parties to these contracts state openly that if George Alexander is elected the deals will be closed, and that otherwise the papers will never be signed.

The parties to these contracts state openly that if George Alexander is elected the deals will be closed, and that otherwise the papers will never be signed.

The real estate brokers of this city almost to a man can report some such instance of shaken confidence. At a meeting of the Los Angeles Realty Board on Thursday many of the 150 or more brokers present announced their intention of suspending business until after the election shall have been decided. These men, and there is no other class of men in Los Angeles which is so closely in touch with actual conditions, hold that the city's business is more important than that of any individual at this time of crisis. One and all the members of the realty profession have their sleeves rolled up working to increase the registration list of voters for prosperity and industrial peace at the coming test.

It would be safe to say that nearly half of the larger building enterprises projected and carried out in this city are financed either wholly or in part by capital from outside sources. Destroy the credit of Los Angeles abroad and introduce industrial turmoil at home and the building permits issued for this city will drop in number from the present glorious position at the head of the national construction column to a place far down in the list.

Deeds were recorded last Monday in a transaction in which H. F. and Dr. J. E. McGowan transferred to Mrs. Alice Richardson a lot 65 by 142 feet in size on the north side of Twenty-third street, running through from Union avenue to Hoover street. The site is improved with a one-story brick building. The consideration involved is estimated at about $30,000. Mrs. Richardson gave in exchange two ten-acre orange groves at Riverside and a cash difference of $2000. G. A. Oyler represented both parties in the deal.

Mt. Washington
"Nature's Masterpiece"

In every point of location, elevation, picturesqueness and convenience, this famous hill—as a site for the homes of the fastidious—is without a doubt a master work of nature.

The contour of Mt. Washington lends itself to the execution of a variety of designs in artistic homes, not to be found in any other part of Los Angeles.

Here on precipitous slopes you will find unique Swiss Chalets with sharply defined terraces, elegant mansions, set in broad undulating lawns and cozy bungalows here and there transport one to the wonderlands of Bengal.

We are at the service of people of perspicuity and refinement desiring to see this unusual residential district and are ever ready to give all information wanted.

SOUTHLAND HOMES CHARM VISITORS.

DOMESTIC ARCHITECTURE AT ITS BEST HERE.

Los Angeles Designers Famous for Beauty and Individuality of the Residence Types Created in This City and Section—Artistic Places Pictured on This Page.

Los Angeles architects have become famous the country over for the charm and picturesqueness that are so characteristic of the houses planned in this section. Considering the almost inconceivable number of new homes that are erected in this city in the course of a year, the individuality that is projected into the greater number of the residences built is striking to the observer. Homes that are truly beautiful in conception and construction are to be found in the regions of the humblest bungalow types as well as in the more exclusive sections.

On this page of The Times are reproduced perspectives of new houses by architects who have achieved an enviable reputation as designers of artistic homes. These dwellings are typical of the better class of work that is being done here.

The home which Elmer Gray is designing for himself will occupy a conspicuously fine site on El Molino drive, south of Pinehurst drive, in the Oak Knoll section. The lot stands on high ground and faces a park of fine old oak trees. To the south is the terraced garden of Maj.-Gen. Story and the view in this direction also includes the winding course of El Molino avenue. In the opposite direction the view takes in the beautiful homes of J. N. Burns and Frank Wallace.

There are three oaks on the lot itself, and several fine, old, bearing orange trees. One of the oaks in question stands at a short distance in front of the living-room of the house and one of the features of the exterior will be a semi-circular terrace capped by a ballustrade built around this tree. The dwelling will stand 100 feet back from the street.

The house will have a plastered exterior and a roof of especially heavy shingles. The general style will embody simply a natural external expression of the plan, without any attempt at reference to historical precedent. The disposition of the rooms was governed entirely by the consideration of the fine views to be obtained and by the points of the compass.

The living-room is on the south side, and is about 19x27 feet in size. The west end is semi-circular in shape. The east end opens upon a garden. A feature of this room will be a large fireplace. North of the living-room is an entrance hall and north of this the dining-room. Both will open upon a west porch. On the first floor will also be a kitchen, pass pantry, kitchen pantry, screen porch and maid's quarters.

The entire south end of the second floor will be taken up with the bedroom, sleeping porch, bathroom and closets of the owner. A hall and corridor will connect with a guestroom and a child's room.

The windows all over the house will be of the casement type. The first story main rooms will be finished in redwood, acid stained, while the second story will be in white enamel.

A COLONIAL TYPE.

The house planned by Architects Walker & Vawter for A. A. Smith will be of a colonial type adapted, however, to the requirements of this section. The house will stand at Second and Rampart in this city, and will contain eight rooms. The exterior of the first story will be plastered, the upper story being shingled.

A feature of the place will be a planted terrace at the front. The entrance will be from the side across this terrace. The front of the grounds will be enclosed by a concrete wall. The place is finished in hardwood.

On Hollywood boulevard, between La Brea and Formosa, there has just been completed for Dr. Walter E. Deering an attractive house designed by the same architects. This dwelling contains ten rooms and occupies a sightly and well situated lot. The first story is plastered and the second shingled. The heavy timber treatment is especially effective.

Elmer Gray has among other plans in his office designs for an unusually picturesque house of the bungalow type to be erected on Cheton way, South Pasadena. The place has a shingle exterior and shingle roof. A feature is an open terrace facing a fine old oak at the rear. French windows open out upon this porch. The main rooms have beamed ceilings and fireplaces.

VALUABLE CORNER CHANGES HANDS.

HILL AND ELEVENTH BOUGHT BY CAPITALIST.

Unimproved Site Sold for Large Cash Consideration—Sale the Second of Week on Hill Street—Two Transfers Involve Over Quarter Million Dollars.

One of the largest transactions of the year in unimproved property was consummated yesterday when the Los Angeles Trust and Savings Bank, as trustee, sold to a prominent local capitalist the southwest corner of Hill and Eleventh streets for a cash consideration of $155,000. The property is 120x159 feet in size. There is an income from nominal improvements sufficient to pay taxes and insurance.

The sellers were represented by Charles G. Andrews of the Wright & Callender Company, and the purchaser by Thomas C. Bundy & Company. The corner is directly opposite H. E. Huntington's big holdings at Hill and Eleventh, where extensive improvements are contemplated within the near future.

This is the second time this corner has been sold during the past four months, the purchaser at the previous sale having been represented by H. G. Holabird & Company, and the seller by Charles G. Andrews. During the four-month period a substantial profit was made for the previous owner.

This is the second big sale of the week on Hill street, the other being the transfer of a lot 50x155 feet in size at No. 916 South Hill street. The transaction in question was made by Charles G. Andrews and Glenn N. Deuel of the Wright & Callender Company on the basis of $75,000 cash.

Seventy-five Lots in Santa Monica Purchased by Capitalist—Sites to Be Attractively Improved.

A transaction of unusual importance to the Crescent Bay district was completed yesterday when Elmer E. Cole transferred to GorgHRDLUU e Do transferred to George W. Cram seventy-five lots within the limits of the city of Santa Monica and bounded by Idaho and California avenues and Fifteenth and Seventeenth streets. The total consideration is reported at $60,000, or $800 a lot.

The property is a part of the Jones tract and adjoins the acreage recently bought by C. N. Wood. It is also in the immediate vicinity of a tract purchased a few months ago by King C. Gillett, the "Safety Razor King." The lots are each fifty by 150 feet in size. It is the intention of the new owner to improve a great many of the sites with attractive houses.

The tract is in the center of a district which is now experiencing considerable activity. Montana boulevard, which is being put through from Seventh street to San Vincente avenue runs through the property. The street work and other general improvements are to be started at once.

— SOMETHING DIFFERENT.

OUR idea of a home is one both PRACTICAL and ARTISTIC. By careful thought, we manage to instill certain INDIVIDUALITY in each home.

It quite frequently happens that the PROSPECTIVE BUILDER'S IDEAS and PURSE do not correspond. In such cases our PRACTICAL knowledge comes to the rescue, and often where others have hopelessly FAILED, WE SUCCEED.

We build homes from the modest five-room cottage, at $900, to the most elaborate dwelling. It rests with the INDIVIDUAL, entirely, what his home will cost. By concentrating our PURCHASING POWER, combined with our PRACTICAL knowledge, and being in a position to DISCOUNT our BILLS, we can, for a given quality of work, discount our competitors' prices.

We build either by contract or on a fixed fee of 10 per cent. of estimated cost of work, or on our own lots in Los Angeles, Redondo and San Pedro, on easy terms.

We make no additional charges for our Architectural services, if we build, or if we fail to satisfy you both as to price and design.

Our REFERENCES are PEOPLE for whom we HAVE BUILT, who FREELY indorse us.

We make liberal building loans.

yet above the clang and clamor of city life—above the traffic and noises, yet within two blocks of all car lines.
WITHIN ONE BLOCK of one of the greatest office buildings and less than a block from a new 11-story building now under construction.
ADJOINS GREATEST ACTIVITY and the livest district in the city—one block from Hill st., where values are increasing more rapidly and greater improvements taking place than on any other business street in Los Angeles.
EASILY ACCESSIBLE
to all theaters, department stores, office buildings and institutions that make the life of the fastest growing city in the United States—1½ blocks from the L. A. P. depot with thousands of people coming and going.
THE NORTHEAST CORNER

HAVE YOU FORESIGHT?—

If you believe in the future of Los Angeles

—And if you recognize what the Panama Canal will do for us

—And if you appreciate the value of our Owens River proposition

—And if you see the great benefits to be derived from the San Francisco Exposition

—And if you believe that Los Angeles will grow in the next ten years as rapidly as in the last decade

WE'RE READY TO TALK!

You know that you can't go wrong on any land around Los Angeles—

—But—You want the best—

THEN INVESTIGATE MONTE VISTA.
You could have bought acreage in Hollywood for from $250 to $500 per acre a few years ago.

You can secure Monte Vista acreage for this price today.

It is exactly as good and as sure to increase in value as rapidly as has Hollywood.

BECAUSE—

Monte Vista isn't low flat valley land—hot in summer and cold in winter.

Monte Vista is dry balmy foothill valley land—without a peer as far as climate and scenic charm goes.

Called by many "The Little Yosemite of Southern California."

Only to be compared to Altadena and Sierra Madre, where it costs you four times what we ask.

Monte Vista is absolutely your last opportunity to buy frostless, balmy, foothill land, with plenty of water and transportation assured, at anything under a thousand dollars an acre.

There is only a very limited amount of the choicest land left.

We are selling every day.

So get busy and investigate!

Get our booklet.

Arrange to go out in auto—$1 for round trip.

But—Investigate!

FOR SALE—
SAFE LAND FOR THE HOMESEEKER.
SOIL CONDITIONS ARE PERFECT.
WATER IS CHEAP AND ABUNDANT.

Buy where you'll be sure of excellent returns from your labor; where your efforts will not be wasted; where things grow and grow and grow. Buy—where your neighbors are sure to make improvements, under my premium plan stated below. Plenty of good neighbors here now and many fine properties. Buy as cheap as you can, so that big increases in value will come your way. Buy in the Fresno Valley Tract, south of Fresno, with shipping facilities on two railways. The prices in the Fresno Valley Tract are now only $75 up, from which you can get a still further reduction of $25 an acre. Think of it! $25 off. Read the plan below. A good town right at the tract, with schools, stores, and telephones. Soil here is rich and deep, and ditch water costs but 75c per acre per year. Water from pumps already installed is sold at actual cost. Successful crops include alfalfa, corn, oranges, figs, walnuts, apricots, peaches, vegetables and berries. Perfect conditions for poultry, dairying and hog raising. This land can be bought at only $40 an acre up, with a small amount of cash as a starter, balance due during four years.

In order to encourage further improvement of the Fresno Valley Tract, I will give the following credits or premiums, under the following awards open to every purchaser in said tract:

$5 for each acre of your land that you will cause to be plowed and from which there is produced a marketable crop within one year from date of purchase.

$5 per acre if, within one year from date of purchase, you build a substantial residence, costing not less than $1000, on your land and occupy it as a home.

$10 for every acre you plow, prepare and sow to alfalfa, and from which you produce a merchantable crop within three years from date of purchase.

$10 for every acre of growing grape vines, one year or more of age, within three years from date of purchase.

$15 for every acre of one year old growing orchard within three years from date of purchase.

$100 on the 1st of next July, for the best tilled and best kept farm on the tract.

You can thus receive a premium of $25 per acre and an additional premium of $100.

Should you sell your land in the meantime, the premium will pass to the new owner as fully as if he or she had been the original purchaser, if the improvements are made within the time above stated following date of purchase from me.

Now come in and investigate this proposition thoroughly. Get my illustrated booklet and learn about the Excursions.

CRIMSON WINTER RHUBARB.

A profitable crop that you can make pay for one or more.

LOMITA FARM ACRES.

Only 10 minutes' ride from SAN PEDRO.
Rhubarb is easy to raise, is shipped all over the country—is a fine investment.

LOMITA ACRES

has some of the best land you can get for raising rhubarb, and it has been successfully proved that the very best quality and grade can be raised at Lomita—the location is the best—right close to two big markets. San Pedro with ships in the harbor all the time, who buy large quantities of produce, and Los Angeles with a population of 350,000, and hundreds of hotels. Also cheap water transportation to northern markets.

J. B. Wagner, the rhubarb specialist, says: "Crimson Winter Rhubarb is easier to grow and requires less care and labor than corn or pumpkins.
"Plant an acre and reap an annual harvest of $1000 to $1500 per acre.
"Plant several acres and become wealthy in a few years."

LOMITA FARMS ACRES

will also make you the best, safe, profitable investment, because land so close to our Great Harbor is bound to increase most rapidly in value. Ask any one, who bought only six months or a year ago, what they paid for an acre, then compare the price they paid with what you will have to pay today—some have already resold their acres at a big profit—go out and investigate for yourself.

presents opportunities for investment that few towns can offer. It is located in the beautiful and rich La Habra Valley, twenty-five miles southeast of Los Angeles, upon the Pacific Electric railroad at the crossing of the Pomona-Fullerton county road.

BREA is in the center of five large oil camps, in a proven oil district, and bids fair to be the leading oil town of Southern California. New derricks are going up in every direction, people are coming in from all sides and the new town presents a busy appearance. Four of the large oil well supply houses have located there; two splendid storerooms are completed and occupied, and five others are nearing completion, while residences are going up in every direction. This townsite was put upon the market less than four months ago and unless you go see for yourself you cannot imagine what progress has been made. Streets are graded, concrete walks are in, water is piped to every lot. A splendid school house has been built and two teachers preside over about seventy scholars, and now plans are about complete for the erection of a fireproof building to house the FIRST BANK OF BREA. Nothing can prevent the rapid growth of this promising young town and there are many opportunities for making money. or for any kind of vegetables or small fruits.

It is also an ideal spot for chicken ranches. Owing to the excellent transportation facilities, good roads, best high and public schools in the county, banks, churches and stores of all kinds, it leaves nothing more to be desired for a home, and it's sure to be a profitable investment.

THE WATER QUESTION.

With each acre of land one share of fully paid up water stock will be issued, entitling the owner to a perpetual right to an abundant and never failing supply of water for irrigation, at cost of pumping. We have sold thousands of acres of land, adjoining this tract, where soil and water conditions are equal, and if you want to see thrifty walnut and alfalfa ranches and dairy farms, let us show you this favored region. FOR SALE—

RED APPLE LAND

In The OWENS VALLEY.

We want to explain its advantages to keen headed practical men, who will investigate every claim that we make, who will make us prove to them, and to their entire satisfaction, the kind of crops that can be grown there; the yields, the particulars about the water supply, climate, and every other point that will have a bearing upon the desirability of this land for a money making farm home.

Apple land has not been called the Klondyke of the farmer for nothing. Back of its reputation as the most profitable branch of horticulture, there is a real reason. Acre for acre, apple land earns more money on a smaller investment of time, labor, and capital, than orange land, and orange culture's profits have been largely instrumental in building up the Golden State.

Right in the Owens Valley, that tremendously fertile district that the new aqueduct has opened up, lie untold acres of the best apple and farm land in the whole west. The most famous apple producing counties of Oregon, Washington and Colorado, cannot bring forth better fruit. "Spitzenburgs," "Winesaps" and "Delicious" varieties will yield 10 to 25 boxes to the tree.

Alfalfa will yield 2 tons to the cutting. Potatoes of as fine a consistency, as large in size, and as many bushels to the acre as Maine can produce. Corn that rivals that produced in Illinois. And live stock grows and thrives to an extent unequalled in California.

Climatically and scenically Owens River Valley is perfect. Here are farms, under the shadow of the high Sierras, where summer is never unpleasantly hot, and winter is never unduly severe. You can leave them in the morning, take a day's tramp through the mountains; pass numberless high mountain lakes, which will impress you with the reason for the valley's never failing water supply, and be back again by night fall.

The irrigation system is complete. Gravity, steel and concrete.

OWENS RIVER LANDS—

NOWHERE IN CALIFORNIA IS THERE A more prosperous section than the Owens River Valley, where the city of Los Angeles will obtain its water supply. This wonderfully fertile valley is now being opened to the world by a transcontinental line of railroad. Farm lands can now be bought at prices which will leave a large margin of profit to the purchaser. We have, among other properties, the following, which we earnestly recommend, the owner is not a farmer and wishes to devote his whole time to the drug business, in which he is engaged:

This property contains 320 acres, has 200 inches of gravity water, absolutely free, from Owens River, through a private ditch; also 70 inches of free gravity water from the Owens River Canal; 100 acres in fine stand of alfalfa; 160 acres of finest dairy pasture and 10 acres in 2-year-old apple orchard; 100 head of Berkshire and Duroc hogs, five of which cost the owned $150 a piece in Kansas City; 4 large Norman mares in foal, 2 cows and calves, and all kinds of farming machinery; new dairy barn, 34x84 feet; horse barn and house. The price of this property is $32,000, and the owner will accept one-half in first-class city property. If you are looking for a going, paying farm, you can find no better place in California at twice the price. Write to us for information concerning this and other farms in the Owens Valley. If you become sufficiently interested we will be pleased to have you join one of our regular weekly excursions and make a personal examination of the various properties we have to offer.

THE OWNER HAS BEEN REFUSING OFFERS FROM TIME TO TIME FROM PEOPLE VISITING THE GROVE WANTING TO BUY IT.

It has always made him a lot of money and he would not sell.

There are no apologies to make for this grove. There is nothing better offered for sale today and it has the best location in the best orange district in the State.

IT HAS PRODUCED ABSOLUTELY THE BIGGEST CROP IN THE STATE.

It is for sale only because conditions arising in this man's affairs in the East make it necessary to sell at once.

The price is way below its present value and a fine investment opportunity. Any one could make a big profit by simply holding it for a re-sale at its real value.

For an income producer and a business that will pay a bigger profit than anything else you could put your money into. It has no equal.

AS A HOME PLACE ITS LOCATION IS IDEAL.

THE PRICE IS LOW FOR A QUICK SALE.

Go to La Verne and you will say "Here is the place I want to locate in California of all places I have seen."

A grove like this is quickly bought up. It is the cream of orange groves.

NEVER BEFORE
ON THE MARKET.

Present owner's husband set out trees on selected land 20 years ago. She, having been a widow for 11 years, has hired all work done and received an income of not less than $3000 per year, or 20 per cent. net.

She has lived in the east practically all the time and has not seen the grove for three years, but has received her income just the same.

Fumigation is never needed; also, trees have never been frostbitten. This grove lies just one mile from schools, churches, stores and packing-house. Proposition includes 20 shares water stock worth $100 a share. Irrigation system is A1. This is undoubtedly the best buy I have found in many months.

Will accept good trade up to $4000, some cash, and mortgage on balance. Price $1600 per acre. Adjoining property has recently sold for $2500. If you are interested, come and see me at once, and I can give you further information.

WHEN YOU DEPOSIT YOUR MONEY IN A savings bank it is safe, but it pays you only a small amount as interest. The stockholders of the bank take their share of the profits which your money earns.

Now if you could have the same security that a savings bank affords, and, at the same time, get both the depositors' and the stockholders' profits you would have an ideal investment.

This is the proposition I have to offer. Isn't it worth your while to see me?

CONFESSES TO FALSE CHARG

Says Her Mother Did N Slay Infant.

Soledad Canyon Tragedy Just Invented.

Young Mother Feared Los of Husband's Love.

In a confession to Deputy Dist. Atty. Doran and Chief Detective Brown, yesterday, Mrs. Mildred Russell Neal is said by them to have declared that she had falsely accused her mother, Mrs. Hattie Slack Russell, of slaying her infant child. The underlying motives, she said, were to retain her husband's love and to revenge herself upon her mother for fancied slights.

Mrs. Russell, who had been taken to the County Jail while the terrible charge was being investigated, said when she learned that her daughter had recanted:

"I'm glad it's over. I felt that sooner or later Mildred would tell the truth. She had no reason to charge me with the crime. I tried to hush up the birth of my grand-daughter from a mother's pride, and caused it to be buried secretly, but that is all."

Neal seemed relieved when the truth came out. He said he was only interested in getting at the bottom of the mystery. If the baby had been slain he felt that the guilty person should be punished.

Mrs. Russell will be given her liberty and will return to Soledad Canyon tomorrow. A quiet night in the jail will, it is believed by her lawyers, restore her tranquility.

Mrs. Neal's confession did not surprise the District Attorney's office. There were features about it that made them doubt. Circumstances seemed to point to the fact that the infant died rather from neglect or from ignorance of the way to care for it. Mrs. Neal's charge seemed to lack cohesion. For the purpose of getting at the truth they questioned her yesterday, but with the stubbornness of one telling a falsehood, and in fear of an outraged husband, the young woman clung to her story, finally breaking down when the picture of her mother in jail was brought forcibly to her mind. Once she started to break the words came out between sobs.

The story appears to have been concocted when Neal learned of the secret birth of the child June 10, 1910. Mrs. Neal denied the fact, but later, hoping to appease his wrath and retain his love, she fastened the cruel death of the infant upon her mother.

She feared to confess that the accusation was a fabrication when Neal accompanied her to the District Attorney's, for then she would doubly suffer in his eyes. Hence she was torn between filial affection and the fear that he would leave her. While exteriorly calm, the young woman's soul was violently torn.

There is a tendency to charge the entire matter to ignorance and inexperienced motherhood, and it is probable that Mrs. Neal will not be prosecuted. Mrs. Russell is the owner of extensive reality and ranching interests near Newhall. When she was arrested on the trumped-up charge her neighbors were shocked and prepared to testify their faith in her innocence.

In 1907 Mr. Hines with certain associates organized a company for the purpose of purchasing 1000 acres of land in Fresno county, which they proposed to sell in ten-acre pieces and plant to raisin grapes. During the past three months this project of four years ago has materialized on a scale far exceeding the original plans of those interested in it. A company known as the International Land Company, of which Mr. Hines is president, now has holdings of 6000 acres of land along the eastern foothills of Fresno county, upon which they propose to spend something like $1,000,000 in improvements in the next four years. Among other prominent men interested in the enterprise are John W. Henderson, Western vice-president of the International Correspondence School of Scranton, and T. J. Foster, president of the same institution. Mr. Hines states that the future of this land is so certain that not an acre of it is to be put upon the market

PRINTING CONCERN MOVES.

W. Calvin McAulay, of the leasing department of the W. Ross Campbell Company, reports the closing of the following leases during the past week: Loring A. Redden to the Phillips Printing Company, a one-story brick building at the southwest corner of East Fourth and Wall rental, $20,000. This building is now in course of construction. The lessees will move from their present quarters at No. 360 South Los Angeles street into their new home on or about January 1.

Mrs. Mary J. McMenomy to Bert Adams, two-story building at Nos. 228-30 East Fourth street, five years, total rental, $6000. Mr. Adams will conduct a decorating and house painting business.

R. G. Weyse to the Citizens Trust Company, entire building at Nos. 203-05 South San Pedro street, for a period of years, total rental, $5000.

W. B. Kelly, to L. H. Freeman, store room at No. 212 West Fourth street, for a period of years, total rental, $15,000. This store room joins on the west the Fourth street entrance of the Angelus Hotel. Mr. Freeman will open on or about November 4, under the name of Freeman-Lewis, an up-to-date flower store.

ACQUIRE HARBOR LOTS.

Alexander MacKeigan reports having sold during the past week to Polaski & Arzner, proprietors of the Hoffman Cafe, twenty-six lots located in the city of Wilmington and comprising the entire block of land between Fifth and Sixth, K and L streets, for $15,000. The property is situated one block west from Harbor boulevard and within a short distance of the waterfront of that portion of the harbor known as the West Basin. The property was bought as an investment and was purchased from Mary Banning Norris. Hay, Hardwick and Brown represented the seller in the transaction.

The same agent also reports having sold a corner on San Rafael avenue, near the Annandale Country Club, for J. B. Bullard, and comprising an acre of ground, for $6000. It was bought by Mary Abascal as an investment.

WILL MAKE IT AN ANNUAL EVENT.

REDLANDS PEOPLE PLEASED OVER THEIR CARNIVAL.

Thousands of People Thronged the Streets of the Town During the Three Days It Was in Progress. The Automobile Parade and Races Were Features.

REDLANDS, Nov. 4.—The three days' aviation meet and street carnival, held last week, closed in a blaze of glory, a battle of confetti and a blare of music and fun for the hundreds of guests, who thronged the streets of the city since the carnival opened. The people of the city and the many visitors from neighboring towns entered into the spirit of the carnival, and except for the showers of Thursday night and Friday morning, the big celebration was a distinct success for everyone concerned, from the chairman of the General Committee, down to the least urchin who sold programmes and banners.

The big industrial tent, where fifty local business firms and manufacturers exhibited their wares, was thronged with visitors and sightseers every day and evening, this tent having the additional attraction of daily concerts by the Redlands band. The midway, lined on either side with side shows and fakirs, was the scene of much merriment, and all of the shows enjoyed a good business, the crowds showing a great willingness to part with its coin for a chance on anything from a wooly pup's head on a stick to a real live duck.

The Oriental Palace, with its famous muscle dancers, was the center of much interest.

The decorated automobile parade, followed by automobile races, were the biggest things of the kind ever "pulled off" in Redlands. Ninety machines were entered in the parade and the races were also very popular with local motorists.

The Elks, I.O.O.F. and Moose joined in one big parade through the business streets and then down to the midway and at 11 o'clock the big street clock in front of Spingborg's was unveiled and Exalted Ruler Dr. A. M Hewitt of the local lodge of Elks responded to the 11 o'clock toast.

A series of gymkana sports occupied the hours from 10 to 12 this morning. In the obstacle race Jack Hazzard, in a Buick 30, won first place. The contest involved turning sharp curves, around a row of barrels, and doing other similar stunts. W. F. Stutt took second place in the obstacle race. T. J. Thornquist won first place in the teeter-board contest, in which the driver drove his car upon a plank and balanced it. Second honors went to T. J. Thornquist.

The committee which had the affair in hand is vastly pleased over the success of the carnival and members declare it their intention to make the same sort of an effort each year.

WALBROOK PARK TRACT.

The Walbrook Park tract, which lies in the hills on the south side of Sunset boulevard, along Occidental boulevard, has recently been put on the market by Elvin J. Curry. This tract overlooks the new Silver Lake Park, which was recently approved by the City Council, and has a commanding view of the mountains. Sales are reported as follows: Two lots to Charles F. Spohr, $1850; lot to Elizabeth P. Dodge, $1700; lot to Anna M. Scott, $1700; two lots at $1750 each to Dr. H. Stephen Brown, and a lot to Mary Goudy for $2000. Mr. Curry has associated with him as selling agents of this tract C. F. Palmer and W. S. Thatcher.

Red Corpuscles.

GOOD HEALTH IN HIGH ALTITUDES.

REASON FOR INVESTIGATION ON PIKE'S PEAK.

Studies Being Made by Noted Scientists Regarding Blood Conditions at High and Low Altitudes, and the Effect Upon Tubercular Persons and Pneumonia.

[Chicago Tribune:] The human race supposedly came from the plateaus and mountain tops, from the roof of the world, the Himalayas. The human race was then strong and free from all disease. Will mankind, awakened and physically degenerate, have to return to the mountain tops in order to regain strength and life?

Human blood at the top of Pike's Peak contains 32 per cent. more red corpuscles than it does at the sea levels. Human blood on Pike's Peak contains 50 per cent. more white corpuscles.

Human blood on the mountain tops has a 50 per cent. greater resistance to forces of disease.

These statements have been verified and their truth established beyond all question, scientific or otherwise, by experiments now in progress at the top of the Colorado mountains, 14,000 feet above sea level.

Therefore, the mountain plateaus await such of the weaklings and the diseases who are able to reach those fields of rejuvenation. For the city poor and the city slaves of business, will not artificial heights be constructed?

If the human blood is enriched and purified within a few days by the mere fact of elevation, why will it not be practical in time to have floating hospitals in the air? The science of flying is making such progress there seems little question that within a few years the mechanical difficulties of such a project will have been removed.

It will be possible to construct aerial sanatoriums that will float above the cities. These may be in the nature of captive balloons or they may be a development of the heavier than air machines. They may, perhaps, be anchored or they may float unattached. In the latter case they probably would sail away from the zenith of the city in order to avoid the smoke impurities in the air. Access for patients might be through passenger aeroplanes.

With such an arrangement the man who is both sick and busy might prolong his life and perhaps secure new health without loss of business time. At the conclusion of his business day, in place of taking the "L" he would take the elevator. He would go up a few thousand feet for his hours of recreation and of sleep, to return again in the morning for business. His blood would be enriched by nights in the aerial sanatorium. His lungs, forced to fight for the scant oxygen of the upper air, would develop strength and throw of their afflictions. Tuberculosis, pneumonia and all the diseases of impoverished blood would be checked and perhaps cured.

The skyscrapers, in effect, are at the present time giving business men and women something of the advantages of an aerial sanatorium or a trip to the mountains.

The present investigations on Pike's Peak have furnished a more satisfactory explanation than was formerly extant as to the reason why the blood is improved by residence in mountainous places and why tubercular patients so frequently improve in health. The change is due to the fact that the lungs are forced to work. The lungs, so it is now contended, have the power to secrete oxygen. They withdraw the oxygen from the air and add it to the blood. But this is done only when the lungs are forced to act. At sea level the amount of oxygen in the air is larger and the air pressure heavier. As a result the lungs do not have to secrete. The oxygen is forced almost mechanically into the blood. The lungs, through lack of exercise, become weak, just as the muscles would.

Taken to a high altitude, the patient is likely to suffer from mountain sickness. This is because the lungs have lost their facility in oxygen secretion and the patient is suffering from partial oxygen starvation. An instant relief can be secured by the use of an oxygen tank. After the patient has been in the mountains for a few days or weeks his lungs rapidly develop their power to secrete the oxygen and the blood is soon supplied with its normal amount. As time goes on the lungs become more and more vigorous and the amount of oxygen pressed into the blood by them is larger than ever before. The patient is soon running up precipices and taking twenty-mile walks before breakfast.

The scientists now at work on these problems on Pike's Peak, two and one-half miles above the sea level, are Dr. J. S. Haldane, F. R. S., authority on respiration; Dr. C. Gordon Douglas, a blood expert, both of Oxford University; Dr. Yandell Henderson of Yale University, credited with furnishing the scientific explanation of the surgical shock, and Dr. E. C. Schneider of Colorado College, Colorado Springs, author of a work on blood pressure. Miss Mabel P. Fitzpatrick, an Oxford woman, is gathering data at lower altitudes. The investigations are being carried on at the instance of the Royal Society of London, an organization maintained chiefly for scientific research.

The increase of hemoglobin (red coloring matter or red corpuscles) in the blood at high altitudes is not caused by a concentration of the blood, but by a scarcity of oxygen, which stimulates the bone marrow to unusual activity. The volume of the blood remains the same, but the blood increases in richness.

"The primary object of these experiments," says Dr. Henderson, "is to throw light on the manner in which man becomes acclimated in high altitudes. One line of investigation is to determine changes in the blood. Here I find the amount of red coloring matter in my blood is about 135, as compared with 100 at sea level. In Colorado Springs or Manitou it probably would be from 110 to 120. Manager Robinson of the Summit house on the peak has about 140, but he has lived up there for a long time.

"Another line of investigation concerns the action of the heart. Does the heart increase the force as well as the speed of its stroke in high altitudes? This is what we are yet to decide. At sea level the heart beats about seventy strokes a minute; on the peak, ninety. There has been a great deal of discussion as to whether the force of the stroke increases when the speed is increased.

"The newest point we have determined is in regard to the secretion of oxygen in the blood by the lungs. Experiments along this line are proving an entirely new theory. Dr. Haldane was one of the first to believe that the lungs did secrete oxygen in the blood at high altitudes, when at sea level the oxygen, it is generally believed and pretty well established, is merely diffused through the lungs. The lungs develop with exercise, just as do the muscles, and the reason pneumonia is so fatal in high altitudes is that through exercise the epithelium of the cells of the lungs is thickened and toughened and the oxygen does not diffuse rapidly enough.

"We have noticed newcomers here. Their lips generally are blue, showing that their blood is not circulating properly—a condition due to decreased pressure. After a while they walk about a bit and soon their lips take on a pinkish color. Exercise stimulates the lungs to secrete oxygen and that causes healthy color and better circulation. The body is run by combustion, like an engine. If there isn't enough oxygen the heart lags and the human machine runs like a rusty engine.

"When exercising freely in high altitudes the lungs give off a lot of combustion products and these are being investigated by us. These combustion products are what cause headaches and mountain sickness."

These investigations show that the theory that high altitudes are beneficial to tubercular patients is based on fact, not fancy. Drs. Haldane and Douglas explain that they have confirmed by their tests on Pike's Peak the theory that white corpuscles are special enemies of the tubercle bacillus. This fact then having been established it follows that persons suffering from tuberculosis in its first stages can find relief and perhaps cure in high altitudes because the white corpuscles in their blood will increase in number and kill the disease germ. This discovery alone is ample justification for the step taken by the International Typographical Union when it established the Union Printers' home in Colorado and the Modern Woodmen of America when they purchased a large tract of land and erected near Colorado Springs their national sanatorium.

The government has two tuberculosis sanatoriums for victims of the malady in the army and the navy. The naval home is in Colorado and the army station at Ft. Bayard, N. M. As soon as an officer or a soldier, marine or sailor is found to be affected he is at once ordered to one of these places. There he is put to bed on an open veranda and kept there until all signs of temperature have disappeared. His diet is arranged to give him the maximum nourishment.

Under this condtion his weakened lungs are given the best possible chance to develop their power, to secrete oxygen and to improve the quality of the blood. The blood being improved the whole system is improved and in time the patient is much strengthened and possibly cured.

As the whole secret of the cure appears to be in the altitude there would seem to be no reason why the aerial hospital may not become a standard institution for the cure of lung and blood diseases.

I cure rapidly, painlessly and at small expense. Cured patients are my testimonials; however, I do not make patients' names merchandise by publishing them. I will give conclusive evidence of my merit, which is obtained and maintained by ability. I invite you to come to my office; I will explain my treatment for Hernia, Piles, Fistula, Varicose Veins, Pelvic, Nervous, Blood, Kidney, Bladder and Rectal Diseases. I will give you free a physical examination; if necessary a microscopical and chemical analysis of secretions to determine existing pathological and bacteriological conditions. Every person should take advantage of this opportunity to learn their true condition. Certainty of cure is what you want.

VARICOSE VEINS.

In the cure of Varicose Veins, Rupture and Associate Diseases of the Pelvic Region, I am successful in bringing to bear the curative power of Nature's forces in such a manner as to supplant the old-time, wide-open surgical operations. Once it required several weeks to cure these conditions and the method which some still use is such as to endanger the life of the patient and require a long period of convalescence. Now an absolute cure can be accomplished in a few days and with perfect safety.

TRUSSES SELDOM CURE RUPTURE.

Disregard for existing Hernias has cost many lives. The smallest hernias are the most dangerous to life, because of the increased liability to strangulation. I am aware that a great deal of fraud has been practiced on the public in connection with the alleged cure of Rupture, and when I say positively that I cure Rupture, to stay cured, I do not expect any one to accept my statement without investigation of my professional work. My claim to your confidence is based on absolute facts, accomplished results. A personal consultation. I will make a free examination and can explain every detail of your Hernia and demonstrate to you the curative value of the method I have discovered. I invite the careful investigation of any person who sincerely desires to be cured. I cure Rupture, in selected cases, with perfect safety, and entail no suffering, and do not detain you from occupation under Written Guarantee. Many cases cured to stay cured by a few treatments.

PILES, FISTULA, RECTAL DISEASES.

These diseases are very common; most frequently found in persons of middle or advanced age; are exceedingly annoying, often very painful, and sometimes very dangerous, and frequently unfit one for pleasure or occupation. My treatment and successes are the result of years of experience; my treatment is kindly applied. I cure Piles without cutting. Some cases are cured by one or more treatments. If I do not cure your Piles, Fistula and other Rectal Diseases, my treatment does not cost you anything. Gentleness in treatment comes from treating many cases, so I guarantee a cure of Piles, Fistula, Fissures, Ulcers and all curable Rectal Diseases.

KIDNEY AND BLADDER DISEASES.

With these diseases you may have more complications than are presented by any other diseased organs. By my searching illumination of the bladder I determine accurately the diseases and by my microscopical examination and urinalysis, make sure of the condition of the kidneys, thus laying foundations for scientific treatment.

I OFFER A FREE CONSULTATION AND EXAMINATION.

LOCAL PRODUCE MARKET.

There was a good volume of business on the street. Receipts of staples were light, with the exception of butter, arrivals of which were liberal. The feature of the market was the advance of 25 cents a hundredweight on Burbank potatoes, and 15 cents on Salinas. The market ruled firm under the revised figures. The top price on Burbanks was placed at $2.00 a hundred weight.

The onion market ruled firm, and an advance of 25 cents was made on Australian browns and yellow danvers. No arrivals were reported in from outside.

Sweet potato receipts were only 49 sacks. The market continued dull, with a poor passing trade reported.

Green bean receipts were 104 sacks. The bulk were Limas. The market generally was inactive.

Green vegetable receipts were about in keeping with the demand, and the market along most lines was firm.

Fruit arrivals were heavy, but most of the stock received was of poor quality, with the exception of apples.

Apple receipts were 3072 boxes. The increased demand, and light arrivals of the Bellefleur variety forced the market to advance to $1.50 on 4-tier boxes, and $1.35 for the 4½-tier stock. Other varieties were unchanged. The market ruled firm.

Grapes were in good receipt, but only first-class Muscats and Tokays found a good outlet at firm figures.

Peaches and pears were in light receipt, but the market on these fruits was dull.

Egg arrivals were 73 cases. There was no change in quotations. The market on all grades ruled firm.

Butter receipts were 47,298 pounds. The market continued to rule firm. The price of butter this year is lower than at the same time last year. This is due to a heavier supply of California stock. Reports from all over the State are to the effect that the butter business is in a flourishing condition.

The market on cheese continued to rule firm under light arrivals. Receipts were 2170 pounds. The market is short of foreign cheese.

LOS ANGELES EXCHANGE.

Week Closes Without Any Feature to Distinguish the Market—Trading is Very Light.

There is nothing of interest to record about the closing of the week's market on the Los Angeles Stock Exchange. Associated Oil, the Union issues, Mexican Petroleum common and other shares were slow to move and the price changes were not of enough importance to warrant extended comment.

The past week witnessed two or three days of lively trading, but the tendency of the oil shares has been downward with but few exceptions. Mexican Petroleum common is one of the active stocks to show a material advance over the previous week. The mining list has been more active than usual on this market.

Chicago Market Takes Strong Upturn, With Other Leading Staples Falling Into Line—Buyers of Corn Show Greatly Increased Confidence—Provisions Slow.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Nov. 4.—Steadier nerves enabled wheat traders today to ignore the bogey of Federal inquiry as to an alleged corner. Many dealers expressed themselves as beginning to believe that there would be no serious investigation. Largely owing to this changed outlook the market developed a stronger tone and closed at 1-4@¾, net advance. Other leading staples, too, showed a net gain—corn 1-8@1-4 to 1-4@3-8, oats 1-4 to 3-8 and hog products a shade to 12½. December wheat ranged from 94 1-8 to 95 1-4, with the last sales 1-4 up at 94 1-8@94½. Confidence among buyers of corn was greatly increased by former bull leaders appearing in the market. December fluctuated between 62 3-8 and 62 7-8, closing easy but 1-4 net higher at 62½. Cash grades were firm. No. 2 yellow was quoted at 74½@75 1-4. Oats ruled stronger in sympathy with other grain. High and low limits touched by December were 46 5-8 and 46 3-8 with the close 46½, an advance of 3-8 over last night. In the provision crowd it seemed that buyers and sellers could not get together. Tonight, however, the blackboards showed higher prices all around, pork 10@12½ to 12½ and other products dearer, but not more than a nickel.

Cash quotations were as follows:

Flour, easy; winter patents, 4.20@5.30; straights, 3.75@4.95; spring patents, 6.00@6.15; straights, 4.50@4.80; bakers', 3.80@5.10; No. 2 rye, 93; feed or mixing barley, 85@95; fair to choice malting, 1.05@1.26; Timothy seed, 13.00@15.50; clover, 14.00@20.00; mess pork, per bbl., 15.62½@15.75; lard, per 100 lbs., 9.06; short ribs, sides (loose) 8.05.

Grain Statistics.

Total clearances of wheat and flour were equal to 531,000 bu.; primary receipts were 1,253,000 bu., compared with 753,000 bu. the corresponding day a year ago. Estimated receipts for Monday: Wheat, 72 cars, corn, 175 cars; oats, 93 cars; hogs, 34,000 head.

New York Cotton Market.

[Special Service to The Times by E. F. Hutton & Co., Members N. Y. Stock Exchange, 118 West Fourth street, Los Angeles.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—Trading in cotton was quiet today with fluctuations held to less than points throughout the list. Next Monday will be the last trading day before the issuance of the government report, next Tuesday being a holiday on account of the elections. Scattering accounts appear to be pretty well evened up with many former bears now lined up on the bull side for a turn. The concensus of opinion is that the report will show something less than ten million bales, the National Ginners having pointed to a total of 9,994,000. Last month this report was 10,000 bales larger than the government. Farmers throughout the South are making a stubborn fight against further decline in prices, and many are holding, but as has been pointed out stocks are increasing rapidly, and unless spinners become more urgent buyers it is probable that the load will eventually become too heavy. Any signs of weakening on the part of the holders would be a signal for a further and perhaps extended decline.

Logan & Bryan's letter says:

"Market was an exceptionally dull affair and prices moved over a range of only 5 to 6 points and closed practically unchanged. Weather was considered favorable. High winds prevailed in Atlantic States. Frost is of small moment, however, as the crop has matured and opened practically all the fruit it will yield, and it remains only to gather what is left in the fields. High winds and rains are more damaging than frost, while colder wet weather will hinder picking and cause waste and loss in the fields, and to that extent reduce final yields. The size of the crop has been exploited to the limit, and this fact is less a market influence, being succeeded by the question of ability or disposition of growers to market production slowly and judiciously, and, if needs be to prevent prices further declining, carry a portion into another season and reduce acreage sufficiently to make the average production of two seasons equal the normal demand. There are indications at present of a disposition of holding movement rather than indiscriminate market supplies on hand regardless of effect on the market."

THE COPPER INDUSTRY.

[Special Service to The Times by E. F. Hutton & Co., Members N. Y. Stock Exchange, 118 West Fourth street, Los Angeles.]

The Phelps-Dodge Company will probably declare dividends in 1911 of $10 per share instead of $12 as in 1910.

Reports of a $3 assessment on Superior Copper is at least indicative that if stockholders refuse to merge under Calumet & Hecla plan they will be compelled to provide the financial assistance necessary for the various companies through assessments.

Shattuck Arizona has $300,000 cash in its treasury—not sufficient for its needs in building a smelter at Douglas, Arizona, as planned. New financing will be necessary.

President Aldrich of Ray Consolidated says four sections of the mill are now treating 3500 tons of ore daily and saving better than 70 per cent.—a production of 2,100,000 pounds of copper per month in concentrates running half capacity.

Our Butte correspondent wires: "President Thornton of Greene-Cananea now in Butte is enthusiastic over the company. He says the company is in position to pay dividends now but no decision yet reached as to date when they will be started."

In the face of 30 per cent. decrease in the world's copper stocks in a little over a year, with the largest production ever known, some of our leading copper interests are not at all apprehensive of the influx of 200,000,000 pounds of new porphyry copper in 1912. The reduction in the world's surplus has been as follows.

July, 1910	410,129,000 lbs.
January, 1911	307,725,000 lbs.
September, 1911	229,322,000 lbs.
Decrease, 14 months	282,323,000 lbs.

As this decrease has taken place in the face of abnormally poor business in this country, it is figured that if any improvement should take place which would show an increase in the American consumption, the new copper would not place the world's stocks much, if any, above the July, 1910 stock figures, and at that time copper metal figures were ¼c higher than at present.

The Boston News Bureau says:

"United Metals Selling Company is understood to have sold itself out of all November copper, and has nothing for sale prior to December delivery. Phelps, Dodge & Company have occupied this position for several days, while the Guggenheims, through their policy of selling copper as it becomes available, have likewise strengthened their spot position. Consumers have not entirely filled their requirements for next month, which fact should be considered as adding still more strength to the position of the selling interests.

"In all the years I have been connected with the copper selling industry," said a man identified for a dozen or more years in a prominent way, "The position of copper has not favored the sellers to so great an extent as today. The consumers' shelves have been practically bare of supplies for some time and they have but recently bought copper to cover themselves for a month and in some cases over the year end.

"It is now up to the producers themselves to aid the situation and be in position to advance prices further. If copper should reach 13 cents as now seems likely, it would not be an exorbitant figure, as even the consumers will admit. I want to go on record, however, with the prediction that if producers allow a lapse of even a week or ten days in the buying movement, it will be to their detriment in this way. Beyond January 1 there has been practically no copper sold, and the producers should now stand ready to book for the first quarter of 1912. If they refuse to do this the 'spell' now on the buyers may disappear, January, February and March copper unsold and prices react as a result.'

"The Amalgamated agency has been holding its price in Europe at 13¾ cents, at which level copper by this and other sellers has been marketed abroad."

BOSTON, Nov. 4.—The improvement in sentiment towards the market still continues and buying orders are gradually coming in better volume. Lake was well bought again today and the price easily advanced to 29 bid. Giroux was also more active and stronger and the general list shows a tendency to become more active and stronger. We look for still better prices in all the producing coppers next week and believe they can be bought at present levels with safety.

Monetary Commission Visit Proves an Event.

Los Angeles Bankers Favor the Aldrich Plan.

The business of the New York Stock Exchange during the past week has demonstrated that there are elements either in Wall street or outside determined to uphold prices. Everything considered the market has shown remarkable strength without any disposition to force a bull movement. While on the last day of the week the market in certain directions was not so steady, throughout the week it gave evidence of stability.

The coming Presidential campaign, the uncertainty of politics and the government onslaught on the big trusts that are accused of conducting their affairs contrary to the Sherman anti-trust law have had a great effect on the market, but there are indications that the country at large does not propose to allow the conditions named to bring on a panic. In other words, in the face of unusual trade and crop conditions the business interests are profiting by previous experiences.

In Los Angeles business conditions appear to be very good. The bank clearings are up to the standard, and the unusual extent of the building operations is sufficient to claim the attention of men of affairs who visit the city. Probably the most important event to the financial interests of Los Angeles during the past week was the visit of the sub-committee of the National Monetary Commission. The hearing at the Alexandria Hotel on Friday was attended by practically all of the prominent bankers of the city, and the reception tendered to the visitors by the Chamber of Commerce Friday evening was well attended.

Apparently the proposal of the commission for a national reserve association is meeting with general approval. It is essentially a bankers' plan for it will transact business with the banks of the country and the national government only. By law the banks becoming stockholders in the reserve association will not receive dividends in excess of 5 per cent. from the earnings of the association. All above this amount will be turned into the national treasury.

But it is pointed out that the banks that will become members of the reserve association will always be able to secure funds upon their securities when emergencies arise, and the possibility of panics will be minimized. The Los Angeles bankers and business men are favorable to the association plan with possible minor modifications. It is to hear suggestions and criticisms that the members of the Monetary Commission are visiting the large cities of the country and giving the bankers an opportunity to express themselves. An effort will be made to have the plan enacted into law by the next Congress.

STOCK RECOVERIES AGAIN REPORTED.

UP MOVEMENT UNEVEN, BUT ADVANCES GENERAL.

Overshadowing Feature of New York Market from Speculative Viewpoint Is the Movement of Reading, Which Shows a Rise of Ten Points for Week.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—The recovery in stocks was carried further today. The upward movement was uneven and less spontaneous than on earlier days of the week, but advances were general. The overshadowing feature of the market, from a speculative standpoint, was the movement of Reading, which was carried up 3 points to 148 1-4, a rise of more than ten points from the low figure of the week. Before the close prices hardened in every quarter. The Erie issues and Canadian Pacific were again in demand at higher prices. In the general list of industrials, National Biscuit and American Agricultural Chemical were especially strong. The September statement of the Illinois Central added another to the list of roads operating in the Central West which have reported heavy shrinkage in earnings in September. Owing largely to heavier operating expenses, net earnings fell off more than $2,000,000. Chesapeake and Ohio reported a small gain in net earnings. The bank statement revealed a much larger loss of cash than had been indicated by movements of currency during the week. The bond market was firm. Total sales, par value, $2,568,000. U. S. bonds lost 1-8 on call on the week.

REMARKABLE RECORD MADE.

COTTON PRODUCTION IN IMPERIAL VALLEY A WONDER.

Six Bales Taken from Four and One-half Acres on First Picking. All Mississippi Valley Output is Completely Eclipsed—Women Will Help the Valley Fair.

EL CENTRO, Nov. 4.—Remarkable records of cotton production are coming in almost daily from Imperial Valley plantations. A notable one this week comes from the ranch of Victor Rottman, adjoining the international boundary line. From the first picking on four and a half acres of land accurately measured is gathered six bales of cotton, and expert growers who have viewed this field say there is nearly as much more cotton maturing on the land. This cotton was planted on April 12, and was grown by J. J. Heflin, an experienced grower from the Texas cotton belt. On the Rottman ranch are 280 acres of cotton. On a forty-acre field of volunteer cotton experts estimate a crop of fifty-five bales, and a twenty-four-acre field of volunteer cotton on this same ranch will yield thirty-five bales.

WILL HELP FAIR.

The Women's Ten Thousand Club of El Centro is to take an active part in the Imperial County Fair, November 13 to 18 inclusive. This club has appointed various committees to secure exhibits for the women's department, and they will be given ample space in the main exhibition hall. This club will also provide for a public reception to be given in honor of the women members of the San Diego Chamber of Commerce excursion to be held here on November 8.

VALLEY LEAGUE.

The Imperial Valley League was formed last night in El Centro by the baseball managers of El Centro, Calexico, Holtville and Imperial. The agreement, signed by the managers, allows each team to engage the services of three professionals. The winter schedule of games was arranged and the games are to run until March 3. Next Sunday the El Centro and Calexico teams will play at El Centro and the Imperial and Holtville teams will play at Imperial.

VALLEY BRIEFS.

Charles Bull of Imperial, has been engaged as business manager for a new creamery to be established at Thermal, in the Coachella Valley. Rambo & Young, of El Centro, have 227 dairy cows ready to ship to Thermal this week, and will ship 115 more cows a few days later.

Mrs. F. Scott has let the contract for the erection of a five-room bungalow on Brighton avenue, between Sixth and Seventh streets, El Centro.

A telephone line is to be constructed from El Centro to the new town of Seeley, on New River, on the line of the San Diego & Arizona Railroad. Connections also will be made with Imperial and Dixie.

Mrs. Shubert, aged 78 years, mother of Mrs. L. Knappley, of Holtville, died at her daughter's home yesterday morning. The body will be sent to Los Angeles Sunday evening for interment there.

The case of Rockhill vs. Parker, locally famous because of the presence of the first woman juror, Mrs. M. A. Ritter, on any Superior Court jury in California, held the attention of Imperial County Superior Court from Monday until Friday evening. The case had an interesting feature in that a brother and sister were the opposing litigants. The suit had to do with the care of an orange grove that failed to live and the division of land that was owned by Mrs. Rockhill.

CAR AND AUTO CRASH.

Mrs. L. C. Scheller, No. 1011 Cypress avenue, was slightly cut about the face and head yesterday afternoon when the automobile, in which she was riding, collided with an observation car of the Los Angeles Railway at Avenue Twenty-six and Dayton avenue. Mrs. Scheller was thrown forward against the windshield, which was broken. Splintered glass injured the woman.

HIGH-STEPPING HORSE.

Sam Josephson, a junk dealer, living at No. 823 East Washington street, knows how it feels to be stepped on. He was unhitching a horse at the Salt Lake depot late yesterday afternoon and the animal, in a playful mood, placed one of its hind feet on Sam's left shoulder. He went to the Receiving Hospital and there the shoulder joint was put back in place.

IN THE WRONG BERTH.

Man Who Is Registered in One Precinct and Votes in Another Says Didn't Know Better.

William S. Stock, who was arrested Friday afternoon for violation of the State election laws, was arraigned yesterday morning before Township Justice Young.

When the case was called Stock answered to his name. He informed the court that he committed the violation through a mistake. He stated that he believed that so long as he was registered it did not matter where he voted. He asserted that he moved from the precinct where he was lawfully registered but a few days prior to the election, and did not have the opportunity to have his name shifted to his new precinct list.

Justice Young set the case for preliminary examination for the 24th inst. He informed Stock that he would release the men who had gone on his bond for $1000 and permit him to go upon his own recognizance.

BIG CONTRACT IS AWARDED.

Van Nuys Block to Be Rushed to Completion.

Fast Time Made in Excavation for Black Building.

Numerous Projects Reported by Structural Paper.

Weymouth Crowell was yesterday awarded the general contract for the construction of the eleven-story I. N. Van Nuys building at Seventh and Spring, the steel frame work of which is now at the height of the third floor above the basement. The contract in question includes the masonry, the reinforced concrete floors and stairs, the terra cotta, the partition tile-work and general finishing. The expenditure called for is $260,000.

The Van Nuys block, which will cost complete about $1,250,000, was planned by Morgan, Walls & Morgan. A perspective of the structure was published exclusively in The Times several months ago.

The Union Oil building at the northwest corner of Seventh and Spring and the Title Insurance building at Fifth and Spring are both nearing completion, as is also the ten-story California building at Second and Broadway.

At Fourth and Hill an unusual time-record has been made in the excavation for the Black building and the laying of the foundations will soon be begun. At Eighth and Broadway the foundation work of the mammoth block of the Los Angeles Investment Company is well under way.

Revised plans for the proposed six-story and basement steel frame office building to be erected at the southwest corner of Fifth and Olive streets for the Department of Public Service were approved Friday by the Municipal Art Commission. Parkinson & Bergstrom are the architects. An entirely new design was submitted by the architects and it met with the full approval of the commission.

The Board of Education, at its meeting last Monday night, commissioned A. F. Rosenheim to prepare plans for the proposed intermediate school to be erected on Soto street in Boyle Heights. The appropriation is about $150,000. Allison & Allison were commissioned to prepare plans for the proposed high and elementary school to be erected at Wilmington. The appropriation is about $45,000.

Work will commence next week upon the erection of an addition to the two-story frame building at No. 4811 Moneta avenue, for Daniel Fry. The stores in the present building will be converted into apartments. A twenty-room addition will also be built, making in all a forty-room house.

J. C. Austin and W. C. Pennell are preparing plans for a three-story and basement frame apartment house to be built on Albany street between Ninth and Tenth streets, for Mrs. G. S. Wilson. It will contain about sixty rooms divided into two and three-room suites with private baths and wall beds.

R. B. Young & Son have prepared plans for enlarging and building an additional story to the frame and plaster garage at the Kendis Apartments on West Sixth street for Mrs. Alice B. Cohn.

Morgan, Walls & Morgan have prepared plans for a one-story brick store building to be erected at the northeast corner of Jefferson street and Grand avenue for Mrs. Martha Taggart. It will contain three store rooms.

B. D. Kronnick has been awarded the general contract at $20,000 for the construction of a two-story brick residence on West Adams street near Western avenue for William Bayly. The house will be Old English in design. J. Martyn Haenke is the architect.

The plans for the structure, as prepared by Needham and Cline, call for a building of a decidedly domestic type of architecture which will be a distinct addition to the residential neighborhood in which it is situated.

The building will contain eight apartments, four of four rooms each and four of three rooms. Each apartment will have its own front porch and rear screen porch. The appointments will be modern throughout and will include disappearing beds, electric cookers and built-in refrigerators. EXCURSION POSTPONED.

The contemplated excursion of the Los Angeles Realty Board to Long Beach on November 9 has been called off for the time being. The affair is merely postponed and the date will be announced later.

LOCAL SCHEDULE MODEL FOR STATE.

REALTY MEN EVERYWHERE LIKE LOS ANGELES PLAN.

Commission Rate Card in Vogue Here Pattern for General Change of Policy in Other Parts of California—Bay City Adopts Some Ideas from Gotham.

That the recently adopted schedule of the Los Angeles Realty Board is a good one, and that the Los Angeles Realty Board's policies are in a large sense shaping the work of real estate men's associations throughout California has become a recognized fact. This has become most apparent since the seventh annual convention of the California State Realty Federation, held at San Francisco, October 11, 12 and 13, of this year, when the Los Angeles men predominated in attendance, and came in close touch with the representative real estate men of the other cities of California.

The new schedule of the Los Angeles Realty Board has attracted widespread attention, and close study in all quarters. The recent movement in Sacramento to form a new real estate men's association was successful because it was based on an effort to revise existing commission schedules, and to produce more income for the local real estate men, who were operating on a very low margin of profit. The leading firms which had in the past refused to affiliate with any organization of real estate men in the Capitol City, have started the movement, and the entire basis has been the Los Angeles Realty Board Commission schedule. This has been slightly revised to meet local conditions, but the main points have been retained.

At Oakland a special meeting of the Oakland Real Estate Association was held Tuesday, October 31, for the consideration of a report of a committee on the revision of commission schedule, which had based its report on the Los Angeles rules. The important features of the pattern were recommended by the members present, and will be adopted by the executive committee, and become a part of the organic law of the association when signed by ninety per cent. of the active agent members.

It is understood that a revision of the bylaws is under consideration by the Board of Directors of the San Francisco Real Estate Board, based purely on a new schedule of commissions. Los Angeles charges will be followed in a measure, but there will also be a partial adoption of the schedules in force in New York, and Chicago.

NEW BOARDS FORMING.

Willows, Glenn county, the seat of the tremendous Kuhn syndicate irrigation project, has formed a board, to be known as the Glenn County Realty Board, based on the control of commissions and the elimination of "knocking." The organization will affiliate with the California State Realty Federation.

Richmond, Alameda county, has formed a strong organization with thirty-five members at the initial meeting. The San Joaquin County Real Estate Men's Association, at Stockton, will hold its annual meeting Monday, November 6, and the chief matter to be considered will be revision of the bylaws and revision of schedule of commissions, with the Los Angeles card forming a basis.

Everywhere real estate men are watching the work of the California State Realty Federation, and coming closer together in the common desire to better conditions in the business, and to promote the best interests of the State, through the protection of the homeseeker and colonist from the fakes and frauds of the land schemer. A year of accomplishment and progress is before the federation, with next year's convention in Los Angeles, when the Los Angeles Realty Board will have an opportunity to show its northern visitors what united action can do to promote good business methods and build up a city.

Owens Valley Apples Astonish Oregon Apple Men

There is no single spot known in America that can grow finer red winter apples than Owens River Valley, 10 hours from Los Angeles.

This is a conservative statement—it is provable absolutely to the very letter. Oregon today holds the apple championship of the world—and yet, old, experienced apple men from the best districts of that State declare they have NEVER seen such Winesaps and Spitzenbergs as are now being grown in Owens Valley.

If you are interested in getting into the apple industry on the ground floor—and fail to take Owens Valley into account—you make a grave and serious mistake.

The facts regarding this wonderful valley are open to any man who cares to profit by them. Investigate now. Come to our office or drop a postal for literature.

GENERAL FREDERICK FUNSTON'S CAPTURE OF AGUINALDO.

A Reminiscence of a Daring Exploit in the Philippines Narrated by Funston Himself—Some of His Associates In the War.

IN FEBRUARY, 1901, Brig.-Gen. Frederick Funston forestalled the execution of an order for his muster out of the service by capturing Emilio Aguinaldo, chief of the insurgent Filipinos. It was a singularly daring exploit and Funston was rewarded by a commission in the regular army. He is now the ranking brigadier-general in the United States and is serving his fourth detail in the Philippines.

In the current number of Scribner's Magazine Funston tells the story of the capture of the famous insurrecto chieftain.

FUNSTON'S NARRATIVE.

It was the 8th day of February, 1901, and in the room that served as an office in theheadquarters building at San Isidro, I was going over the morning's work with the adjutant-general of the district, Capt. E. V. Smith, when there arrived a telegram that for the moment disturbed our equanimity—a brief message that was to have no small part in the making of the history of the Philippine insurrection. It was signed by Lieut. J. D. Taylor, Twenty-fourth Infantry, commanding the company of that regiment that constituted the garrison of the town of Pantabangan, about sixty miles to the northeast, at the foot of the western slope of the massive mountain range that separates the great central plain of Luzon from the Pacific coast of the island, and was to the effect that a small band of insurgent soldiers had voluntarily presented themselves to him, and that the man in command had stated that he was the bearer of dispatches from Emilio Aguinaldo to certain subordinates in Central and Southern Luzon. The letters addressed to Baldomero Aguinaldo, Alejandrino, Urbano Lacuna, Pablo Tecson, Simon Tecson, Teodoro Sandico, and other insurgent leaders, were in cipher and so could not be read, and evidently signed fictitiously, though in a handwriting that seemed to resemble that of Aguinaldo.

For more than a year the exact whereabouts of the elusive chieftain of the insurgent Filipinos had been a mystery. Rumor located him in all sorts of impossible places, but those best qualified to judge thought that he was somewhere in the great valley of the Cagayan, in the northern part of the island, or in one of the extensive mountain ranges on either side of it. Probably few, if any, of those in high command among the insurgent forces knew where he was, as he was taking every precaution against treachery, or the disclosure of his hiding-place by the capture of correspondence, having gone so far as to forbid that the name of his temporary capital should be put on paper in any of the letters sent out by himself or staff. A few trusted men saw that letters to him reached their destination

It was directed that the leader of the surrendered band, with the correspondence that he had given up, be sent to San Isidro with all possible speed. He proved to be a very intelligent Ilocano, giving his name as Cecilio Segismundo.

According to his story, he was one of the men attached to Aguinaldo's headquarters, and had been with him many months, his principal duty being such errands as the one that he had now been sent out on, that, is, carrying official mail between the insurgent chief and his subordinates. On the 14th of January, accompanied by a detachment of twelve armed men of Aguinaldo's escort, he had left with a package of letters to be delivered to Urbano Lacuna, the insurgent chief in Nueva Ecija province, who was to forward to their final destinations those that were not meant for him. After a terrible journey down the coast and through mountains he had, in the vicinity of Baler, encountered a small detachment of our troops out on a scouting expedition and had lost two of his men. It subsequently developed that this was a detachment of the company of the Twenty-second Infantry garrisoning the town of Baler, and was commanded by Lieut. Parker Hitt. After this encounter Segismundo and his little band had made their way across the pass through the mountain range to the westward, and finally, twenty-six days after leaving Palanan, had reached the outskirts of the town of Pantabangan. Here, foot-weary and hungry, he communicated with the local presidente, or Mayor, who had formerly acted in the same capacity for the insurgent government that he was now filling under American rule.

Funston proceeds to tell in interesting detail of the efficient work accomplished by the Presidente and Lieut. Taylor in securing the surrender of Segismundo; the difficulties encountered, during twenty-four hours continuous work of himself, Capt. Smith, Lazaro Segovia, whose knowledge of Spanish and Tagalo was invaluable, in deciphering the correspondence; the conception of the daring plan to impersonate a bearer of messages and surprise and capture the rebel chief and of the final approval of the plan by Gen. MacArthur then commanding in the Philippines. Some captured stationery proved of use in the plan in which a former insurgent officer, Roman Roque, played an important part.

It was now necessary to make up the personnel of the expedition, says Funston. Capt. Smith was exceedingly anxious to be taken along, but could not be spared from San Isidro. I selected as one of the officers, Capt. Harry W. Newton of the Thirty-fourth United States Volunteer Infantry, now a captain in the Coast Artillery Corps. Capt. Newton had had some experience at sea, and, besides, while stationed at Baler, about a year previously, had made a boat expedition from there to Casiguran, a town that we would necessarily have something to do with. Of course, I took along my efficient aide, Lieut. Mitchell. Segovia and Segismundo would be very necessary, and, in fact, proved invaluable. But it would be necessary to have some Tagalos, as Lacuna's force, from which this detachment was supposed to come, was made up entirely of men of that race. The selection of these men was a very delicate matter, as they would have it in their power to ruin us by disclosing our real character. As will be seen they were absolutely faithful. But I would never again take such a risk, as I believe that we could have succeeded without them. The men were Hilario Tal Placido, who was to be the supposed chief of the expedition, he being personally known to Aguinaldo.

Admiral Remey had designated the gunboat Vicksburg, Commander E. B. Barry commanding, to carry the expedition, the object of which even he did not know. The clothing and arms that would enable the Macabebes to pass off as insurgent troops were quietly placed on board at night. The greatest secrecy had been maintained, as outside of Gens. MacArthur and Wheaton, two or three officers of the district staff left behind at San Isidro, the officers who were to go on the expedition, Segovia and Segismundo, not a single man had been informed.

On the night of March 6, the Vicksburg slipped out of Manila Bay, and steered south in order to pass through the straits of San Bernardino.

There was no longer any occasion for secrecy, and Commander Barry and the other officers of the vessel soon knew the object of the expedition that they were transporting. The next morning, having Segovia to assist me in order that everything would be well understood, I sent for Tal Placido, Bato and Cadhit, the three ex-insurgent officers with us, and told them that we were going after their old chieftain, and that they would be expected to play their part, as they had all of them without compulsion taken the oath of allegiance to the United States. If they were faithful they would be well rewarded, if not, there would be but one penalty and that would be inflicted, if it was the last thing done. They seemed thunderstruck, but soon regained their composure, promised to do their part, and did it. They even showed no little interest and enthusiasm as we outlined to them the complicated plan which it was hoped might bring success. As they were to have important parts to play, it was necessary to confide in them fully, and give them complete instructions as to what they were to do. Next came the Macabebes. No one who ever served with them would doubt their loyalty, even to the last extremity, but many of them were men of not a great deal of intelligence, and so they had to be instructed very carefully and thoroughly. This work was done mostly by Capt. Hazzard, Lieut. Hazzard and Segovia.

DRILLING THE TAGALOS.

Day after day the instruction of the Tagalos and the Macabebes went on, and they were often tested to see how well they knew their parts. According to the elaborate yarn that they had been instructed in, they constituted one of the companies of Lacuna's force operating against the Americans in the province of Nueva Ecija. Some time in February they had started on the march to the northward. In the course of this they had crossed the mountains between Pantabagan and Baler, and on this part of their journey had encountered a party of ten American soldiers making maps of the country. They had succeeded in surprising these men, and after a brief fight had killed two and wounded three, all of whom they had left on the ground. The remaining five had surrendered, and they had brought them along as prisoners, as they could not detach men to take them back. They were driller over and over again in the story of this fight and march until all of them seemed to know it by heart. The Macabebes were further instructed that they must at once begin to communicate with each other in the Tagalo dialect, and not use their own under any circumstances until the job was finished. This would, of course, be absolutely necessary after we had landed and got into touch with people who were still insurgents, as they would know mighty well that there were no Macabebes on their side of

QUEEN'S HANDSOME BROTHER.

Prince Alexander of Teck, Who Is to Represent George V at the King of Siam's Coronation.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

LONDON, Oct. 14.—Queen Mary's brother, Prince Alexander of Teck, who goes soon to the Far East to represent King George at the coronation of the King of Siam, has come into prominence only since his brother-in-law came to the throne, for he was merely a distant cousin of King Edward, who had his brother, the Duke of Connaught, and his nephew, Prince Arthur of Connaught, to represent him in foreign lands. With the accession of King George, Prince Alexander's stock went up, for he and his cousin, Prince Arthur of Connaught are the only male royalties who are available for representing King George in foreign countries, until the Prince of Wales and his brothers are old enough to do so.

Prince or no prince, "Algy," as he is called by his family, is a splendid person for the job. To begin with, he has an imposing height and carriage, and a fine handsome face which is bound to attract attention wherever he goes. And people who know him will tell you that it is "Handsome is as handsome does," with this young man. He is one of those cheery souls who find life anything but a bore. He is a true son of his mother, one of the happiest and kindest women that ever stepped. There was not a merrier family party than that at White Lodge, the home of the late Duke and Duchess of Teck in Richmond Park, when Queen Mary—Princess May she was then—and her

AVOCADO HAS FINE FUTURE.

Alligator Pear Promises to Become a Staple.

Trees Flourish in Southern California.

Fifty Thousand Plants in Altadena Nursery.

The wonderful variety of the horticultural products which it is possible to raise in Southern California on a commercial basis is attested by the growing popularity among planters of that valuable tropical fruit, the avocado, or "alligator pear." This queer, rich product has been asserted by experts in food values to be "the most valuable fruit grown;" and it is further said that with a sufficient supply of avocado tres in bearing the world could do away wtih meat entirely—in fact that with widspread planting of these trees their enormous productiveness in food values would make the raising of animals for food purposes too wasteful to be considered.

The avocado seems to be nature's concentrated "field ration"—the concentration of all the necessary ingredients for human nourishment in a single fruit. While this astounding product may not be grown in the colder regions of the world, the amount which it is possible to produce on a single acre in the favored sections, such as Southern California, would make it possible to send a sufficient output through the nation at large to place it within reach of all classes.

As a result of the study of the avocado, in which the United States Department of Agriculture has co-operated with local horticulturists, Altadena is now possessed of the largest avocado nursery in the world, from which are being distributed the trees that are to be the basis of the most picturesque ranch industry yet inaugurated in this land of variety. Fifty thousand avocado plants, all the way from little potted seedlings to the budded and well set trees in the field, ready for the planter, are to be seen within the confines of this beautifully situated experiment station at the base of the mountain back of Pasadena. From here shipments of as many as 5000 trees at a time are being made, one of the large orange growers of Redlands having recently planted that number on ground previously intended for the expansion of his orange orchard. Such plantings as these seem to indicate that the practical ranchmen of this region are prone to believe that the avocado is bound to become a formidable rival of the orange in profit to the grower, which is just what the enthusiasts claim for this product. They go even further, and assert that it will become the most valuable crop of Southern California.

A ROMANTIC FRUIT.

Be this as it may, it has been proven that the avocado (Mexican ahuacate) can be successfully grown for profit in portions of the orange belt, and it is said that it can be depended on to produce in any section where the orange is found. There is something romantic about this fruit from the soft tropics which captures the imagination of the "gentleman planter," and great enthusiasm is being shown

CHURCH SELLS HALL.

BUYER WILL REMODEL PLACE.

GLENDALE, Nov. 4.—The Episcopalians have sold their Guild Hall property at the corner of Third and Jackson streets to C. W. Ingledue, who came recently to Glendale from the East and who also purchased the Glendale Market. Mr. Ingledue will at once remodel the place and make two housekeeping apartments. He has also purchased a lot on Orange Grove avenue just east of Glendale avenue, where he will at once start a home, which he and his family will occupy. The Episcopal people have purchased three lots on the northeast corner of Fifth and Louise streets, adjoining the proposed library site, and will soon start work on an Episcopal church to cost at least $20,000.

Peter L. Ferry, a local architect and contractor, is just starting work on three homes to cost about $2000 each, on Second street west of Central avenue. On a lot near by, Chandler & Lawson are starting a home which will cost $3000. Frank Budway, whose home was destroyed by fire recently, on Seventh street near Pacific, is starting work on the reconstruction of the house. D. Gervais has started a new house on Ivy street.

George Ragland and wife of Los Angeles are erecting a six-room, Swiss chalet home on Glendale avenue. Another home on this street is that being started by F. A. Brown. The Commonwealth Building Company is building three residences on Myrtle street west of Remington.

GROUND IS BROKEN.

CITY HALL IS IMPOSING.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

GLENDALE, Nov. 4.—Ground has been broken for the attractive new City Hall, planned by Paul V. Tuttle of Los Angeles, for this place. The contract is in the hands of Anderson & Murdock. The building will represent a cost of about $7000.

The structure will be of blue brick exterior, the trim being of artificial stone. The building is to be crowned with a classical cornice. The entrance will be unusually attractive.

The building will be 38x53 feet in size. The Council chamber is to be handsomely finished in the mission style and will be 23x32 feet in size. It will be lighted through a glass dome.

MILWAUKEE, SOCIALIST CITY FULL OF HUNGRY, IDLE MEN

How the Experiment Which Los Angeles Is Asked to Try Has Worked in the Wisconsin Metropolis—Taxes Higher, Contractors Out of Business, Nothing Doing in Way of Improvements.

[From a Dispatch to the Detroit Free Press.]

MILWAUKEE (Wis.)—"Give us work as your promised," is the plaintive cry the Socialist administration is hearing, according to figures prepared by Alderman William Coleman, acting business agent of the Federated Trades Council, himself an ardent Socialist. More than 20,000 men are walking the streets of the city seeking work; and the Associated Charities, a non-political, non-denominational organization, reports greater and more widespread suffering among the poor of Milwaukee than at any time within the last five years.

The situation seems peculiar to Milwaukee, as reports from the State are to the effect that outside of this city no more than 10,000 men are unemployed, rather below the normal for this season of the year. It is generally credited that the local situation is due to the fact that large numbers have been attracted to Milwaukee on account of the specious campaign promises made by the Socialists last spring, when they publicly declared that everybody would be given work.

MAYOR IS POWERLESS.

Two years ago Mayor Seidel, then an Alderman, declared that were he at the head of the Board of Public Works, he would find means to give work to the unemployed. Now, as executive of the city, he finds that he is powerless to keep his promise.

To afford some relief for the suffering, the common Council has gone on record in favor of public dances in the Auditorium, a semi-municipal building, which is to be furnished rent free for the occasions. Merchants and others are asked to donate necessary supplies. The proceeds of such dances and entertainments to be conducted in connection are to be placed in the City Treasury to the credit of the fund for the unemployed.

In almost every department of city service important work is being held up in an effort to keep down expenses and thus reducing the tax levy next year. And it is because of the fear that taxes must necessarily be higher than even this year because of the large number of Socialist plans involving heavy expenditures, that the unemployed situation is growing more acute every day. No large city contracts have been made during the last few months. Contractors are idle, with prospects that their enforced idleness will continue indefinitely so far as city work is concerned. Streets are not being cleaned; ashes and garbage are being removed spasmodically, and then only when the people insist on its being done. No alley has been cleaned since last fall. Alderman Berger in this dilemma suggested that the public works department work its employees in four-hour relays, thus giving work to double the number of men now employed, but the suggestion was not kindly received, as only the laborers were to be affected under that rule who earn $2 a day and none of the better paid men.

PROPERTY OWNERS COMPLAIN.

Aside from the labor questions, which strike home forcibly since the backbone of the Socialist party are workingmen, the administration is being harassed by property owners because taxes this year have been abnormally high. While the administration is being blamed, it is not at fault, as the high taxes are the result of the preceding Democratic administration, the budget having been made under the Rose regime, which alone should be held responsible. But in their ire the property owners seem to forget this system of financing by which tax collections are anticipated one year.

The Socialists are doing their utmost to explain, but with their paid tax receipts in their hands property owners are not inclined to listen to reason. The administration realizes that it will be up against it next spring in the municipal election unless taxes are lower than they were this year and for that reason the unemployed problems must be solved by others than the administration. Mayor Seidel has called on the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association, and like organizations to learn what may be done toward ameliorating conditions.

Reorganization.

TOBACCO BRANDS TO BE DIVIDED.

Separation of Competing Products Urged.

Action Urged Upon Attorney Wickersham.

Brand Values Are Chief Earning Power.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—[Special to Journal of Commerce.] It is expected that in the proceedings with reference to the plans of reorganizing the American Tobacco Company, which are to be entered upon in New York next Monday, a good deal of attention will be devoted to the question of brands of tobacco and their control by given plants. This is in some ways a new proposition, as it has received relatively little part in the criticism that has been visited upon the tobacco reorganization plan. It is a fact, however, that within the past two or three days Mr. Wickersham's advisors have strongly represented to him the desirability of taking some action in regard to this matter and of using it as one basis for his criticism of the proposals of the company. That he will do so is now fully believed by those who have every reason to know what he is planning.

As is shown by the Bureau of Corporations in its recent report on the tobacco company, the policy of the concern has been directed toward the suppression of competition by getting control of popular brands of tobacco. It has not worried nearly as much about the fact that an efficient factory was competing with it as it has about the fact that a given brand has been skilfully advertised and had taken hold of popular taste. Therefore it has consistently endeavored to buy up those independent manufacturers whose brands were popular or likely to become so. By such successive purchases the combination has acquired a very large share of these specially favored brands, which taken collectively have a well defined monopolistic value. The combination has unquestionably acquired a relatively greater proportion of this intangible "brand value" than the independent manufacturers all taken together at the present time possess, except in the case of the cigar branch of the business, only a small proportion of which is controlled by the combination. By bunching the competitive brands in the hands of given factories and by keeping them together in the distribution of assets among given concerns, the combination might, therefore, maintain its monopolistic features even though the mere process of manufacturing was broken up among a great number of concerns.

This possibility of continued monopolistic control is due to the fact that the demand for particular brands of tobacco is based peculiarly on individual taste or desire formed into a fixed preference. This preference may mave been developed and fostered through various forms of advertising and other inducements held out by the manufacturer. In this respect brands of manufactured tobaccos are like many other proprietary articles, such as patent medicines, perfumes, liquors, toilet preparations and chewing gum, which often lead to exceptionally large profits. The tobacco industry in the aggregate, entirely independent of any question of combination, is largely aided in increasing its earnings as a result of high brand value. Even under conditions of normal competition, the bureau thinks, the average rate of return on tangible assets in the entire industry is much greater than the average in those industries in which brand values and good will are unimportant. Even where competition is quite active a considerable part of the sales of tobacco consist of popular brands, whose prices are little influenced by competition and which bring in a high rate of profit. These brand values often cannot be figured at any definite sum in estimating the assets of a concern, but they are of fundamental importance. A business which should be estimated without any reference to these brands would be very inadequately estimated. This means that, if a distribution of the assets of such a business were to be made without reference to the question of brand value, it would probably be exceedingly unfair, while if an effort were made to re-establish competition in manufacturing without reference to the distribution of competitive brands, the result would be unsuccessful because the essential element of monopoly—the combined control of brands which ought to compete with one another—would be retained.

GUNS FOR REVENUE CUTTERS.

Movement to Make the Crews of These Boats First-Class Fighting Men Should They Be Needed.

[Brooklyn Eagle:] "By order of the Secretary of the Navy, the chief of ordnance is instructed to lend the revenue cutter service eighty three and six-pounder guns, to be returned upon request."

This brief note, given out at the Navy Department with scores of other orders upon various subjects, unimportant as it would seem to the casual reader, marks the reorganization of one of the fighting arms of Uncle Sam. It means, also, that in time of war, if war ever comes to us again, the United States navy will be enlarged by the addition of hundreds of expert gunners, drilled to the minute in the use of modern high-powered arms. It means that the men of the revenue cutter service are immediately to abandon the obsolete, though honorable, old stern chasers and bow chasers that they have been using for generations, and take their rightful places as first-class fighting men under the Flag.

"With these guns the revenue cutter service will be able to inaugurate a series of practice drills similar to those of the navy, and with the same modern arms," said Capt. Bertholf, commandant of the service. "The gun crews, which already are formed on the plan of those in the navy, will for the first time in history be able to use first-class guns. Heretofore, the guns used have been anything but up to date. They were all right for firing salutes, or for scaring poachers away from the seal herds, but for actual warfare against well-equipped foes they would have been sorry failures. The Androscoggin, which will be the first cutter equipped with the up-to-date guns, is now at the Washington Navy Yard, where the new arms are being mounted. As we could get no appropriation from Congress authorizing us to purchase the guns we needed, the only way we could get them was to 'borrow' them from the navy. Of course, we do not intend to give them back—neither does the navy expect to ask for their return. In order to keep the record straight, however, they will be carried upon the books of the Navy Department as property of that branch of the government."

"After the men become well drilled in the use of those eighty guns, I dare anyone to try to get them away," observed Capt. McAllister, chief engineer of the service, who was present during the interview with Capt. Bertholf.

THE GOOD IN MOROCCO.

Peculiar Discovery of Old Cotton Plantations and Extensive Irrigation System.

[London Standard:] In view of the present controversy between France and Germany in regard to Morocco, the value of which country a portion of the German press is beginning to doubt, on the principle of "sour grapes," an article appearing in a German textile journal, written on information supplied by Herr Alfred Mannesmann, is of considerable interest. Herr Alfred Mannesmann is one of the famous Mannesmann brothers, the firm which has done more by pioneer work and breaking fresh ground to extend Germany's field of industry and commerce, as well as her territorial boundaries, than any other private concern. According to Herr Alfred Mannesmann, Morocco is destined to be one of the richest cotton producing lands of the future.

Two years ago, while prospecting for minerals in Morocco, Herr Mannesmann was taken prisoner by the Moors and conveyed to the Sus District, which up to that time had been trodden by the foot of no European. To his surprise, he found the ruins of vast cotton plantations which must have existed in the reign of the Sultan Edris, grandfather of the present Sultan, but which now, uncultivated and uncared for, have run wild and gone to seed. Not only did Herr Mannesmann see the plantations themselves, but above and below Tarudant, the capital of the province, he declares are the remains of an irrigation system designed to feed the plantations with the water which their dry, chalky soil requires to make it fruitful.

An artificial canal, with a depth varying from three to nine feet, drew water from the River Sus, and a hundred years ago, when the Sultan Edris had the power to force the indolent population to work, the cotton plantations must have yielded a rich harvest even with the primitive methods of cultivation. Herr Mannesmann is of the opinion that the plantations can easily be regenerated and brought up to a state of culture which will render Morocco one of the most valuable cotton producing fields of the world. The climate, he says, is essentially suited to cotton growing, and the even temperature of Morocco makes it possible for Europeans to do manual labor, even if the natives could not be used. It was with this end in view that the Mannesmann brothers obtained from the Sultan large concessions in the Sus district. Herr Alfred Mannesman is at present on his way to Tangier, where his brother Otto is awaiting him. From Tangier one of them, probably Alfred, will proceed to the Sus, where the firm's interests are at present represented by only three Europeans.

NEW USE FOR ASHES.

Can be Manufactured Into a Material Resembling Either Marble or Rubber.

The utilization of the treasures locked up in coal has thus far usually stopped at the ashes, says Schatze der Kohle und ihre Verwertung. All the other products, such as gas, coke, tar, sulphate of ammonia, benzol, etc., have for a long time formed most impartant materials in our industries. In view of the enormous quantities of coal consumed annually a recently announced discovery, according to which there can be produced from ashes at will, substances resembling marble or rubber, claims lively interest. From ashes, the type of the dead, the passed away, new life is to be created. The highly excellent substance obtained, as stated, possesses at once the properties of marble and rubber. Neither moisture, heat or acids can attack it, at the same time it is non-conducting, so that its use for electric conduits also comes under consideration. The cost of producing the new substance, which is also adapted for wall and floor coverings, for tableslabs, etc., amounts to about 2 to 3 marks (45.6 to 71.4 cents) per square meter. The process of manufacture consists in that the ashes, preferably briquet ashes or dust ashes, are first sifted, then treated with cold soda water and copal varnish and finally subjected to a kneading and drying process. According to whether an imitation of marble or rubber is desired the proper coloring substance is added. The material will be marketed under the name of "Cinerite."

GLIMPSES OF SAN FRANCISCO.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 3.—Railroad men representing nearly fifty lines have been discussing with the railroad commissioners the best way of preparing their valuation tables. The last Legislature imposed on the commission the task of getting railroad valuations and the transportation men have been notified that they must report before November 25. The extra session of the Legislature is impatiently awaited by the railroad people because there is considerable uncertainty as to just what is going to happen.

Fine Brick Apartment-house for Close-in Corner—Building Important Addition to Improvements.

Plans have been prepared by R. B. Young & Son for a three-story brick apartment building that is to be erected by N. Canepa, at the southwest corner of Seventh and San Pedro streets. The structure, which will cost about $20,000, will be quite an addition to the many new improvements on East Seventh

The building will face ninety feet on Seventh street by sixty feet on San Pedro. It will contain fifty rooms on the two upper floors, with stores below. The entrance will be in marble and protected by a handsome marquise. The structure will be faced with cream pressed brick on the two street sides.

"Where the big red apple grows"

YUCAIPA

VALLEY

REDLANDS, CAL.

BIG RED APPLES have been grown here for twenty years. The deep, rich, decomposed granite soil, the cool mountain air, and a plentiful supply of water is what gives the Yucaipa Valley Apples that beautiful, high red color, that fine flavor and juiciness, for which they are noted. That is why Yucaipa Valley apples bring $1.50 to $1.60 a box on the trees. The local demand for first-class apples is now much greater than the supply and it is still growing. Which means still higher prices for first-class RED APPLES.

The Yucaipa Valley lies at an elevation of 2000 feet above sea level, seven to nine miles east of Redlands, Cal. A new town, Yucaipa City, is growing here now. Over 60 families have recently moved into our Valley and are building substantial homes. Over 1000 acres were planted to apple trees last season. Judging from the present sales of land and orders for apple trees placed by the buyers there will be about 2000 acres set out the coming season.

This is the place for the health-seeker, as well as for the apple grower. The pure dry mountain air is very beneficial for any one afflicted with Catarrh, Asthmatic or Bronchial troubles.

While there are orchards paying their owners from $500 to $1000 and upward an acre a year in the Yucaipa Valley, you can still buy first-class apple land with one share of water stock per acre at $275 per acre on very easy terms.

Free excursions to buyers daily. For further information call on or write.

Hundreds of those who have been attending the world renowned Automobile Road Races, from year to year, are marveling at the wonderful development of the Imperial Santa Monica district. And many are so convinced, of the inevitably brilliant future ahead of this wonderful country, that they are hastening to add their homes to the hundreds that already sweep from the Palisades to Los Angeles, and from the foothills to the seaboard.

It is possible that the world does not boast of a finer Automobile Road Course, than is represented in this eight-mile speedway, comprising in its scope San Vicente Boulevard, Ocean Avenue and Nevada Avenue. And certainly no similar Automobile Course is more superbly located, than is this one at Santa Monica.

Not any more is Santa Monica, this masterpiece of "God's Country," regarded as merely an ideal retreat from the world to the heart of nature; a "Wonderland," as it were, of undulating green of hill, valley and plain, caressed by the ever changing mists of the stately Sierras, and encircling the foam flecked, blue gowned virgin of the sea. Santa Monica though retaining all of its former natural charms, has added to them all of the embellishment that immense expenditure of time and money can contribute.

In other words, Santa Monica, in but a very limited time, has stepped from a magnificent though, more or less obscure territory, to the very "footlights" of fame; where the merchant kings of the world are want to establish at least one of their palatial residences, and where others of ample, though less extensive means are rushing to build their homes.

CLIMATE OF SANTA MONICA BIG ASSET.

The unusually temperate climate of Santa Monica during the winter is one of the principal allurements to the crowds of winter tourists that throng to its shores from all over the United States and Canada each year, doubling and trebling in numbers as time advances.

Protected on the north by Point Dume and the projecting beach line extending beyond, and sheltered on the south by Point Firmin, so that the rougher winds have no mode of entrance, Santa Monica maintains a temperature throughout the winter season reputed to be several degrees warmer than both Los Angeles and some of the other inland cities. The mountains of course, offer a perfect barricade against the desert, "Santa Anas" and dust.

The parks of Santa Monica are green and fresh the year through and so pleasant that there are few days that would not be enjoyable meandering through their walks or driveways, or seated upon a bench watching the white sailed yachts bent on pleasure excursions, or the distant big liners as they go to and from port.

BIG MONEY BACKING DEVELOPMENTS.

Not merely have hundreds of thousands of dollars been expended to put Santa Monica where she is today; but millions of dollars have so far been spent, and millions more are being added, and will continue to be spent until Santa Monica arrives at the goal for which she is aiming, without peer in the world as a beach homesite. When big money gets back of an enterprise—then look out for big events.

It is reported that approximately $5,000,000 will be added to the pleasure facilities alone, of Santa Monica in the near future; comprising besides its new piers, many additional enjoyment devices that have so far been unheard of at either the Atlantic or Pacific Coasts.

PALISADES.

The Santa Monica Land and Water Company, owners of the Palisades, are among the principal factions aiding the large developments of the home districts of Santa Monica. The Palisades comprise, as most Californians know, the magnificent stretch of territory along the bluffs of Santa Monica, commanding one of the most superb views in the entire world. On one side sweeps the never ending azure of the Crescent Bay and the sea, with Catalina distinguishable in the distance. On the other side rises the stalwart peaks of the purple-hued mountains.

The Palisades have become notable among other home localities of California, for the distinctive and strictly high-class nature of its improvements. The lots have the comfortable, one-hundred-foot frontages, with two hundred-foot depths, running to twenty-foot alleys. They are equipped with gas, sewers, electricity, telephones and water, the same as the best Los Angeles property; but the poles and pipes are not permitted to disfigure the beauty of the streets, so they are in the alleys. The streets are big, ample oil-tamped thoroughfares, with sidewalks, gutters and curbs.

A high-class building restriction is another splendid feature of the Palisades, insuring its residents that they may build with the idea of permanency, for there will never be any of the inferior type of houses allowed to enter, depreciating the value of finer ones. Many of the homes in this district range in value from $10,000 to $20,000.

The Santa Monica Land and Water Company has constructed a private bath house, for the sole use of the Palisades' residents; which fact gives an additional air of exclusiveness to the Palisades' homes.

BRENTWOOD PARK.

Another property that has attracted such wide spread attention that its fame as a magnificent home district has penetrated to the Atlantic Coast, is Beautiful Brentwood Park. This splendid property is being handled by the Braly-Janss Investment Company.

Brentwood Park, added to the fact that it is one of the most picturesque places in the West, with its glorious canyons, three mountain chains and superb sea view; is also one of the most exclusive home districts in California. Its homes are owned by those of prominence in social circles; and the manner in which it is laid out, with is winding driveways and picturesque parkings of imported shrubbery, should tend to appeal to men and women of the most aesthetic taste.

Those who have soared to the heights, perhaps in art, literature, music or as masters of finance are the ones to whom the aristocratic bearing and refined atmosphere of Brentwood Park makes its strongest appeal. Brentwood Park is the mecca of those who desire a home that affords seclusion without being boresome; freedom without being Plebeian; elegance and dignity without being stiff; a home that is separated from the rush and whirl of the city gaieties and business turmoil, yet has all of its conveniences and is within easy access of both the social and business city life.

END OF BEAN CROPS SEEMS INEVITABLE.

Some of the most famous bean territory in California is now being subdivided by the well-known Wright & Callender and Robert Marsh Real Estate Companies, in the Santa Monica district.

The Wright & Callender Company has a splendid Messa, consisting of 1000 acres, of some of the finest lands that have ever been thrown upon the market for subdivision. Much of the rolling territory of this country will be especially suitable for ideal homesites; while the richness of soil and other natural advantages of these lands, will make a Paradise for the ranchman in the more level localities.

Ethelwyn Manor, also a phenomenally rich territory is being subdivided by the Robert Marsh Company, into both rich ranching lands and country homesites. Probably no finer opportunity was ever presented to acquire a country home, with every conceivable advantage, than this. The climatic and soil conditions are ideal; the scenery is unsurpassed; and the lands are located but a short run by both trolley and automobile from either Los Angeles or the sea.

The prominent King C. Gillette has also lately acquired a hundred and forty-acre tract, not far from Brentwood Park, which will likely before long, be the scene of immense activity in establishing his country home.

THE NEW CHINESE REPUBLIC.

Through Civil Strife and a Heroic Struggle the Old Empire Will Evolve Into a Modern Representative Government.

BY WILLIAM H. KNIGHT.

ONE of the most thrilling and spectacular events in the history of civilization is now being enacted on the opposite shore of the Pacific Ocean. The oldest, largest and most populous empire on the globe, shackled by tradition, encrusted by formalities, wearing the garb of remote ages, adhering to the customs of the past, shut out from the arena of progress for generations, and earning for itself the title of the hermit nation, this strange people the chronology of whose rulers goes back to the time of the pyramids, has suddenly, and with a vigor unmatched in the world's annals sundered its shackles, effaced its traditions, cast aside its ancient habit, broken its shell of exclusiveness, demolished its monarchical insignia, and steps forth like a Spartan youth, full panoplied and eager for the fray, the youngest, most hopeful and most promising of the world's republics.

How shall we account for this sudden and complete transformation of character and purpose in the hoary land of the Mongols and the Manchus? To answer that question we must look beneath the surface that appears so stolid and forbidding. Some of the brightest minds and ablest thinkers among men have been in their councils of state, in their halls of learning, in their marts of trade, and at their gates of commerce. These have not been unmindful of the progress of western nations in science and the arts, in forms of government, in methods of youthful instruction and in the universal dissemination of knowledge.

Wise leaders, recognizing their country's needs and discerning the remedy for their ills, by a secret and earnest concert of action, dispatched some of their keenest intellects to study the institutions of those western peoples, to take note of what was best and most worthy of adoption in their conduct of the world's affairs, and moreover these Chinese savants have exiled their brightest and most promising youths to be trained in the schools and universities, the factories and counting houses of those countries, till they should master the business methods and become imbued with the spirit of modern progress.

Returning to their native land each foreign emissary, each instructed youth, each experienced artisan and tradesman, became a home missionary to point out defects in their home government, and to suggest such remedies as would rejuvenate the ancient state and make it a power among the nations to which its great extent, resources and numbers entitled it, also to introduce into its business and social life such methods and modes of living as would stimulate into activity all that is best and most vital in the hearts and hopes of the common people.

In order adequately to grasp the significance of the momentous struggle now convulsing that ancient empire, we may briefly summarize the salient features of this new nation that is to rise out of this conflict and take its place among the world powers of the first rank. With a coastline fronting nearly 2000 miles on the Pacific Ocean, its territory extends back to the Himalaya Mountains—the loftiest range on the globe, serving in past ages as a wall against incursions of ambitious conquerers from the west; and stretches from the snows of Siberia on the north to the tropical valleys of the south; its boundaries enclosing an area of 4,200,000 square miles, nearly equal to that of the United State and half of Canada combined.

Its population, numbering 406,000,000, exceeds that of the entire American continent with some European countries thrown in. In other words, within the boundaries of that mighty empire reside more than one-fourth of the inhabitants of the globe. Besides five dependencies, of which Manchuria is the most populous, and Mongolia, the largest in extent, there are nineteen provinces corresponding to the States of our Union. These dependencies and provinces have in some instances different languages, and numerous dialects are spoken. They are helda together rather loosely in a theoretical empire under a rather weak government. So weak has been the authority of the central administration that Great Britain, with the sanction of France, Germany, Russia and the United States, has had their representative at the seat of customs, clothed with almost vice-regal power to regulate and ensure the payment of obligations for loans advanced by citizens of those countries.

Among the elements of future progress in this great country are mighty rivers, navigable for thousands of miles, immense and as yet almost untouched deposits of iron and coal—the basis of untold prosperity, other valuable minerals and clays that will serve to keep an industrious people busy for generations to come, opportunities for hydro-electric power that will turn the wheels of commerce and industry for all future time, valleys of exceeding fertility that have not yet been subjected to modern methods of cultivation, and climates so varied as to include all the products of tropic and temperate zones.

Let California appreciate the fact that she is "next" (only an ocean ferry between) to this new republic of Cheng Wha, (for such is its putative name,) with all the potentialities of its expanding future. There will be abundant need of an exchange of products between the two countries, both being in the developing and progressive stage. A line of steamships should sail directly from the Port of Los Angeles to Shangaai, or to some other populous city on the Yangtse-Kiang River, where the Chinese railway, largely financed by American investors, crosses that stream. This is the logical outcome of the new international relations that will be established, for the shortest distance and eastiest grade from any Pacific port to the Atlantic Coast, is by way of Los Angeles, and its two transcontinental railways.

Then hail to the new republic of Cheng Wha; may she speedily reach the goal for which she is heroically struggling, introduce the reforms that have been wisely planned by the leaders of the revolution, set up a stable and strong representative government, and give her people freedom, enlightenment, peace and happiness!

SOLID AND IMPOSING.

Handsome and Substantial Home of Georgian Type Ready For Occupancy of West Adams Builder.

One of the handsomest and most imposing dwellings of the exclusive West Adams section has just been completed for E. W. Britt at the northeast corner of that fashionable thoroughfare and Gramercy place. The house, which contains about fifteen rooms and which is of the Georgian period of Colonial architecture, was planned by A. F. Rosenheim.

The construction is of brick above a granite base, the trim being of terra cotta. The roof is of green slate and the terrace and porches have tile floors. The metal work is in copper. The place, in fact, is noteworthy as being one of the most substantial in the city. A perspective of the residence was published exclusively in The Times of October 30, 1910.

All Indianians May be Lawyers.

[Law Notes:] A peculiar condition exists in Indiana. The Constitution of that State provides that "every person of good moral character being a voter, shall be entitled to admission to practice law in all courts of justice."

At the general election in November, 1900, a proposed amendment that "The general assembly shall by law prescribe what qualifications shall be necessary for admission to practice law in all courts of justice" was submitted to the electors.

Nearly one hundred thousand more votes were cast for the amendment than against it. But it did not receive a majority of the votes cast for Presidential electors and Governor. Supreme Court held that it had not been carried by the constitutional majority required for the ratification of a proposed amendment, and therefore that an applicant for admission to the bar could not be required to submit to an examination as to his educational qualifications general or special, although a statute provided (and still provides) therefor.

At the Country Dance.

[Brooklyn Eagle:] It was only the other day that a local woman, visiting in the northern part of the State, attended a neighborhood dance, and this is what she heard: "S'lute yer pardners; let 'er go, balance all and do-so-do; swing yer gal and run away; right and left and gents sashay; gents to the right and swing or cheat; on to the next gal and repeat; balance next and don't be shy; swing your pard and swing 'er high; bunch the gals and circle 'round; whack your feet until they sound; form a basket; break away; swing and kiss and all get gay; alaman left an' balance all; lift your hoofs and let 'em fall; swing your opposite—swing again; back ter pardners, do-so-do; all jine hands and off yer go."

SUBSTITUTIONS OF WOOD.

Advantages Taken of Popular Ignorance to Use Low Price Lumber of Same Appearance.

[Scientific American:] A great majority of wood users are aware of the enormous amount of unequivalent substitution that is constantly going on, even with our most common commercial woods. Although the literature of the timber trade is not filled with exposures of very serious impositions on the buying public, the facts nevertheless remain, and no one is perhaps better informed on the enormity of the problem and the extent to which such unequivalent substitutions are knowingly practiced, than the men who are frequently called upon to make identifications for wood-using concerns. There is, however, a great deal of substitution that is evidently unintentional. Yet ignorance or indifference on the part of one placed in a responsible position and who should know is hardly excusable. The reasons for this are numerous, and often more or less complicated. The careless use of common names is perhaps the chief cause. Yellow pine is a name applied locally to no less than six species of pines; and when a retail lumber dealer calls for yellow pine, the wholesaler is liable to fill the order with any one of the half-dozen kinds he has in stock. The dealer generally supplies the kind which yields him the largest profit. In a great many cases local dealers do not know the distinguishing characteristics of the various woods they are handling, nor are they particularly concerned so long as they are able to sell satisfactorily what they have in stock. It is the same in the case of lumber as it is in all other cases where unfair means are practiced to obtain a large profit, the general public has to pay for it. Large concerns having special uses for certain woods usually have competent men to inspect all woods before they are accepted, and are, therefore, not obliged to pay for what they do not get. If it costs $200 per 1000 feet to get mahogany (Swietania mahagoni,) from Honduras to the local markets, and $75 for crab wood (Carapa guiensis,) from British Guiana to similar markets, it does not seem fair to charge the general public as much for the crab wood as for the mahogany, simply because the dealer chooses to apply the name "mahogany" to the inferior crab wood. Numerous cases of this kind could be cited.

Substitutions of timber are practised the world over. This is especially true with certain useful kinds of timber now becoming scarce, such as mahogany, ebony (Diospyros ebenum,) sandalwood (Santalum album,) box (Buxus semper-virens) and rosewood (Dalbergia nigra.) Dealers in fancy woods are often unable to distinguish what woods they have in stock, for in the case of mahogany alone there are fully twenty-five different woods now sold for this timber, and no less than ten different species that are known as rosewood. The layman is still less able to tell apart the so-called mahoganies and substitutes for other wood after they have been properly stained and finished. Users of ebony, cocobola (leguminous tree,) sandalwood orange (Citrus vulgaris,) and box must be on the constant lookout to avoid inferior substitutes for woods used in the medical profession, such as cinchona (Cinchona calisaya,) witch-hazel (Hammamelis virginiana,) and woods from which certain dyes and resinous substances are obtained.

Instructions of a Musician.

[Blackwood's Magazine:] A Highland piper who had a pupil to teach originated a method by which he succeeded in reducing the difficulties of the task to a minimum, and at the same time fixed his lesson in the pupil's mind.

"Here, Donald," said he, "tak yer pipes, lad, an' gie us a blast.

"So! Verra weel blawn indeed, but what's a sound, Donald, wi'out sense? You may blaw forever wi'out making a tune o't, if I danna tell ye how the queer things on the paper maun help ye.

"Ye see that big fellow wi' a round open face"—pointing to semi-breve—"between two lines of a bar? He moves slowly from that line to this, while ye beat ane wi' your fist, an' gie a long blast.

"If ye put a leg to him, ye mak twa o' him, an' he'll move twice as fast.

"If, now, ye black his face, he'll run four times faster than the fellow wi' the white face; and if, after blacking his face, ye'll bend his knee or tie his leg, he'll hop eight times faster than the white faced chap I showed ye first.

"Now," concluded the piper, sententiously, "whene'er ye blaw your pipes, Donald, remember this: That the tighter those fellows' legs are tied, the faster they'll run, and the quicker they're sure to dance."

The Captain Was Mistaken.

[Tit-Bits:] The skipper was a man who had a good opinion of himself and his notions. He had pulled through shipwreck, mutiny and other perils of the deep, but he came a cropper once. For one of his voyages he had shipped a boatswain's mate, who bore something of a reputation.

One day the skipper ordered him aloft to examine a sail on the royal yard.

"'Tain't safe, cap'n!" protested the boatswain's mate; the foot ropes has got to be fixed first."

"Do as I tell you!" thundered the captain. "The foot ropes are all right. I know they are."

The man went up.

Five minutes later he came tumbling down through the rigging from the top of the mast, a distance of over 100 feet.

With a bang he landed on the belly of the mainsail and bounded into one of the canvas-covered boats.

The sailors, thinking him dead, crowded about him in a circle.

To their amazement he sat up.

His eyes wandered vacantly about until they rested on the leathery face of the skipper, when they lighted up with intelligence.

"Cap'n," he said, slowly; "you was mistaken about them foot ropes."

Anvil Sparks.

[Christian Herald:] Intention is a poor thing without attention.

The lazy man considers all toil slavery.

He who breaks his word smashes himself.

It doesn't require brilliancy to cast reflections.

You can't butter it when you have to swallow pride.

The world always looks brighter from behind a smile.

People who take too much liberty lose it all sooner or later.

When you trip up, fall forward, and get up farther along.

The way to get ahead of the devil is to move on; he doesn't run very fast upward.

COAL IN THE PHILIPPINES.

Considerable Part of Their Own Supply Now Being Produced in the Islands.

[Washington Post:] Considerable interest is shown in the coal situation of the Philippines by South China commercial circles, not only because of the great increase in the imports of fuel into the islands during the past fiscal year, important in the volume of business it represents and its effect upon shipping, but also because of the fact that the islands are commencing to produce a considerable portion of their own coal supply, says George E. Anderson, Consul-General at Hongkong.

It is announced that the mine at Batan is now turning out 100 tons of coal per day, and that as soon as a new chute system is completed it will be able to turn out and handle economically 300 tons per day, or about 100,000 tons per year. This mining enterprise, which was undertaken several years ago, at first proved a financial failure, and some time ago it was placed in charge of William E. Nolting, under an agreement between the company and its creditors. This receiver, or manager, in connection with E. R. Hix, a coal expert from the United States, has reorganized the business, and it is now said to be upon a paying basis.

The government of the Philippines has aided the enterprise by advancing funds against contracts for coal. The contracts for coal are now being carried out. The coal is of good quality and the managers report that there is little or no doubt that the entire output of the mine will be taken by the government or by local consumers for the next year or more. Already, however, possibilities of a market for the fuel in near-by ports are being canvassed and the government and managers have full data carefully prepared as to the possibilities of the export trade.

The import trade of the Philippines in coal has greatly expanded in the last year or so. The imports of coal into the islands in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1911, amounted to 402,146 metric tons, valued at $1,267,312, as compared with imports of 303,117 ordinary tons, valued at $972,341, in 1910; 171,088 tons, valued at $461,465, in 1909, and 213,959 tons, valued at $567,220, in 1908. Up to 1909 Australia supplied most of these imports, furnishing 169,151 tons out of the total of 171,088 tons imported that fiscal year. In 1910, however, Japan commenced to enter the trade in earnest, apparently largely because of labor troubles in Australia. For the last two years it has furnished about half of the total imports into the islands, though British North Borneo has commenced to enter the trade.

St. Louis' Kiss Brand.

[Chicago Record-Herald:] An "intuitive kiss" caused Arthur Walchman, a St. Louis florist, to be summoned before Judge Sanders. The "intuitive kiss" turned out to be a kissless or unkissed kiss—the kiss that never came.

Mrs. Tillie Shaw testified that soon after she got employment with Walchman he threw a dollar into her lap and tried to kiss her.

"Did he really try to kiss you?" asked the judge.

"I had an intuition he was going to."

Walchman said he was going to the telephone and had no intention of trying to kiss Mrs. Shaw. Her husband testified he was far away at the time, but had had an intuition it was about to happen. Walchman was discharged.

the war. In the meantime, every vestige of their equipment as American soldiers was taken from them and stored on the vessel, and they were rigged out in the lot of nondescript clothing obtained in Manila, and armed with the job lot of Mausers and Remingtons from the Manila arsenal. There were, however, ten Krag carbines, supposed to have been captured from the unfortunate mapmakers.

BOGUS LETTERS.

The time had now come when it was necessary to write the two bogus letters from Lacuna to Aguinaldo, these to be on the sheets of paper that bore at their head the stamp of the former and his imitated signature at the foot. I made out a rough draft of what I wanted said, but left the actual composition and writing to Segovia, as his knowledge of Spanish was much more comprehensive than my own. One of them was dated February 24, 1901, at Buloc, a locality in the mountains of Eastern Neuva Ecija, and acknowledged receipt of Aguinaldo's two letters of January 13 and 14, and at the same time thanked him for his confirmation of his (Lacuna's) appointment as brigadier-general, made some time previously by Alejandrino. There was also some news as to how the campaign was progressing, and some "airy persiflage" about the things the writer was doing to the hated invader. The second letter, dated February 28, stated that the writer had received orders from Baldomero Aguinaldo, who had just assumed command of the "Centre of Luzon," to send one of his best companies to report to the Dictator. It should be noticed that the first of these letters referred to the two communications received from Aguinaldo, giving their dates as well as making reference to their contents. The second was in the line of what Aguinaldo would expect as the natural result of his letter to his cousin, Baldomero Aguinaldo. This latter letter said that the force was in command of Hilario Tal Placido, whom the Honorable Dictator doubtless recollected as one of his former officers. He had been some time previously compelled to take the oath of allegiance to the Americans, but on orders from Lacuna had returned to active service. (This was put in for fear that Aguinaldo might have heard that Tal Placido had taken the oath.) According to the same letter, the second in command was the gallant Spaniard, Lazaro Segovia, who had shown himself so much addicted to our cause. (Segovia chuckled as he wrote this.) The other two were Dionisio Bato and Gregorio Cadhit. And then there was some mere rubbish, just to fill in space down to the bogus signature. These letters were held until the oppotunity should come to send them in advance of us.

LUCKY.

Fortunately for us, the weather was thick and squally, and at 1 o'clock on the morning of the 14th the Vicksburg having very carefully approached the coast, with all her lights screened, we were landed in the ship's boats. We were inside the entrance to Casiguran Bay, and so fairly well protected, with the consequence that we had no surf work. The darkness was intense, however, and it was raining, so that we did not feel particularly comfortable or cheerful. It would have been impossible to carry out the plan of deception if we had landed with a supply of the food ordinarily used by American soldiers, so that we brought ashore one day's ration of rice. All of us Americans were dressed as private soldiers of our army, that is, in campaign hats, blue shirts, khaki breeches and leggings. As I looked our crowd over the next morning I thought that we were a pretty scrubby looking lot of privates. There is a lot in clothes, after all. In going ashore one of the Macabebes accidentally cut himself so badly with his bolo that we had to send him back to his ship, and another got 'cold feet,' and hid himself in the hammock nettings. So it happened that eighty-nine of us, counting Filipinos and white men, landed on that dreary coast.

Then follows a graphic account of the hazardous journey under most trying and difficult circumstances to the little town of Casiguran, where Funston and the American officers played their role of prisoners, and another message was concocted and sent to Aguinaldo, which resulted in an order for the supposed insurrectos to leave the prisoners at Dinundungan, ten miles from the headquarters of Aguinaldo. This resulted in more forged letters, with the result that a few days later, after a most difficult journey, the party reached Palanan.

Part of the journey was made without food and the hardships of the trip is indicated the following paragraph of Funston's detailed account:

LACK OF FOOD.

Of course, the building and maintaining of fires for cooking was a matter that taxed to the utmost the ingenuity of our Macabebes, used as they are to taking care of themselves under all sorts of conditions. To eke out our food supply, a few small fish were caught in their hands by the Macabebes, and they scraped limpets from the rocks and gathered snails. All of these things, however, could not help out much with the now one hundred and one of us including the Casiguran men. The snails, limpets, and small fish were stewed up with the corn, and made a revolting mess.

Despite our breakfast, we were very weak, and were six hours in covering the eight miles. Of the Americans, Mitchell and I were in the worst shape, the Hazzards and Newton standing it better. I had to lie down flat on the ground every few hundred yards to get a rest of a moment or two. About half way to the town we were disturbed by meeting a Macabebe sergeant and one of the privates, coming back along the trail as rapidly as they could. The two men were out of breath, and simply motioned frantically to us to get off the trail and hide in the woods. This we did, and they joined us. The sergeant quickly explained that some real insurgent soldiers were on the way to Dinundungan to take charge of us, in order that all the men of our party might be able to come to Palanan. Soon we heard the men come splashing along laughing and talking. They passed within thirty feet of us, as we lay close to the ground, almost fearing to breathe. If they had met us in the trail or discovered us in our hiding place it would have all been off then and there, as they would have insisted on taking charge of us and conducting us back to Dinundungan.

THE MAIN COLUMN.

The main interest now centers in the adventures of the main column, the one by which the actual capture was made. About a mile outside the town it was met by a couple of insurgent officers, who escorted them the remainder of the distance. About 3 o'clock they approached the Palanan River, here about a hundred yards wide and quite deep, and saw the town on the other side. The only way to cross this stream was by means of a rather good-sized "banca." Hilario and Segovia crossed with the first load, leaving instructions for the men to follow as rapidly as they could, from on the opposite bank, and then march up to Aguinaldo's house, where they would find him. The boat was to be sent back to await our arrival. Segovia and Hilario now had a most trying half-hour. They called on Aguinaldo at his headquarters, and found him surrounded by seven insurgent officers, all of them armed with revolvers. Outside, the fifty men of the escort, neatly uniformed and armed with Mausers, were drawn up to do the honors for the reinforcements that had made such a wonderful march to join them. Segovia and Hilario entertained those present with stories of the march from Lacuna's headquarters, and were warmly congratulated on having made it successfully. Segovia took his position where he could look out of one of the open windows and see when the time had arrived. Finally, the Macabebes under Donisio Bato and Gregoria Cadhit marched up, Segovia stepped to the head of the stairway outside the house, for they were in the second story, and signalled to Gregoria, who called out, "Now is the time, Macabebes. Give it to them."

The poor little "Macs" were in such a nervous state from their excitement over the strange drama that they were playing a part in that they were pretty badly rattled. They had loaded their pieces and were standing at "order arms," as were the men of the escort facing them on the other side of the little square. They fired a ragged volley, killing two men of the escort and very severely wounding the leader of Aguinaldo's band, who happened to be passing between the lines when fire was opened. Aguinaldo, hearing the firing, and thinking that the men of his escort had broken loose to celebrate the arrival of the reinforcements, stepped to the window, and called out, "Stop that foolishness. Don't waste your ammunition." Before he could turn around Hilario had grasped him about the waist and thrown him under a table, where he literally sat on him, and Hilario was a fat man. I had given the most positive orders to the effect that under no circumstances should Aguinaldo be killed, and that no lives should be taken unless it was absolutely necessary. But as Segovia dashed back into the room several of the officers started to draw their revolvers, and he opened fire on them, hitting Villa three times, who was tugging to get a Mauser automatic pistol out of its holster, and also wounding Maj. Alhambra. Villa surrendered, as did Santiago Barcelona, treasurer of the so-called republic. Alhambra and the other officers leaped from one of the windows into the river, the house standing on the bank, and escaped by swimming. As Hilario grasped Aguinaldo, he had said, "You are a prisoner of the Americans," so that the fallen "Dictator," as he now called himself, had some sort of a vague idea of what had happened to him.

GOT HIM.

In the meantime, we Americans with our supposed guard had reached the river, jumped into the "banca" waiting for us, and had paddled across in frantic haste. Running up the bank toward the house, we were met by Segovia, who came running out, his face aglow with exultation, and his clothing spattered with the blood of the men he had wounded. He called out in Spanish, "It is all right. We have him." We hastened into the house, and I introduced myself to Aguinaldo, telling him that we were officers of the American army, that the men with us were our troops, and not his, and that he was a prisoner of war. He was given assurance that he need fear no bad treatment. He said in a dazed sort of way, "Is this not some joke?" I assured him that it was not, though, as a matter of fact, it was a pretty bad one on him. While naturally agitated, his bearing was dignified, and in this moment of his fall there was nothing of the craven. He is a man of many excellent qualities, far and away the best Filipino I ever was brought in contact with. It was well known that he was a man of humane instincts, and had done all he could to prevent the horrible atrocities committed by some of the guerilla bands that now made up his forces, but, under the circumstances, his control over them was limited. The wounded Villa was more inclined to stand aloof, but we dressed his wounds, thereby mollifying him somewhat. Barcelona was as mild as could be. There was some difficulty in getting under control the widely excited Macabebes. A lot of them insisted in throwing their arms about us.

Aguinaldo's escort in their flight had dropped eighteen rifles and about a thousand rounds of ammunition, and these we now gathered up. It was regrettable that two of these men had been killed, but there was no help for it. The escort had to be surprised and quickly scattered. If we had sent our cards to them, told them who we were and invited them to retire, as some ladylike persons in the United States afterward insisted that we should have done, it would merely have exposed our own men to a volley from them, and it scarcely could hev been less fatal than the one they received from us. The lives of these two men were of small moment counted against those that would have been lost had the insurrection continued. Few men have died to better purpose.

TOOK COMMAND.

We supposed prisoners now took command. Aguinaldo, Villa, and Barcelona were confined in a room in the house and made as comfortable as possible. We posted guards all about the building and searched it thoroughly, finding great quantities of the correspondence of the insurgent government, showing that Aguinaldo had all of the time been in touch with his subordinates, even with those in the faraway Visayan Islands. We recaptured the two bogus letters from Lacuna and the one from Hilario at Casiguran. We had now no further suffering from food, as we found cracked corn, rice, sweet potatoes, and chickens. The inhabitants of the town had fled to the last man, woman and child, so that we merely helped ourselves. There was no destruction of property and we left the town in as good shape as we found it. Aguinaldo, whose gameness and general bearing won our hearts, wrote and handed to me a brief note, congratulating me on the outcome of the perilous expedition. In fact, the pleasantest relations were soon established between captors and captured.

The Avocado, or "Alligator Pear,"

Which is becoming popular in Southern California and is pronounced the most valuable fruit grown in the world. Below is shown a part of a fifty-thousand-plant avocado nursery in Altadena.

AVOCADO'S FUTURE.

by those who have small home ranches and delight in surrounding their homes with rare products.

Avocado growing on a small scale is not new in Southern California. There are several enormous trees in this section, twenty-five and thirty years old, which have long bern large crops. But these are only seedling trees, and the success of the present avocado movement is based on the proposition that all stock must be budded, like the orange, to produce in true tropical perfection. But these scrub trees, even, have made a wonderful showing. For instance, on the Miller place at Hollywood there is a tree which bears annually as many as 2000 fruits that are sold at from 25 cents to 50 cents each. The common price of an "alligator pear" in the market, both here in Los Angeles and in eastern cities, is [illegible] cents—when you can get one! Mr. Chappelow of Monrovia has another old seedling, grown from seed sent out years ago by the Department of Agriculture, which nearly equals the record of the Hollywood tree in productiveness. The famous Ord tree at Santa Barbara is another pioneer. Plantations of budded trees in Southern California which are becoming well known are those of Joseph Sexton at Goleta; C. P. Taft, at Orange; F. S. Thatcher, Nordhoff; W. G. Davison, La Habra, William E. Spinks, Monrovia.

The Mexican is the variety which seems best adapted to this region, but the wide range of varieties which are being experimented with here, and with success in most instances, may be gathered from the following list of localities from which derived Florida, the Bahamas, Guatemala, Cuba, Canary Islands, South America, Hawaii.

ALMOST PERENNIAL.

The Mexican avocado is peculiar in that it is found growing all the way from the hot lowlands of the tropics to the cool plateau, where there is often experienced lower temperatures than are ever felt in the orange belt of California. The trees at the different altitudes produce at different seasons of the year, so that in taking buds from these varying localities it is expected that the crop of the California tree can be made to extend over most of the year. The large nursery at Altadena, before referred to, keeps an expert constantly traveling in Mexico and Central America locating choice native trees and securing buds from them, which are successfully shipped over the intervening deserts and mountains and grafted onto the California seedling stock.

The reason that the marvelously nourishing avocado is so little known to the people of the United States is that nowhere in the tropics is it grown on a large scale, the product which drifts into our markets coming from small groups of trees around native huts, where they flourish without care and afford easy meals to the indolent owners. With the systematic growing of the trees in the more energetic northern regions it is expected that the taste for the avocado will be rapidly cultivated among the American people. It is pointed out that a quarter of a century ago the banana, which is now imported into the United States in enormous quantities, was practically unknown to the masses. Systematic development of the market by large concerns has developed a taste for this product, which reaches truly appalling figures. As food, the avocado is asserted to be greatly superior to the banana. It is said that on account of the irrigation and cultivation required to develop flavor and shipping qualities, the avocado never will be grown in competitive quantities in the tropics, any more than the orange.

The avocado contains from 15 to [illegible] per cent. of pure oil, beside other ingredients of extreme food value, and a good-sized fruit is a meal for an ordinary man. It is remarkably digestible. Six avocado trees, of varieties chosen to ripen at different seasons, planted around the home, are said to be a living for a family.

The avocado orchard is planted and cultivated much as the orange grove, but the tree is not susceptible to the insect pests that annoy citrus trees. The seedling is ready for budding at between one and two years of age, and begins to bear three years later. The Mexican variety produces a roundish, green-skinned fruit, differing considerably in appearance from the oval, purplish Hawaiian variety, which hitherto has been most seen in the local market. The Hawaiian fruit has been lately excluded from California by the authorities, on account of the prevalence of the Mediterranean fly in the islands.

Experiments of great interest in other kinds of tropical fruits are being carried on in the Altadena nurseries, with the co-operation of the United States Department of Agriculture, of which this is one of its regular co-operative stations. The department has eighty prosperous little mango trees here, and among other rare products may be seen rows and rows of the fruiting passion vine, papaya, melon zapote, Queensland nut (which retails in London at $1.50 per pound,) the pineapple guava (feijoa sellowiana) from Brazil and Uruguay, the huge Guiana guava, the rose apple, which has the perfume of a rose, and the famous Mexican cherimoya, or custard apple, a truly "heavenly" fruit.

Specimens of the cherimoya, in full-bearing, may be seen in the home grounds of F. O. Popenoe, adjacent to the nurseries in Altadena, and fine fruit is produced on the Miller place in Hollywood. In fact, all these delicate tropical fruits with which the department is experimenting here are expected, by the successful results of the chance private effects, which have been made here and there, to develop into commercial success, and the work is not done to satisfy the curious or produce hot-house oddities for the fancier.

Purchaser has no plans for the immediate improvement of the property, but expects to eventually erect attractive buildings on the site.

QUEEN'S BROTHER.

three brothers were growing up together. Their parents often knew what it was to be "hard up," and though they were royalties the children were brought up on strict and sensible lines. No boys at Eton had a plainer outfit than the three young Tecks, and none of the fads of the "gilded youth" were allowed them.

"Here am I," said their father once, "the grandfather of the future King of England and how much pocket-money do you think I have to last me for another month? Fourteen and eight-pence," (about $3.50.)

Many years ago now, when "Princess May" had just been promoted to letting her frocks down and putting her hair up, they were all at a football match in Richmond, and the Teck boys created much amusement by passing their fingers over their sister's cheek and pretending to blow the powder off afterwards.

After leaving Eton, Prince Alexander passed into the Royal Military College at Sandhurst—not just scraping in at the bottom of the list but right at the top with honors. He joined the Seventh Hussars in 1894 and a few years later distinguished himself in Matabeleland in South Africa by conspicuous bravery and the skillful handling of his men. He also fought in the Boer War, taking part in the great march which ended in the relief of Mafeking.

It was the sad death of his brother, Prince Francis of Teck, that brought him into public notice again. Prince Francis was most deeply interested in the Middlesex Hospital, and last year undertook to raise a large sum of money by his own efforts to release it from debt, and place it in a sound financial position, and he had nearly succeeded in the task when he was taken ill and died. Shortly after his death Prince Alexander took up his work where he had laid it down and has completed his brother's task. And he really worked hard. He attended board meetings at the hospital once a week and sometimes oftener, and frequently made a tour of the hospital afterwards. It was in the children's ward that he lingered. He would stand by a cot to let some baby fingers curl round his own, and a romp with the little convalescents was not infrequent.

In 1904 he married Princess Alice of Albany, a sweet and charming girl with no money to speak of, and there is no happier or handsomer young couple to be found anywhere. They have two children, a boy and a girl. They lost the third child, another boy, when he was only a few weeks old.

Buy for a Home -or as an Investment

Do you want a home in the most attractive sub-division on the market?—do you want an investment that will show you immediate and highly profitable returns?—do you want both these features?—then we urge you to investigate Ivywild. Consider the strong features of this new sub-division. Accessibility—22 minutes from Broadway—at the junction of three electric lines. Location—between the city and the sea, on high ground among the walnut trees, commanding a superb view of the whole countryside and the distant mountain peaks. Improvements—oiled and graveled streets, cement curbs, sidewalks and water. Opening price $400 and up for a big 50x160 foot lot spells profit.

Ivywild's Location
A Sub-division Demanded

Look at the map—can you imagine a more logical point for a sub-division? Three electric lines, the Venice Short Line, the Playa del Rey Line, the Santa Monica Air Line converge at Ivywild. This alone, coupled with its accessibility—22 minutes from the heart of the city—simply compels a sub-division. And still further—National Boulevard passes directly through it; Washington Boulevard, with all its life and color (it's the main auto road to Venice,) skirts the tract on the South. Nothing can prevent Ivywild's swift development. It's inevitable. Its destiny is assured.

Ivywild is Accessible
22 Minutes from Broadway

We re-iterate—Ivywild is conveniently located. Playa del Rey cars running every 30 minutes from the Hill Street Station keep you in close contact with the city. Their running time to Ivywild is 22 minutes—just a pleasant ride through the open fields at the end of the day's work. The rate is most reasonable, 9c on a commutation ticket, 10c on a family ticket.

And remember, Ivywild is not only convenient to Los Angeles, but also is only a short distance from the beaches. Frankly, we do not believe that the southwest holds a sub-division which so well combines convenience of location, with beauty of outlook and lowness of price.

Prices Surprisingly Low
$400 & Up for a Big Lot

"I wouldn't take $700 for my $400 lot this minute!" said a last week's purchaser, "if I couldn't re-invest." We know absolutely that there's not a sub-division in the Southwest offering such splendid values as these. As an opening price we're offering the bulk of the lots at this figure; $400, ¼-acre lots, remember, 50x160 feet. That they'll double in value in a year is a conservative prediction. But we won't enlarge on this point. Merely investigate—compare values—and then you'll buy. Some few of the lots we're holding at a higher price.

A Few Acre-Lots at $1100
Room for a Garden

For the man who wants a little garden and a few chickens. The soil is of splendid quality and easily worked. And remember, on both the acre and ¼-acre lots our terms are very liberal, a matter of 25% down, and the balance to extend over a long period.

We're offering tremendously strong price inducements to early purchasers who will build at once. We stand ready to build your house for you on easy terms, following your own ideas. Under our plan, any man who is home hungry has no excuse for denying himself a home. The restrictions range from $1200 to $2000, well within the reach of the man of moderate means.

A Superb Homesite
"Where Every Prospect Pleases"

It would seem as though Nature had endowed Ivywild with every advantage. High and sightly, the keen sea breeze tempered by a protecting range of low hills, commanding a broad expanse of field and upland, with the mountain peaks looming up on the far horizon; it is a place after your own heart. You could not find a better place to bring up your children. There's health in its pure vibrant air; there's peace and content in its sylvan quietude. But we could write reams about Ivywild's natural beauties—we ask you to investigate personally.

He'll Go Again.

JOB IS LIKE SAINT PETER'S.

Registering Women Is Dandy Says Deputy.

Felt First Like Sunflower Among Pansies.

Expected to Be Bored, but Finds It Pleasant.

BY A DEPUTY COUNTY CLERK.

When you have been registering men for years and then without having given the subject any thought, are detailed to register women, you naturally get into another atmosphere. Femininity has a way that dissolves official sternness.

I was told to go to a certain woman's clubhouse, and, of course, like most men, had a preconceived opinion of the average clubwoman. Generally speaking, I had pictured her as elderly, careworn, rather overdressed and opionated. I was prepared to be bored.

The registration table was set out on the wide porch of the clubhouse. I announced myself as ready to register those wishing to vote at the general election. Some of the women looked at me critically and I felt they knew my hat needed brushing, that I should have had my clothes pressed, and that my necktie was not harmonious. I swept a casual glance over the women, and could not recall a single item of their attire. There was just a confused impression of bright, intelligent faces.

Naturally I was embarrassed, although I pretended to be very much at ease. I felt out of place and knew I looked it, too. I was as conspicuous as a sunflower in a bed of pansies.

LEARNS SOMETHING.

Now when the ordinary citizen comes before a clerk he feels that the official is conferring a favor upon him by permitting him to state his age, nationality, political affiliations and so forth. But when the first woman stepped like a gazelle to the table and murmured, "You must tell me exactly what I am to do," she really placed me under obligations to her.

I replied awkwardly that it was very simple, and began by asking her to take the oath to answer the questions.

Now the other women were chatting, apparently paying no attention to me, when one remarked:

"Gracious, Mrs. Jenkins, you have raised your wedding ring hand."

I felt guilty because I had not detected that she had her left hand raised. Mrs. Jenkins, however, prettily apologized, and put up the right hand. I did not know then, but discovered before the registration had closed, that many married women distinguish the left hand from the right solely by the wedding ring.

I did not have any particular trouble about getting the ages, as I had supposed, but it did amaze me to find that some of the women were older than they really looked. If I had been asked to guess the ages of any of them, I would have lamentably fallen down.

The registration went along finely. The club members had evidently been coached. They were very businesslike in their replies. One young married woman made a hit with me because she was so unconsciously bright. When I asked her what her occupation was, she replied:

"Household drudge."

"She is nothing of the kind," retorted the club president.

"Well, I have no other occupation," was her reply.

"You keep house?" I insinuated, and having straightened that out, I asked her who is the head of the house.

"I am," she said.

This seemed to amuse the others, for she was such a demure-looking creature, just the kind who are dependent on a good strong man.

I told her that if she was living with her husband I would have to deprive her of the honor of being the head of the house and put him down as such.

"Oh, very well," she said. "He thinks he is, but really he isn't, for I boss him."

Now there are some women who could say this and it wouldn't amuse you, but it was cute in her, and we all laughed.

LIKES THE JOB.

It's funny what thoughts enter a man's head under unusual circumstances. I was on my best behavior, of course—couldn't smoke or spit or snap out as you do sometimes at stupid men. But as the women were not only intelligent, but many of them handsome, I got the thought into my head that if I was the recording angel I would like the job.

You hear so much about the mean ways of women—how they will lie about their ages and say nasty things in a perfectly polite way about other women, but those at the clubhouse never uttered a peep or raised their eyebrows or sniffed as I have seen women do when another woman was fracturing the truth. Some of them, I am free to say, gave their ages in rather a low voice, just a murmur, but I'll bet every woman on the porch heard what she said. When one of them softly said she was 41, a friend half way up the porch interrupted to say:

"Why, Sue, you're not 41 until next month, for our birthday is only two days apart."

It was true, too, and I made the correction.

Now what I am getting at is that when it comes to business the women, especially if they have taken an oath to tell the truth, won't lie about their ages. Not only that, but some of them seemed proud of being 40 or 50 or 60 or whatever their age was, while others who confessed to 23 or 27 or 29 seemed to blush because they were so young.

I had a real good time there on that porch among all those well-dressed women and left with a better opinion of club women than I ever had before. They talked better than men; some of it was high-brow stuff, but it only indicated to me that if men read up on literature, science and philosophy and discussed it with their wives, it would be a whole lot better than going downtown and chinning baseball, prize-fighting, and various low-brow topics.

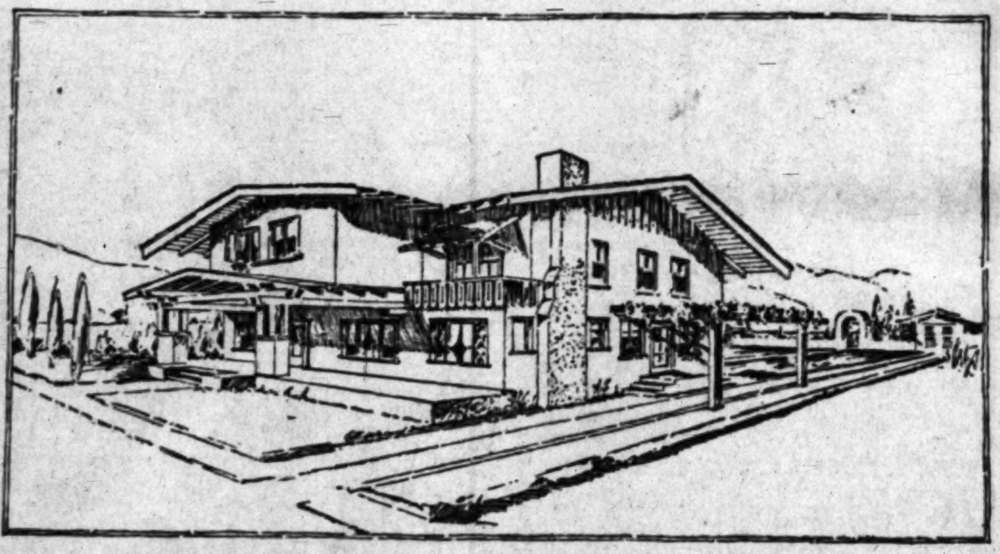
No Use Hurrying.

[Tit Bits:] The scorching cyclist was on the road to Stratford-on-Avon. He was bent over the handle bars and the beads which bespeak the strenuous toiler were trickling off his face.

"Hi, sonny!" he called to a passing youth. "Am I right for Shakespeare's house?"

"Yes, you're right, mister," was the dreamy reply of the leisurely youth; "but you needn't hurry—Shakespeare's dead."

Attractive Southern California Chalet Type.



Dwelling planned by G. A. Edelsvard for Mrs. W. E. Staley.

PLACE IS CHARMING.

A two-story, nine-room chalet is to be built on Manhattan place, in the Westminster Terrace Tract, for Mrs. W. E. Staley. G. A. Edelsvard is the designer. The cost of the building and garage, with the landscape work of the grounds will be about $5500. The style of architecture is an adaptation of the Swiss chalet type, with added California features, such as pergolas and terrace porches. The garage will be finished in keeping with the house.

ADDS TO HOLDINGS.

A lot 50x150 feet in size on Twenty-first street, just west of Figueroa, has been purchased by N. Bonfilio. The property is improved with an eight-room dwelling. The place joins Mr Bonfilio's Figueroa street home on the west and brings his Twenty-first street holdings up to a frontage of 270 feet.

BUYS FOR INVESTMENT.

J. W. Weightman and J. P. Steffen report the sale for Mrs. O. M. Brunner of the Fort Moore apartments at No. 425 North Hill street. The apartments are near the Los Angeles High School and consist of a three-story modern frame building of forty-eight rooms. The lot is 44x114 feet. Anton Musser was the purchaser. The reported consideration was $25,000.

SOME of the strangest tombstones in the world—in Greenwood Cemetery, Brooklyn—will be described and pictured in The Times Magazine the coming Sunday.

TEHACHAPI

An Exceptional Opportunity

FOR

Exceptional Men and Women

The AVERAGE person starts poor and stays POOR. The EXCEPTIONAL person gets RICH.
The AVERAGE person, when he hears of something DIFFERENT, closes his mind and lets PREJUDICE rob him of OPPORTUNITY.
The EXCEPTIONAL man INVESTIGATES everything, and is always LOOKING for SOMETHING DIFFERENT.
The AVERAGE man offers for sale what every one else has for sale.
The EXCEPTIONAL man sells something that is SCARCE, UNIQUE and IN A CLASS BY ITSELF.

TEHACHAPI is a place within 75 miles of Los Angeles, where HARD WINTER APPLES can be produced, which ARE as good, and SELL for the same prices as the best Colorado apples.

TEHACHAPI is directly on the MAIN LINES of the two biggest California railroads. The town and station are already there. The land is right at the station. The experiments have been TRIED. The supply of irrigating water is CERTAIN.

TEHACHAPI has been called "the biggest little thing in California." Not very much land, and when this is gone, nothing else like it ANYWHERE.

TEHACHAPI, besides having wonderful dollars-and-cents productive capacity, is bound to be one of the favorite SUMMER RESORTS of Southern California — high, dry, cool and beautiful.

TEHACHAPI is within the reach of people of MODERATE MEANS. The value of a very modest home in town will put a man on the SAFE and SURE road to WEALTH at Tehachapi.

TEHACHAPI has extraordinary facilities for settlers making a GOOD LIVING while their trees are growing big enough to bear fruit.

TEHACHAPI

TEHACHAPI not only produces HARD WINTER APPLES, but it produces the FINEST and MOST DELICIOUS BARTLETT PEARS, and the pear trees at Tehachapi have been proven to be FREE FROM BLIGHT.

TEHACHAPI is being settled by a fine class of people; intelligent, enterprising. Los Angeles wage earners, some of them. Some of them from Bakersfield oil fields, who want to build up beautiful mountain homes away from the intense heat.

COLORADO TREE EXPERTS have invested heavily in Tehachapi lands. They know the value of HIGH ALTITUDE FRUIT LANDS CLOSE TO THE OCEAN, close to Los Angeles.

LOOK AT THE MARKET REPORTS and see as the ALTITUDE of the orchard gets higher, how the price goes up. Tehachapi has altitude, and has the SOIL and WATER as well, and a PERFECT CLIMATE FOR FRUIT GROWING.

TEHACHAPI for CHICKENS has every advantage of soil and climate, and is right by the best market in the United States. Fine also for currants, sour cherries and other fruits with high acid flavor.

TEHACHAPI is easy to reach. One day's time will suffice for a thorough investigation and selection of land. Frequent excursions and very low rates. It is a pleasant trip.

The price of good orchard land at Tehachapi, with first-class water rights—good pumping plants fully equipped—is $200 per acre, exceptionally easy terms, low rate of interest.

We have unusually favorable arrangements for planting and caring for orchards for wage-earners who want their trees growing while they are working.

Come in and get a Tehachapi booklet, or call us up and we will mail it to you.

MONEY SPENT ON HARRIMAN.

Part of McNamara Fund Goes Into Politics.

Result of Primaries Holds Back Building.

Socialists' Temporary Success Disastrous.

Strength has been given to the persistent rumor that the local Socialist campaign was partly financed out of the McNamara defense fund by the admission of union leaders that the major portion of the $300,000 raised up to October 1 has been exhausted. The depletion of the fund has resulted in Olaf Tveitmoe being dispatched to the national capital to urge the imposing of a 25-cent monthly assessment on every union man in the United States by the Executive Committee of the American Federation of Labor.

So far the San Francisco labor leader has failed to fare any better away from home than did his colleagues in this State who, a few days ago, proposed a plan whereby every unionite in California was to contribute a day's wages toward replenishing the fund raised to help free the McNamaras. The unionists in San Francisco, Tveitmoe's own town, rebelled, declaring that they had already contributed as much as they intended to, and were awaiting an accounting.

Figuring on the basis that there are 3,000,000 union men and women in the United States, a 25-cent monthly assessment would provide the labor leaders and McNamara attorneys with a regular remittance of $750,000. If the plan proposed in California went through an additional $500,000 would be available.

BUILDING HELD UP.

Already the results of Tuesday's primaries are felt in the local business world. Contracts for new buildings to the amount of $300,000 have been held up, pending the outcome at the polls December 5. About $100,000 in alteration contracts have also been held up. At the Master Builders' Association and the Builders' Exchange the situation is regarded with much seriousness. A meeting of the advisory board of the Master Builders' Association will be held early this week for the purpose of outlining some definite programme of action.

Since the nomination of Harriman not a single new buildin– job has been reported at the offices of the Master Builders' Association.

A rather unique incident in the situation is the fact that union carpenters, by signing fictitious names on the books of the association, are accepting jobs at $3.50 a day. These men are subject to a fine of $25 if their identity leaks out. That there are at least fifty men working under assumed names is the belief of Secretary Tuite. The secretary believes that they are realizing that a curtailment of building here will leave them jobless, and that they are making the best of the opportunity to get a nest egg to leave town on, should their candidate be successful at the polls.

The members of the Builders' Exchange will not take any action toward selecting a site for their proposed $1,000,000 home until after the election. Plans for the ornate structure have been practically completed, and it was the original intention of the members to have the building rushed to completion.

REPORTS ON WAGES AND CONDITIONS.

Timely Bulletins from All Parts of the World.

As the figures of the 1910 industrial census come out, State after State, city after city, and industry after industry, show remarkable increases in workers and wages paid for the five years, 1904 to 1909, and that under the wages-protecting tariff of the straight Republican party.

The city of Greater New York, for instance:

	1909.	1904.
Pay roll	$455,772,000	$321,156,000
Increase in five years		134,616,000
(Or an average increase of $26,[illegible] a year.)
Employees	661,[illegible]	528,382
Increase in five years		133,153

Practically a $1000 wage increase for each additional worker.

New York City (Manhattan and Bronx Boroughs,) by itself:

	1909.	1904.
Pay roll	$[illegible]	$[illegible]
Increase in five years		[illegible]
(Or nearly $[illegible] a year.)
Employees	477,041	390,337
Increase in five years		86,704

In this case the wages increase is considerably more than $1000 for each additional worker, showing clearly that wages generally in New York have largely increased in the past five years, as it cannot be assumed by any manner of means that each new worker (woman and minors, for instance) is a $1000-a-year worker. Yet at this very time New York is full of strikes on all conceivable pretexts. When will American labor have sense enough to leave "well enough" and itself alone?

Our Boot and Shoe Industry.

As to our boot and shoe industry, the census tells us:

	1909.	1904.
Pay roll	$117,092,000	$82,484,000
Increase in five years		34,608,000
(Or very nearly $7,000,000 a year.)
Employees	214,585	169,812
Increase in five years		44,773

Practically $800 a year more wages paid for each additional worker—again indicating a general wages increase of moment in the five years.)

A Buildin–-Wages Comparison.

	United States. Per hour, cents.	Belgium. Per hour, cents.
icklayers	55	8
one cutters	42	7
one masons	40	7
rpenters	36	7
inters	35	7
umbers	44	8
borers	17	5

American wages exceed Belgian wages by:

	Cents, per hour, excess.
icklayers	47
one cutters	35
one masons	33
rpenters	29
inters	28
borers	12

The cheapest living in the world (except, perhaps, some Asiatics,) will not repay Belgian workers for the great difference between their wages and the protected American wages. The workers in the American building trades who seem always so ready and anxious to lose wages by striking if they cannot get a raise every season (or oftener) might well thoughtfully ponder these wages conditions in Belgium.

American Steam Laundries' Pay Roll.

A census report (first time on steam laundries,) says:

	Number.	Yearly pay roll.
Wage earners (Dec. 15, 1909).	112,064	$44,827,000
Officials and clerks	9,170	8,181,000
Totals	121,234	$53,008,000

or considerably more than $1,000,000 a week.

The Value of the Steady Pay Roll.

When the wage disbursement is made each week, a large proportion of it goes for rent and food, and when times are good the operatives are liberal spenders for their food supply. See what the distribution means! The butcher must buy meat, the grocer vegetables, eggs, flour and a thousand and one other grocery requirements, and his stock comes from the north, south and west, and his expenditures contribute liberally to the support of thousands of people working in wheat fields, on railroads, and in all sorts of enterprises where foodstuffs are prepared.

In addition to the food supplies, the pay roll each week purchases vast quantities of lumber, builders' hardware, etc., contributes to the employment of more thousands of hands in that direction. In fact, the pay roll is an endless chain affair, furnishing all along the line livelihood and profit to every section of the country.

Strike Notes.

The hundred-day strike this year in the building trades of Chicago cost the 18,700 workers involved a loss of $8,569,000 in wages, all of which is lost to those men and their families forever.

In the contempt proceedings against Gompers, Mitchell and Morrison, the president, vice-president and secretary, respectively, of the American Federation of Labor, they now, after all their crowing, play the "baby act" by pleading the statute of limitations. This was done before the District Supreme Court at Washington on October 20, last.

Seven thousand neckwear workers (mostly girls) have gone on strike in New York City. The chief stumbling block in the way of a settlement is their claim for the "union shop." They also want a minimum wage rate of $15 a week.

The engineer gun-makers of Birmingham, Eng., are on strike. They went out (for more wages) on October 23, about 3500 in all, including 3000 sympathizers.

The recent Schenectady and suburban electric railway strike was peaceably settled in forty-eight hours.

The timber strike at Dublin, Ireland, which was the direct cause of the fizzled-out railway strike, has been settled without any change in wages.

The New York Sun says the proposed "sympathetic" strike of the New York building trades, in aid of the striking marble workers, did not materialize.

The British Railway Commission, appointed to adjust the disputes in the recent railway strike, reports emphatically against the demand for "recognition of the unions," the question on which the strike mainly hinged. Another strike may result.

Four thousand longshoremen have struck at Sydney, New South Wales, for a raise from 80 to 86 cents an hour. The government may prosecute the men for going on strike without giving the legally required notice.

Kansas City labor leaders announce that the shopmen are preparing to strike on the Rock Island Railway system, about 5000. A wage increase is involved in this case.

Napoleon Bonaparte and you
Were made of the same clay through and through,
With the same sort of bones and the same sort of hair,
But resemblance between you two ceases right there.
For Napoleon Bonaparte figured his share
On this earth was dependent on how much he'd dare.
He tried hard by day and he tried hard by night,
He waded right in and put up such a fight,
Such a whole-hearted scrap,
That before long the map
Had to be rearranged.
If your luck's to be changed
Why it's all up to you;
You're the one to decide if your dreams shall come true.

Preposterous.

"RULE OR RUIN" IS THE DEMAND.

CONDITION BEHIND FEDERATION MOVEMENT.

No Self-Respecting Railroad Official Could Grant the Concessions Imposed by the Unionite Bosses Who Have Fomented the Present Strike.

[American Industries:] It is well for the general public to understand clearly on just what grounds the strike is being called on the Harriman railway lines. There is no pretence to a demand for increased wages—in fact, the employees are better paid than on any other road—no grievances, no object save the insistence that their newly-organized "national federation of shop workers" be recognized by the railway employers.

It is well also clearly to understand what this recognition would mean to the roads. Preposterous as it may seem to the average layman who is not conversant with the present-day trend of labor unionism, the federation plan forming the basis of the strike absolutely calls for a complete surrender of the fundamental rights of ownership; in other words, the federation desires to take entire charge of the railroad's shop affairs through the right to designate the men to be laid off when the force is cut down and the right to say whether any particular employee shall be discharged or suspended. More than that, they insist that the railroads compel all shop employees to join this union, whether they wish to or not. As the New York Evening Post points out:

No self-respecting operating officers could accept such terms; for, while they would be held responsible by their executives, and these would be called to account by stock and bondholders, the actual managers of the rolling stock would be the shop employees' federation. Labor is perfectly willing that the heads of these shops should be liable in case of any accident in their works for heavy damages, but it would calmly deprive them of the right to say who shall man the machines and bear the responsibility. No railroad can submit to this.

The labor union leaders, in calling this strike, have not ignored present business conditions, nor the possible effect of their outrageous demands upon the transportation activities of the country. They, in fact, publicly boast that the roads are in poor shape to resist a strike because of retrenchments made necessary by quiet business.

That the unions are committed to a "rule or ruin" policy is now perfectly evident. That they are willing to add still further to industrial unrest, and still further to retard the return of prosperity, must be plain to every disinterested mind. They have lost sight of the fact that today the general public is more fully informed in labor matters and more fully cognizant of organized labor's criminality than ever before.

It is a time when every decent citizen, employee or employer, should carefully consider actual conditions and unite in a determined effort to check the encroachments of this blight which has no place in our industrial world.

We're All There.

[Cleveland Plain Dealer:] "So you actually went to church last Sunday?"

"I really did."

"Excuse me if I seem skeptical. What was the text?"

"Aha, I have you there. The text was 'He giveth his beloved sleep.'"

"Good work. And who was there?"

"All the beloved, it seemed to me."

THE HUMOROUS BOYCOTTERS.

Portland Unionites Draw Sustenance from Buildings, Firms and Individuals That Are Boycotted.

[Portland Spectator:] Who would have thought that the illegal and iniquitous boycott would ever contribute to the gayety of the nation? And yet it is a source of merriment and a cause for laughter. The unions are boycotting a number of buildings, firms, and individuals in Portland, and at the same time are drawing sustenance from the boycotted. The tenants of the Maegly-Tichner building are under the ban of the unions—not because the tenants are union or non-union, not because they refuse to employ union labor—as many of them do employ union labor—but because they occupy quarters in a building that was not wholly constructed by union labor. Needless to say, the tenants had as much to do with the erection of the building as they had to do with the architecture and construction of Mt. Hood. But they are boycotted. And at the same time that the unions by threat and menace are trying to induce the people to refuse to patronize the tenants of the Maegly-Tichner building, the unions refuse to call out the union engineers in the Maegly-Tichner building.

Of course, we are not looking for consistency in union methods; and as we are not, we surely have the right to smile at that fine example of inconsistency. If the unions will not permit us to patronize the tenants or work for the tenants of a building erected by open-shop methods, why do the unions permit union men to work in the building?

The unions have boycotted T. B. Wilcox, his beautiful building on Washington street, and his flour, breakfast foods, and all the Wilcox products. It happens that "T. B." is the best friend the unions of Portland ever had; I believe he is responsible for the fact that ships can be loaded for less money in Sound ports than in Portland harbor. But "T. B." merely stipulated in his contract that the Wilcox building should be erected by the best of skilled labor, and did not specify union—and he is boycotted. We are urged to keep away from his building, not to patronize his tenants, not to eat his products. And yet union men were employed on his building, union men work for the tenants of his building, and union men make the products which come from his mills, and which the unions will not permit us to use.

The unions are boycotting Lipman, Wolfe & Co.—not because this firm employs non-union labor, not because the unions have any fight with the firm, but because the firm will some day occupy a building that is being constructed by open-shop methods—the contractors employ competent men whether they are union or independent. And while the boycott is rancorously enforced against Lipman, Wolfe & Co., and the public is urged to buy nothing from the firm, union men are employed by Lipman, Wolfe & Co., and union men are employed on the building they will occupy.

He Was a Good Forgiver.

[Human Life:] I. R. Sherwood, Democratic Representative from Ohio, tells this story:

A man had for years employed a steady German workman. One day Jake came to him and asked to be excused from work the next day.

"Certainly, Jake," beamed the employer. "What are you going to do?"

"Vail," said Jake slowly, "I think I must go by mein wife's funeral; she dies yesterday."

After the lapse of a few weeks Jake again approached the boss for a day off.

"'All right, Jake, but what are you going to do this time?"

"Aber," said Jake, "I go to make me, mit mein fraulein, a wedding."

"What? So soon? Why, it's only been three weeks since you buried your wife."

"Ach, replied Jake. "'I don't hold spite long."

Domination.

ICONOCLASTIC LEADERSHIP.

RAILROAD STRIKE SHOWS RUTHLESSNESS OF UNIONITES.

No Betterment of Wages to Be Permitted Except Through the Auspices of the Unions—Five Men Want to Control Nearly Half the Railroad Mileage of Country.

[The Mediator:] Back of the strike of the shopmen on the Harriman lines which went into effect late in September, lies the ruthless tyranny of union leaders bent upon strengthening their oligarchy. It is a strike which throws once more into clear display the extremes to which such leaders will go in order to gain their ends.

There has been no demand by the strikers for more pay, no demand for shorter hours, and no demand for better shop conditions. Even recognition of the various shopmen's unions has been granted, and did not form the bone of contention which led to the strike.

The sole demand, in an effort to enforce which the strike was eventually called, was for the right of five men to legislate upon union matters for the entire railroad system, a system which extends from Omaha to San Francisco, Chicago to New Orleans, and from New Orleans to Portland, Or., covering a territory equivalent to nearly one-half of the United States.

The oligarchy of five men who forced their followers into this strike for the purpose cited above are: James O'Connell, president of the International Association of Machinists; Joseph Franklin, president of the International Brotherhood of Boilermakers; M. F. Ryan, president of the International Brotherhood of Car Workers; J. W. Kline, president of the International Brotherhood of Blacksmiths and Helpers; and M. O. Sullivan, president of the International Union of Sheet Metal Workers.

To the outsider, it seems hardly believable that five men, crazed for power, should have been able to precipitate a strike on the Harriman lines of thousands of shopmen, without the presence of grievances vital to the rank and file itself. In order to comprehend how such conduct was possible, one must understand how the average union of today fights its battles and of the means its leaders employ to gain selfish, personal ends.

Henry White, who organized, built up, and at one time led the National Garment Workers' Union, in an article in "The World's Work" for October, reveals some of the tactics employed by union leaders, citations from which article may prove interesting and enlightening in this connection.

"In the calling and termination of strikes," he writes, "I had a free hand. The form of consulting the members was as usual gone through with. This was necessary in order that the members might feel responsible for the strikes and be moved by the needed spirit. When I or my associates wanted a strike there was no difficulty about it. By sending agents into the meetings, by raising an alarm as to the bosses' intentions, by stirring up discontent, we could always carry our point. The same was true with the issues of a strike. Apparently the demands on the employers voiced the members' wishes but they were always what we desired.

"The members, if left to themselves, would be satisfied simply with better pay and treatment. These granted, they were ready to make peace with the boss. It was my experience that employers were usually willing to make concessions of this kind to avoid trouble. The leaders, however, regarded concessions made direct to the employees as a blow at the union's authority and at their own prestige, and any such arrangement was strenuously resisted. It meant to the leaders buying off the workers for a "mess of pottage" to forestall the union. Rather would the leaders prefer defeat than suffer so dangerous a precedent.

"Recognition of its authority by both workers and employers is thus the first object sought in every dispute by the union leaders. Wage conditions are a secondary matter and are even of trifling consequence. That authority recognized, the desired pay, it is held, will follow. This is the reason for the importance attached to the closed shop. This is not usually known. The union cannot afford to permit any betterment in wages to be brought about except under its own auspices. This matter of union control as an issue is always pressed, and is, as I have maintained, the vital element in the union situation."

A few years ago at a meeting of various other railroad brotherhoods in Boston, plans of control similar to those advocated by the shopmen on the Harriman lines were brought forward, namely, that the committee in session there should be empowered to legislate on wages and conditions for all the railroads east of the Mississippi River.

In opposing this proposition, W. G. Lee, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, declared that it would be ridiculous for any man or set of men to set arbitrary wage scales for the craft throughout the territory named without a careful consideration and knowledge of the various environments, cost of living in the different localities, and the financial conditions of the various railroads involved.

The idea was abandoned. Its abandonment by the brotherhoods showed how far in advance they were, even several years ago, of the narrow-gauged shopmen on the Harriman lines who have just driven their followers into a strike.

THE LABOR TRUST.

Demand That the Government Shall Enforce Anti-Trust Law Against the Unions.

[New York Journal of Commerce:] The directors of the National Manufacturers' Association are quite right in calling attention "to the restraint of trade practiced by labor unionism" in violation of the anti-trust law and demanding that the government give some attention in the enforcement of that statute to the one great "trust" in the country which really defies the law and boldly asserts the right and the determination to establish and maintain monopolies. There is much reason to complain of the continual harping upon the offenses, real or alleged, of combinations of capital, which interfere with competition and do injury to those who do not submit to their control, while combinations of labor are permitted to do worse things without hindrance or even condemnation of those in authority.

Nobody objects to labor unionism any more than to organization or incorporation of capital. It is only to the abuse of power and its use to perpetrate wrongs that objection is raised. When it forms federations to block the operation of railroads or to prevent keeping equipment in repair, until its demands are complied with; when it seeks to prevent the employment of labor which it does not control by refusing to permit material supplied by it to be used by union men; when it insists upon suppressing all competition by means of the "closed shop," it exercises a restraint upon trade which works more injury and does more harm than any combination of capital yet formed would dare attempt.

DRASTIC LAWS FOR GERMANY.

A Half-Million Men May Be Locked Out—Anti-Picketing Legislation to Be Enacted.

[Journal of Commerce:] The labor unrest in other countries has given rise to considerable uneasiness in Germany. This is manifesting itself both on the side of the workman and on that of the employers.

In the metal trades, in which nearly a million and a half men are engaged, strikes and lockouts have been going on for some time, and the situation has become so threatening that the united federation of employers have been forced to meet to discuss measures of protection. For the moment, however, they have decided to take no combined action, although they hold out the menace of a general lock-out unless the men show some inclination to limit their demands. Should the lock-out occur, as may happen, more than five hundred thousand organized trades unionists will be affected, and along with them a much larger number of unorganized laborers.

While the disquieting outlook in one of the principal branches of German industry continues, the employers in other branches are seeking to strengthen the law against picketing, which they regard as a danger to the community at large. A number of petitions have been drawn by various federations and committees and laid on the table of the reichstag, demanding that the amendment of the criminal code now under consideration shall include sections for the protection of those willing to work, remedies against threats and injury, and also the introduction of measures against boycotting of tradesmen, etc.

An amendment of the criminal law in the following terms has already been proposed by the government: "Whoever by means of dangerous threats disturbs the peace of any other person shall be liable to a year's imprisonment or a fine of $250."

The Central Federation of German Manufacturers proposes in its petition an additional clause, reading: "Whoever undertakes the systematic picketing of employers, workmen, work shops, thoroughfares, obstructs open spaces, railway stations, canals, docks or other places of traffic shall render himself guilty of dangerous menacing in the meaning of the first paragraph."

It is expected that the reichstag will make this petition one of the first subjects of discussion on its reassembly.

Brothers Strangely Meet.

[New York World:] Two men were talking in a Long Island Railroad train, when one asked the other if he knew William Nind of Oyster Bay. "Know him?" was the retort. "Why, there he is now, sitting two seats ahead of us." The questioner jumped up, hurried forward, grasped William's hand, and asked: "Don't you know me?"

"No, I don't," was the reply.

"Why, I'm your brother, George."

Then the two men hugged. They had not seen each other for forty years.

MAINLY ABOUT PEOPLE

Timely Paragraphs Concerning Persons, Places and Events at the National Capital.

BY MARGARET WADE.

WASHINGTON (D. C.) Oct. 29.—The arrival of the newly appointed Ambassador from Russia, George Bahkmeleff, on November 20, with the return to their respective embassies of the envoys from Germany, Great Britain and Italy will establish the diplomatic circle for the winter, although the Dean of the Corps Baron Hengelmuller, Ambassador from Austria-Hungary, will remain abroad until spring, leaving the most hospitable embassy in America closed to society, and the official duties of the dual nation in the hands of a Charge d'Affaires.

Ten world powers now maintain diplomats of the highest rank in Washington, while twenty-nine lesser nations, ranging in importance from Belgium to Hayti, have legations here, presided over by a Minister Plenipotentiary or a Charge d'Affairs. The business of diplomacy which these thirty-nine nations transact in Washington, from November to June is frequently misrepresented, away from the Capital, and not as fully understood as it might be even here. The accomplished gentlemen composing this special body, especially the European and Oriental officers, are trained in international law, in commerce, in finance, and above all in a graciousness of manner and knowledge of polite convention, from their youth. All of which makes them diplomats, for diplomats unlike poets are not born, they are trained. Europe has been training hers for centuries, while the United States and the republics of South America are slowly waking up to the fact that unless diplomacy is to be an art as well as a profession, even our great country can be outwitted by some of the smallest of the older nations. For the peace, prosperity and happiness of all the people depend much more than the average man or woman suspects, on our relations with our neighbors. And in statecraft as religion, our neighbor is considered to mean "mankind of every description."

Two of the largest committees of Congress, the Foreign Relations of the Senate, the Foreign Affairs of the House, with all the power of the State Department and important branches of the Treasury, the Navy and the War Departments, are all engaged in the work of diplomacy, under a dozen different names. So what wonder the thinking men among our law makers are opening their eyes to the importance of a trained corps diplomatique.

Letters from the State Department or the President, and confirmation by the Senate can't make a diplomat out of the raw material, although they do frequently make an Ambassador or a Minister, more is the pity.

Among the chiefs of embassies now gathering in Washington, the greater number have served their way up from honorary attache, or third secretary, which means the now successful Ambassador served for years without pay, in addition to being educated entirely at his own expense. The criticism often heard, that only rich men, or the sons of rich men, are advanced in the diplomatic service is true, but in no way reflects on the man of money who is willing not only to give his time and his education, but frequently a large part of the much criticised fortune, for the credit of his nation, in the capital of another. And that is diplomacy, the promotion of agreeable social relations, with the drawing-room, and the State Department, the palace of the King, or the White House of the President, the scene of action. Hence the need of courtesy, as well as learning, of grace as well as political economy, and of money with the rest.

The recent appointment of Larz Anderson as Minister to Belgium, illustrates the advantage of great wealth, not to the individual, but to the service. Mr. Anderson began his diplomatic career twelve years ago, in Rome, where he served as secretary of embassy, under two Ambassadors, before marrying Miss Isabel Perkins of Boston, a granddaughter and heiress of the enormously rich Isaac Weld, one of the early shipping masters of Massachusetts. Mr. Anderson is a son of the late Nicholas Anderson of Cincinnati, a cousin of Nicholas Longworth, of the Countess de Chambran, wife of the military attache of the French embassy, and of the Misses Anderson, nieces of Mrs. Taft, who are now reckoned as members of the White House family.

From Belgium it is expected Mr. Anderson will be advanced to Berlin, where he and his attractive young wife will restore the American embassy to all the pomp inaugurated by the Charlemagne Towers.

With a score or more of preordained belles entering society in the next three weeks, a bud and belle of only a few years ago has surprised her friends and vanity fair by withdrawing from the world, and entering the novitiate of a New York convent.

This young woman is Miss Frances Sands, daughter of Francis Preston Sands, and a niece of the late rear admiral of the same name, a niece of Rear-Admiral Franklin, and cousin of the present Minister to Guatemala.

She is the youngest of the three daughters of Mr. Sands' first marriage, and a half sister to Miss Jane Sands, who won the beauty prize at the smart fancy dress ball at Naragansett Pier in the past summer. Miss Sands gave up society a year ago to be a trained nurse, passing the winter in a Baltimore hospital, with other student nurses. She joined her family for a few weeks in the mountains of Virginia, late in the summer, but instead of returning to Baltimore for a second year's training, has resolved to enter the convent and make charity nursing her life's work. Her elder sisters, who with her shared their mother's fortune, are the former Miss Marie Sands, a nun in a convent in the southwest, and Mrs. Edward Anderson, wife of Capt. Anderson, U.S.A., now stationed in the Philippines.

GREEN TERRACED LAWNS.

Panama Canal Trip Will be Made a Scenic as Well as a Pleasant One.

[Peru Today:] By the time the canal is opened the ships may sail through terraced green lawns instead of the bare yellow earth slopes now in evidence. The reason is not altogether an aesthetic one, though the attraction of sailing on a big ocean liner through such a scene might well induce a few extra passengers to take the trip, just as the run up to Santos or the entrance to Rio harbor are sufficient excuse for a voyage from Europe.

It is believed that seeding the sloping sides of the Canal through the cuts with a strong grass may prevent the slides now so frequent, and will reduce the wearing down by the tropical rains. H. Pittier, an expert botanist from the Smithsonian Institution, has charge of an attempt to test this theory, for which purpose the Agricultural Department at Washington has sent down several thousand pounds of grass seed.

Even though it be impossible to prevent entirely the occasional big slides, it seems almost certain that this measure will result in a great saving by holding the ground from starting except under great pressure, and by reducing the erosion which brings down a tremendous amount of earth in the course of the year.

THE FORTUNATE SMITHS.

English Family Enjoy a Perpetual Pension Result of Aid Rendered Prince Charles.

[London Daily News:] An interesting fact has come to light in connection with Mr. Smith, a groom who has lately taken up his residence at Peterborough—viz., that his family has been drawing a pension from the British government for the space of 276 years.

Mr. Smith, who draws $7.50 a week, explained in an interview the history of the pension. It appears that after the Battle of Worcester an ancestor of Smith assisted Prince Charles to escape and was one of those who helped to hide him in the famous oak tree. Years passed, and it was not till 1675 that King Charles II was informed of the incident. Parliament, on the advice of the King, was not slow at rewarding those who had rendered services, however slight, to the sovereign. The consequence was that Mr. Smith's ancestor was placed on the perpetual pension list at the rate of $7.50 a week, with the result that the family has received (in round figures) something like $107,000 since the pension was granted.

DEADLY VIRGINIA CREEPER.

Plants With Five-pointed Leaves Are the Only Variety Producing Poisonous Berries.

[Portland Oregonian:] As a result of recent experiments of Dr. George A. Cathey, City Milk Chemist Calloway and other physicians and chemists of the city, which showed the berry of the Virginia creeper to be deadly poison, a controversy has arisen which has brought out the fact that there are several varieties of Virginia creeper and that not all varieties have poisonous berries.

As a result of investigations it has been found that the variety scientifically named amelypopis quinfolia is poisonous, while the amelypopis trifolia is free from poisonous substances and is often used for medicine. Investigation is under way to determine which variety is the most plentiful in Portland that steps may be taken to destroy as many as possible of the poisonous vines for the protection of children.

Dr George B. Story says it is easy to distinguish between the poisonous and the non-poisonous vines by the leaves.

"The poisonous Virginia creeper," said Dr. Story, "has a leaf with five points, while the other varieties have but three. It is said in the United States Dispensary that the bark as well as the berries of the five-pointed creeper vine or the amelypopis quinfolia is poisonous."

Method of Awarding Prizes.

The Times Greater Contest will close on the stroke of midnight, Saturday, November 25.

It is well for contestants to understand that this does not mean five minutes after 12 or any time after midnight.

You are given this warning ahead in order that every one may be on hand with final scores before the close.

Out-of-town contestants, who mail points in before the hour of midnight on Saturday, November 25, must furnish postmark or other evidence that the letter was mailed before the close.

All communications mailed to The Times in the territory now covered by contestants should reach The Times office on Monday following the close of the contest.

Telephone messages from contestants that they have a certain number of points and asking an extension of time to reach the office after midnight will not be entertained.

Subscriptions are not likely to be gotten after 9 or 10 o'clock at night, and there is positively no reason for a contestant to make a report later than midnight.

The contestant receiving the highest total score will have first choice of all the prizes. The second highest, second choice, and so on down the line.

It will probably be two or three days after the close of the contest before definite results can be announced. When these results are announced a certain time will be set aside for awarding the prizes either at The Times office or in some suitable building large enough to accommodate the contestants and their friends. When this announcement is made sufficient time will be allowed to contestants to reach the meeting from any point in the territory covered by them.

At this meeting the contestants will be allowed to choose and, should a contestant not be on hand to make a choice when his or her turn comes, that contestant will have to take the prize that falls to that number.

Should a contestant desire to choose any prize lower in the list than the score calls for, that is purely a matter of option upon the part of the contestant. When your turn comes you will have the choice of anything that has not been already selected up to that time; but, should you fail to appear when your name is called, then the next prize in rotation will be assigned to you.

Contestants are requested to cut out these rules and preserve them in order that no error may occur and no misunderstanding be had.

Big Business and Big Men.

MAKING A MILLION DOLLARS HONESTLY.

How a Los Angeles Business Man Is Doing It Without Resort to High Finance or Luck.

BY BARON BARD.

[EDITORIAL NOTE.—Few cities have experienced the unfoldment of so many really great business and industrial enterprises of recent years as has Los Angeles. In instances their development has been nothing short of phenomenal, and not less interesting than the enterprises themselves are the careers and personalities of the men who have made them possible. Believing that these subjects, capably treated, will attract readers of THE TIMES, the publishers have arranged to have prepared a series of authorized special articles on "big businesses and the personalities back of them," to appear from time to time under fitting titles. The accompanying article is the first one of the series.]

AT A DINNER in New York recently, Leslie M. Shaw, former Secretary of the Treasury, made the statement that any man might make a million dollars honestly, provided he possessed the aptitude and the application. He might have said further that there are more men who possess the aptitude than there are those endowed with the necessary application.

A striking example of application was exhibited on an occasion some years ago when the late Mark Hanna was granted an interview with the millionaire packer, Philip Armour. Even so distinguished a visitor as the national political giant, Hanna, must needs arrange a meeting through the packer's private secretary; and when he was at length admitted, there stretched before him the man of many millions, reclining in a barber's chair being shaved, the while he partook of his noon-day meal and dictated between mouthfuls to his stenographer.

I am going to tell you of a man who possesses both aptitude and application to make a million dollars, and I am going to show you how he is doing it honestly and to the vast advantage of thousands of his fellow men. I do not know whether he is worth a million dollars today or not, nor have I any curiosity to know. What I assert is that he possesses the requisite qualities to make a million dollars honestly, and that he has opened the door of opportunity to thousands who have entered at his invitation and been immensely benefitted.

Ever since the first crude rules of the game of money-making became a code of human existence, two vital questions have concerned big capital on the one hand and the small investor on the other. They are, on the side of capital, how to win the confidence of the little fellow; on the side of the little fellow, how to get a square deal and reasonable security for his dollars. Charles A. Elder, while an office boy at $1.50 a week, now president of a six or seven million dollar, real money corporation, has solved these questions most effectually. Before I tell you how, I shall tell you somewhat of the family of Elder and of Elder-the-Younger in particular—the Elder of Los Angeles.

Four hundred years or more ago a great shipbuilding company had its birth on the River Clyde, in Scotland. Among its founders were the ancestors of the Elders of today. For more than two hundred years it has been the greatest shipbuilding enterprise in all the world, and generation after generation of Elders have been the presidents of the company. You may have heard of it—the Elder-Demster Shipbuilding Company. From this family of shipbuilding Elders came Charles A. Elder, financier and city builder. But whatever endowments the Elders transmitted to their children, the inheritance of Charles A. of our day was anything but financial. But his lineage gave him the golden gift of application—a truly Scotch heritage—and aptitude and honesty and a few other things, among which not the least valuable is a robust body.

The American line of Elders runs back to long before the Revolutionary War. The first member of the family to emigrate to the new world settled in Virginia. Succeeding generations drifted westward as the star of empire beckoned. Charles A. Elder took up the march in Illinois, his birth State. His early boyhood days and elementary schooling were passed in Kansas; his father, a builder by trade, having settled in the frontier city of Topeka, where he organized a building company. In 1873, a mere lad of 9 or 10, young Elder began working for the company as an office boy on a wage of a dollar and a half a week. That was the beginning of his connection with the company, transplanted sixteen years ago to Los Angeles, and now known as the Los Angeles Investment Company.

You may imagine that Elder—the younger—henceforth applied himself exclusively to earning his dollar and a half a week. He did not. While he was earning that, and no one will deny that he did earn it, he was preparing to enter the University of Illinois, and latterly the University of France. He spent two years abroad in the study of architecture and art, and under the best continental masters, and at length returned to his adopted Kansas, bringing with him the honors of recognition his canvases had earned.

I said that Mr. Elder inherited a robust body. He was anything but robust-looking in the early 90's; but if his constitution had not been virile at the outset there would have been nothing left of him at all. The doctors looked grave and shook their heads. Consumption was the verdict—one lung destroyed. Mr. Elder was told that he might live a few months if he moved to Southern California. And that was what brought him to Los Angeles. But a man must do something, even when he is living—that is, a Man of Application. Mr. Elder got busy without delay. He opened a branch office of the Topeka company in Los Angeles, and, for fear he would die before it was fairly born, he worked like a Trojan. And the harder he worked the stronger he became, until the California business became a branch no longer, and the one-lunger from Kansas grew a chest like a blast furnace. And he has never lost it.

As Jimmie, of cartoon fame, would say: "Them was the happy days." Imagine President Elder, of the Los Angeles Investment Company, then a young man just well turned into the thirty stretch, gaunt and haggard, determined and tireless, working sixteen hours a day, lunching on a roll, sleeping on blanket-covered springs under the office table, and submitting to the munificent salary of a dollar and a half a week; imagine him handling thousands upon thousands of dollars every day, and living for one month on a scant $5; imagine him buying stock in the company with his savings—but no, even the imagination would balk stock still if I were to ask you to see in fancy many things that really were. On a salary of a dollar and a half a week, Charles A. Elder actually did save a stipend, and by aptitude and application make it the foundation of his fortune. At the same time George M. Derby, now treasurer of a company controlling $10,000,000, was working for $10 a month and a small commission on insurance written. W. D. Deeble, present secretary of the company, drew down $5 a week; and Harry Rodgers, now purchasing agent for the company, was office boy on $10 a week. And this only fifteen or sixteen years ago.

It seems a short while, doesn't it? Can you realize just what it meant? For eight years these men worked like—no, not like slaves, for there was enthusiasm in their work—like geniuses, rather, feeding their energies with the conviction of ultimate victory and keeping everlastingly at their work with an individual and united application that has brought forth a miracle. It would be unfair to bestow on any one of these the lion's share of credit; and not one would countenance it—certainly Mr. Elder would not, who is the first to disclaim honors he prefers to rest with his organization, the best he declares that ever earned a well-deserved success. And I can't gainsay it.

Yet, I believe that the remarkable career of the Los Angeles Investment Company could have been realized in no city of the world other than Los Angeles. It is hardly less a creature of this great city's unparalleled growth and development than of the splendid management that has fostered it; and by the same token I am sure no other city could contribute to its future greatness as can Los Angeles. Those who did not know the Los Angeles of ten or fifteen years ago can scarcely appreciate the transformation that has been wrought. I have been in every great city in the United States. I have seen wonderful development in many of them. I have seen a greater San Francisco rise from ruins in a few brief years; but nothing else has impressed me like the mighty, irresistible unfoldment of Los Angeles.

This growth has enabled the Los Angeles Investment Company to make a record that is almost unbelievable. Imagine: had you invested a hundred dollars in the enterprise sixteen years ago, and ordered your dividends to be reinvested in the company's stock, your original hundred dollars would now be worth more than $17,000. Doesn't it make one feel like kicking oneself—metaphorically, of course? For every hundred dollars the first stockholders invested in the company they can today draw $1280 a year in cash dividends, paid quarterly, and their stock is gaining in value at the rate of $1800 a year. Naturally, the stock is no longer purchasable at par. Roughly, the market price is such that the buyer of stock nets seven or eight per cent. a year in dividends and a possible ten or twelve per cent. in premiums—that is, the advances in market value of shares. As dividends increase the price of shares is bound to rise. In the past sixteen years the dividends have averaged something like forty per cent. a year.

But it was by no means a holiday or a picnic in the beginning for the men who earned these dividends. Mr. Elder, utilizing his technical knowledge, drew plans for buildings, and in a pinch could use the hammer or the mason's trowel. After the first year he graduated from the bed-springs under the office table to a small back room of the office, and there he slept unmolested until 1904—just nine years from the time he launched the business. It was not until 1903 that the light began to dawn, as Mr. Elder expresses it, and he felt that he could safely eat all he wanted. As late as December, 1905, the company's office rent was still $12 a month, the location being a back room in an old shack north of the Los Angeles Trust Building, now the American Savings Bank Building.

The first house put up by the Los Angeles Investment Company was built on an alley, just off San Pedro street, near the present Huntington car barns. It cost $84 and was sold for $92. The next building was a cottage which cost $285. It was sold to Chas. E. Packman, president of the Mission Fixture Company, at a profit of $18. Such were the modest beginnings of the Los Angeles Investment Company. It was a struggle against prejudice, a fight for confidence from the first. How the struggle has prospered, how the fight has fared, is too well known to render detail necessary. Since the first small shack was built, the company has erected nearly 2000 buildings. There is scarcely a time when at least a hundred buildings are not under construction. So tremendous has the business grown that the company owns and operates its own mills, valued at half a million dollars, and employs thousands of men in its numerous departments. It is a great leap from $84 to a million dollars; yet $1,000,000 represents the cost of the company's great building to be erected this year at Eighth and Hill. It is a great growth from a few dozen stockholders to a thousand; yet nine thousand is the number who draw the dividends of the company today. They are most numerous at home where the company is best known; but they reach around the globe.

Evidently big capital found a way to interest the small investor. It is strange that no one ever thought of such a way before. It has been tried in modified forms; but the modifications hampered it always by trying to get back what it gave. The thing was very simple, after all. It was merely the subscription of an irreclaimable guarantee fund, donated voluntarily by the stockholders themselves, and placed in trust with a bank to buy outright on presentation any and all stock of the company that might be offered for sale, the stock repurchased so to be resold at auction every week, and the proceeds therefrom to be returned to the guarantee fund.

Suppose there were a panic? There was one in the fall of 1907. The guarantee fund at that time amounted to only $10,000; yet it bought and paid for $105,000 worth of stock, the fund being replenished as rapidly as occasion required by the auction sales of the repurchased stock. The guarantee fund today is nearly ten times what it was in 1907. To date it has repurchased approximately three-quarters of a million dollars' worth of stock. It has never failed to buy back all stock offered, irrespective of the amount, date, or reason for selling.

This guarantee fund is a great source of comfort and confidence. If the small investor gets "hard up," it affords him an opportunity to get his money out of his investment without loss of any kind; he gets his money, all of it, and he gets it immediately. Sometimes he does even better than that. Not many months ago W. J. Hobson of Gardena sold thirty-five shares of stock to the guarantee fund for $121.45. He had already received $69.97 in dividends, which gave him a total of $191.42 for stock that cost him $51.45 six years ago. This is not an isolated instance. To multiply them would illustrate the practical difference between investing and "divesting" your money.

If you want to "divest" your money, send it to the guarantee fund. It will be effectually divested, for you will never see it again. That is precisely what Charles A. Elder and his associates did quite recently. They "divested" themselves voluntarily of $15,000 to increase the peculiar fund. This form of divesting themselves has become somewhat of a habit and no small source of pride with them. And why not? They have been made rich through the modest investments of a comparatively few years ago, and the great company is a monument to their aptitude and application.

The present holdings of the Los Angeles Investment Company consist of about 2400 acres of subdivision land in or contiguous to Los Angeles. These holdings will ultimately be completely platted, and will then aggregate about 12,000 lots. The company will pursue its policy of improving every other lot, which, at the present rate of construction (about 300 houses a year,) will occupy the company for twenty years to come. What the value of this property will be in even a very few years no one can say. It is estimated that there would be $60,000,000 worth of work ahead of the company if it never bought another foot of ground.

The operations of the Los Angeles Investment Company have been vastly more far-reaching than merely the making of dividends for its stockholders, however. It has had a large hand in making Los Angeles a city of homes, real homes, owned by the families that live in them. It was the pioneer in creating the opportunity for the man who works for wage or salary to buy a home on almost nothing. Its wonderful success has bred many imitators not alone in Los Angeles, but in other cities as well. Many of these are genuine successes. Not a few are utter frauds and failures, either through incompetency or rank dishonesty. This was to be expected. Success always breeds success, and also it always breeds miserable pretenses of success.

By no means the least benefit the company has been to Los Angeles lies in the practical evolution of the city-beautiful idea, over which committees and "experts" have pondered and written so voluminously of recent years. The development of the artistic modern bungalow, the making of real homes in the place of rented homes, and the applied systems of community building, as launched by the company, have, I believe, contributed more than anything else to instill into the people of Los Angeles an appreciation of civic beauty. A visit to one of the company's model communities is a convincing testimonial. Street after street of artistic homes, unspoiled by a single marring feature, delight the eye. There are no unsightly lots, no "for sale" signs, no obtruding bill-boards. Even the store buildings, schools and public halls bear out an harmonious ensemble.

You may think that all this is a wide digression from the subject with which we started—the making of a million dollars honestly. It is not in the least so. Primarily we have been dealing with application. Here are the evidences of aptitude. Largely the ideal development of the bungalow type, the placing of the real home within the reach of all, and the planning of splendid communities—these were largely, I say, the expression of Charles A. Elder's special aptitude. The eye of the artist saw all these things in prospect long before they had being anywhere on earth, and the practical hand, determined will, and relentless application set about to create them. Mr. Elder shuns the credit of these things honestly enough, for no man could achieve them single handed; but I tell you that back of every great business in this world there is a dominant personality, a vital, creative, executive power that does things, and the things he does are proportioned to the man. This is infallible. Charles A. Elder is the personality back of the Los Angeles Investment Company.

Charles A. Elder, president Los Angeles Investment Company.

Mr. Elder is a great believer in the future of Los Angeles. He has seen a St. Paul or a Denver built here in the past ten years. He believes firmly that Los Angeles is destined to take at least third rank among the cities of North America. This opinion might seem absurd to many people; yet is it more absurd than the claims of a decade ago, which were outstripped by the actual developments? Mr. Elder expects the Panama Canal to have a wonderful effect on the future of the city. He believes that fully 90 per cent. of the freight from East to West will pass through the canal, and Los Angeles, being the first important port of call on the Pacific Coast in American territory, occupies a strategic geographical position that is impregnable. The fact that the city proper is seventeen miles from its harbor, according to Mr. Elder, is a matter of small significance. The world's greatest capitals are no better situated, if we except New York and St. Petersburg. London and Paris are not so near the ocean as Los Angeles.

Mr. Elder predicts that the business center of Los Angeles in years to come will be in the neighborhood of Pico and Figueroa streets. During the sixteen years of his residence here he has seen the retail quarter shifted and expanded to embrace at least a mile of the former residence district to the south and west. The process will continue, declares Mr. Elder, until the Pico-Figueroa district is the center.

Mr. Elder is an enthusiastic patron of music and art. He is an accomplished player of the clarionet. As an artist he has taken prizes for pen-and-ink work in the salons of Paris. But his life has been too busy to admit of very great indulgence of these tastes. Mr. Elder has been married less than two years. Mrs. Elder, nee Miss Vesta Damon, is a native daughter, and, incidentally, she is also mother of a native daughter scarcely 3 months old.

By nature Mr. Elder is genial and mild of manner, who expresses the brotherhood of man in his daily intercourse in home and office. Yet, with all the gentleness of his disposition, there is a latent, near-the-surface austerity that leaps to the fore at the proper occasion, and bares to view the genius of command. We have all, at one time or another, met this type of man, with whom the soft-spoken word is a sheath for steel—not the steel of truculence, but of strength. Such men are often a little feared and always a great deal admired. Such attributes are never the portion of inconsequence. They are the right-patent of success. They ride over obstacles and win victories. It seems so very easy, so simple, to read of exploits. The sweat, and blood, and brain that made them possible—made them realities—may not be adequately portrayed. The hope, rising above disappointment, perhaps despair; the courage putting down unworthy fears; the persistence, never admitting defeat—these are elements no pen has yet committed to paper with sufficient accuracy and delineation. And it never will. The only adequate conception of life is life. Yet we may in fancy look in upon the young architect and artist in his daily workshop, and be very sure that the victories of after years were dearly won, that the big problems of life interposed themselves betimes, and that many a silent battle was fought and enemy vanquished in the dark hours of early struggle.

I shall characterize Mr. Elder as a man of consummate business capacity. The fact has been sufficiently demonstrated, you will say, in his masterly achievements. Yet men have achieved without peculiar ability or capacity as business men. They have achieved, often, because of circumstances, not in spite of them. Mr. Elder is a man who would have won under almost any circumstances by dint of cool judgment and unremitting application. All his life he has been pre-eminently a worker; and in that he is not unlike the geniuses and the talented of all time. He has always had and exercised a prodigious capacity for plain labor of hand and brain. And it is the man of both manual and mental parts who chisels the deepest niche in the world's gallery of workers.

Mr. Elder is a pleasant-featured man, just now in the prime of his virile activities. His brow is expansive, his eyes clear and level, his stature well-poised and well-knit. At an age when business application has exacted its toll of nervous energy from the average man, he is seemingly untouched by it; and it is safe to predict that there lie before him many years of real achievement in which to garner any portion of the million dollars he has already made and saved; and it is also a safe prediction that in doing it he will be reaping the fruits of an old-fashioned business honesty applied to modern business methods—a system that yields its bounties in direct proportion to the benefits it conveys to the small investor.

THE RAILWAY WORLD.

The steel passenger coach is not yet an absolutely satisfactory fact. The Hardwood Record, discussing the subject, says it is yet to be demonstrated that the steel Pullman sleeper is a safer vehicle for the transportation of passengers than the wooden type of car built on steel sills.

"A Pullman official, who was recently interviewed on the subject of steel vs. modern cars built on steel sills, avers that he is not fully convinced that the entire steel car, which is absolutely steel, within and without, save the upholstering, is the acme of safety in sleeping car construction," says Hardwood Record. "As near as can be found out steel cars came into being through the insistence of the Postoffice Department for the construction of mail cars that would better protect the postal clerks; and either in the form of an order or of a bargain with the government, the make-up of mail carrying passenger trains requires that a wooden coach be placed immediately in the rear of the steel mail car. If this be true, it is a strange affair that the department should attempt to protect the lives of its three or four mail clerks at the expense of a coachful of passengers.

"Steel Pullmans cost from three to five thousand dollars more to construct than the former type of wood and steel cars. They weigh approximately 20,000 pounds more than the former type of car, and it is said that the cost of hauling cars of this sort on fast trains is nearly 50 per cent. in excess of the cost of pulling wooden cars. Critical travelers are almost unanimous in the opinion that the full steel constructed car is a far less confortable vehicle than the old type on account of the reverberation of its metal, its lack of elasticity and resilience, and from the prison-like chill imparted by the steel plates of which it is built. Notwithstanding this, the traveling public employing high-class and fast trains, has been willing to stand this discomfort by reason of the feeling of safety that is supposed to be so persistently touted in favor of this type of construction. So far there is nothing to prove other than that the wooded coach on steel sills is the safer, saner and more comfortable type of passenger sleeper and dining car construction."

The invasion of New England by the Grand Trunk through the extension of the Central Vermont road across Massachusetts and Rhode Island to tidewater at Providence, has met serious opposition from the New York, New Haven and Hartford, but the work on the extension has made such progress that Charles H. Hays, president of the Grand Trunk, says:

"We hope to be running trains into Providence next year. We are building from Palmer, Mass., on our Central Vermont line, through a string of manufacturing villages, products of which we shall haul the entire length of our line for export to China and Japan, as well is to Alaska and the Yukon.

"These towns produce practically everything wanted in the West and require practically everything in the way of agricultural products of Canada. They are a great market for hay, oats and all kinds of vegetables and fruits. From the innumerable factories vast quantities of manufactured merchandise are shipped to Chicago, Buffalo and other points on the Grand Trunk line for distribution."

President Ripley of the Santa Fe tells of the slang used by railroad men—that is the men who are right in the harness of railroad life—the brakemen, the switchmen and the trainmen. The story when told by Mr. Ripley is a side-splitter but even when told in cold type is good enough. Here it is:

A passenger train had crashed into the rear end of a freight train. The rear end brakeman was called upon the "carpet" of the division superintendent to account for his failure to flag the oncoming passenger. He was asked to tell what the crew of the train were doing. This is the way he explained it:

"The hoghead was greasing the pig. The tallow-pot was in the pit cracking diamonds. The front shack was bending the rail to head in. The con was in the dog house flipping the tissue and I was chasing back with the red."

WINTER WORK ON HEADLIGHT.

Trinity Mining Company to Go on Vigorously.

Another Dividend Declared by Bunker Hill.

Lucky Vein Is Encountered in Union Hill.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

REDDING (Cal.) Nov. 3.—After a most successful summer season, the Trinity Mining and Reduction Company, operating the Headlight mine at Trinity Center, is arranging for vigorous winter work. During the dry season mining has been largely conducted by way of the open-cut or surface trenching method, but with the advent of winter storms, operations will be principally confined to adit and other underground work. Important sections of new ground have been recently opened, and indications are exceptionally bright for the future.

The company recently installed considerable additional equipment, augmenting the capacity of the mill to a large degree. The new apparatus includes a battery of Dorr classifiers, a new rock breaker, several pumps and additions to the sand tanks. The improvements bring the capacity of the plant up to 250 tons per day. In addition the cost of milling has been reduced, resulting in increased profits per ton to the stockholders.

By extracting quartz from the open cuts when weather conditions permit, and confining work to the underground levels only when winter fairly sets in, the company has been enabled to conduct operations at a cost unapproached by most gold mining concerns in California. During the past summer mining costs have been easily maintained at an average of 50 cents per ton, while total cost of mining, milling, marketing bullion, etc., has not exceeded $1.50 per ton. As the value of the ore averages $4.50 to $5 per ton, it is readily apparent that the company is earning excellent profits. Under winter conditions the cost of production will be increased slightly, but not to any appreciable extent.

The company maintains a splendid steel bridge over the Trinity River, insuring a clear road for the shipment of supplies, etc., at all seasons of the year. An automobile truck is operated between the mine and Delta, the nearest railroad point, facilitating the transportation of commodities at low rates. The great object of the company has been to achieve best results at the lowest possible economic expense—an object that has been attained by careful management in every department. The Trinity Reduction and Mining Company is composed principally of Los Angeles people. H. W. Miller is president, Archibald Nesbitt vice-president, D. W. Shanks general manager, David Goodale, manager.

It is understood that many of the stockholders of this company are also interested in the corporation which recently acquired the Union Hill and other hydraulic properties in Weaverville Basin. The splendid success attendant upon the operation of the Headlight has turned the attention of many Angelenos to the practically virgin mineral regions of Trinity county, and several deals are reported under way, as a direct result.

Along the Mother Lode.

The Bunker Hill has declared another $15,000 dividend, at the rate of 7½ cents per share. These payments are made monthly. Developments at the 1750 and 1950-foot levels continues satisfactory, the great ore body at the 1950-foot point in places running over eighty feet wide, while it is said to average well over fifty feet throughout its developed length. All the ore carries commercial values, and the 40-stamp mill is running at full capacity. The company will shortly proceed with the opening of another level below the 1950, according to late reports.

The South Eureka Company has unwatered the Oneida shaft to below the 1700-foot level, and as soon as the 2400-foot point is reached a drift will be sent out to connect with the South Eureka workings. From the South Eureka a drift is driving from the 2700-level to intersect the Oneida ore bodies. The completion of these developments will open up a large belt of virgin ground.

The South Eureka passed its usual monthly dividend of 7 cents per share in October, owing, it is understood, to the capital needed to complete the payment on the Oneida mine, and to reopen the property and place it on a productive basis. The price of the Oneida is reported to be $150,000, and a large amount will necessarily have to be expended in repairing the old workings and prosecuting new developments. The eighty-stamp mill at the South Eureka is operating steadily, and the ore bodies recently blocked out, are stated to be maintaining usual satisfactory values.

Unwatering the South Amador mine has temporarily ceased, and the management is concentrating its energies on the driving of a level from the 500-foot point. It is reported that a good body of ore is in evidence, with values excellent. A number of crosscuts are being driven from the main drift. It is probable that the company will take a lease on the ten-stamp plant of the Amador Queen No. 2 company.

Strike in Union Hill.

The long-sought Lucky vein has been encountered in the Union Hill mine, Grass Valley district. Developments have not progressed sufficiently to demonstrate its extent or values, but enough to indicate the ore body is larger than the Union Hill ledges. The Lucky vein was formerly one of the best producers of the district; the Lucky mine long ranking as a valuable producer. In size and general characteristics, the vein resembled the famous Idaho ledge, with bunches of high-grade quartz frequently occurring. The Union Hill made the discovery at the 300-foot point, after driving a cross-cut about 600 feet. More men have been put to work and the development of the big ledge is progressing rapidly. Considerable trouble was at first caused by a flood of water, which poured in at the rate of 250 gallons per minute, but the big Cornish pump, installed a short time ago, is easily keeping the flow under control. It is probable that the capacity of the mill will be doubled next spring, if developments are as satisfactory as anticipated.

Nugget Nell Bonded.

The Nugget Nell group of gravel claims have been taken under bond by J. C. Steele of San Francisco. It is understood that San Francisco and Southern California people are interested with Steele in the deal. The group lies between the Telegraph and Deadwood mines, in the Downieville district, and have yielded rich gravel in past years. The channel is believed to be one of the best in Sierra county, and the bonders are arranging for vigorous explorations.

Telegraph in Spotlight.

Three feet wide, a strong vein has been encountered in the main adit of the Telegraph mine. The discovery was made while running for gravel, and is considered of prime importance. The vein shows high-grade arsenical suplhurets, such as made Alleghany famous, in addition to free-milling gold ore. The adit is being widened at this point, and a station will be provided. From this a shaft will be sent down on the pitch of the vein. Orders have been placed for a hoist and pump.

Sovereign Equipment.

Two Beers roller quartz mills have been installed at the Sovereign group, above Downieville, and three concentrators and a cyanide plant added to the reduction plant. The main adit is in over 660 feet, with the vein exposed for 105 feet. It ranges from seven to eleven feet wide, and carries good milling values, with occasional streaks of high-grade quartz. The adit will be extended to intersect the Abbe and Elmore veins, both having shown good values near surface. The group embraces ten claims. The vein was located six years ago, but little in the way of developments was accomplished until recently. Several Southern Californians are interested. F. O. Richardson is manager.

Elephants Can't Jump.

[New York Sun:] "There is one thing no one has ever seen an elephant do, either in a circus or out of it, and that is to jump," said a keeper in the Central Park menagerie.

"The fact is, an elephant cannot jump. Because of his great weight he cannot take all four feet off the ground at once. He can make a 100-yard dash at the rate of twenty miles an hour, which is going some, but if he were pursuing an enemy and came to a deep ditch eight feet across he would have to stop short, because it is too wide for him to step it and he is unable to jump. An elephant is a great coward. He will have a fit if a rabbit runs between his feet. He has tremendous strength, but he doesn't know it."

Lives in Four States.

[Kansas City Star:] When Fred Terron, a stockman, came to Kansas City yesterday with a herd of cattle, he was puzzled as to what State to register from. He explained that he lived in four States—Colorado, New Mexico, Utah and Arizona—his ranch extending into all four and his house standing on the point where they meet.

Mr. Terron eats his meals in Colorado, sleeps in Utah, has his "best room" in New Mexico and his kitchen extends into Arizona. Mr. Terron gets his mail at Cortez, Col., but votes in Utah, because he sleeps in that State. His legal business he does at the county seat of Apache county, Ariz., because most of his ranch lies in that State. The windmill which pumps water for his stock is in New Mexico, but the trough is in Arizona.

Phoenix.

MINE DISTRICT NOT WELL KNOWN

LIES NOT FAR FROM PHOENIX AND IS PROMISING.

Development Has Been Retarded Because of the Lack of Transportation Facilities—Some of the Old Properties Were Worked for Silver Many Years Ago.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) Nov. 2.—North of Phoenix, from sixteen to forty miles distant, lie several groups of mines of more than local note. That greater development has not come to the region is due to lack of transportation facilities and water, though the mines are favored by proximity to the agricultural valley around Phoenix. Most of the region referred to is included within Cave Creek, and Winifred mining districts. Possibly two score mines now are being worked on a small scale, though most of them simply for development.

Near Cave Creek Station, thirty-three miles from Phoenix, William Goodwin, a Tempe merchant, has five claims embracing one of the largest gold-bearing dykes ever known in Arizona, fully 200 feet wide, the surface croppings carrying a network of quartz stringers all bearing free gold. Goodwin has driven a tunnel into the hanging wall, but expects to find his richest ore near the footwall, 200 feet further into the hillside.

The old Go John mine in the same locality was worked about forty years ago for silver, one shipment returning large profit though freighted by teams to Yuma, and thence dispatched by steamer to San Francisco, for reduction. As is usual in the history of Arizona silver working, the mine now has been found really a copper bearer, the ore running up to 20 per cent. in the red metal, though still retaining silver values. The present owners, Lewis Brothers & Smith, have a 200-foot tunnel driven toward the main ledge, from which the tunnel breast still is fifty feet distant. Yet this cross-cut tunnel is in ore for its whole length, a narrow vein of very rich copper ore, which has been piled on the dump in large quantity, simply from the tunnel extension.

Sheriff Jack White of Cochise county will retire from office at the end of the year, to devote his time to development of a gold property he owns in Winifred district. His ore is extremely rich and will well repay shipping.

COPPER QUEEN MINE. SINKING DEEP SHAFT.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

BISBEE (Ariz.) Nov. 3.—The new Dallas shaft of the Copper Queen Company now is down 700 feet, and is being driven at the rate of 160 feet a month, considered remarkable progress in a shaft of such size. The whole Queen property is being put into the best of shape for maximum production at need. Indeed for the past couple of weeks the production of ore and of bullion has been on the upward trend and the month's cop-

IN THE EARTH.

Rare Minerals, Metallurgy and Chemistry.

Antimony and Epidote.

SAN BERNARDINO, Oct. 7.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I am mailing you under separate cover today two samples of rock, numbered 1 and 2. Rock comes from fifteen miles of Victorville, in this county. Is No. 1 bismuth? If not, what is the brittle metal in it? What is the yellow in No. 2? Hoping you will tell me in "In the Earth" what the samples contain, and thanking you in advance, I am,

Very truly yours, J. L. W.

ANSWER: No. 1 carries antimony with iron and arsenic present. No. 2 frequently deceives the mining boys in the hills; some take the peculiar yellowish-green variety of epidote (such as your sample) to be "vanadium;" others refer to it as "lead ore" and still others call it "carnotite," and so on.

There are four groups of epidote, and all varieties usually occur in igneous rocks, in granite, and crystalline slates. It is found in granular and columnary masses, and is frequently confused with augite. Color, usually green, tinged with yellow; rarely gray, red or black; of vitreous luster; pearly at cleavage plane; of uneven fracture; brittle; hardness, from 6 to 7; specific gravity, 3 to 3.5. The red colored variety often carries manganese.

Epidote fuses before the blowpipe, and when pulverized (after a gentle roast) it dissolves in hydrochloric acid, in which acid it forms a jelly.

Trachyte.

CEDAR CITY (Utah) Oct. 8.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Will thank you to name this rock for a number of miners in this section. Locality four miles from Cedar City, and said to be pumice stone.

Thanking you now, in advance,

Yours truly, G. C.

ANSWER: While the sample somewhat resembles pumice it is, nevertheless, a variety of trachyte.

Chiefly Quartz.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 11.—[To the Editor of The Times:] May I request your "In the Earth" department to tell me what this sample contains? It is from near Newhall, Cal.

Hoping to get an answer showing per cent. Yours truly, W. F. G.

ANSWER: Approximately, quartz 90 per cent.; magnetic iron, 2 per cent.; titanic iron present, with feldspar, tourmaline, mica and garnet, in the "sand." In passing it is well to add: Metallurgical chemists are receiving a wonderful lot of stuff nowadays from Southern California, and a great number of samples are insisted upon as being "full of platinum." The truth is, that it is very doubtful if there is a trace of platinum in all the territory referred to. There is no easy field test for platinum beyond finding metallic platinum.

In testing ores for platinum when the native grains are "out of sight," as it were, the safe and sane method is to pan a 100-pound sample, get the concentrates and then analyze. There is a Southern California test (?) however, which is claimed to be "as simple as rolling off a log;" its simplicity is asinine, and the result obtained is iron, with not a trace of platinum.

A Lost Placer.

REDONDO BEACH, Oct. 13.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Will you kindly tell me through "In the Earth" if the Pegleg Mine (a lost placer) lies north or south of San Bernardino, and has it ever been found—i. e., of late years?

very truly yours,

Very truly yours, D. V. G.

ANSWER: We have heard tell of the Peg-Leg mine, named after its discoverer, a man with two legs, but one of the legs was a wooden leg, to take the place of the "lost" leg. Hence the name of the placer (?)

We made due inquiry as to the supposed locality of the Peg-Leg (placer,) but so far, we cannot locate the point of the compass on the supposed nesting-place of the mine. Probably some of our readers can enlighten us, if so, "drop a line," please.

Vanadinite Crystals.

ENTERPRISE (Utah) Oct. 14.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Will you kindly tell me what you can of the following sampes: They are from [illegible] county, Utah. Formation mostly [illegible]—with some lime. No. 1 I rather think is lime; what is it, and is it of any value in minerals or otherwise? No. 2 looks like quartz [illegible], but it seems "heavy." Is there any tungsten in it? No. 3 appears like lime and quartz. Is there any mineral in it? No. 4 is quartz; is there any vanadium in it? What are the small yellow crystals to be [illegible] is it? Thanking you kindly, I am

Yours truly, C. B. R.

ANSWER: Sample No. 1 is not lime, [illegible] jasper mixed with honestone, [illegible] no great commercial value. [illegible], in part, quartz, with trace [illegible] tungstate and trace of [illegible]. No. 3, carbonate of [illegible] coating on quartz, iron present; tellurium absent, trace of lead present. The crystals you refer to are vanadinite, and vanadium is present, low per cent. throughout the mass.

Tellurium Not Present.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 14.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Will you kindly give the correct name of the mineral inclosed in small package herewith. Apparently it is tellurium. Globules of gold form on surface if heat is applied; also would like to know if there is a market for mica-schist of quality enclosed. Both samples from near Exchequer, Mariposa county, California.

Yours very truly, M. Z. E.

ANSWER: The sample you submit as tellurium-bearing does not carry a trace of tellurium; "globules of gold" do not form "on surface if heat is applied." The volatile matter in the sample is composed of arsenic (heat it and smell its garlic-like fumes.) The sample carries arsenic and sulphur (part as native arsenic, in concentric and radiated crystals.) Not tested for gold.

The mica-schist sample while of exceptional quality and a typical variety, has no market other than as specimens for mineral collections.

Cinnabar.

CLOVERDALE (Cal.) Oct. 14.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Some weeks ago I noticed in your "In the Earth" column a reference to "Metacinnabar" (the exceptional high-grade quicksilver mineral.) You will please find herein some of the high-grade quicksilver mineral of the Cloverdale country; is it metacinnabarite?

Thanking you in advance for whatever information you will be pleased to give me, on behalf of the mining boys, I am, Yours sincerely,

H. L. G.

ANSWER: Glad to hear from you. The sample is not metacinnabarite, but it is a very high-grade ore of cinnabar, of carmine color, and carrying, approximately, 75 per cent. mercury (quicksilver.)

Cinnabar possesses a scarlet streak (metacinnabarite gives a black streak,) and is sectile. Cinnabar fracture is granular, compact, fibrous and earthy, and a specific gravity of 9. Metacinnabarite is sub-conchoidal to uneven in fracture, with a specific gravity of 7.81. We are glad to learn that you have such high-grade cinnabar near Cloverdale.

Lymonite and Pyrolusite.

SAN DIEGO, Oct. 15.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I am forwarding by this mail two samples from near San Diego. The rocks are very puzzling to me and I do not know what they are. No. 1 I found with a parallel ledge of No. 2 and some of the No. 2 ledge is of a brownish color. Does either sample carry uranium or tungsten?

Yours truly, J. N. Y.

ANSWER: Sample No. 1 is an ore of manganese and known in mineralogy as pyrolusite. The sample is a reniform mass with a radiating structure; color, steel-bluish gray, of metallic luster, streak black and soils the fingers, brittle, hardness 2.5. Specific gravity, 4.90; composition, approximately, protoperoxide of manganese, 84.06; oxygen, 11.78; barytes, 0.53; silica, 0.51; water, 1.12 percentages respectively; together with some 2 per cent. iron. Soluble in hydrochloric acid and yielding fumes of chlorine. A valuable ore of manganese.

Sample No. 2 is a beautiful specimen of botryoidal limonite, iridescent and resplendent. Probably the brownish yellow matter you refer to is also limonite of another variety. Limonite is hydrated peroxide of iron (over 80 per cent. iron,) and if comparatively free from phosphorus it is a valuable ore of iron.

There is no tungstic acid, nor is there a trace of uranium in either of the samples by you submitted.

Silicious Lime Carbonate.

UPLAND, Oct. 15.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Some time since I sent you in a round wooden container with screw top, sample of white substance from my ranch near Lancaster. My name was on the outside of the container. I also wrote you a letter relating to the same.

I note in the issue of October 15, the enclosed clipping: ("Notice to correspondents,") from the editor of the "In the Earth" department. This may refer to my sample.

Yours truly, L. D. T.

ANSWER: We extend an apology to you for the long delay; it was unavoidable, and this explanation is properly due to you.

The sample you submit is not the nodular one referred to in the clipping. Your specimen is a silicious variety of dolomite (lime carbonate or magnesium limestone.) Phosphorus is present in the mass to a very small percentage.

Quartz.

CARPINTERIA, Oct. 16.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I am sending by mail three sample of quartz taken from ledges in Mexico. Samples are numbered 1, 2 and 3. What do these specimens contain, and are they of any commercial value?

Thanking you for the information in advance. Please answer in "In the Earth." Yours truly,

W. E. B.

ANSWER: No. 1 consists of two samples. The reddish-yellow sample carries iron, arsenic, trace of lead and trace of vanadium oxide, and the brownish specimen carries iron, trace of lead and trace of vanadium

No. 2 (two samples) has present, iron oxides, arsenic, trace of lead with trace of vanadium.

No. 3 consists of two samples of bluish-quartz, with iron, lime, arsenic, and trace of lead present. No sample was tested for gold or silver. The ores "look mighty lean."

Not Stinkstone.

REDLANDS, Oct. 17.—[To the Editor of The Times:] In the enclosed paper I am sending you a thumb specimen of ore from the neighborhood of La Mesa, San Diego county, and would ask you to give mineral content of specimen.

It is a teaser; it seems to contain iron, calcium, phosphate, and silica, but the green substance will not go into solution even in aqua regia. Is this what is known as stinkstone? Thanking you in advance for this favor, and now for past favors, I remain. Yours very truly,

A. J. B.

ANSWER: Anthraconite (stinkstone) is a variety of limestone, which gives off a fetid odor if struck with a hammer, "owing, probably, to its containing hydrogen sulphide."

We take your analysis as shown, and, therefore, will "tackle" the "green" body only; this reacts for iron and aluminum, and the green substance is occasioned by dumortierite—a silicate of aluminum. Glad to hear from you.

Platinum Not Present.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 17.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I am sending you three small sacks of sand. Sack No. 1 was taken from a locality near Silver Lake. No. 2 was taken from the beach near Redondo, and No. 3 was taken from near Elizabeth Lake. I am anxious to know the per cent. of platinum, as I am informed that all of the samples carry platinum.

Yours respectfully,

W. B. S.

ANSWER: The only common metal we can find in any sample is iron. There is not a trace of platinum in any sample. Not tested for gold, but at all events, the gold value is ridiculously low.

Radium.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 17.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Has the element radium been discovered as yet as an element? If so, when and by whom? Thanking you for some information. Yours truly,

M. D.

ANSWER: Mme. Curie, the eminent chemist, and widow of M. Curie, with whom she was the joint discoverer of radium salts, has, in collaboration with M. Debierne, successfully isolated the element—radium.

What is known, popularly, as radium, is no more nor less than the salts of radium.

Mme. Curie and M. Debierne obtained the radium by electrolyzing salts of radium and amalgam, which was then transferred to an iron disk placed in a quartz tube, in which a vacuum had been created.

The distillation was then made in an atmosphere of hydrogen, which had been purified by a special treatment, as ordinary hydrogen affects the metal.

At about 700 deg. the distillation was finished, no mercury remained, and instead, the discoverers found a layer of brilliant white metal. Pure radium was discovered.

Mme. Curie hastened to place the speck of radium thus obtained in a glass vacuum tube, safe from the influence of the atmosphere. The report of the discovery was presented to the Academy of Sciences.

A Census of Flies.

[London Daily Graphic:] Striking statistics concerning flies were given by Dr. F. M. Sandwith (Gresham Professor of Physic) in an address on "Flies as Carriers of Disease," at the City of London School. Recognizing the danger of the house fly, he said, in 1907-'08, arrangments were made by the medical officers connected with the London County Council for obtaining statistics of the number of flies which infested different places, and upward of five thousand flies were caught on four fly papers in seventy two hours in one small coffee-house in the East End of London. At one depot where rubbish had been deposited, six millions of flies were caught in 1907. The danger of the pest could not be overestimated. The bacilli of typhoid, tubercle and anthrax were carried both within and outside the fly, and when swallowed remained virulent for several days and were easily spread to human beings. The breeding capacity of the fly was enormous. One female fly might be an ancestress of over two million descendants in a year.

PERMITS MOSTLY FOR NEW HOMES.

Houses and Bungalows Boost Building Total.

Crown City Board Buys Site for Fine School.

Rumors of Big Realty Deals Still Persist.

PASADENA, ov. 4.—The month of October, last, was characterized by marked activity in the erection of new residences in the city. One hundred and tairty-seven permits were issued by Building Inspector Shaver in the month, and of these nearly nine-tenths were for either new houses and bungalows, or for additions to or improvements of residential property.

The total amount of building represented by these permits was $154,-168.

Of building permits issued last week those authorizing improvements to cost $1000, or over, were:

Hotel Pasadena, Fair Oaks avenue and Washington street, alterations to building, $1000.

Ottie Jones Baird, No. 526 Galena avenue, frame bungalow, $2000.

Mary V. Skillman, No. 1808 Morton avenue, $1200.

J. K. Ott Construction Company, No. 1195 South Marengo avenue, twenty feet by twenty feet frame and corrugated iron building, $1000.

Fred Hill, No. 33 North Wilson nue, eight-room frame bungalow, $2500.

F. E. Day, No. 656 Oakland avenue, eight-orom frame bungalow, $5000.

George Helfman, No. 948 Topeka street, six-room frame bungalow and garage, $2000.

SCHOOL PROPERTY BOUGHT.

Last week, the Board of Education authorized the purchase of a site for the proposed new Altadena school. It is the property of F. E. Austin, and the purchase price is $6000. The site is at the northwest corner of Rose avenue and Palm street.

The board has also purchased a lot a quarter of an acre in extent that adjoins the northwest corner lot at Colorado street and Allen avenue. The district has owned the latter property for several years. The seller is the firm of J. H. Woodworth & Son, and the consideration was $1200. This gives the district a two-acre tract at this location. It is proposed soon to erect upon it, a new school to relieve the congestion at the Lamanda Park, Grant and Jefferson schools.

A row of stores along the Los Robles avenue side of the Hotel Maryland, with entrances both from the street, and from the hotel building, is the latest improvement under way at the hostelry. A corridor will lead from the stores directly to the hotel lobby. The arcade, as it will be, is to be ready for occupancy by December 15, it is announced. A drug store will occupy the corner room, and there will be manicuring and hair-dressing parlors, barber, tailor, and other shops.

BIG DEAL IS RUMORED.

According to a report current in the city last week, it is not improbable that Pasadena capitalists may soon purchase the 4000-acre strip of land that belongs to the Hellman estate at Cucamonga. A plan is said to be on foot to take over this land, which has long been idle, subdivide it and put it under immediate cultivation. Residents of Upland and Cucamonga are much interested in the scheme.

A real estate deal is pending, which, if concluded, will make Dr. Charles H. Ward, president of the Ward Drug Company, owner of the James Smith residence, at No. 370 West Colorado street. This is one of the handsomest residences in the city. It is situated on the top of the hill south of the new Elks' home, and is one of Pasadena's show places. The consideration is understood to be in the neighborhood of $20,000.

The M. W. Davis Realty Company has moved into larger quarters at No. 38 Raymond avenue. The former office was at No. 17, the same street. F. S. Cutler and A. E. Pinkham have associated themselves with Davis in the new quarters.

Through the agency of Ernest H. Lockwood, C. C. Bragdon of No. 75 North Grand avenue last week sold to John P. Wilson, a well-known Chicago attorney who for some time past has made his home in Pasadena, a lot on the south side of Arlington drive adjoining the property upon which the purchaser's residence stands, at No. 400, the same street. The lot that last week changed hands has a frontage of nearly 100 feet on Arlington drive and a depth of 250 feet. The consideration was $12,000.

REPORT VALUABLE EXCHANGES.

James H. Ballagh & Son report the folowing recent exchanges: George E. Forrester of Pomona, excnanges a twenty-one-acre orange grove at Rialto, valued at $30,000, and a ten-room house, and two lots in Pomona, valued at $18,000, for a ten-room house at 1000 West Hollywood boulevard, owned by Ed. Waldron, and valued at $20,000, difference adjusted by mortgage. L. E. Loveland of Pomona exchanges an eignty-acre ranch in Sedwich county, Colorado, valued at $12,-000, for a ten-acre grove at Pomona, owned by John Sanderson, valued at $17,500. A. J. Little exchanges an eight-room house at Sixteenth and Oxford, valued at $8000, and three lots in Hollywood, valued at $4000, for a ten-acre grove at Riverside, valued at $14,000, and owned by G. Deuel. T. Carthright exchanges an improved 160 acres, in Delta county, Colorado, valued at $32,000, for an improved 138-acre ranch close to Riverside, valued at $45,000, and owned by F. Tutin; balance adjusted by mortgage. F. Fredericks exchanges a two-flat building on Ruth avenue, between Sixth and Seventh, valued at $10,-000, for a twelve-acre orange grove at Riverside, valued at $12,000, and owned by F. E. Miller. Fred Williams, recently of St. Paul, Minn., has bought, through the same agency, a twenty-seven-acre grove at Covina for $45,000 cash. The seller was H. Hoagg.

NEW TOWN ON MAP.

The town of Owensmouth, the second to be started in the Van Nuys-Lankershim lands, is about to be put on the map. Grading gangs have been sent out to cut the streets and construct the curbs, dividing the acreage into town lots. The date of the opening of this town has not been definitely set nor has any plan been made for its inaugural by either the Janss Investment Company or the Los Angeles Suburban Homes Company. The town site is larger than that of the town of Van Nuys, which received its initial impetus at an auction.

A STEP BACKWARD.

St. Louis Union Painters Compel Contractors to Stop Using the Economical Spraying Machines.

[The Mediator.] The erection of the World's Fair buildings in Chicago, and the difficulties with which the contractors were confronted in order to complete the structures in time for the opening, brought out a machine which was known as a spraying machine. This, on rough work, will do the work of eight or ten men. Since that time the use of the spraying machines on rough work has become more or less universal. But in St. Louis recently the painters demanded the abolition of the spraying machines and threatened a strike, which would tie up the entire building industry of St. Louis. On September 21, they succeeded in enforcing their mandate upon the Master Painters' Association, which agreement specifies that spraying machines be discontinued and that painters be allowed to leave any job where independent employers use machines regardless of ratification by trade affiliation.

The futility of such tactics on the part of labor is self-evident. The fact that the master painters of St. Louis have agreed to this possibly may seem like a victory for the narrow policy of the union. But the ultimate outcome of this condition is bound to prove disastrous, not only to the union, but to the master painters themselves. Matters will go on peaceably for a time, but sooner or later the independent contractors will be called upon to bid for new work and the contractors figuring on the use of spraying machines will secure the contracts.

The newspaper reports state there are three thousand journeymen painters in St. Louis, 50 per cent. of whom belong to the painters' union, the others being known as independents. When the independent painters and the independent contractor, through the use of the spraying machine, enter into the controversy, the futility of the tactics of the painters' union will be demonstrated and those who adhere to such tactics are bound to suffer.

Back to the First Name.

[Louisville Courier Journal:] "Well, well!" said the man who had wandered back to the old village. "So the Eagle House is still the Eagle House. No change after twenty years."

"There have been a few changes," responded the oldest inhabitant. "Since you've been gone the hotel has been respectively the Grand Central, the Grand Union, the Grand Junction, the Great Northern, the Great Southern, the Imperial, the Regal, the Empire, the Regent and the Mansion House. She's just started around the circuit for the second time."

ACQUIRES VALLEY ACRES.

Another pretentious residence is promised the Van Nuys-Lankershim section through a purchase of ten acres on the boulevard through that acreage by J. W. Holehan, a resident of Monrovia. Holehan is a brother of the Monrovia potato "king," who has also purchased in the valley, and a son-in-law of Judge Brennan, who had bought there. Mr. Holehan's ten acres adjoin those of Judge Brennan. He will have his home under way within the next few days. The house will cost upwards of $3000 and will be of the country estate type.

ORDER TONS OF STEEL.

Over a quarter of a million pounds of steel for the framework of the new thirteen-story skyscraper of the Los Angeles Investment Company at Eighth street and Broadway have been ordered from Toledo, O., and the mills there have started a first shipment of 73,300 pounds for the preliminary work. This initial shipment includes thirty-two grillage beams and thirty-one steel plates. The grillage beams are the steel columns buried in the grounds on a concrete base to form the sub-support. Above them is more concrete work and then on top of this the steel plates on which the tall columns of the building have their support.

VAN NUYS-LANKERSHIM SALES.

Frank Miller, a Los Angeles real estate operator, last week purchased ten acres of the Van Nuys-Lankershim lands in the San Fernando Valley. The tract is near the boulevard. Walter Hanson, another purchaser, acquired two ten-acre tracts.

Alfred Cutts, a wealthy Boston man, was another of the week's buyers. The sales were made by the Janss Investment Company.

per production was an increase of about 500,000 pounds.

The Copper Queen and Calumet and Arizona properties for the past few years have been more or less troubled with gas in some of the workings, and a number of drifts have been temporarily abandoned and bulkheaded for that reason alone. Steps now are being taken to re-enter the danger zone and the management of the Calumet and Arizona is considering ways and means for fighting the invisible foe. This probably will be accomplished by better ventilation, thus rendering available the mineral treasure of some of the best ground within the mine.

At the Mascot mine at Dos Cabezas, 125 miners are employed, under ideal labor conditions. Most of the work is upon development, though a smelter site has been surveyed and plans have been made for suitable reduction works, as well as for the establishment of a town. The property is owned by a California corporation, in which ex-Gov Gillette is a prominent member.

CHALETS UNDER WAY.

The McCarthy company has commenced the construction of several new bungalows in its Main Street Villa Tract, which lies between Main and San Pedro streets in the city. They will be built on the Swiss chalet bungalow style, after plans furnished by Henry L. Wilson.

COTTAGE CHANGES HANDS.

Mrs. Edna V. Cooper has bought of Mrs. C. A. Creasinger a six-room cottage on lot 50x154 feet in size, on the north side of West Twenty-fourth street between Main and Grand avenue. The consideration is reported at $4500. The sale was made through the agency of W. L. Elder.

LANKERSHIM ACRES.

The Patton and Longley Company report sales in Lankershim Acres as follows: A. Cameron, one acre, $400; J. C. Dalier, two acres, $1200; R. W. Playter, two acres, $1300; Paul Winzel, one acre, $650; Ross Sampson, one acre, $750; J. A. Palmer, one acre, $675; S. L. Harrison, one acre, $675; J. A. Scott, five acres, $4250; Sarah J. Doings in California Oil Fields.

Kern County.

OIL OPERATORS AGAINST BOOZE.

Aided Drys in Winning Fight in Kern Fields.

Elk Hills Anticline Seen in Bellridge District.

Midway Syndicate Brings in Big Gusher Well.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

BAKERSFIELD, Nov. 3.—An interesting fact in connection with the recent local option campaign in Kern county is that practically all of the larger oil companies were active supporters of the movement to close the saloons, and in all of the oil fields except Lost Hills the vote showed a dry majority. The two precincts that take in the Kern River oil field gave a more than two to one majority against the saloons. Both Maricopa precincts went dry by substantial majorities, and so did Midway precinct No. 1. That Midway No. 2 gave a big majority for the saloons is undoubtedly due to the fact that the residents of Boust City and its celebrated "whiskey" row voted there, and so did a considerable number of voters who properly belonged in the city of Taft.

The Union Oil Company was especially active against the saloons, but the Associated, Standard K. T. & O. and the Santa Fe Railroad's oil department also aided the drys with money and influence. Antelope precinct, which included the town of Lost Hills and the Lost Hills oil field, gave sixty-three of its seventy votes for the saloons, but the Lost Hills field is a very different proposition both socially and industrially from the older producing territory such as Kern River and Sunset.

That the Bellridge district is only a continuation of the Elk Hills anticline and that the formation in the former lies 2000 or 3000 feet nearer the surface than the corresponding strata in the Elk Hills, is the theory of a number of the oil men interested in the Bellridge country. The Bellridge district is flat, or the incline is even and gentle, and there is no surface sign of the ridge of earth that forms the Elk Hills. It is the belief of the men referred to, however, that the erosion in ages past may have washed down the surface formation over the Bellridge to the extent indicated, carrying the sand and clay down to fill in the valleys that formerly lay between the Elk and Lost Hills anticlines and still farther to the east.

The fact on which this interesting theory is based is that when the drill has gone down between one and two thousand feet in the Elk Hills it seems to be in about the same place, so far as the stratification is concerned, as the very beginning of a well in the Bellridge district. It is this great amount of surplus drilling that is discouraging development in the Elk Hills, while the activity in the Bellridge is increasing. Prospects in the latter field continue very bright, and but for the fact that the land there is practically all in large holdings and not for sale, there would be a boom of considerable proportions.

Practically the same condition exists on the North McKittrick front around the Mahaska Oil Company's property. The Mahaska is owned largely by Pasadena and Los Angeles people, who are interested in the road oil business, and it is reported that a pipe line is to be laid from the property to the McKittrick railroad and the product piped to tank cars and hauled to Southern California for use in road making. The management of the Mahaska has been taken over by C. C. Harris, an experienced and successful oil operator of the Southern fields, and the well, which has been giving much trouble, on account of water, is to be either finished in good shape or plugged and abandoned. The water trouble is believed to be due in large part to the use of inferior casing. A deep stratum of oil sand was tapped, and so productive has it proven that the production so far has been obtained by pumping far above the point at which the casing was perforated. The showing made under these circumstances, with water in the well, and the lower part of the casing full of sand, is so good that the company, which, heretofore has considered its North McKittrick property lightly, is going at its development in earnest. If the present well cannot be satisfactorily completed, the water will be shut off by plugging and a new well will be drilled.

The Universal Oil Company's well No. 4, on section 32, 26-21, in the Lost Hills field, came in on Wednesday as a gusher, and at last report today it was still flowing at the rate of 5000 barrels. The well is only 840 feet in depth, a little more than twenty feet deeper than the first Universal gusher on section 32. The oil is of the same light gravity, about 31 degrees. This makes nine producing wells for the Universal, and it is claimed the production will run all the way from 250 barrels per day on the pump to the 5000 barrels the latest gusher is flowing.

Phelps & Cheny are down about 1200 feet on section 28, 26-21, and expect to go about 2200 feet to get the oil.

The Esperanza Consolidated's well No. 1, which has just been completed on section 6, 11-23, is flowing at the rate of 1000 barrels per day. It is 2710 feet in depth and was drilled entirely with a rotary.

The Midway syndicate has brought in a 10,000-barrel, flowing well on section 4, 32-23, at a depth of 3425 feet. The well is allowed to flow at the rate stated for a short time when the discharge pipe was reduced to one inch, and the production was shut down to 2000 barrels per day. At the lesser rate it is expected the flow will continue without diminishing for some time to come. The oil, which is of light gravity, will go to the Standard.

Red Phelps, a Coalinga operator, who is here today, says that he considers the oil prospects in the valley very good, although production and development are both a little slow at present. The Coalinga oil men have closed down their wells to about one-third of their possible production, and drilling is not nearly so brisk as a year ago, of course. The oil men are in good spirits, however, and look forward confidently to better prices within the next twelve months.

The Kern Trading and Oil Company, which was reported some time ago to have shut down at Coalinga, has resumed its usual activity.

The ancient theory that the oil is always lighter in gravity as the drill goes deeper has been exploded again by the experience in the Maricopa National's well No. 2, in which a coarse gravel stratum was found at 1600 feet containing a thick, black, ten-gravity oil that rose in the casing and oozed slowly over the top. This oil was found beneath an oil of much lighter gravity, and the Maricopa National plugged the bottom stratum and pulled back to the upper sand. The deeper oil would make the finest of road material, but it is so thick that the production, either from the flow or aided by a pump, probably would be small.

SOUTH NEEDS THE OIL.

STORAGE IN THE NORTH.

Sixty million barrels of oil produced in California this year and only 820,000 barrels in storage, south of Kern county; in short, a supply of fuel oil that does not equal the demand for thirty days consumption. If the city of Los Angeles only had three weeks' supply of water, it would create a panic as soon as the true condition was realized. There is not a section of the United States that uses and needs the same quantity of fuel oil that has as inadequate means of supply. Street and contract work is constantly inconvenienced and delayed and fuel users generally face at all times a shortage that would mean great loss to them.

The production for the first nine months of the year 1910 was 58,218,612 barrels, while the production for the same period in the year 1911, was 61,804,322, an increase of 3,585,710 barrels.

The consumption for the first nine months of the year 1910 was 48,783,529 barrels, and the consumption for the same period in the year 1911 was 52,934,686, an increase of 4,151,157 barrels.

This indicates that consumption only gained upon production a total of 565,447 barrels for the first nine months of 1911 over 1910. This shows that the consumption is increasing at the rate of 7.8 per cent. and the production is increasing at the rate of 5.8 per cent., or a net increase in favor of production of only 2 per cent. This percentage of increase is so small that unless more pipe lines are constructed, it will be many months before the present stagnation and depression in oil circles is relieved.

A NEW NERVINE.

An Eastern Professor Who Took Exercises for His Face Developed Into an Optimist.

[Toledo Capital:] A professor in one of the eastern colleges once told of a nervous breakdown that he had experienced some time before.

"How did you get over it?" I asked.

He smiled. "I went to several of the nerve specialists," he said, "and I didn't succeed in getting any help. Then by chance I heard of a woman, not a physician, who had studied nervous diseases for years and had been very successful in treating them. Some friends persuaded me to go and see her.

"She began by making me learn to smile. You see I had got down to such depths that I couldn't smile. It seemed as if I had lost all power over the muscles of my face. They had become set. They not only expressed the depression that I felt, but they actually added to it.

"I obeyed instructions, I went home and for half an hour I stood before the mirror and I practiced smiling. At first I had a hard time twisting my mouth into a smile. In spite of myself, the muscles would sag. Then I saw that the muscles were actually fighting against me. I kept on trying and at the end of half an hour I succeeded in making a pretty good imitation of a smile. That exercise I continued several days till I had overcome the rigidity of those facial muscles and learned to control them. After a time I found I could smile almost at will. When I began to be depressed I would smile. At the same time I would resist the depressing thoughts. The combination of resisting and the smiling would save me from falling into depression."

RESULT OF RECLAMATION.

Over a Million Acres of Land Irrigated Producing Twenty Millions of Crops.

[Consular Reports:] Progress has been rapid and the activities of the bureau have been extended to twenty-eight projects, which to date involve the expenditure of approximately $59,580,000 in the United States proper.

In the eight years of its work the service has built 5967 miles of canals, many of which carry whole rivers. It has excavated nineteen miles of tunnels and built 24,225 canal structures and 2192 bridges. It has completed three of the highest dams in the world. Its excavations of rock and earth amount to the enormous total of 73,666,000 cubic yards. Its roads have a total length of 570 miles; telephones, 1694 miles; levees, seventy-five miles. It has purchased 905,682 barrels of cement and has manufactured in its own mill 340,000 barrels.

As a result of its work water is available for 1,086,000 acres of land. The gross value of crops produced on the lands irrigated by the government projects in 1910 was $20,000,000. As a result of the work of the government it is estimated that land values have increased more than $105,800,000.

Approximately 14,000 families are now residing on farms which are being watered by the government canals. Not less than 25,000 people have been added to the population of the cities, town and villages as a direct result of the government work.

Coffee Drinking Defended.

[New York Tribune:] Drink your cup of breakfast coffee this morning without fear. At a symposium of the College of Physicians of Philadelphia stories were related of experiments which exploded the theory long believed in medical circles that caffein, the basic stimulant in coffee, is deleterious to health. Whatever ill is caused by intemperate coffee drinking, the physicians concluded, does not result from the caffein therein contained. Experiments conducted both by psychologists and by physiologists were described to prove that caffein stimulates the muscles, the nerves and the mental organs, without creating a secondary depression common to most stimulants. Physiological experiments were described by Dr. H. C. Wood, Jr., to show that caffein did not affect deleteriously the muscular and circulatory systems. On the contrary, said Dr. Wood, caffein made the muscles more active and more work possible.

Coalinga.

COALINGA WILL MAKE A FIGHT.

Oil Men Co-operate Against Water Menace.

Deal for Oil Properties Not Yet Consummated.

Canadian-Coalinga Expects Sizeable Gusher.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

COALINGA, Nov. 3.—A large number of oil men met at the Growlers' Club yesterday afternoon to take further action in regard to the underground water legislation which is to be brought up at the special session of the Legislature. Carl Baker acted as chairman of the meeting.

The report of Delegates R. Baker and E. R. Baker, that the Governor is willing to place the matter in his call for a special session, providing he can be assured that the oil men will agree upon a law so that the session will not be held up or delayed, was made to the operators present. It was pointed out that whatever is done must be without opposition, otherwise no action will be taken upon it. With this end in view three petitions were drawn up and have been submitted to oil men and business men, the petitions asking that the Governor include the matter in the call. These petitions were mailed to Gov. Johnson this evening and will occupy the attention of a committee appointed by the Governor, which meets at Sacramento tomorrow.

Another meeting of oil men has been called for next Saturday afternoon, at the Growlers' Club, and at that time the different ideas will be considered with a view of incorporating them in the law to be submitted to the Legislature. It is believed by those who have given the matter the most attention, that a bill can be drawn which will allow a commissioner latitude enough to protect the field from water wells, and which, at the same time, will not be opposed by anyone.

The Hammon deal for the purchase of ten producing oil companies in this field, has again been postponed, but the terms of the postponement have not yet been made public. It was ascertained today that Mr. Hammon had asked for another extension of time, although no reasons were given out. It was believed by oil men that the deal will eventually go through, and that it is of such magnitude that a few delays are generally to be expected in such a transaction. It is also believed that the present postponement comes from the inability of the English underwriters to raise the necessary money in the time allowed, on account of the present unsettled conditions in England.

It is also said that the modified agreements, since the first papers were drawn, will have to be ratified by the stockholders of the various companies, although this idea is scouted in some quarters as it is believed the directors of corporations have the right to dispose of property, and give title to it, without the sanction of the stockholders. In most of the properties involved in the deal the directors were given permission to sell, and the terms to be settled by the directors.

Work was started this morning in drilling through the cement on the Canadian Coalinga well, 8, 21-15, and preparations have been made to care for a large production which is expected from the showing made when the sand was first drilled into.

When the well was drilled into the sand several blowouts occurred in spite of the hole being full of water, and it was feared that they could not get the eight-inch casing in the hole. It was finally bridged, however, and the eight-inch cemented off. The water was shut off in the ten-inch casing, and the smaller pipe was put in to avoid a possible collapse of the larger.

Oil men who have watched operations in that part of the South Field predict that a gusher will be brought in when the cement is drilled through and the bit again enters the oil sand. The gas pressure was tremendous when the sand was first tapped, and hundreds of people went out to the property to see the oil flowing over the top of the casing through 2800 feet of water in the ten-inch casing. It is claimed that this was the best showing in the Coalinga field, and indicates that a gusher will be brought in within the next few days. Manager Thompson has secured Drillers Charles Reynolds and H. H. Williams to complete the well, and has completed the erection of two 5000-barrel tanks in anticipation of a big producer.

AIR COMPRESSORS.

FOR PALMER UNION.

The Palmer Union Oil Company is putting a high pressure air compressor on well No. 3 to open up the gas channels and make the well flow like the other neighboring wells. This well is heavy in gas pressure and has flowed at times but the sands loosen too often to get a steady oil and gas flow by use of the standard cylinder pump. The installation of the air compressor will soon clear the well and make it flow the same as the Union Bell well, 400 feet south of No. 3, which has been flowing for some time over 3000 barrels per day, being almost wholly free from sand or impurities of any kind.

Palmer Union No. 4, which has been flowing over 600 barrels per day for some weeks, wil lalso be put on the compressor to clear it of sand and increase its flow. The other wells on the property are producing steadily as usual.

The grading of the new railroad extension for Sisquoc is nearly completed, and the rails are bing laid on the finished portion of the grade. Before the close of this month trains will be running right into Palmer Camp.

News Notes and Personals.

Gen. R. H. Peeler, H. H. Welch and R C. Baker of Coalinga left the other day for a visit to the Lost Hills oil fields, making the trip in an automobile

James Robertson of the Lucille Oil Company, operating in the Coalinga field, has returned to camp after a business trip to San Francisco. The Lucille is one of the properties that W. P. Hammon of San Francisco is after.

Timothy Spellacy, who returned recently from a two months' trip to eastern cities, spent a few days last week in the Coalinga field inspecting the Premier property, of which he is one of the principal owners.

Roy Richards of the Pacific States Petroleum Company, of the Coalinga field, has returned from a few weeks spent at Tonopah, Nev., where he has business interests.

Benjamin Youken, general superintendent of shops for the Union Tool Company of Los Angeles, returned the other day from Coalinga.

O. Fowler of Fresno, interested in the Ward and Seneca Oil properties of the Coalinga field, has been spending a few days inspecting the camp.

C. A. Hively, superintendent in the Coalinga field for the Kern Trading and Oil Company, has returned from Bakersfield, where he was called on business for the company.

An Old Settler.

[Topeka Capital:] A walnut log in a fine state of preservation was found 350 feet under the surface of the ground on a farm in McPherson county. C. W. Bachelor, a farmer, was drilling a well when the log was encountered. The tree, more than a foot in diameter, is supposed to have grown on the banks of the big sea or lake that once covered Central Kansas.

The only part of this lake remaining is the basin west of McPherson. The tree had not become fossilized but was just as natural wood as though it had fallen yesterday. It must have taken thousands of years, local scientists say, for the 350 feet of soil, sand, and shale to accumulate above the log.

EDISON IS STRONG FOR BACK TO FARM.

Inventor Declares Rural Resident Has Attained Sum of Happiness.

KLAGENFURT, Austria, Sept. 10.—Thomas A. Edison, who is enjoying a motor tour through Europe, has found a perfet balance between city and country life in Austria. It moves him to enthusiasm.

"I believe in rural life as the basis of human happiness," said the great inventor. "Every man ought to have an acre of land, with three-quarters of it devoted to the intensive cultivation of garden truck. That would provide sufficient food and make the owner independent.

"That is my ideal of civilization; I would have people live on small farms instead of surrounding themselves with artificial urban conditions."

Of course, it is too bad that the naughty, naughty head of socialism should rear itself at this particular time and distract the attention which our own business really needs. Still, with respect to everybody, it seems to me that we are unduly excited, and I believe that it will take a greater cause than either Harriman or Alexander to seriously impair the prosperity of Los Angeles city which, in addition to all of the other great advantages, is the logical trading center of over 600,000 square miles of great and rapidly developing territory, and the mecca for all time to come of the wealthy tourist who wants to bring himself and his money where life can be lived under the most comfortable and happy climatic conditions.

And, after all, Harriman, who admittedly polled his full strength, only received 20,000 votes out of a total registration of 83,000—less than one in four—which does not seem to me to make his election so very certain. While I am for Alexander myself, believe the situation was correctly summed up some time ago by the immortal Mr. Dooley, who, speaking of a previous election and other candidates said—

"The country would be safe with either, or neither, or both of them."

My own advice is—be calm. Don't let anything happen to disturb your equanimity or faith in Southern California and BUY REAL ESTATE!

Van Nuys and Lankershim Lands

Nowhere else in the world will you find a large body of magnificent land, immediately adjacent to a city of over 400,000 population, that can be purchased at farming land prices.

Anywhere else than Southern California the Van Nuys and Lankershim lands would be considered suburban home property and subdivided and sold for that purpose at prices ranging from $1000 to $5000 per acre.

The electric road will soon be completed and it will take no longer to reach the center of Los Angeles from Van Nuys and Lankershim lands than it does from any of the new city subdivisions. Yet, in face of all these advantages, an acre of Van Nuys and Lankershim lands can be purchased at half the price you pay for a stuffy city lot.

Sacramento has less than one-eighth the population of Los Angeles, but the El Paso Rancho—located in relation to Sacramento, about as Van Nuys and Lankershim lands are to Los Angeles—has been subdivided and sold in the last year or two at prices ranging from $250 to $1000 per acre.

In Ventura County they get $500 and $600 per acre—for no better land to raise beans and beets on.

Think of it, the finest land in the world with the best trolley transportation, right at the gates of a city of 400,000 inhabitants—that will soon have a million population—selling at less per acre than comparable land brings in Ventura for farming purposes.

Any man is blind who cannot see the future outcome of this property.

Anyone is foolish who has money to invest and passes up an opportunity of this sort.

I have carefully looked over the unsold lands of the company and know of one or two exceptional buys which I would be glad to show.

Prices are advancing and will continue to advance—why pay more later?

West Riverside Estate

The West Riverside Estate, a famous English holding, located on the main line of the Salt Lake Railroad, five miles from the center of Riverside, has been subdivided and is now on sale.

The orange groves on the estate—amounting to some 625 acres, which are noted throughout Southern California—range in age from 3 to 12 years, and are being offered at prices from $900 to $1500 per acre, on the unprecedentedly easy terms of one-fifth cash, balance eight equal annual installments, which practically permit the purchaser to pay for the property out of its own earnings inside the purchase time. The water right is perhaps the best and cheapest in Southern California.

If you are looking for an orange grove with unexcelled suburban home advantages at a low price and on easy terms, you should investigate the estate at once.

Today I want to particularly call your attention to the younger orchards located on the foothill slopes in what is known as Block 6 of the West Riverside Estate.

These groves are 3 and 4 years old—about half Navels, half Valencias. I raised the trees in the nursery, budded them myself and nothing but the finest selected stock was permitted to be used, which insures the very highest returns per acre when the trees come into bearing.

Experts who have examined the 1[illegible] acres, comprising the young groves above referred to, have assured me that they are the finest in California. Really, they should be seen to be appreciated.

In addition to the investment feature, this particular portion of the estate is so located as to command the finest view obtainable in the entire Riverside section, and for that reason this portion of the estate will ultimately command an extra premium for suburban home purposes.

You can buy these orchards in lots from approximately five acres and upwards—price $900 to $1000 per acre, on the regular terms of one-fifth down, balance eight annual installments.

We have issued a little booklet entitled, "Showing How $3000 Will Grow to $15,000 in Eight Years," which not only describes the planted portions of the estate but furnishes much authoritative data on the orange industry.

If you are interested, write for booklet referred to, or, better still, call and arrange to inspect the property personally.

Two Specials

No. 1.

A $12,500 orange grove for $[illegible]

A business man of this city is in a rather uncomfortable position regarding ready money. In fact, he must raise a certain sum in the next few days, and to do this he must sacrifice some property.
He has instructed me to offer his [illegible] acre full bearing grove at a price so low that any man, with the necessary money, would buy on sight.
The orchard is in full bearing—[illegible] Washington navels—has ample water, and is located in a frostless section where living conditions are very desirable.
Ordinarily $1250 per acre would be considered dirt cheap for the property, but if taken within the next few days, I can deliver it at $850.00 per acre.
This is the biggest little snap on the market today.

No. 2.

45 acres worth $15,750 for $10,[illegible]

25 acres alfalfa, 2-year old stand.
20 acres unimproved citrus land.
32 horse power pumping plant; pumps 50 inches.
Located on the Santa Fe and within one mile of
A town of 8000 population. 50 miles from Los Angeles, and in the orange belt.
This land is worth $350 per acre if it is worth a cent, as land adjacent to this is being sold now for from $350 to $[illegible] per acre.
The 25 acres alfalfa land is a light sandy loam soil, very retentive of moisture.
The 20 acres of citrus land, which lies immediately adjacent on the north, is high above the surrounding country—on a what might be termed a bench—on a southerly slope, and would make an ideal orange or lemon grove.
This is one of the few properties in California suitable in the highest sense for suburban home purposes, and, in addition, a combination citrus and alfalfa proposition.

PHOENIX RACERS START FOR FARAWAY DESERT GOAL

Stripped to the Frames and Primed for Battle Royal. Sixteen Fast Motor Cars Are Sent Away on the Greatest Automobile Road Race Ever Planned in the West. Thousands See the First Skirmish Through City.

BY BERT C. SMITH.

TEN seconds, five seconds; one, two, three, four, go! This was the signal last night handed to each driver, as the snappy motors were herded to the starting line in the Phoenix road race. Thousands of excited spectators thronged the course and jammed against each other in an effort to catch a glimpse of the strained faces of the men at the wheels of the stripped racers.

Tense and alert, the men came to the line. Every machine looked spick and span after a wash. The race was just beginning. It was to be a battle royal with 542 miles of the worst course on earth ahead of them. The men were ready and willing to send the cars away. They were eager for the word from Starter Eddie Maier. It was a dramatic setting with the staccato of the mighty engines as music for the throng.

One by one the cars were rolled to the line. There was a moment of excitement, which was a little more thrilling than the few which had preceded the actual start. Then the clutch was slipped and the little red racer went slipping over the smooth streets. The cars seemed almost human. The racing engines seemed to know just what was demanded of them. A task never handed to a car before was outlined for the racers. Not one balked.

They were in line long before the starting hour. The drivers had rested comfortably. It was like the group of gladiators in the Roman arena. They were lined along South Spring street for more than a block and the immense crowd paid them due homage. It was the parade before the fight and the arena was the wilderness. Was ever a race pulled off on a stranger course?

RED RACER.

Though a small car started first, a larger car was sent away to follow the Maxwell. Just behind the little red racer, which Clarence Smith is piloting, came Bill Tremaine on the Pope-Hartford, the Phoenix entry which looks so good to so many in Arizona. Bill was to start for that big $7000 prize. He wanted to win for the sake of his pretty daughter, Flossie. It meant much to the gritty Pope man.

All of his heart and soul has been thrown into this race, and when Tremaine came to the line his face looked worse than the face of Jim Jeffries when the former world champion was taking the count at Reno. Bill had the bit in his teeth. His car is two years old. He is racing against the latest models. Around the frame the Phoenix man had wrapped several pieces of baling wire. He patted the old battle-scarred veteran and then stepped on the throttle. He was away.

Then came the favorite. He was given a rousing cheer. Ralph Hamlin and the air-cooled Franklin looked good to thousands. The only car in the Phoenix race that is air-cooled proved a favorite right from the start. Hamlin was cool. He has started twice before. He was calm and looked like a winner, but he had that same tense look that characterized the first and second starters.

Close behind the Franklin was Roger Stearns with the Stoddard-Dayton. This handsome fifty-horse-power beauty has jumped into a high place as a favorite. Stearns was excited. He showed it as he nervously gripped the big steering wheel. The snappy Stoddard almost leaped out from under Stearns as he sent the car away. Then he cooled down and decided to abide by his promise to keep to the speed limit of twelve miles.

ROGER READY.

What will Stearns do? This is a question many are asking themselves. He is driving a big car for the first time in a road race. The Stoddard is a leviathan compared to the midget Ford. He tore a wheel off the little midget last year. If he turns a corner with the Stoddard like he did with the Ford it may mean a casket for Roger. He is out after every prize and said so before he started.

Then one by one they came to the line, until Harvey Herrick on the National Blue Baby appeared. The crowd did not take the cue until someone yelled "Oh you Harvey." Then the slogan was taken up in earnest, and the National was given the right kind of a sendoff. He starts as second choice in this great race, and Herrick may be able to win again this year as handily as he did in the last race.

Another spectacular start was that of the Cadillac, with Bill Bramlette at the wheel. This little thirty-horse-power racer, which has smashed so many road records, has been hurled into a race which will test every nut, bolt and spring in the car. Bramlette knows the road. He has tried the car out faithfully. Last night he would not speak. His face almost cracked as he tried to smile. It was a sickly grin. He was too much in earnest.

When Bramlette was almost at the line he looked back over his shoulder toward the Cole. Was he trying to see how Jenkins was acting. Many thought he was, but Bramlette is not afraid and was not scared last night. He knew, however, that Jenkins was only waiting for the chance to send the Cole "Thirty" after the Cadillac.

COLE BARKS.

Came the Cole to the line with the motor barking spitefully. It was like a hound in full cry. The game was ahead. The black Cadillac had streaked away and was out on the Whittier road. It was time for Johnny to leave. He could hardly wait for the word. At last it came, and the Cole slipped over the pavement in its wild chase after the Cadillac. Locked in a fierce road duel these two cars were sent away, and the race was on in an instant after the two had left the line. Jenkins has announced his intention of trying to catch the Cadillac. Bramlette had only smiled when he said the Cole would never see him. The cars were started with the drivers defiant and reckless.

FIAT GOES.

Teddy Tetzlaff, on the Fiat, was one of the spectacular starters. As his high-powered forty-five came snorting to the line the car looked for all the world like a battleship. Its gray sides looked formidable and the man at the wheel had a fierce look. He was captain of the fastest

DOPED FOR SAND BATTLE.

Phoenix Road-race Cars Are Lined Up.

Franklins First Choice of Auto Experts.

National and Sloddard are Strong In Running.

WITH SIXTEEN fast cars entered in a race from Los Angeles to Phoenix the motorists of Southern California have a three-days' wonder to keep them busy. The Franklin, with Ralph Hamlin at the wheel, started last night as favorite in the race. This is a triumph for the air-cooled car, but it also places a responsibility on Ralph Hamlin and his mechanician, Guy Irwin.

Not a driver in this big road race has worked harder or more faithfully than Hamlin. He has been out day after day, cutting a pace that would do credit to a Vanderbilt driver. He is ready to take every chance possible today and will drive through Devil's Canyon faster perhaps than is conducive to safety.

The air-cooled car was shipped here for this desert race direct from the Franklin factory at Syracuse. H. H. Franklin, the factory chief, has taken a keen interest in the Phoenix road race and when Hamlin captured second place last year he was ready to begin to build the car that he expects will win this time. Ralph started last night with the determination of making the greatest drive of his career.

Not far from the Franklin, and cutting out a clip that may send him into first place, was Harvey Herrick on the National "Blue Baby." This fast car jumped into a second choice position and many believe it will be the first machine into Phoenix. The National is fast. It is stripped for a race that will be trying enough, but which will be to the liking of Herrick, who is now a real desert rat.

Harvey has practised faithfully. He knows how to work hard and is

Roger Stearns at the wheel and Bill Pratt with him. Stearns looks good to several. On the right the Cadillac, the favorite in the thirty-horse-power class, with Bill Bramlette at the wheel and Al Jorgsen with him. Below is the National, favored by many, with Harvey Herrick, who won last year, at the wheel and Bill Swansen, his mechanician.

DON LEE AND JOE OLLIER ARE THE END MEN.

All the Way from Nineteen to Twenty-five Hours Is the Figure Doped for the Sand Battle, in Which the Sixteen Cars Are Racing to the Goal.

Sixteen enthusiastic dealers have doped the time it will take the racers to reach Phoenix. The lowest guess is made by Don Lee, who expects the winning car to make the 542 miles in 19 hours. The longest time limit is handed out by Joe Ollier, who thinks it will take 25 hrs. 30m.. for the winning car.

BLOOMIN' BUDS FOR FAST POPE.

Father and Son in Fierce Desert Dash.

Would Win Trip to Paris for Sister Flossie.

Devil's Canyon No Terror for Tremaines.

BY GRACE KINGSLEY.

"No, we're not the come-on car; we start second," said the wiry little Bill Tremaine, as he affectionately swiped a bit of dust off the rear guards of his machine, as a mother would flick superfluous powder from daughter's nose at her coming-out party.

Tremaine is the star performer of Phoenix, on the Pope-Hartford gasoline wagon. In short, he's the only man there who essayed to take the chance of a moonlight rush through the Devil's Canyon, that eerie bit of landscape in the San Diego Mountains, where all sorts of spooky things may happen, from close communion with a rattler's nest to a little flip-flop into a twenty-five-foot gully. But fifteen men good and true of the northland are in the race with him for that seven thousand.

"I've been dolling up the machine till she shines like a nigger's heel, and of course the road to San Diego is as easy running as molasses," he says.

A wiry, gritty man, with all the pep of the business in him, is Senor Tremaine, with a bright, clear eye, and a steady grip on the wheel, a modern Tam o' Shanter, with the will to ride through the gullies and chasms of California and Arizona in the dead of night.

I asked him about the dangers of the trip.

"Oh, of course, I may be where the flowers are blooming, and I can't pick any, after this race, but—as Shakespeare or somebody says—'Nothing's any good that's any fun, and nothing's any fun that's any good;' and though it's no good to be dead, it's fun to race. And I've got to mussup that record, you know. So tonight I get back into my cage and hike for the desert. I'm never so happy as when I'm racing, with the keen air whistling in my ears.

"I'm not afraid I can't fly some streamers on the Arizona roads, but in the canyon it's an even break whether a gully or a rattler gets you. This is the busy season in Rattlesnakeville, you know.

ON BROADWAY.

"On the Arizona roads—which we know as you know the way down Broadway—that's where we hope to glom a few hours from our adversaries. The only trouble there is the rain. On our trip up it rained all the way to Yuma, and we had to put on the chains to keep from skidding into the eternal skidoo.

"The man we're most afraid of? Well, to be quite frank, Ralph Hamlin—air-cooled Ralph—in his Franklin."

Just then Ellery Tremaine, the son, sauntered in, dressed in his oil-stained khaki, to tell his father that something was which should not be, in connection with the machine. Ellery is his father's mechanician, and is a fresh-faced youth, with hair sunburned to meet his complexion, and with complexion browned to meet the color of his hair, and who is evidently as gritty as his father Bill.

Tremaine hurried away, to secure a spark plug and adjust the carburetor, or something like that ,and Master Ellery entertained me.

"Oh, mother's sitting up nights!" he exclaimed. "Why, she'll be worse than the kid at its first circus parade when we blow in. But I guess I'll have to wear violets, all right, or she'll never know me for the dirt. We reckon it will take fourteen hours from here to Yuma, where we sleep Sunday night, and start for Phoenix at 5 the next morning, where we hope to arrive about 1 o'clock Monday.

"But I'll tell you who'll do the Sister Anne act for fair. I'll bet that seven thousand looks like the biggest wad ever in captivity to my sister Florence. You know, if pa wins, she's to have a trip to Paris, with musical study trimmings. Otherwise—well, it's to the Normal for hers, with Buster and Mary Jane in the gloomy perspective.

"And my baby sister, 5 years old, is to have a model auto, infant-size, too."

"But yourself—what are you going to draw?"

"Me? Oh, I shall just go on with father in the business," he answered modestly. "You know father owns a big garage."

Nevertheless, looking into the honest blue eyes and at the wholesome make-up of the lad, one realizes there are good things ahead for him in life.

PET CHU CHU.

"This Pope-Hartford is father's pet chu-chu. It's the same we came in third with last year, but that was on account of the tires. Father has faith in her conversion. You see if he wins, this blue ribbon will boost his machine out of sight over all comers."

There is a comfy reflection for the racers in the fact that there is to be an autocar truck, stretcher and physician and nurse along. If a car gets the skid disorder, and chances to overturn—bing! A Red Cross nurse is instantly at your side, binding up your wounded wounds.

"While I'm not superstitious," said Tremaine, the elder, who had returned, "I've taken the whole carpenter shop along to ward off the evil eye, and I feel certain we'll make it all right."

So here's to the gritty Tremaines and to Sister Florence and gay Paree!

car in the race and had already won a world record. The race should be easy for him.

This high-powered machine sailed up to the line with the engines throbbing and with the wheels turning slowly in strong contrast to the way they were to whirl in so short a time. Teddy took the count and then shot away for First street. He grinned but looked sad. He was not the favorite, but was one of the high cards in the list of choices. He was satisfied to take his chance.

BUICK LAST.

The last car to leave proved the sensation for the crowd. Bill Ferguson on the Buick, the entry from Bisbee, was given a generous hand. He was prepared for a race and was chosen by many as the favorite. He was starting just where he desired to start. The tumult and the shouting was almost over when he came to the line. Fifteen cars were burning up the road ahead of him. He was ready to take his chance, and the clockers gave him the word.

Down the line of spectators, which had thinned since the first car started, went the Buick, in its battleship gray. The car was driven carefully. Bill is a careful driver on the city streets, but the desert is his home. He seemed to yearn for the sands of Mexico. The motor chugged with a gurgling moan. It was ready for the desert dash and Ferguson was ready for a supreme effort. The $1000 would not be decided until he reached San Diego. He went away with the smile of a Sphinx. He knew what he was doing and he did it just right.

Arizonans Have Nerve.

CASE CAR COVERS PHOENIX ROUTE DAY BEFORE START.

AFTER traveling through mud for 360 miles, from Phoenix to Yuma, where migration was almost impossible, W. F. Brong and R. W. Graeme reached Los Angeles yesterday in their Case car, No. 16, in the Los Angeles to Phoenix road race. This was just one day before the start of the big road race.

Four days of hard rains in Arizona have left the roads in bad condition and in order to get an idea of what they would run up against in their native State, the two Arizonans picked their way over the trail. They started Monday, and by slow degrees came to Los Angeles, making several stops on the road, a half-day was spent in El Centro, and another half-day in San Diego, where the two boys took notes which should help them in the race today.

The race will not be won until the last car is in Phoenix," said Graeme. "While the toughest traveling is in Mexico, between Cocopah and Andrade, the strip between Yuma and Phoenix will likely prove a sticker to several of the cars, especially to those whose drivers have not been over the road. Before the rains, the roads between the California border and the end of the road were in fine shape, but it is different now.

"However, the car that gets into the brush between Andrade and Cocopah will have things its own way for sixty miles at least. The brush is so thick the road is almost impassible, while there are large stumps on either side and a little swerve to left or right might mean the wreck of the car.

"Should a car break down in this path, all of the other cars will have to wait until it is ready to run again, or is out of the way, as it is impossible to get around a wrecked machine. In the mountain passes, the road is narrow and the higher side is next the mountain, so that if the car should skid it would drop to the bottom of the precipice, 1000 feet below.

"What I consider the most dangerous place is in Devil's Canyon. After a straightaway of forty miles on the top of a mesa, the road swerves to the right, around a sharp curve. Then it follows a sharp defile between immense rocks, and is so narrow that that going is particularly hazardous.

"At the end of the brush road in Mexico, one passes through a series of riverbeds where the sand is deep, and on account of the recent rains is treacherous. Our car sank into the mire until the axle and differential were buried in the sands. If the car had stopped for a second we would have had to dig our way out. If a machine in the race gets stuck good night for the man who follows. While it was a hard struggle for us to get through this time, we anticipate a much harder pull, as the road will be cut up by the other cars before we get there. We are No. 16, you know.

"The fastest racing will be between here and San Diego, as some of the drivers seem to have the idea that the car which reaches there first will get the $1000 purse. However, there is a provision that the car must reach Phoenix first, and we are going to make a hard run all the way through and will depend on getting to Phoenix rather than making a spurt to San Diego.

"In many places through San Diego county the roads are being built, and have been plowed for some distance. We took a careful survey of this territory and picked out our route on the way up here. As there will likely be nine or more cars ahead of us into San Diego, we expect to profit by their experience.

"We had intended to ship our car to Los Angeles, but upon reflection we decided to get a last look at the route before we made the final dash. We have profited by our experience and feel confident of winning."

The Case was overhauled yesterday and was ready for business twenty-four hours after they reached here. The run was made in slow time, as they watched the road closely.

IMPORTANT GATHERING.

The first trade-policy meeting of the United States Tire Company, since its organization, was held recently at the Hotel Astor in New York, when the concern called together all its branch managers and salesmen in the central and eastern districts. About 150 representatives of the company were present and the trade policies for the coming year were discussed.

The meeting was in charge of J. D. Anderson, general sales manager. The principal address was made by J. M. Gilbert, general manager, who outlined in detail the plans of the organization for taking care of the country's demands during the coming year. Addresses were also made by A. I. Philip, manager central district; O. S. Tweedy, manager eastern district; William MacMahon, chairman of the Factory Committee, and J. D. Anderson. Following the business session a luncheon was served.

GARFORD CARS NEAR PHOENIX.

Prairie Schooner Making a Cross-Country Tour.

Kit Carson's Home Looks Good to Easterners.

SANTA FE (N. M.) Nov. 4.—Five weeks out of New York and with more than 2800 miles of the "Trail to Sunset" behind them the Raymond & Whitcomb tourists reached this city, the second oldest town in the United States. After the usual Sunday rest they will resume their journey to Los Angeles on Monday morning.

Their arrival here marks the end of the most interesting week of their entire journey so far, and here they will leave the Santa Fe trail, which they have followed its full length of almost 1000 miles, having left Kansas City on Thursday of last week and been on the road nine days since that day.

The first rough country to be entered by the travelers was struck last Wednesday, soon after leaving La Junta, Colo., and the day's run of 105 miles from there to Trinidad took them over some steep and stony highways, but the four forty-horse power Garford cars and the Garford Prairie Schooner negotiated all of them without any difficulty. Thursday's run was the shortest of the entire schedule, being between Trinidad and Raton, N. M., and covering but a little more than twenty-four miles, but it led through the most mountainous country to be found on the trail and over the ever-wonderful Raton Pass.

The run through this part of the country was purposely made on a long-time schedule to allow plenty of sightseeing. At the point where the tourists crossed the State line between Colorado and New Mexico they were 9000 feet above sea level and on their right they could look down on slopes, the water from which pours into the Pacific Ocean, while the rain that fell on their left would eventually find the Gulf of Mexico and the Atlantic.

GOOD ROADS.

Much to the surprise of most of the party they found the roads at this point in the best of condition, having been built by convict labor during the last few years.

Soon after leaving Raton yesterday a brief stop was made at Maxwell's ranch, which in the "fifties" was the hacienda of L. D. Maxwell, a lifelong friend of Kit Carson and his companion in many an encounter with the Indians. At that time the ranch house was in the center of a 2,000,000-acre land grant and in many respects it resembled a feudal estate. The stop for lunch was made at Wagon Mound, a town so called on account of a large hill near it that roughly resembles a covered wagon. This place is famous in western history as the spot where a settler named Hatcher, when attacked by a small party of Indians, saved himself by grabbing the chief and putting the point of a knife at the savage's throat, compelled him to call off the braves.

LONG RUN.

In order to reach this city in good time today the tourists left Las Vegas early this morning and made the run of seventy miles without halting for lunch. Only two stops were made, one being at Starvation Peak, where many years ago, the Indians surrounded a band of Mexicans, who had taken refuge on its summit and held them there until all died of starvation. The other stop was made at the ruins of the Old Pecos Mission, which was built about the year 1500. Tradition says that Montezuma, after being driven from this country by the Spaniards, returned to this mission upon the wings of an eagle, but Col. Studwell of New York, one of the tourists, declared tonight, that he thought Montezuma was a man of better judgment than to return to such a place.

Tomorrow the tourists will be escorted on a sightseeing tour by some of the city officials and automobilists of Santa Fe, visiting among other things, the oldest house in the United States, a building, which was erected here in 1530. As a special privilege they will be allowed to handle Kit Carson's rifle, a weapon that he carried for thirty-five years and with which he literally shot his way into history. Late Monday morning the party will leave for a run of sixty-six miles to Albuquerque.

More Money Means Better Going for Autos.

When two Governors, one from the North and the other from the South, a national Senator second to none in prominence, and a senior State Senator, participate in a dinner given by leading officers of the American Automobile Association, which function resolved itself into a general discussion of good roads, some substantial results are assured in the fairly immediate future.

During the overnight stop of the A.A.A. reliability tour in Philadelphia, President Robert P. Hooper, Chairman Howard Longstreth of the Touring Information Board, and Powell Evans, president of the Automobile Club of Philadelphia, gave a dinner at the Union League, with a list of guests which included Gov. Tener of Pennsylvania, Gov. Smith of Georgia, United States Senator Boies Penrose, and State Senator Sproul. On the same day, in the ride across New Jersey, Gov. Wilson had been the guest of Gov. Smith, who was a contestant in the A.A.A. tour. The next day, Gov. Tener in his own car, carried Gov. Smith to historic Gettysburg. When the tour entered West Virginia, Gov. Glasscock became the companion of Georgia's chief executive.

It was a source of disappointment that Gov. Mann of Virginia could not find it convenient to accompany the motor cavalcade through the Shenandoah Valley, especially on the mountainous journey from Staunton to Roanoke, and then over the Blue Ridge into North Carolina. The "Old Dominion" Governor, through personal experience, would have realized the great need and value of a first-class interstate highway through scenery remarkable for grandeur and beauty. But Gov. Smith has a remedy which he will undoubtedly seek to apply when he takes his seat in the Senate at Washington, for he believes that a large part of the mountainous sections of Virginia and North Carolina should be included in the extension of the conservation work of the Federal government. This would mean up-to-date roads with provision for their very essential maintenance which must follow.

In the talk at Philadelphia, it developed that Pennsylvania is greatly concerned in the building of roads that will make Gettysburg more accessible, though there is a pronounced feeling that the Lincoln Memorial Highway should be built from the national capital under Federal supervision. This gradual linking of North and South by roads deserving of the name unquestionably received a decided impetus at the Philadelphia gathering which in time may come to be looked upon as having been of momentous weight in the progress of highway improvement. One of those present was P. J. Walker, president of the California State Automobile Association, who made it clear that the Pacific Coast strongly believes in national highways, which shall connect the Atlantic and Pacific seaboards. Charles J. Glidden, donor of the touring trophy bearing his name; Henry F. Walton, ex-Speaker of the Pennsylvania House of Representatives and A. G. Batchelde, A.A.A. Executive Committee chairman, were among the other guests.

One thing which greatly impressed the A.A.A. tourists, as they went further southward, was the widespread employment of convicts in roads building. North Carolina is more than awake to the worth of roads; South Carolina is equally alive in adding to its mileage; Georgia has used convicts in over a hundred counties; and Florida is on the verge of State-wide roads agitation, and betterment.

conscientious and careful. The National has made several fast runs to Phoenix and is out today for a dash over the sands in a desperate effort to win the $7000. Herrick is well known in Phoenix and will be given a rousing reception, no matter how he finishes.

The Midland is to be driven by Tom Carrigan. Now, Tom has never driven in a road race. He has a fast four-cylinder car, but he is lucky if he places in this race. He will start as a dark horse and it is impossible to give a line on the Midland.

With Roger, as his mechanician, is Bill Pratt, a fair and square mechanic who knows the desert thoroughly and who can drive if necessary. Roger is trying to handle the car all the way, but when he is too tired Bill will take the helm and help him through the sandy ordeal.

Now you must reckon with Teddy Tetzlaff in this race. We will place him as fourth choice. He is handling the Fiat forty-five, a fast and powerful car, and his chances to win are excellent. Bill Nevin is the team manager for the Fiat and "Tiny" will journey to Phoenix to watch Teddy finish.

FAST FIAT.

If there is one man in the world who is sure the Fiat will place that man is E. E. Hewitt. He is a dead game sport and is willing to take a chance. He has figured the race out carefully. He did not enter the big ninety-horse-power baby but took his chance with the car that smashed all world records at the Motordrome. The Fiat has a host of admirers in this city and Pasadena who are watching Teddy as he drives today.

Now for a surprise. Bill Ferguson, on the Buick, is fifth choice. This is the Bisbee entry. He has been placed higher on the list than Louis Nikrent. It is hard to say just why, but Billy looks good to so many people that he has rightfully earned his important place among the sixteen racers. Don't be too sure that Ferguson will not win today.

Taking them right down the line it seems only fair to place the Pope-Hartford in sixth position. Now if I had my way W. D. Tremaine would have been second choice, but the fans must judge this race and the Pope-Hartford is the sixth car in the position of choice of possible winners.

If this matter was left to the autoists of Phoenix Tremaine and his Pope would be first choice. They are confident in Phoenix that the hood of the Pope-Hartford will show first on the Black Canyon road at the finish tomorrow afternoon. Well Tremaine has a chance to win all the money. Watch him this afternoon on that Devil's Canyon run.

CADILLAC-COLE.

Now the next in order of choice is the Cadillac, with Bill Bramlette in command. This car is a hummer. It has done remarkable work and Bramlette is a star driver. The thirty-horse-power speedster looks particularly good. It is a fast car and Bramlette knows just how to drive the entry which will be watched so carefully by Don Lee.

Can't say just what I think but it looks to me as if the car that should come next to the Cadillac in choice is the Cole. This is perhaps on my own initiative but then let's take a chance. The Coe with Johnny Jenkins at the wheel looks particularly good to me and I'm willing to take a chance on that fast little beauty.

When the Cole returned from Phoenix Thursday it looked grand. With mud and dust plastered on its body the car appealed to the crowds of spectators gathered to examine it carefully. Don't forget that Jenkins is one of the best drivers in this race. Yes, he has an excellent chance to win.

Clarence Smith on the Maxwell, looks good to me. The next in the order of choice of course. The car is fast and Smith is a driver who will use his head every minute. The handsome little speedster has the right kind of an engine to send it over the road at better than a mile a minute. If anybody should ask you that is about fast enough to win.

Yes, I am sure the Maxwell has a chance for first place. It is stripped for action. Did you notice it as it left Second and Spring streets? Looked just right and acted like a quarter-horse. Clarence had the right kind of a look on his face. If he wins, you will want to be there to grab his hand. He is the kind of man I like to see take first place, because he is a good winner and an excellent loser. No kicks or excuses from him.

Bill LaCasse, on the E.M.F. Yes, it's a good car and should place. No, I would not place it ahead of the Maxwell, but the E.M.F. has a chance to win money LaCasse knows the road, and even against so many higher-powered cars he will bear watching closely.

Stripped to the frame, the Flanders, with George Soules at the helm, is the smallest car in the big race. This little midget has shown plenty of speed, but like the Ford last year, its chances to win are slim, indeed. It will be sent into the fight in seventh place, but there is hardly one chance in sixteen that it can keep that place to the finish.

E. Roger Stearns, on the Stoddard-Dayton, is third choice in this fierce sand battle. He has a chance to win with his fifty horse power beauty and will hit a pace that should send him far up the list. He ought to be the first car into El Centro today.

THE LEXINGTON.

The Lexington has a driver who must be reckoned with. Charles H. Bigelow, the Desert Rat, will send that car through with a bid for first place. Can Bigelow win? That is what his friends are asking themselves. He knows the road and he knows his car. The Lexington is fast enough but this is a race with giant motors against the classy car. The Lexington has a chance to place.

The Buick, which Louis Nikrent is driving, holds the Los Angeles-San Diego road record. This fast car has an excellent chance to win first place. Louis is a question mark in this big road race, however, as he was mechanician on the Buick in the first race when his brother Joe won. Just what he will do today nobody can tell.

With the Buick stripped for action Louis may spring a surprise something like the one he turned when he ripped the San Diego record to pieces after the Cadillac and Cole had been smashing it day after day. Louis made a mark of 3h. and 8m., which has not been broken to date. He has a good chance but cannot be doped.

The Case. Well here is a real question. The crew hails from Phoenix. Just what the car will do can only be learned today. Yes, it's a good car.

FLANDERS NEEDS WORKING SPACE.

PLANT WHERE FORDS WERE MADE TO HOUSE TWENTIES.

Classy Little Car Is Being Turned Out in Such Numbers that the Builders Desire More Room and Secure Same Structure Which Henry Ford Used for Years.

Announcement has been made that Walter E. Flanders, third vice-president of the Studebaker Corporation and general manager of the E.M.F. Company, has purchased the plant on Piquette avenue, Detroit, which was vacated by the Ford company some months ago. The factory by itself is one of the largest in the city, having an independent power plant and its addition will enable the E.M.F. company to keep up with the demand of the growing business. It will be known as plant No. 10 and will be equipped with new machinery which has already been ordered.

Plant No. 1 of the E.M.F. company occupies the entire block on Piquette avenue, from John R. to Brush street, running back as far as the railroad, and the work of doubling the capacity by the addition of two stories to the main building and three wings is almost completed. In addition to the Piquette avenue factories the E.M.F. company has seven other plants in Detroit, including plant No. 3, on Clark avenue, where the Flanders car is built, and the drop forge plant is located. One is located in Port Huron which employs 600 men.

"Our only purpose in purchasing the Ford plant is to facilitate the extension to our business," said Flanders yesterday. "Last year we failed to supply the demand of our dealers, and though we are still far behind, we propose to build 50,000 cars for the 1912 season. Of these 30,000 will be the Flanders "20" and 20,000 will be the E.M.F. "30." One of the main purposes in bringing our dealers from all over the country to Detroit is to show them that we are going ahead just as fast as we can in doubling our facilities to increase the output. The acquisition of the Ford plant saves us months in time that would have to be devoted to building."

PREMIER BOOK IN DEMAND.

Story of That Ocean-to-Ocean Tour Is of Particular Interest to Autoists. Splendid Photographs.

There is a great demand for the Premier ocean-to-ocean booklet, which has been published, and John G. Monihan of Indianapolis, secretary of the tour, is kept busy supplying them to motorists who are interested in touring. Illustrated by 108 halftones of scenes between the Atlantic and the Pacific, including the dipping of the twelve cars in the Atlantic at the start and in the Pacific at the finish, the book is of unusual interest. It contains a map of the transcontinental routes and gives much valuable information on road conditions.

The story of the first transcontinental tour by pleasure motorists is told in an interesting manner by the reproduction of daily telegrams received from the tourists, each message being illustrated by a few pictures taken at the point from which it was sent. The tourists are shown as they were en route to the White House to call on President Taft, and as they appeared at more than a hundred points along the way. Some of the most interesting scenes are in the Rocky and Sierra Nevada Mountains and in the great American desert west of Salt Lake City.

VISITORS COMING OUR WAY.

Western Rubber and Supply Company Has Busy Week Disposing of Its Goods.

The Western Rubber and Supply Company's immense stock of new goods is still arriving. Among the many out-of-town dealers and car owners who came in to view the goods and place their orders during the past week are the following: Roy Creighton, Upland; Howard Berg, Ontario; John Rarick, Uplands; A. Kern, Hemet; Mr. Monroe, Uplands; Bob Michler, Perris; Roy Creighton, Uplands; Mr. Stewart, Perris; O. M. Thompson, Fullerton; William Johnston, San Francisco; Ernest Naschke, San Bernardino; Mr. Dubois, Ontario; Frank Bisbee, Covina; Bert S. Hatfield, Redlands; B. R. Baker, Redlands; Messrs. Nelson & Shaw, Brawley, and Mr. Morris of the Morris Motor Car Company, Monrovia.

The concern has closed one of the largest contracts for automobile casings and tubes ever known in Southern California. It is now the sole distributor for California, Arizona and New Mexico for Federal tires. This tire is manufactured by the Federal Rubber Manufacturing Company of Milwaukee, Wis., and is a product worthy of the consideration of every progressive automobile driver. Quality rubber is used in manufacturing these tires, the result a finished product which will stand wear and tear that would suffice to destroy the ordinary tires.

Four carloads of tires and tubes are on the way from the factory for the Los Angeles house, and one extra carload has been ordered shipped direct to the San Diego branch. One carload was received a week ago, and it took less than five days to practically wipe out the stock. A shipment of these tires was received Wednesday, which will hardly last another week if the present demand does not cease.

THIS IS THE WAY.

Novel London Speed Trap Nets Large Sums in Fine From English Motorists.

At Burton-on-Trent on Tuesday ten motorists were summoned for driving at a speed dangerous to the public, fines being imposed as follows: Ivor Worrell, Tennal road, Harbourne, Birmingham, £1 and £1 13s. costs; John Howard Cooper, Tamworth street, Lichfield, £1 and £1 12s. 6d. costs; William Percy Webb, Birmingham road, Lichfield, £1 and £1 11s. 6d. costs; Thomas Staples, Coronation Cottages, Exning road (previous conviction,) £2 and £1 13s. costs; Sidney Griffiths, Rudge Hall, Pattingham, Wolverhampton, £1 and £1 11s. costs; William B. Harris, Lea Crescent, Leabrook road, Birmingham (six previous convictions,) £3 and £2 10s. costs; Thomas W. Blumfield, Balsall, Heath road, Birmingham (previous conviction,) £2 and £1 17s. costs; Frederick Parkes, Phoenix Works, Aston Brook street, Birmingham, £1 and £1 13s. costs; Alfred C. Lack, Blythe street, Ladywood, Birmingham, 10s. and £1 12s. costs; Richard L. Moore, Thames View, Woodbine avenue, Kingston-on-Thames, £1 and £1 9s. costs.

W. H. Breton, who prosecuted, said the apparatus used was very simple, and actually impossible to go wrong. It was fixed up in court, and could be viewed by the magistrates or the defendants if they so desired. It consisted of two wires between a couple of batteries, and the line was fixed over the section covered by the cars, in these cases a quarter of a mile in length. An officer was stationed at each end, and as a car arrived a button was pressed twice, which rang a bell at the other end, giving the second police officer notice that the car was about to enter into the section. As soon as the motor actually passed the officer the button was pressed once, and at the same time he started his stop watch. The man at the other end also started his watch simultaneously, and when the motorist arrived he pressed a button, and both watches were stopped. So well had the electrical apparatus worked that they had never varied more than two-fifths of a second, and sometimes only one-fifth. The benefit of all fifths were given to the defendant. No proceedings had been taken where the speed was less than twenty-five and one-half miles per hour. The piece of road was known as Barton Turns, and with the exception of two of them, all the motorists were coming from Lichfield. He would like to state that although there was a law restricting motorists to a certain speed, the police in that county winked their eye at the rate traveled, except when it was dangerous to the public. There was a danger signal on each side of the bridge, one sixty-two and the other sixty-seven yards away, so that the defendants had a clear warning. These traps were never laid except where there were several complaints from residents in the particular locality. The county did not wish to stand in the way of persons rightly using motor cars, every facility being offered them.

AUTO FIRE TRUCK.

The New York fire department is shortly to have added to it a monster self-propelled pumping engine, which will make up to forty miles an hour and throw 700 gallons of water per minute. The engine is about eighteen feet long, with a wheelbase of 146 inches, and a tread of more than sixty inches. The engine, complete, weighs nearly seven tons, and runs on forty-two-inch wheels, with solid-rubber tires.

STATE HIGHWAYS OUR BIG NEED.

Attention of Motorists Directed Our Way.

National Turnpike One of Promised Blessings.

Good Roads Are Being Built in Many States.

The importance of "through," or "trunk" lines of road in the various States is becoming more apparent every year as the traffic between the large centers of population increases. The essential justice of the plan of constructing and maintaining such extended highways at the expense of the State, in whole, or in part, is being better understood.

Massachusetts recognized the situation several years ago, and in recent years most of its appropriations for State road construction have been expended in building such sections of road as would fill "gaps" and connect State roads with each other. Other New England States have followed a similar plan.

New York has established a system of State roads which will serve as a model for other States. Pennsylvania has this year enacted a new law, which will result in a system roads between principal cities and country seats. The roads of the border counties will reach to the State lines.

Maryland has established a system of State roads, in addition to the State aid roads, which the counties and State have been building for a number of years. California, a year ago, voted $18,000,000 to create a great system of roads, to be built and maintained at the expense of the State. Some of the newer of the Rocky Mountain States, are also building roads for the convenience of through traffic, as well as for the accommodation of the people along the line.

But in the great majority of the States of the Union, even those in which State aid is given to counties and towns for the building of roads, the control of the locations of the roads to be improved is left in the hands of local authorities, who act, naturally, from a standpoint of local interest. Even in New Jersey, where a larger proportion of the highways are well improved than in any other State, the authorities are powerless to create through or connecting lines of road, without the initiative of the county boards of freeholders.

MOTOR TRANSIT.

The entire logic of modern transit points conclusively to the propriety and the fairness involved in the construction and maintenance of main roads by the State. The main roads are much used by the people of the cities. On account of the heavy traffic the construction must be of better class, and the maintenance more expensive than if the roads were used for purely local purposes. While the people along the route are accommodated by a good road, their requirements would not demand high grade of construction which is necessary for the through route.

As the people of the cities are large users of these through highways, so are they large payers of State taxes. It naturally follows that if the State pays for building and maintaining these roads, the people of the cities pay their share of the cost. There is no apparent reason why the people of a county, or of a number of townships in a county, should install and maintain a road of high-priced construction for the benefit of through travelers, when one costing half the amount would answer all local requirements.

New legislation will be required in most of the States to provide for this special feature of the highway development of the country. It is only within recent years that the automobile has become a leading factor in highway economics; but so rapidly has the use of motor cars grown, and so diversified has become the purposes which they serve, that their traffic is a factor which must be reckoned with in the construction and care of roads.

AUTO OWNERS.

As a general rule, the people who own and use automobiles are men of means, who pay their fair proportion of the money raised by the State through taxation. Whether the motor car owner be a resident of city or country; whether he use his car for business or pleasure: whether as a farmer, he uses it to take his produce to market or his family to town shopping; or as a merchant extending his trade; or as a lawyer, or a physician, or a broker, or a preacher keeping the appointments made necessary by their occupations, the fact is that their horizon is widened. They can go further and do more in any given day or week, than under previous conditions.

As the motor traffic requires construction and greater care for the highways; and as the motor traffic is becoming more and more expanded in its usefulness, and incidentally, more exacting on the roads, the justice of a more widespread distribution of the cost of such highways must be apparent to everyone.

The towns, and the counties, with or without the aid of the State, may take care of the roads, which have only local use. But as the use of the through routes is State-wide, or wider, so should, and in the long run must be, the contributions to the fund which provides for their establishment and upkeep.

Track that Jack Built.

PRINCE OF MOTORDROME HERE FOR RACING GAME.

JACK PRINCE, the famous speedway builder, who designed the Los Angeles Motordrome, is in Los Angeles this week. He is planning to erect a motorcycle speedway in the heart of this city. He will leave today for San Diego, where he has been asked to submit plans for a one-mile motordrome which would be used as part of a circuit for automobile racing.

Before he returns to this city Prince expects to visit Phoenix and there will lay out plans for a speedway which would be included in the circuit. It would mean the expenditure of a large sum of money. Prince has just finished a handsome board pie-pan in Chicago, which has proved a great success, and he is here for the winter.

The plan which Prince will outline to the autoists of San Diego calls for a board track in the heart of the southern city, which will equal the Los Angeles Motordrome. Since the arrival of racing on the fast board course, attention has been called to the need of a track on which automobiles can be sent at top speed in an effort to try out the cars and satisfy the speed fans.

When it comes to building board tracks there is perhaps not one man in a thousand who can equal Prince. He finished the Los Angeles Motordrome and told his friends that all world records would be smashed on the boards. He prophesied a speed of ninety miles an hour. Barney Oldfield, with the Blitzen Benz, made 100 miles an hour.

This same claim was made when Prince built the Los Angeles motorcycle track. He said machines would make as high as seventy miles an hour. The bikes were whirled around the boards at eighty miles. This speedfest has continued and now many want a track close to the heart of the city and Prince is ready to build it.

Sounds Like Fairy Tale.

HEMENWAY, IN STODDARD, BAGS THREE QUAIL LIMITS.

WALTER HEMENWAY holds the record as high gun among the nimrods this year. He has bagged more quail in three days than any other hunter who has made a near-city tour. Hemenway drove to Elsinore on Sunday, in his Stoddard-Dayton. He took with him as his hunting companion, Mrs. Hemenway, who enjoys shooting a twenty-bore shotgun.

The two spent three days in the hills, just a short distance from the main road, and less than twenty miles from Elsinore. Hemenway bagged sixty birds, using a sixteen gauge gun. His highest mark was seven birds in seven shots. The quail were flying well, and were easily flushed. The mornings were dry, without any fog to mar the sport.

When Hemenway left town with his Stoddard he started on an experimental hunt. He knew of two large coveys but he was skeptical as to the number in the flocks. He figured that the birds, being close to the highway, would have been all shot to pieces. He was mistaken. He found his hunting paradise and enjoyed the sport which reminded him of years gone by. The birds are more plentiful this year than ever before, according to the local sportsman.

Down in the wilds of the Elsinore Hills Hemenway found the game five minutes after he had unlimbered his gun. It was no trick to flush half a dozen birds, and the sport was a hummer while it lasted. It was quail for breakfast, quail for dinner and then a few fat ones on toast for supper. It was ideal sport.

To hear the Stoddard owner tell of the trip sounds like a fairy tale. The Hemenway Studio man is a well-known photographer. He did not take any pictures of the birds, however, as he was too busy popping them off one by one. He plans to return this week to his choice spot for one more shoot before the season closes.

A newspaper at Wilmington, Del., has substituted motor delivery for horses and wagons.

KING COLE IS HOME AGAIN.

Henderson Tells His Friends All About Us.

Sees Need for Better Roads on Pacific Coast.

Admits that We Know a Few Things About Cars.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

INDIANAPOLIS (Ind.) Oct. 31.—That the establishment of service stations in connection with the retail sale of automobiles is essential, and that the cheaper car sale predominates in agricultural districts, while the higher-priced car finds sale in diversified interests districts, are two interesting observations of Charles P. Henderson, general manager of the Henderson Motor Sales Company, general sales agents for Cole 30-40 cars.

Henderson, accompanied by L. Carter, president of the Henderson Motor Sales Company, their wives, and Miss Henderson, have just returned to this city after a six weeks' trip which brought them through Minneapolis, Winnipeg, Vancouver, Seattle, Portland, San Francisco and Los Angeles. Their jaunt was for pleasure, but Mr. Henderson turned part of his trip into business. Several stops were made at scenic Canadian-Pacific points.

Henderson, speaking of his trip, says:

"Trade conditions are unusually good in Winnipeg and Vancouver. While the automobile business is new in each of these points, there is an evidence of activity in these two cities.

"At the other points visited, trade conditions are only fair. The tendency towards cheaper cars is quite evident in the cities depending largely on agricultural territory for support. While in cities depending more on diversified interests, the higher-priced cars are still in demand.

"In my opinion, the successful manufacturer will be forced to introduce service departments to be handled direct by the manufacturer or through the distributor, as there is a tendency toward better service to the owners of cars. It's a sure thing that this service will have to be rendered either by the manufacturer or the distributor, and it is clearly evident that the companies now giving such service are getting the lion's share of the business. My trip West, while primarily for pleasure, was also for the purpose of looking into the establishing of service departments on the Coast.

FIRST COLE.

"The Cole was introduced to the Pacific Coast a little over a year ago and we now have a sufficient number of cars running to warrant the establishing of proper service departments throughout that territory. With the proper handling of this feature of the business, and the gradual but sure elimination of seasoned changes in models, except as apply to body refinement, the second-hand car question will take care of itself and users of cars will be saved millions of dollars now lost through exchanges.

"In Los Angeles, which seems to be the mecca of motorists, there seems to be quite an ative trade at this time. One gets the impression there that the automobile business must rank ahead of any other line. This is due largely to the fact that their delightful climate permits of the use of cars all the year around. They are learning that cars driven twelve months of the year without a rest should not be expected to wear quite as long as in some localities where they are laid up in storage for a good portion of the year.

"We made the drive from San Francisco to Los Angeles, pausing at interesting points along the way, including Del Monte, Santa Cruz, Santa Barbara, and, while road conditions are fair, there is sore need of the heavy expenditure now authorized by that section for good roads. In time it will be the most motor-trodden section of this country. This will come when, millions of dollars having been invested in good roads, they will be stretched out to cover the desert portion of the State where travel now is not always pleasurable.

WE KNOW IT.

"Another thing that impressed me was the knowledge of automobile construction that is shown by the Pacific Coast distributors and agents. You cannot tell them anything about the latest types of starters or lighting systems, and you cannot fool them into believing that anything but the best is worth while. This has been tried by some manufacturers who have lost out entirely and it is quite noticeably true that they want the very best of equipment, including tops, wind shields, etc. This also is because of their all-the-year-round season and the almost constant use of the car and equipment.

"On the whole, I think the Pacific Coast trade, like that of the South, is in its infancy, and as their good roads are extended into the interior the demand for cars will rapidly increase, making it indeed a very desirable trade to have."

Our Own Make of Carburetor Finds a Place in London With the Autoists.

W. H. McMaster, manager for the Alfred C. Stewart Machine Works has returned from a recent visit to the eastern cities, in the interest of the Stewart precision carburetor, a local invention. He disposed of the United States right to manufacture and sell Stewart carburetors to the Detroit Lubricator Company of Detroit, which will at once begin operations on a large scale.

The Stewart Precision Carburetor Company, Ltd., was organized, especially in London, to handle the European rights. Alfred C. Stewart, the inventor, recently placed on the market the Stewart gas saver, an auxiliary air device. The Stewart Machine Works will now devote its attention entirely to the gas saver.

Vandergrift made many friends here and will be greatly missed. His place will be taken by A. L. Straney.

MOTOR FIRE TRUCKS TESTED.

KNOX FACTORY EXPERTS TRY OLD-FASHIONED CAR.

Prove that Tractor Built Many Years Ago Is Still Ready for Service—Horse-drawn Vehicles May Be Converted Into Automobile Blaze Subduers.

An experiment which will be watched with interest by fire departments throughout the country is being conducted by the Knox Automobile Company of Springfield, Mass.

A hook and ladder truck built in 1861—fifty years ago—was borrowed from the fire department of Bridgeport, Ct., by the Knox company for the two-fold purpose of demonstrating the possibilities of the Martin Tractor to fire departments and of showing that the ordinary horse-drawn apparatus, with steel tires, can be safely drawn at high speed just as well as the more modern rubber-tired vehicles.

The ladder truck is of the medium size, weighing 5500 pounds, and is the oldest the Knox company could find. It is in good condition, considering its age, although obsolete in design. However, it is serving its purpose of showing whether or not the iron tired vehicle, which does such good work when drawn by horses will stand the strain of high speed.

A single-wheeled Martin Tractor, which has been attached to the front axle, draws it over the road at thirty miles an hour, slams it over rough places and cobble pavements at twenty miles an hour. Thus far, no weakness has developed although it has covered more miles already at high speed than the average piece of fire apparatus covers in a year in line of duty, which is abundant proof that our grandfathers could build good vehicles and that all good things are not the development of the present generation.

THREE MILES A MINUTE.

Burman Plans What Appears to Be an Impossible Stunt Even for Blitzen Benz.

Bob Burman's sensational feats of speed, which have crowned him the speed king of the world bid fair to be eclipsed by even greater achievements in the line of death-defying when the great American daredevil returns from the European trip, which he is enjoying at this time.

The business manager for the speed champion, W. H. Hellman, is in receipt of a cablegram from the European tourist stating that he has purchased the greater "Blitzen" Benz and will take the big car to Florida this winter to make the first close dash to three-mile-a-minute speed. The trip to Europe was made by Burman and E. A. Moross, formerly of the Indianapolis Speedway management, who is owner of the string of racing cars which Burman has been driving this season and who will be half-owner of the new "Blitzen" creation.

That the work of Burman, who has driven a mile in the remarkable time of twenty-five and two-fifths seconds, is the most wonderful driving ever seen, is evident and his plans of making the first three-mile-a-minute speed promise even greater glory to the intrepid pilot. The car which Burman purchased has been under way in the big Benz plant for some time, with the idea in mind of having the holder of the present records look at it and see whether it would be possible to get the terrible speed that three miles a minute demands out of it.

For this reason Burman made the trip to the factory and his purchase of the car seems an assurance that there will be something doing in the world's record tests that will be made this winter on the beach. Burman and his big Benz bid fair to become even greater factors in motor history than they are at present.

PATSCHKE ON MARMON.

Slated to Drive Fast Car in Savannah Road Race on Thanksgiving Day—Has Record to Uphold.

Cyrus Patschke will drive the Marmon "32" in the 231-300 division of the Savannah challenge race on November 27, according to an announcement made at the Nordyke and Marmon factory recently. The Marmon "32" is one of the Marmons which won the Jacob Jepsen perpetual challenge trophy at Santa Monica in the fastest time ever made in their class. The Savannah challenge race is for a distance of 221 miles, consisting of thirteen laps of the southern course.

In entering the Savannah challenge race, Patschke will have to uphold the record made last year in this event by his team-mate, Joe Dawson. Dawson in a Marmon "32" led the field in the race, covering the 276.8 miles in 263m., 40s. This was an average of sixty-three miles an hour without a stop. This is the longest non-stop race on record, and Patchke has determined to push his Marmon to the limit in an effort to better the record made by Dawson in this event last year.

An automobile combination truck, engine and hose cart, and a chemical engine and hose wagon are to be added to Buffalo's fire-fighting department.

TWO BUICKS; TWO CHANCES.

Fast Pair of Speedsters May Win the Sand Battle on a Two to one Shot. Ferguson Hopeful.

Considerable interest is aroused among followers of the racing game in Los Angeles as to the performance of the two Buicks entered in the Phoenix road race. The remarkable series of winnings piled up by Louie Nikrent in his Buick racer has caused the dopesters to strongly favor this entry in the Phoenix race.

It will be recalled that the Buick with Joe Nikrent at the wheel was a winner in this race in 1909, no Buick being entered in 1910.

Billy Ferguson, who is at the wheel of the second Buick entered, is piloting his own car and has a strong following in Arizona, where he is quite prominent in automobile circles. Ferguson was one of the crew who piloted the White car to victory in the first Phoenix race, and with his desert experience, should be a strong contender for place.

GRAND PRIZE EVENT.

One of the features of this year's Savannah contests over the southern course will be the presence of a number of the best road experts in the country. Arrangements have been made to have these men at Savannah in force. The county authorities are arranging to give them object lessons in road building and preservation, which should have an appreciable effect on the quality of roads in many sections of the country hereafter.

No Skidding
No Rim-Cutting
No Overloaded Tires

Think of This Combination

Tires that can't rim-cut—
Tires 10% oversize—
Tires with a double-thick, non-skid tread

That's what we now offer, for wet and wintry weather, in the most popular tires that were ever created—the Goodyear No-Rim-Cut tires.

Such a combination, when you know the facts, is fairly irresistible.

The Three Greatest Troubles Avoided

One great tire trouble has been the danger of rim-cutting. Of all the ruined old-type tires, 23% have been rim-cut.

The Goodyear No-Rim-Cut tire—our patented type—makes rim-cutting impossible. Out of 700,000 sold to date there has never been an instance of rim-cutting.

Another great trouble has been blow-outs due to overloading. Goodyear No-Rim-Cut tires are 10% over the rated size, adding 10% to the carrying capacity—25% to the average mileage.

These new-type tires, costing no more than other standard tires, have cut tire bills in half for tens of thousands of motorists. As a result, in the past two years, our sales have increased by 500%.

Now the Third

Now we have met, with these same tires, the third of your great troubles. That is the danger of skidding.

Our experts have worked for three years on a perfect Non-Skid tread. Now it is ready for you.

It is an extra tread, as thick as our regular, vulcanized onto the tire. That means a double tread.

The tread is immensely wear-resisting. It is made up of deep-cut blocks, grasping the road surface by countless edges and angles.

The blocks are wide at the base so they spread the strain. Their double thickness makes them almost puncture-proof.

The tread remains effective until it all wears off. Then our regular tread is below it.

The Ideal Tire

This is the best device against skidding—by far the best—that was ever put onto a tire. And it goes on a tire that can't rim-cut—an oversize tire—the most popular tire on the market.

Don't buy a tire lacking all these advantages until you know what this tire means.

BLOCKED KICK SPILLED THE BEANS FOR HARVARD TEAM.

On All-around Football, Crimson Was Having the Better of the Argument When White Grabbed the Ball and Ran for a Touchdown, Which Changed the Tide of the Battle.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PRINCETON (N. J.) Nov. 4.—A safety over which there was some doubt and on which points were allowed spelled Princeton's victory over Harvard today by a score of 8 to 6. On all-around football the Crimson had a trifle the better, and outrushed Princeton, but a blocked kick when Harvard was about to score a goal from the field completely turned the tide of battle. White grabbed the ball and ran for a touchdown.

In the third period a Princeton punt was about to roll over the Harvard goal line, but a Harvard back grabbed it too soon and a safety was scored against the Crimson. Harvard's score was made on a Princeton fumble and a forward pass, Wendell making the score. There was a great Tiger celebration at the end of the game.

Princeton.	Position.	Harvard.
White	L.E.	Smith
Hart	L.T.	Hitchcock
Wilson	L. G.	Leslie
Bluethenthal	C.	Storer
Duff	R.G.	Fisher
Phillipps	R.T.	Gardener
Dunlap	R.E.	O'Brien
Christie	Q.B.	Potter
Pendleton	L.H.B.	Campbell
Dewitt	R.H.B.	Wendell
Vaughn	F.B.	Huntington

The stands were not half filled when the Harvard team dashed onto the field at 1:30. There were few cheers as the team spread out over the gridiron to warm up.

At 1:45 when the Princeton team came on the field, four leaders armed with megaphones, pulled open the throttle and the welkin locomotive cheer boomed across the gridiron, ending with three long Harvards.

Harvard won the toss and took the south goal, with the sun at their backs, giving Princeton the kick-off.

THE KICK-OFF.

Dewitt kicked off to Campbell on Harvard's 10-yard line, and the ball was run back ten yards. Potter kicked on the first down to the center of the field, where the ball was held for no gain. Dewitt went through center for four yards. On the second play Dewitt kicked to Potter, who was thrown without gain on his 10-yard line. Wendell made two yards through center and then Potter kicked to Harvard's 50-yard line and the ball was run back five yards.

Dewitt soon kicked to the 10-yard line again. Potter kicked on the first down, and the ball was blocked but a Harvard man got the ball. The Princeton forwards broke through on nearly every play. Wendell plowed his way through for nine yards and then made a first down on Harvard's 25-yard line. Harvard kicked to the center of the field. Princeton tried an end run without gain.

Dewitt kicked outside on Harvard's 34-yard line. It was Harvard's ball. The Princeton tackling was very fierce. A kick to Princeton's 33-yard line put the ball on the Tigers' side for the first time, in their own possession.

Time was called while Gardiner, who was disabled, was revived. He had to leave the field.

Dewitt kicked outside again on Harvard 30-yard line.

On the first Harvard rush, Wendell made two yards. The Princeton forwards judged the play beautifully and seemed to stop the big Harvard backs easily. Potter kicked on the next down to Pendleton, but the ball was brought back and Princeton lost fifteen yards for holding. It was Harvard's ball on their 44-yard line. Wendell tried Princeton left end for a scant yard. A kick followed to Princeton's 25-yard line where Pendleton made a fair catch. Jenks took Gardiner's place. Dewitt kicked to Campbell who fumbled and it was Princeton's ball on Harvard's 47-yard line. Vaughn made a yard around right end. An on-side kick was blocked but Princeton recovered the ball on its 50-yard line. Dewitt tried to run on a fake kick but was thrown back for a loss. He kicked immediately to Harvard's 33-yard line where Potter made a fair catch. On a free kick Campbell lost four yards. A kick followed to Pendleton on Princeton's 52-yard line. Pendleton tried Harvard's right end for a loss of two yards. Dewitt kicked to Potter on Harvard's 34-yard line. On the first rush Potter made a wide sweep around Princeton's right end for seven yards. Time was called for breathing space. Wendell plunged through the center of the field for a first down. On the next rush the ball was carried into the Tiger's territory for a yard. Harvard kicked outside on Princeton's 22-yard line where time was called for the first period.

First period: Harvard 0; Princeton 0.

Princeton not only held Harvard but kept the ball in Harvard's territory the greater part of the time.

The Second Period.

Second period: In the second period Dewitt kicked on the second down to Harvard's 40-yard line. As the ball went into the air, an aeroplane came flying over the field bearing two men and there was considerable cheering. Harvard kicked on the second down and then lost fifteen yards in Princeton's territory for holding. Dewitt kicked on the first down to Potter on Harvard's 25-yard line and the crimson quarterback was downed in his tracks. Potter was injured and Gardiner took his place. Wendell made three yards and then Campbell kicked to the 45-yard line where Pendleton was thrown without gain. It was Princeton's ball on Harvard's 45-yard line, but on first play Princeton was sent back fifteen yards for holding. Pierce took Campbell's place. Dewitt again kicked far down the field and Huntington was thrown without gain. On the first rush Pierce was thrown back for a loss. He then kicked out of bounds on Harvard's 28-yard line where the ball went to Princeton.

On the first rush Pendleton could not gain and Dewitt made only 2 yards on the second. Then Christie dropped back for a goal from the field, standing on Harvard's 25-yard line. The ball was blocked and Hitchcock picked it up and ran to Princeton's 25-yard line, where Pendleton nailed him. Hitchcock had a clear field but did not have the legs.

Reynolds took Pierce's place for Harvard.

With the ball in Harvard's possession on Princeton's 25-yard line there was a fumble but Harvard kept the ball for a loss of five yards.

Milholland dropped back for a goal from the field. The ball went wide by 10 yards. Hollister took Milholland's place.

Dewitt kicked on the first down to the center of the field. On a fake forward pass Reynolds made twelve yards around Princeton's right end. They paused for Princeton's injuries. With the ball on Princeton's 44-yard line Wendell made two yards on a delayed pass through center. On the next play he crowded through for four more yards. Then Reynolds kicked to Pendleton on Princeton's 5-yard line and the ball was run back seven yards. On the next play Dewitt kicked out of bounds and the ball went to Harvard on Princeton's 22-yard line. Wendell made 4 yards through center in the first rush and on the second it was off-side play ball on the 15-yard line. Harvard hit ball on the 15yard line. Harvard hit the center for no gain and Wendell could not gain round right end. On the next play there was a fumble and the ball went to Princeton. Dewitt kicked on the first down to the center of the field and the ball was run back ten yards. A fake forward pass netted four yards.

On the first rush a yard was made on a delayed pass. Then came an on-side kick to Princeton's 5-yard line, where Harvard got the ball. On the first rush Wendell made half a yard. Then Reynolds tried Princeton's right end for a loss of five yards.

On an attempted goal from the field the kick was blocked and for a loss of five yards and White grabbed the ball on the 15-yard line and did not stop until he crossed the Harvard goal line. Princeton scored goal. Pendleton kicked the goal.

FULL OF SENSATIONS.

The period was full of sensations. Princeton had a fine chance for a goal from the field on Harvard's 26-yard line, but the ball was blocked and only Pendleton's fast running prevented a Crimson touchdown. Then Harvard assaulted the Tigers' goal and got the ball on Princeton's 5-yard-line on an on-side kick. The Princeton line held firmly and then an attempted field goal was blocked. White picked up the ball on Princeton's 15-yard-line and outdistanced the entire Crimson team in his 35-yard-line dash for the first score of the game. Pendleton kicked an easy goal and the half of the game was ended.

Score—Princeton, 6; Harvard, 0.

The feature of the first two periods was the charging of the Princeton's forwards and their ability to stop the powerful Wendell.

Just before the teams came on the field, Osborne field had another aerial visitor, this time a big balloon floating down from the westward.

It was again Princeton's kick-off.

The third period started by Dewitt kicking to Reynolds, on Harvard's 20-yard-line. The ball was run back eighteen yards. On an end run from a fake kick Reynolds lost five yards. He lost five yards more on another end run on a fake kick. The Princeton ends completely outplayed those of Harvard. A kick followed to the center of the field. Dewitt kicked on the first rush to Wendell, who ran it back to the 6-yard-line. Hunting made three yards on a fake kick and then Wendell added three more on a double pass. It was Harvards' ball on her own 42-yard-line. A kick followed and Pendleton ran it back 10 yards on Princeton's 50-yard-line. On the first rush Pendleton tried Harvard's left end for a loss of five yards.

Dewitt kicked to Huntington, who was thrown without gain on Harvard's 32-yard line. Another delayed pass and Princeton's left end was tried for a loss of two yards. On a fake kick Reynolds tried Princeton's right end and was thrown back for a loss. He kicked out of bounds on Harvard's 51-yard line and the ball went to Princeton.

Princeton attempted rushing, but was thrown back for a loss. Dewitt kicked over the goal line for a touchback. The ball was brought to the 25-yard line and given to Harvard. There was a long debate on the Princeton claim that it was a safety by Harvard.

PRINCETON'S CLAIM ALLOWED.

Princeton's claim for a safety was allowed and the score stood 8 to 0, the referee deciding that a Harvard man had picked up the ball before it went over the line. On the first rush Wendell made 35 yards and planted the ball on Princeton's 50-yard line. There was no gain on the next rush and Princeton got the ball on a Harvard kick on her 30-yard line. Dewitt kicked immediately to the center of the field. On the first rush Reynolds made eleven yards, and on the second rush he was thrown for a loss of a yard.

A forward pass came off successfully, but gained only five) yards. Then Reynolds made an outside kick to Princeton's 7-yard line, where there was no gain on the run back. Dewitt immediately kicked to Reynolds on Princeton's 40-yard line, and the ball was run back ten yards. A delayed pass netted a yard. Another forward pass planted the ball on Princeton's 15-yard line for the first down for Harvard. Reynolds could not gain on a plunge in the line. Time was taken out while a Harvard physician looked over the players, but no one came out.

Wendell tried the right side of the Princeton line but could only get the ball as far as the Tiger 11-yard line.

Gardiner was unable to give the Harvard signals and Freedley took his place.

Harvard tried a forward pass but Captain Hart of Princeton caught the ball on his 6-yard line.

Dewitt plowed his way through for five yards and then kicked to Freedley on Princeton's 50-yard line.

The ball was run back five yards. There was another delay, this time for Princeton injuries. With the Crimson having the ball on Princeton's 45-yard line, Freedley tried a forward pass, but was thrown back for a loss of five yards with the ball still in his hands. Reynolds kicked to Princeton's 25-yard line, where there was a Tiger fumble and here the period ended. As the ball went to Harvard on the Princeton fumble at the end of the third period, it was the Crimson's ball on the Tiger's 22-yard line. Wendell was called upon but could only make a yard. A beautiful forward pass, Freedley to Smith, put the ball on the Tiger 2-

Dear Sir: Replying to your favor inquiring what satisfaction I have had out of my Brush car, will say that I am more than pleased with its services, and who could help but be when for the past six months one man alone has been doing the same work with it that used to be done by two horses and two men before; and the best and most astounding part of it all is that it has been doing this on $1.65 a week upkeep.

Knowing what I do now, I cannot help but chuckle inwardly every time I see a horse.

CHICAGO EASY FOR MINNESOTA.

GOPHERS BORE BIG HOLES IN WEAK LINE.

Outplay Victims in Every Branch of the Game—Three Touchdowns, a Place Kick and Two Field Goals Made—Winners Work Every Kind of Play Successfully.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 4.—Minnesota's football team overwhelmed Chicago today by a score of 30 to 0. Chicago was outplayed in every department of the game and made first down only once. Chicago never was in striking distance of the Minnesota goal line.

Minnesota made three touchdowns, Morrill made a place kick and Smith dropped two field goals. Minnesota tore up the Chicago line, skirted her ends and worked the forward pass successfully almost at will. Scrubby, the Chicago kicker, did not get a chance for a drop kick during the game.

GOSSIP ALONG GASOLINE ROW.

BY BERT C. SMITH.

Leon T. Shettler is in charge of the "Howdy Special" to day. He is running her through on a great schedule. The start is at 9:45 o'clock this morning. Better get there at 9 o'clock to save your seat. Have you a berth? Yes, it costs enough, but then get yours quickly, and put your stamp on the outside as it may be swiped from you. Be careful to look your drawing-room door. It's a special trail on the Golden State Limited.

Allan Dodd makes a hit with me. He is just the kind of man to send on a "special." He has arranged for the right kind of a stop at Yuma. A banquet there and a feed that will make you glad that you took the trip. The autoists on the edge of the Colorado are tickled at the thought of the racing cars coming through their city. They have the right kind of spirit and also are strong for Allan Dodd.

Tra-la-la, the tune that Shettler will play in Yuma today. He is the soloist of the band. Shettler has also consented to sing a solo tonight when he is called on. The tostmaster tried to find out who is the best speaker. He decided on Don Lee and the Cadillac man will be asked to tell all he knows about Bill Bramlette and the little "Thirty."

Waller Chanslor has consented to tell a fish story tonight at Yuma. He will also entertain the Indian bucks with a rendition of how he shot the bear and deer in the mountains back of Garvanza. Waller is the best shot with a pea-shooter. He hits the mark every time.

Harry Mason is the starter. He expects to start something he cannot stop. He will have his red hat adjusted right and then will take full charge of everything. He is going to Phoenix to look after the Diamond tires.

Warren Vance is here. The man with the two agencies tucked away in his bosom looks fat and handsome. He has the Halladay and the Cartercar. Both of these lines are better and more stylish than ever this year. Vance has had a real vacation this time, and is already planning a fast run to Phoenix. He will open up in real earnest this coming week. Just give him a chance to catch his breath.

Jim Canavan is coming back. I have it from Warren Vance. The man who made the Halladay famous in the East, will meet the man who made it famous in the West. Jim is a comer and will soon reach here ready for business. Wait until he comes. He is fatter than ever, and even more jovial.

Half of the automobile dealers are leaving town today for Phoenix. The gossip of automobile row will be transferred to the heart of Arizona. There George Purdy Bullard will hold forth in real earnest with his Howdy hat on straight. Bullard is now in the midst of his campaign for Attorney-General, but he will pause long enough to watch the cars come in to Phoenix.

Have you picked your car? Shut your eyes and draw. You will be more fortunate if you handle the matter in this way. It is impossible to say who will win. Yes, every car has a chance. Not a machine in the race that is not wrecked has lost its chance to win the desert grind. Watch them as they toil across the sands of Mexico. It's a wild and fierce course, but then we will do anything to have excitement.

There is more real excitement in the Phoenix race than in any other road race ever planned. The cars are stripped for action, but if you really knew what that action means you would then know how foolish a man is to start in a race, in which he stands a good chance to wreck his car or break his neck. Great fun while it lasts. It's expensive, but then, look what it means to win.

J. S. Conwell, president of the Automobile Dealers' Association, is going through on the "Special." He is anxious to know just how the Maxwell is doing. Be it known that Clarence Smith enters this car and drives it himself, and looks like a winner in his class. The little red rustler will hit it up right on the sands. Ask Ralph Hamlin, when you reach Phoenix, how Clarence made the trial trip.

J. S. Mitchell of the Hotel Hollenbeck, who has handled the race from this end, leaves for Phoenix this morning. He has done the job right and now has turned everything over to George Purdy Bullard, father of the big road race. Mitchell has won a place in the hearts of the drivers by his careful management. There has been no friction and everybody is happy.

If Bullard is the father of the Phoenix road race, what is Shettler? He is the mother. Not an old woman, but the real thing when it comes to managing the band and carrying the bombazoo. Shettler is there with bells and they are ringing all the time. He will be dressed like a race horse when he reaches Phoenix. Yes he's the bandmaster.

The Everitt six-cylinder is here. H. O. Harrison has just received this handsome low-priced beauty, and it is a hummer. One of the best I have seen this year. It looks like real class and as as snappy as it's possible to make a car. This motor is built of chrome nickel steel and is guaranteed. How many will H. O. get? That's the question, but it's a safe wager that he will sell every car that reaches here.

The State Highway Commissioner of Oklahoma is preparing 3000 suits to be brought against that number of car owners who have not paid the State tax of $1. The tax lists record 4128 owners of cars in the State, only 1588 of which have paid the small tax required to maintain the State highway bureau.

This is the fast Cole car that made the swift run to town Thursday and which is pitted today in a fierce duel with the Cadillac—"All I care to do is to beat the Cadillac," was the remark of Jenkins as he left the starting line last night.

FOOD FOR FANS.

Jim Jeffries has engaged a special car to take his ball team out to Pomona today to play Kittie Brashear's team. The party will leave the Salt Lake depot at 11 o'clock and is to reach here at 7:10 o'clock on the return trip.

The confusion among some of the semi-professional baseball managers as to the men who are to play on their respective teams today would lead the average fan to think that real players are not needed so much as correct information on just who is to play.

Jim Jeffries left last night with an old schoolmate for a duck hunting trip along the southern shore.

Freddie Welsh, the English boxer, states that he was in the right in the reported trouble he had with the New York Boxing Commission. He agreed to fight three fights at $2000 for O'Rourke, but after fighting one the others fell through, and Welsh was listed with the commission by O'Rourke for having violated his contract. Welsh says he showed the original contract and was completely vindicated and exonerated by the commission.

From the Crimson campus comes the news that the application of J. P. Morgan for seats to the Harvard and Yale football game has been turned down. The dispatch mentions that the financier has given millions to the University.

The rejection is said to have been made because the man of money did not intend the seats for his personal use. It's a great idea, but just the same it will be a big surprise if the speculators don't have pockets of admission billets this year as of yore. To turn down one of the greatest benefactors of the college on a technicality seems hardly sportsmanlike, to say the least.

With two feet of snow in Indiana and the cotton fields of the South frozen to a crisp, the eyes of the sport world are turning this way and the winter migration is on in full swing.

Has anybody heard from the clock golf course, which was to be started at U.B.C.? If not, we better advise winding the clock.

DE WITT VAN COURT'S COLUMN.

The Pacific Athletic Club has made a ten-strike if the match-maker has succeeded in matching Johnny Coulon and Danny Webster.

Johnny Coulon is the champion and Danny is one of the most popular boxers we have had in Los Angeles. Any time Danny starts we can depend upon it that he will give us the best he has in him.

The only high-class boxers we have had in Los Angeles for the past five years are Abe Attell, Packy McFarland Joe Gans, Sam Langford and Johnny Coulon.

The greatest exhibitions of boxing and fighting we have had in Los Angeles have been the matches between Abe Attell and Frankie Neil; Packy McFarland and Freddie Welsh; Joe Gans and Memsic and the match between Young McGovern and Johnny Coulon.

The match between Frankie Neil and Abe Attell was a one-sided affair. The match between Joe Gans and Memsic was also a one-sided affair. The match between Packy McFarland and Freddie Welsh was an even thing for twenty rounds, and the one between Young McGovern and Johnny Coulon was a joke.

Young McGovern was touted by some who were supposed to be wise judges of the fight game and bet their money that he would win over Coulon. The fight proved to be the biggest joke of the year and we have never heard of McGovern since.

The fight between Danny Webster and Coulon will not be so one-sided. But we will have a chance to see what a real champion is.

The exhibition between Joe Gans and George Memsic was the best exhibition of a scientific boxer and a rough hard hitting fighter we have ever had in Los Angeles. Gans simply made Memsic look as though he had never seen a boxing glove.

It is just such exhibitions that we need in this town to convince the fight fans that there is something in the fight game besides brute strength and rough-house work. The fight game is going from bad to worse every day, and the more we have of the Johnny Coulon style of fighters, the more we will appreciate true fighting.

Danny Webster is a fairly good boxer, a fairly good hitter and thoroughly game, and if there is any boy that can bring out all that Coulon has, it is Danny.

There is a dearth of good men all over the country, and any chance to match a champion with anybody should be hailed with delight. It takes the champions to bring out all the good and bad traits of the fighting game. This match should bring out a good house. It is well worth any price we might pay to see a champion like Johnny Coulon work; win, lose or draw.

Frankie Conley will start training for his match with Joe Rivers next Saturday, and has engaged Freddie Corbett as a sparring partner, and Ben Smith as a trainer. Corbett should make a fine boxing partner for Frankie. He is strong and pretty clever. Smith is well known all over the Coast, and has a reputation as one of the best seconds in the game.

Rivers is undecided about his training camp, but is seriously thinking of training at Venice with Welsh. Neither one will have any trouble in getting into condition. Conley has been training a little at Doyle's, where he intends to stay, and will probably do some work with Wolgast when he arrives.

The New York Boxing Commission has decided that clean breaks are to be the rule in the future in boxing contests held there.

Johnny Coulon, the bantam champion, comes out against such a ruling.

The commission has done this to try and prevent as much as possible the rough wrestling that has been in vogue for a long time. There is no need for any such rule with men like Coulon, as he always boxes according to the rules which say that there shall be no holding. If there is no holding there can be no clinching. While this will work a hardship for Coulon and a few others like him, it will be a good thing for the game. This rule will force the men to keep apart and box, which will mean a very decided improvement in the game in a short time.

This may be one of the reasons that Ad Wolgast prefers Jack Welsh for the referee in his fight with Freddy Welsh.

Wolgast never holds when he fights, consequently never receives any warning from Welsh, nor should he from any other referee that understands his business.

In the fight between Wolgast and Moran last July, Moran was repeatedly warned by Welsh for his rough work, while Ad was not spoken to but once or twice. Rough work and clinching are too often misunderstood.

It often happens that one fighter is holding the other glove under his arm, while his opponent is hitting, and is blamed for hitting in a clinch. When these things are allowed, the contest often develops into a rough style that the New York Commission is trying to stop.

Charlie Eyton is up to all the tricks that fighters try to spring and promptly calls down any one who breaks the rules.

Freddie Welsh is one of the cleverest clinchers in the business, and is a hard man to hit in a clinch. He is evidently figuring a lot on this kind of work in his coming match with Wolgast, and Ad is probably doing the same thing. But Wolgast need not have any fear of Welsh or any one else getting away with this work as long as Eyton is the referee.

THEY WANT OUR CARS.

As a result of a movement under way in the Detroit Board of Commerce, shipments of Detroit-made motor cars to South America and other foreign markets are likely to be materially increased in the future through the organization of an export bureau. The bureau will place at the disposal of members a linguist to translate foreign letters into English and English letters into other languages; give details of shipping, packing, invoicing and routing, the amount and method of collection of customs duties and such other information of value in connection with foreign shipments.

SAVANNAH RACE.

The Savannah Automobile Club has added $1500 as second and third prizes in the Vanderbilt, and the two light car races, making the total amount of prize money offered by the club $11,000. In addition to these cash prizes is the $5000 grand prize cup, the Vanderbilt cup, and other valuable plaques to go to the winners. The Remy Magneto Company has led off for the accessory concerns with an offer of $4700 in cash prizes, and other tire, oil and accessory manufacturers have signified their intention of offering substantial cash amounts to the winners.

GARBUTT TELLS OF THE CLUB.

Aims of the Splendid New Institution.

Career of L.A.A.C. from Its Obscure Birth.

What Part It Will Play in City's Life.

BY FRANK A. GARBUTT.

Very few persons outside the membership realize that the grandest athletic clubhouse in the world is being completed at Seventh and Olive streets, this city. The famous New York Athletic Club and the two splendid athletic clubs in Chicago will simply not be in it in any way.

The part that the Los Angeles Athletic Club proposes to play in this community and the hundreds of prominent business and professional men who are hurrying to join the club suggest the importance of the following series of articles explaining what this is all about.

The articles have been written for The Times by Frank A. Garbutt, vice-president of the club, and one of its moving spirits.

It would be a good idea to save these articles until the series is completed, so that they can be read as a whole.

The Times has asked for a series of articles descriptive of the Los Angeles Athletic Club and the task has been undertaken gladly, not because of any special aptitude of the writer, who cheerfully disclaims any literary ability, but because there are so many things that the people of Los Angeles should know about the club, which we are anxious to tell them.

Questions are asked every day which show us that very few outside of the members realize what the club is and what it proposes to be. What it is doing and what it will do for the community. And what is more to the point, what it will do for you and yours.

With no desire to appear egotistical I will make the promise at the outset that no one who will read these articles through will fail to learn something of benefit, for the higher purpose of an athletic club is so little understood that it is safe to say not one man in a hundred seriously applies to himself the thought that without it his life is incomplete and that his full powers, either mental or physical, will not be attained. I will go further and state that the results are even more far-reaching, extending not alone to the individual, but to his children and his children's children.

I will go still further and say that the man, woman or child does not live, who would not be benefited by something that the club has to offer. However, that is another story and at the proper time and in the proper manner we will carry that message to the sick and the well; the weak and the strong; the young and the old. In this article I am limited largely to a brief recital of its early history and a description of the club itself.

BIRTH OF THE CLUB.

Thirty-two years ago the Los Angeles Athletic Club was organized with forty charter members. Among these may be mentioned Bradner W. Lee, M. G. Jones, C. M. Coulter, Frank A. Gibson, J. S. Thayer, M. H. Newmark, W. G. Kerckhoff, Alfred Solano, W. M. Caswell and James C. Kays, which names are at this date well known to the people of Los Angeles. Col. Lankershim, then a prominent athlete, was chosen as the first president.

Two years later, the club, with a membership increased to 100, moved into their handsome new quarters in the modern Downey block, which occupied the space upon which the Federal building now stands, at the corner of Temple and Spring streets.

The early history of the club was full of stirring incidents and were we in reminiscent mood, many are the happenings which could be recalled with interest and pleasure.

WHERE THE TIMES LIVED.

The old "Times-Mirror" occupied the corner of Temple and New High and on the opposite corner, on what is now the Courthouse grounds, stood the old Congregational Church. We were indeed in the center of our own little universe, with our spiritual, mental and physical needs all taken care of within the short distance of a hundred yards.

Victor Dol, with his famous Maison Dore, was next door, with a reputation that would make Delmonico's a railroad eating-house by comparison and viands which put even that reputation to blush.

It was here that the writer joined the club, having been proposed for membership by Charles Forman, whom I have never ceased to thank for the favor conferred.

How well I remember the anxious month of necessary probation before I was admitted into that charmed circle, and how well I recall that feeling of conscious pride with which I walked through those commodious quarters on the first occasion when I could feel I had a right to call it my own home.

From the Downey Block the club moved in 1890 to the Stowell Block, now known as the Germain building, near the corner of Second, on Spring street.

Here, again, we passed many pleasant and useful years; I may say the happiest of a very happy life.

TOO FAR OUT!

From the Stowall building the club moved to its present quarters at No. 534½ Spring street, a fatal tactical error, as at that time the location was so far out of town that no one had the time to go there, and as a result the club suffered its first serious financial reverse.

A few years later, however, the old guard got together and completely rehabilitated the club in the financial world and started a campaign of education that was far-reaching in its effect.

The country was scoured for the best athletic instructors in the world and although it is not generally known, the Los Angeles Athletic Club has in its present quarters, and with a necessarily limited membership, supported the best and highest-priced staff of instructors in the United States.

And the results have justified us. We have men in our gymnasium who show such an improvement in physical form that a photograph taken "before and after" would have to be accompanied by an affidavit that it was the same individual.

We have members whom we have saved from the operating table after surgeons had advised them that even that art promised but a doubtful cure yard line. A forward pass completely fooled the Princeton players, for Smith was far out on the left end. He had a clear field but was nailed just before he reached the goal line. Wendell carried it over on the first rush. The ball was kicked out to Freedley on the 25-yard line. Captain Fisher kicked goal, making the score: Princeton, 8; Harvard, 6.

HARVARD'S FUMBLE.

Dewitt kicked off to the 10-yard line but the ball was run back fifteen yards in spite of Harvard's fumble. On the first rush Reynolds made eight yards. Then Wendell made a first down on his 45-yard line. On the next rush Wendell made five yards more. There was a kick forward to Princeton's 35-yard line, but Dewitt could not gain through center. He dropped back and kicked to Reynolds on Harvard's 50-yard line. Reynolds could not gain around Princeton's right end and Wendell hurled himself at the Princeton line for no gain.

Then Dewitt kicked to the Tiger's 4-yard line and on account of Harvard's holding it was Princeton's ball in the center of the field. On a delayed pass Vaughn was thrown without gain. Dewitt kicked to Reynolds on Harvard's 35-yard line. Harvard made three yards around Princeton's right end. A kick followed, the ball went out of bounds and into Princeton's hands, but was brought back and given to Harvard on her own forty-five-yard line because of Princeton's holding. On a back pass Wendell was thrown for a loss of a yard.

The princeton forwards completely out-charged Harvard. Reynolds kicked to Vaughn on Princeton's 38-yard line. Dewitt went through for three yards in a drive through center. On the next play there was Harvard holding and the ball was given to Princeton in the center of the field. On a delayed pass Dewitt made it a first down on Harvard's 44-yard line. There were only two yards' gain on the second run. Then Vaughn tried Harvard's right end and made four yards. Princeton substitutes began to come on the field.

DUFF WENT OUT.

Duff, who was playing a wonderful game at right guard for Princeton, went out and McCormick took his place.

Dewitt kicked over the goal line and the ball was brought to the 35-yard line and given to Harvard. On the first play a fake forward pass resulted in a loss of five Crimson yards. A forward pass failed and Harvard got the ball. Reynolds kicked to Vaughn on Harvard's 45-yard line.

Dewitt made two yards through center. Pendleton banged in for three more. Dewitt kicked to Harvard's 10-yard line and the ball was run back five yards. Frothingham, who had taken Reynold's place, made five yards on a kick.

Then Harvard kicked to Princeton's 45-yard line and the ball was run back seven yards. Pendleton made three yards and Dewitt two more through center. Dewitt kicked to Frothingham on Harvard's 20-yard line. The game ended with the ball in Princeton's possession in the center of the field.

Final score: Princeton, 8; Harvard, 6.

FRESHMEN ALSO PLAYED.

Preceding the varsity contest today there was a game between the Princeton and Harvard freshmen. Huntington Frothingham was knocked insensible and was taken to the infirmary. His condition is not regarded as serious. The final score was:

Harvard 12; Princeton 0.

SIXTEEN SPECIAL CARS.

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—It took sixteen special trains to carry the crowd that left today for Princeton to attend the football game. It was estimated that between 12,000 and 15,000 persons went from here to Princeton by rail and thousands more by automobile.

Blue and White.

U.S.C. RUGBY TEAM BEATEN DECISIVELY BY L. A. HIGH.

L. A. HIGH, 13; U.S.C., 5.

By consistent, heady playing, the sturdy Blue and White fifteen decisively outplayed the heavy Methodist Rugby artists on their own field yesterday afternoon by the score of 13 to 5.

Aggressive and fast, the lighter High boys followed the ball continually and seldom did it elude the blue-jerseyed men in all its wanderings. It was this constant following-up, coupled with a little better knowledge of the game, that enabled the hilltop men to keep the ball in the opposing side's territory.

The defense of the Cardinals was close and they did not allow the speedy backs to get very much started before they smeared the play. As a result, the teams resorted to kicking and the ball flew from one side to another in several rapid exchanges which kept the bleachers in a continual uproar.

The changed line-up on the university team did not show to any great advantage, with the exception that it gave Tod Wright a chance to show his extraordinary kicking ability, which gained practically all the ground that the U.S.C. men made. As a team, the High School lads were a little better with the boot than their rivals. Conway, Condee and Maguire repeatedly sent the ball down for long gains and it was this advantage that enabled them to threaten the goal line on all occasions, as in the first half neither team could get the ball out clean enough to allow any passing.

The eight pack of the university which so successfully held the northern team had all they could do to break even with the High School seven formation. The High School men were always in position and the pack formed on the run. In the loose rucks, the lighter boys were in their element and they nearly always got the ball back to the half by their close formation. It was the chances obtained from the rucks that gave the fast backs their only chance to advance the ball, as the break-aways on the other side usually smothered the backs on the regular scrums.

CONWAY'S BRILLIANT RUNS.

The first L. A. score came early in the game. Capt. Conway on two brilliant dodging runs took the ball up the line, but in each case the defense proved too strong and the ball was kicked out of danger. On a free kick from a difficult angle, the high school men charged the ball out on the 3-yard-line, and, on the ensuing scrum, Patterson dodged across for the first score and Cass added the extra points.

In the second half Davis, for the University, blocked a kick and dribbled across and rolled over the ball, Condee securing it, but the referee allowed the score for Davis on the ground that he touched the ball first.

The high school men strenuously objected but the decision held. The goal was kicked and with a tie score and only about fifteen minutes to play the fighting spirit of the blue and white men began to tell. They took the ball down into the enemies' side of the field and had the ball on the 1-yard-line inside of two minutes. On the line Patterson again put one over on the forwards by coming in fast from the half-back position, tackling the U.S.C. pass in the air and falling across for the score.

The university gave up all hope at this point and the fast L. A. backs were given a chance to do some more passing as the defense was clearly lagging. They repeatedly carried the ball to near the line, but a fumble or forward always stopped the movement. It remained for Patterson again to do the work and, securing on a scrum, about the 10-yard-line, he cleverly faked a pass out to his backs and then dodged two tacklers for the last try of the day.

THE PLAY IN DETAIL.

The play in detail follows:

L. A. kicked off from the west end of the field, the ball finally going out on the university 25-yard-line. U.S.C., penalized for passing after the ball touched the ground. Cass failed at the attempt at goal from the 30-yard-line.

The drop-out was returned to the 20-yard-line and the university forwards kept the ball in the scrum for no gain twice in succession. They finally heeled out and booted out of danger for thirty yards. The L. A. forwards gave the ball to Patterson, a quick heel-out and Conway got away in a splendid dash for the chalk mark but was stopped after a 30-yard gain, only a few feet short of the mark.

The blue-jersied backs tried repeatedly to get across, but two fumbles spoiled their chances and finally the ball was sent back for a 40-yard gain by the defending side. For a second time Conway dodged free and carreid the play back to a near score.

Schwarts relieved by a good boot, and then both teams exchanged kicks for four or five times in succession,

Something Stirring.

MANY WINTER BALL TEAMS TO PLAY TODAY.

THE WINTER BASEBALL season begins in earnest today with six or eight games in various parts of Southern California. The principal contests will be played in Pomona, Oxnard and this city, while there is to be a game at Ventura. The greater number of the players are semi-professionals and from all accounts no fan need be surprised if some real good prospects are developed for the Coast League.

Kittie Brashear has a strong team at Pomona and another good club is at Oxnard, while the Fillmore and the H.-C clubs are far above the average in the amateur class. Jim Jeffries thinks so much of his aggregation that he has chartered a special car to take it to Pomona for the game there today with Kittie Brashear's aggregation.

The line-ups will be about as follows:

The McCormick Shamrocks are scheduled to play this afternoon against the Los Angeles colored Giants on the Vernon grounds and a hot contest is expected. The line-up of the Giants is a matter of doubt for several prospective colored players were due to arrive here last night to join the Giants.

The line-up of the Shamrocks has been given out as follows:

Reiger, first base; Harris, second base; Harrison, shortstop; McClelland, third base; Criger, center-field; Hap O'Connor, right-field; Tonneson, left-field; Grindle, catcher; Rossback, pitcher. This Rossback is a heaver from the Connecticut League, where he is said to have led the pitchers this year in games won.

Satisfied Owners

Satisfied owners are selling more cars for us than our salesmen. An owner of an E-M-F "30" or Flanders "20" will go out of his way to recommend his car. The reasons are two. He is pleased with his automobile and he is pleased with our service.

Look over the specifications of our E-M-F "30" or Flanders "20." With the assurance of quality that goes with the Studebaker name, combined with exquisite design, where will a dollar buy as much?

U.S.C. RUGBY.

Hill of L. A. finally getting it out close to the goal line. U.S.C. for off-side were penalized, and Cass attempted a hard kick at goal, the ball falling short was charged by the forwards, and from a scrumm near the line Patterson went across for the first score, Crary kicking goal. Score, 5 to 0.

Immediately after the kick-off, both tams played entirely on the defensive, and for the next ten minutes the ball sailed back and forth from the center of the field and into the university side of center. U.S.C. was awarded two free kicks for off-side play, but did not gain materially on the exchange.

Following a mark by Manning in the center of the field, he kicked out to the L. A. 40-yard line. Brougher followed with another to the 25-yard line, and on the following scrumm the three-quarter line of the High School fumbled repeatedly. U.S.C., following up, dribbled to the line where Schwartz was caught for picking out of the ruck the free kick relieved the situation, and the ball was dead near the 30-yard line when time was called.

HIGH SCHOOL VS. U. S. C.

At the kick off in the second period the University men looked very dangerous following the usual exchange which resulted to the adantage of the collegians the ball was booted well into the blue and white territory and on a fumble Maguire knocked out on the 3 yard line. The high school were hard pressed for seeral minutes, two scumms which were held yielded the few yards by dribbling, until finally they got away with a good rush that took the ball ut of danger. Brougher left the game, Milliken taking his place. Patterson immediately relieved by a lucky kick to the U. S. C. 40 yard line which took a lucky bounce out. Condee and Hill gained more ground in the same manner until Tod Wright got away with another of his long boots Davis for U. S. C. following up blocked aMguire's kick afterward being allowed a try in the dash for the ball across the line. Goal was kicked. Score 5 to 5.

Both teams still relied on the time worn kicking game to advance the ball and a series of exchanges resulted in some slight advantage to the high school. The L. A. backs for the first time got in some passing work and Conway and Brooks carried the ball fr seeral short dashes which worked the ball closer and closer to the coveted line.

Hill of L. A. got in two lucky flying swats at the ball which finally ended on the University one yard line. A discussion arose over the linesmans deson, the ball beng finally thrown n at this point which resulted in the second try for L. A. Patterson again doing the work. No goal resulted. Score, L. A. 8; U. S. C. 5.

The L. A. boys were not to be denied and from this point fought hard for their last score. They returned the drop out for a big gain and passed for some more ground. On a scrumm from about the 15 yard line Patterson for the third time proed equal to the occasion and carried the last score across from which Cass added two more points raising the total to 13.

The line up:

Murder!

POMONA STARS GIVE THE QUAKERS AWFUL BEATING.

BY OWEN R. BIRD.

COACH STANTON sent eleven trim Pomona men into the game yesterday afternoon with Whittier and in three-quarters administered one of the worst defeats ever seen on Hadley field to the Quakers.

WIGHT AND SHUTT OUT.

At the end of the first quarter the score was 26 to 0 in favor of Pomona, and just about shows the fierceness of the game. There was no score in the second quarter, mostly due to the fact that Brooks, Wight and Shutt were taken from the game. The first named received a bump on the head that put him on the side-line for the rest of the game, and the other two were ruled out by Referee Wilson on a rather questionable decision. Brooks was tackled by Henderson of Whittier after a 40-yard run. Henderson grabed him and started to carry Brooks back toward his own goal. Brooks struggled to get down and as he was kicking for freedom Quarterback Wight of Pomona, rushed up and piled on top of Henderson and pulled him to earth. Wilson was coming as fast as he could and it looked as though the Pomona men were roughing it with Henderson so he ruled them out. There were many hot words at this juncture and some of the Pomona professors wanted to take the team off the field, but the boys themselves cried for another chance. So with a new backfield the Pomona team started to rip the Quakers to shreds. The game developed into a great battle at this point and no quarter was given on either side.

Pomona backs could not get together during the second quarter but found themselves in the next period and the scoring machine went on right merrily.

The teams lined up Whittier ready to kick off and Pomona spread fanlike over the field to receive. A hush fell over the crowd before the initial clash of the intercollegiate football season for the Conference title.

Rennecker's big foot went into the pigskin with a plunk which could be heard all over the field and the game was on, amid a mighty roar.

Shutt took the ball on the dead run and covered thirty yards before Rennecker brought him to earth. Brooks was sent at the end and gained [illegible] yards. Wight repeated. Then full-back Lutz was given the ball and went twenty-three yards before he was stopped by the whole Whittier team. Shutt made ten yards around end. For two downs Whittier held. Then this Brooks party broke through the right side of the line, ducking three would-be tacklers, and scrambled over the line for the first score of the day, which had been made in two and a half minutes. Shutt kicked the goal and Pomona was started.

WHITTIER LOST HEART.

After the wonderful burst of speed shown the Whittier team went on the defense and lost heart. they were beaten when Brooks broke away from [illegible] the last man in the backfield and scored.

Pomona kicked off to Whittier and [illegible] was downed under the shadow of his own goal. Whittier could not [illegible] the line so tried a forward pass [illegible] to Newlin, which was good for [illegible] yards, but on the next play lost the ball on a fumble, Pomona securing it on the twenty-five yard line. Pomona made a play and was penalized for off side, but on the next play, Wight made a great forward pass to Wilson the latter going over the line clean for the second score of the day. Shutt kicked the goal making the score 13 to 0.

The next score came after one of the most spectacular plays ever seen in the South. Pomona kicked off to Whittier who tried two forward passes in a row both of which were not successful. Rennecker was forced to punt; Wight took the ball at full speed and ran through the entire Whittier team on the thirty yard line then with a clear field planted the ball squarely between the posts for another score. Shutt kicked the goal making the total 18 to 0. It had taken just 12 minutes to make this number of points and the terrible pace was beginning to tell on the Quakers, but the Pomona team was breathing easily and seemed fit for another burst of speed.

AGAIN AT THE GOAL.

Whittier kicked off and in 90 seconds Pomona had gone the length of the field and was once more knocking at the goal gate. On the two yard line the Quakers held for once. Lutz dropped back to the fifteen yard line and just to show his class booted the ball high and far over the goal stakes for three points making 21 in all.

With only two minutes left to play in the first quarter Whittier kicked off and it was almost a sure thing th Pomona would not be able to score. After the kick off the teams exchanged two fast punts and it was Whittier's ball in mid field. The Quakers tried one of their much touted forward passes but Lutz, running like a wild switch engine intercepted the heave and raced 60 yards for a touchdown making 26 points for the first quarter.

The story of the first quarter is the story of the game, as during the rest of the one-sided slaughter it was all Pomona, end runs, forward passes, line plunges and tackle bucks followed each other in sickening rapidity, sickening for th Quakers, and as old Sol was dropping out of sight the game was called amid the wild cheers of the Pomona rooters and the glum silence of the Quaker cohorts.

The rooters and other fans who saw the game were stunned by the wonderful speed shown on the part of Stanton's men, and it looks as though the old Conference flag had a good chance to roost for a third time in the Pomona wash.

OLD PUGILIST RETURNS HOME.

HARRY PEPPERS BACK IN THE OLD TOWN AGAIN.

Famed Once as a Baldwin Jockey in Days Gone by He Becomes an Equally Noted Fighter—Boxed Schreck, Kelly and Flynn and Held His Own With Each Bruiser.

After years of wandering over the country fighting all kinds of big pugs, middleweight Harry Peppers, formerly well known to the older sports in this city, has returned home, having quit the fighting game for good. It is three years since he fought and the chances are that he will not don a glove again unless it be at some benefit or some special purpose.

From second jockey for Lucky Baldwin in 1884, when he rode all the famous old speed burners on every eastern track of note, Peppers next gained more or less fame as the winner of the big thirty-mile endurance race at the old Agricultural Park track in 1884 and down through the succeeding years he got into the fighting game and made himself a name as the California Wonder.

What do you think of a real 154-pound middleweight going against such as Jack Bonner, Jack Root, Jim Flynn, Ed Dunkhorst, Hugo Kelly and Mike Schreck? And further than this he fought a ten-round draw with Flynn, a six-round draw with Hugo Kelly and got a six-round decision over Jack Root.

What do you think of a middleweight who hit Dunkhorst so hard on the jaw that the force of the blow knocked the hitter back full length on the floor? This is what happened to Peppers and no less than four times at that.

Going back to ancient history, Peppers was born in this city on Hill street, between Third and Fourth streets, in 1872 and is 39 years of age. His first professional fight was with a man named Jim Brown in 1889, at the old White Elephant building on North Main street, near the Plaza. He knocked Brown out with one punch. The next year La-Blanche came to this city and tried to stop Peppers in six rounds, but failed. This bout was held in the old Wigwam Theater on Main street, between First and Second streets. Then a pug named Billy Maber agreed to stop Peppers in four rounds, but was himself stopped in two.

Later on he went to San Francisco and for several years was the try-out horse for the old California Athletic Club. While there he knocked out Hank Englehardt in seven rounds, Burt Jackson in two rounds and beat Joe King in seven rounds for the middleweight championship of the Coast. He beat Mulverhill in seven rounds, George Burch in two, Dan Hickey and Jim Williams.

Then he fought Jack Bonner four times, Lon Beckwith, Jack Root, Jim Flynn, Hugo Kelly and Schreck and now, after years of fighting, is back in Los Angeles not yet 40 years of age and willing to let the time pass in peace. He is a well preserved member of the old guard and even now declares he would fight Hugo Kelly if Hugo cannot get any other man. Peppers is another Los Angeles product that turned out to the good and he will be welcomed back among the old folks once again.

TOURS EUROPE IN SIMPLEX.

Lester Gale, the artist-actor, who is scheduled to open an engagement with Florence Norton in "A Woman's Right" at the Twenty-eighth Street Theater, New York, has just returned from his fifth tour of Southern Europe. Accompanied by his wife, he made this trip as he has each previous one, in a ninety-horse-power Simplex. Starting at Havre, Mr. and Mrs. Gale motored southward to see the revival of the automobile Grand Prix at Le Mans, and, after touring through France, crossed the Alps into Italy by way of Little St. Bernard. Their route took them as far east as Vienna, from which place they turned back to Paris. As on their previous journeys, Mrs. Gale will write descriptive articles for one of the large magazines, the illustrating being done by her husband.

men daily banishing fatigue and worry.

But why go on? The possibilities of the human body are limitless.

Realizing the importance of its field and the need of a plant commensurate to its purposes, the Los Angeles Athletic Club went broadly before the patriotic citizens of our town and the result was instantaneous and flattering.

As one of our best known and respected bankers aptly expressed it, "the ability of Los Angeles to respond to anything first-class has never been fathomed."

We set a high mark for ourselves; namely, the establishment of the most up-to-date health emporium in the world. The building of an athletic club of which Los Angeles may well be proud.

That we have been able to build well is due to the liberality of our citizens, to the loyalty of our members, and to the indefatigable efforts of our directors and of our various committees.

How well we have built will be for the future to determine. But with the obstacles we have surmounted comes also the ability to overcome greater ones in the future.

Our organization is such that there is no tearing down. Each adds his brick to the wall. It is a constructive organization; one of the kind that has made Los Angeles famous.

CAMPUS NEWS.

WOMEN at Stanford interested in journalistic work have organized a press club. Miss Virginia Moore, '12, of Los Gatos, was elected president, and Miss Lois Baker, '12, of Los Angeles, secretary.

Nearly all the tickets for the Stanford-California game next Saturday have been sold, $32,209 were the receipts from the sale of the cardboards up to Wednesday night. 15,775 seats have been placed on sale. It may be necessary to erect additional stands at the open end of the field.

Pauly, '12, of San Diego, is developing into the star forward on the California 'varsity. He has been shifted from the front rank to one of the breakaway positions and he is putting up a splendid game.

The undergraduates at Cornell meet at a hotel in Ithaca before every football game at Cornell and march to the field.

For 1912 We Offer Ten Beautiful Designs

THOMAS A. EDISON chooses the Detroit Electric Exclusively as the one car properly made to use effeciently the tremendous capacity of the Edison Battery.

After nine years of unremitting work by the master mind of Edison and the expenditure of two and one-half million dollars, the Edison Battery has the O. K. of the Wizard and the unqualified endorsement of such users as Tiffany & Co, United States Express, Adams Express and more than five hundred Detroit Electric owners,, who have used the battery daily for from two to five years.

Everyone knows that the progress of the electric automobile has been hampered by heavy lead batteries, requiring expert attention and constant renewals at great expense. The Edison Battery is one of the noteworthy achievements of science. It is as superior to the old-fashioned lead batteries as the electric light is to the kerosene lamp.

Gentlemen:

Confirming our understanding, we agree to sell the proportion of our output of batteries that we have reserved for pleasure vehicles for 1912 to you exclusively, provided the present high grade construction of your "Detroit Electric" cars, motors and other appliances is maintained, reserving the right to supply from your quota batteries to Col. Bailey and Gen. Healey, because of Mr. Edison's personal promises to them. And we guarantee that the battery for four years will be capable of developing its rated capacity.

Yours truly

TO THE PUBLIC:—

I would not be in the electric car business today if it had not been for my faith in the practical utility of the electric automobile through the ultimate success of the Edison nickel and steel battery.

We were the first to experiment with the new Edison battery for electric automobiles. We were the first to adopt it. And now with the Edison a proven success, it is a source of much satisfaction to me personally that the Detroit Electric has kept pace with the development of the battery, and that now Mr. Edison chooses our car as the one electric automobile worthy the exclusive use of his battery.

I have always felt that the old lead battery has done excellent work so far as its limitations would permit, but that it was only a step toward the development of a far superior type —a product of the genius of Edison.

Those who have used other kinds of batteries appreciate most the qualities of the Edison. And it is with great pride that we can now give all purchasers of Detroit Electrics the opportunity to use this battery.

W. C. Anderson
President
Anderson Electric Car Co.

For several years Mr. Edison and our engineering staff have done "team work" to produce a battery worthy of the Detroit Electric car and a car worthy of the battery. Mr. Edison has personally seen every blue-print of the car, and today owns and operates a Detroit Electric. From the beginning the Detroit Electric has been built with the Edison battery in mind.

In perfecting our motor, controller and wiring so as to offer the least resistance to the flow of energy from the enormous capacity of the Edison Battery under all conditions, we have also obtained a more economical use of current when the lead battery is used. Sheet-steel-asbestos-lined compartments give absolute protection to the battery and car.

Little wonder then that Mr. Edison gives the Detroit Electric the exclusive rights to install his famous battery in electric pleasure cars. The car has proven that it merits the battery. The battery merits the car. Honors are equal.

Think what this means! The Edison Battery in a Detroit Electric saves 325 pounds in weight over the lead battery and gives much greater permanent capacity. Consider what this means in mileage, speed, tire economy and running expenses.

That is not all. The Edison Battery is practically indestructible. It has no lead to crumble; no acids to destroy paint and running gear; no renewals or washing of plates; no sulphation (the great "white plague" of the lead battery.) Batteries can be left standing charged or discharged, one month, six months or six years without injury. Overcharging or heavy discharging does no harm. The Edison Battery is an investment—not a running expense. Note Mr. Edison's guarantee that the battery must develop its full-rated capacity at the end of four years. Batteries run under severe conditions show larger capacity after 50,000 miles service than their original rated capacity.

For 1912 we will build one chassis in four sizes, 85, 90, 96 and 112-inch wheel base. All with drop frames permitting low hung bodies. Ten stunning body designs.

All body panels are of aluminum. They do not check, crack or warp. That means light weight, long life, continued beauty of finish and easy repair. All fenders are of aluminum, full skirted to protect body from dirt. All models equipped with our famous Direct Shaft Drive—"Chainless."

Explanatory Note—The word "Chainless" does not refer to the absence of side chains alone, but, applied to the shaft drive, means no chain or gear reductions concealed at the motor. A "Chainless" Shaft Drive has 1130 fewer parts than a Shaft Drive constructed with concealed chains.

Wonderful springs of improved design smooth over any unevenness of the road. Ball bearing steering knuckles make steering remarkably easy. Your choice of either Pneumatic or Motz Cushion tires.

Batteries:—Edison, nickel and steel; Detroit, Ironclad and Exide lead. Edison and Ironclad at an additional cost.

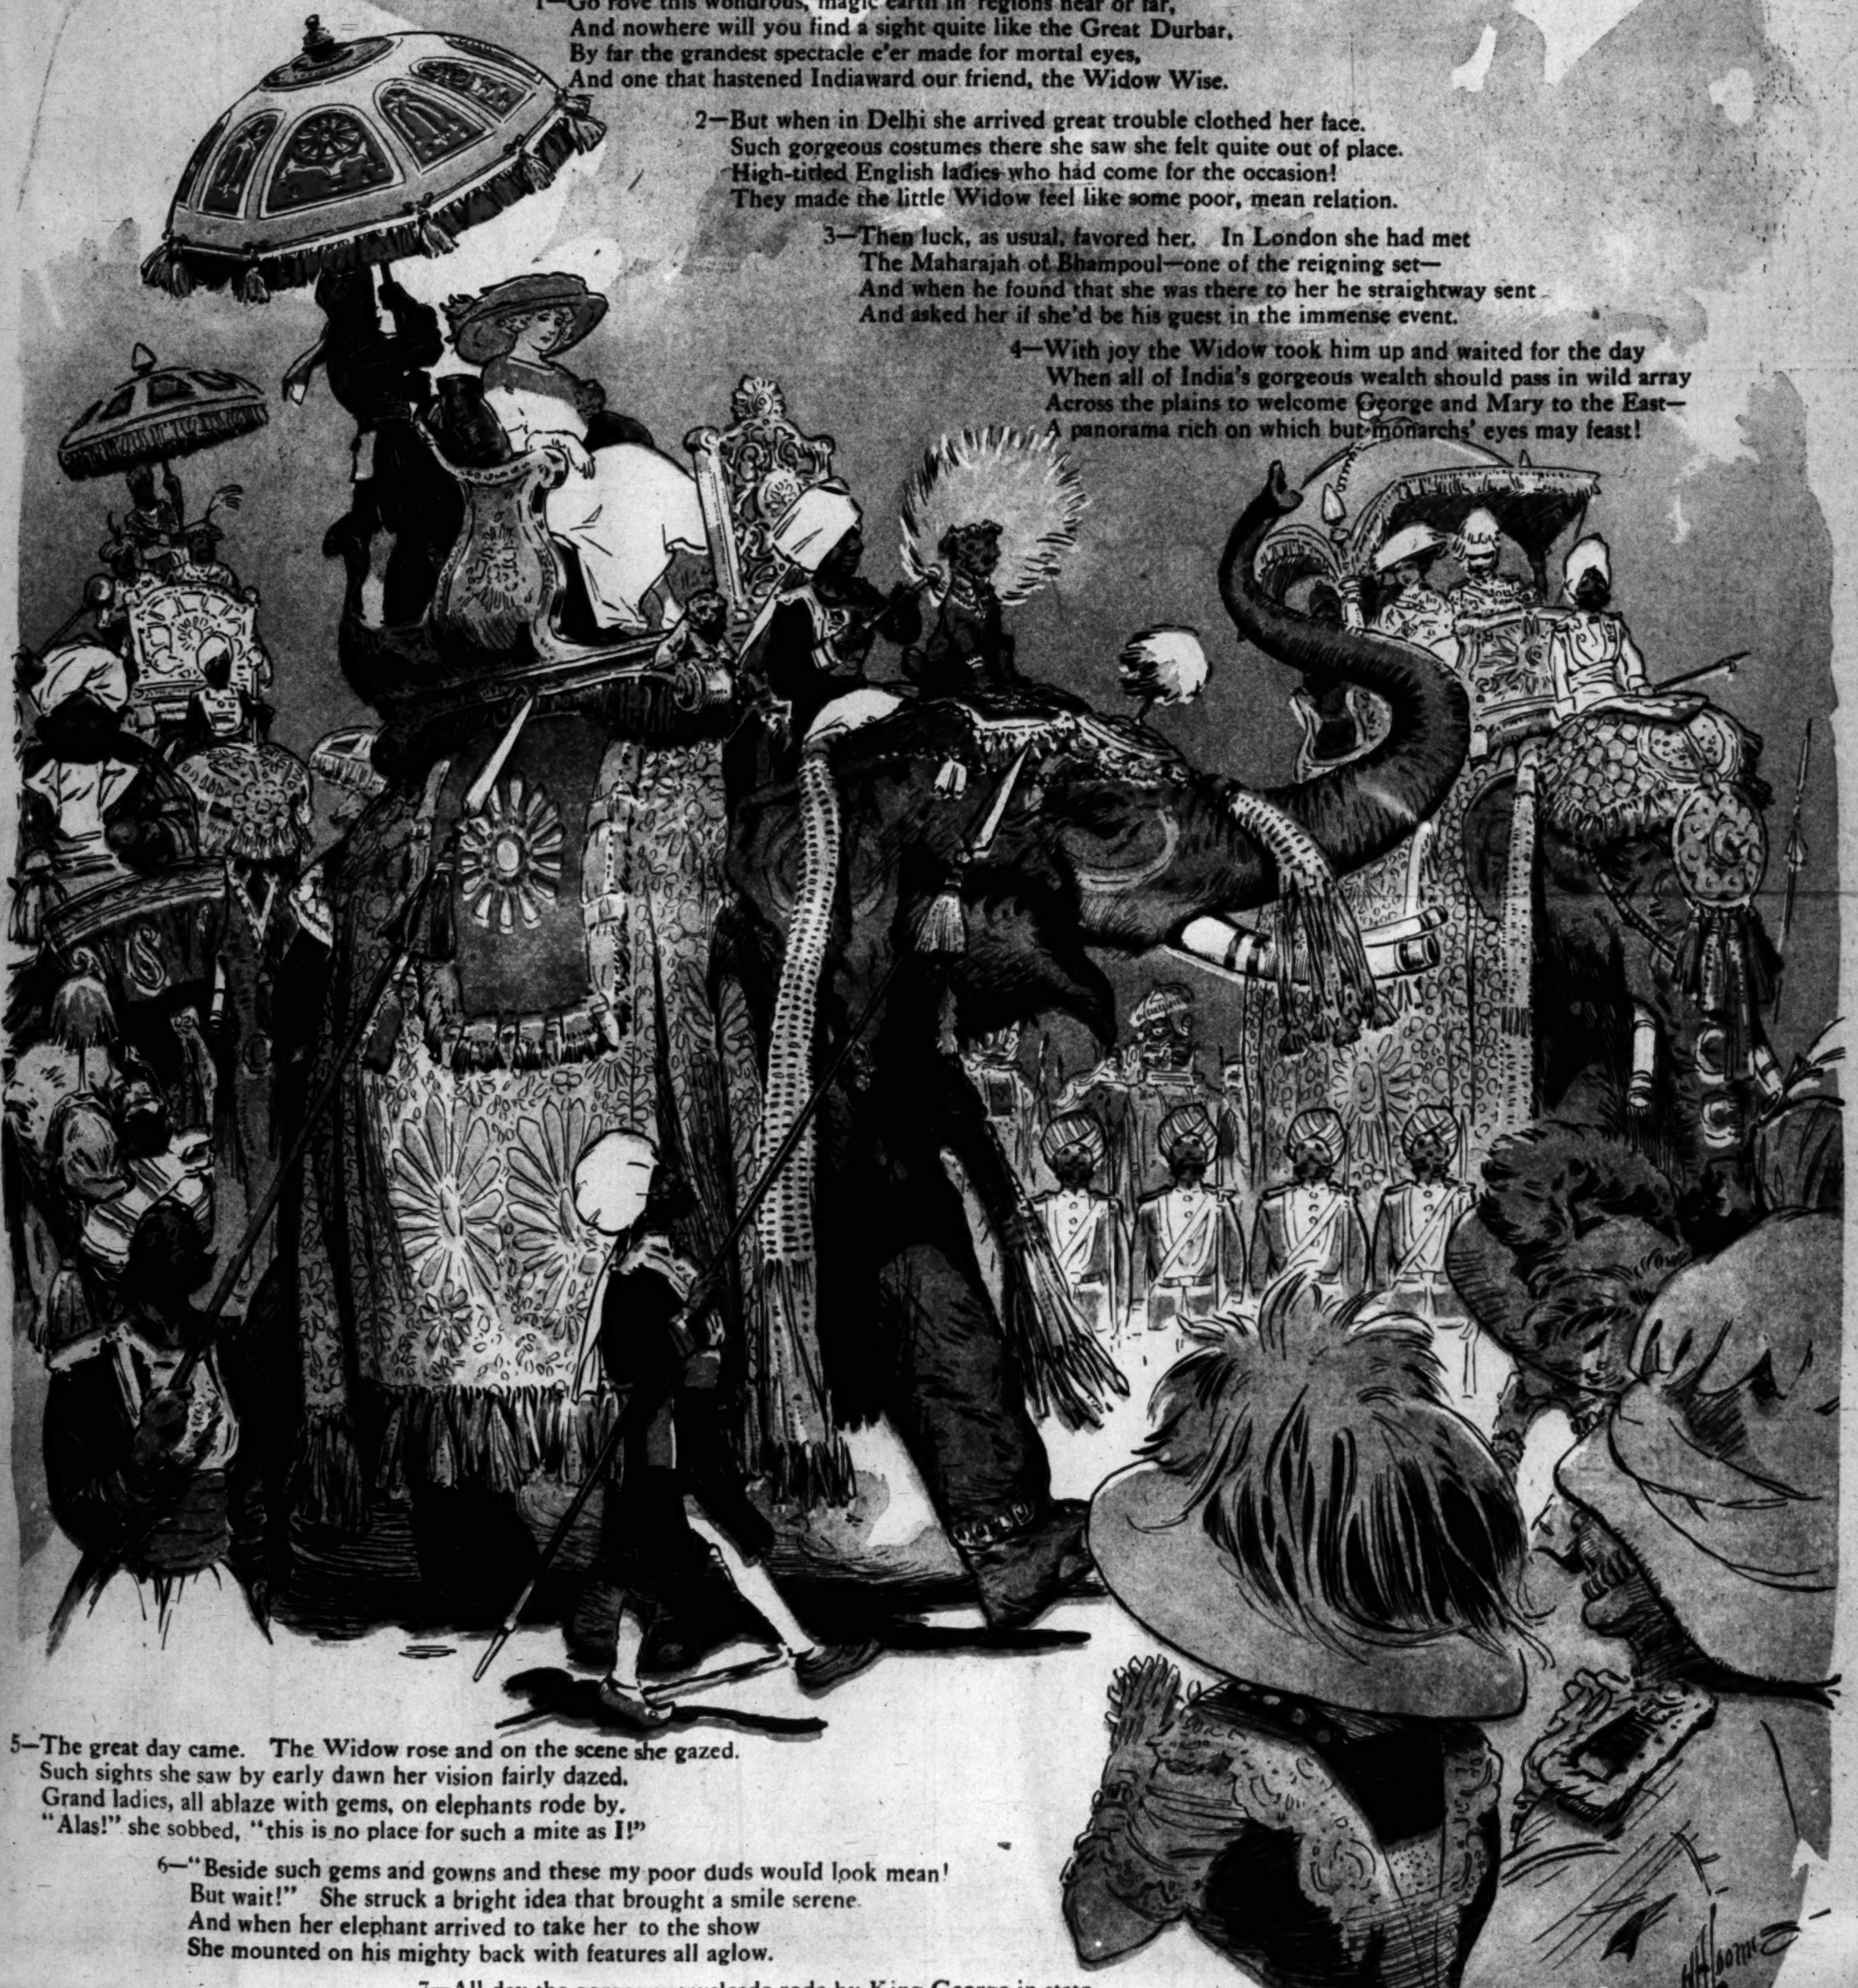
THE WIDOW WISE

Verses by Paul West • Drawings by W. H. Loomis



1—Go rove this wondrous, magic earth in regions near or far,
And nowhere will you find a sight quite like the Great Durbar,
By far the grandest spectacle e'er made for mortal eyes,
And one that hastened Indiaward our friend, the Widow Wise.

2—But when in Delhi she arrived great trouble clothed her face.
Such gorgeous costumes there she saw she felt quite out of place.
High-titled English ladies who had come for the occasion!
They made the little Widow feel like some poor, mean relation.

3—Then luck, as usual, favored her. In London she had met
The Maharajah of Bhampoul—one of the reigning set—
And when he found that she was there to her he straightway sent
And asked her if she'd be his guest in the immense event.

4—With joy the Widow took him up and waited for the day
When all of India's gorgeous wealth should pass in wild array
Across the plains to welcome George and Mary to the East—
A panorama rich on which but monarchs' eyes may feast!

5—The great day came. The Widow rose and on the scene she gazed.
Such sights she saw by early dawn her vision fairly dazed.
Grand ladies, all ablaze with gems, on elephants rode by.
"Alas!" she sobbed, "this is no place for such a mite as I!"

6—"Beside such gems and gowns and these my poor duds would look mean!
But wait!" She struck a bright idea that brought a smile serene.
And when her elephant arrived to take her to the show
She mounted on his mighty back with features all aglow.

7—All day the gorgeous cavalcade rode by King George in state.
The wealth of all the Indies passed—a glare to satiate—
When out across the burning plain an elephant appears,
And on his back a picture rare that brings out shouts and cheers!

8—The Widow, clad in snow white frock, sans gems, sans frills, sans gold!
But standing out conspicuous among that garish crowd!
She heard the praises as she passed. Delight shone in her eyes.
"SIMPLICITY'S THE BEST TRUMP YET!" exclaimed the Widow Wise.

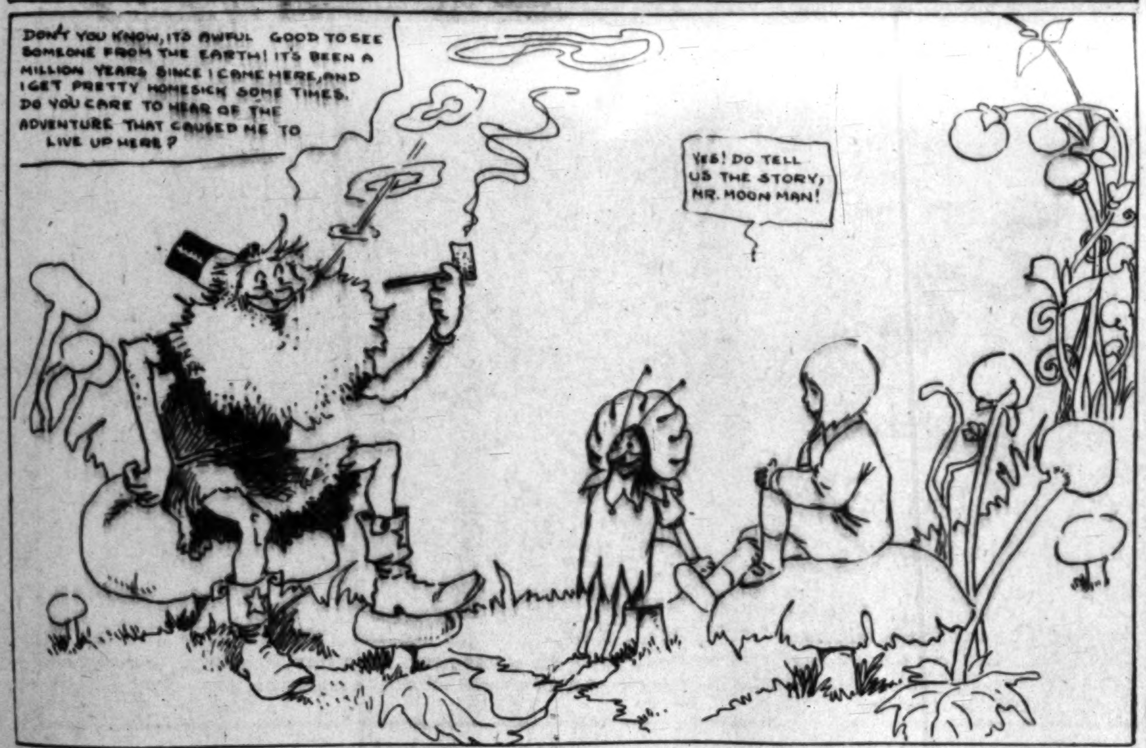
MR. TWEE DEEDLE, IS THERE REALLY A MAN IN THE MOON? WHAT MAKES THE FACE THAT WE SEE?
THE FACE IS THE LAND ON THE MOON. LETS GO UP AND SEE, I'VE NEVER BEEN THERE, SO I DO NOT KNOW IF THERE ARE ANY PEOPLE THERE
LOOK, DICKIE! SEE THE MOUNTAINS AND VALLEYS!
NO WONDER PEOPLE SAY THE MOON IS MADE OF CHEESE! IT LOOKS LIKE A SWITZER CHEESE!
ISN'T IT BEAUTIFUL, MR. TWEE DEEDLE?
I HAVEN'T SEEN ANY PEOPLE, HAVE YOU?
SAY! WAIT A MINUTE! ARE YOU FROM THE EARTH!
WHERE SHALL WE GO, MR. TWEE DEEDLE? HOW CAN YOU TELL WHICH IS NORTH OR SOUTH?
I'M SURE I DON'T KNOW HOW TO TELL. BUT I GUESS IT DOESN'T MATTER.



DON'T YOU KNOW, IT'S AWFUL GOOD TO SEE SOMEONE FROM THE EARTH! IT'S BEEN A MILLION YEARS SINCE I CAME HERE, AND I GET PRETTY HOMESICK SOME TIMES. DO YOU CARE TO HEAR OF THE ADVENTURE THAT CAUSED ME TO LIVE UP HERE?
YES! DO TELL US THE STORY, MR. MOON MAN!

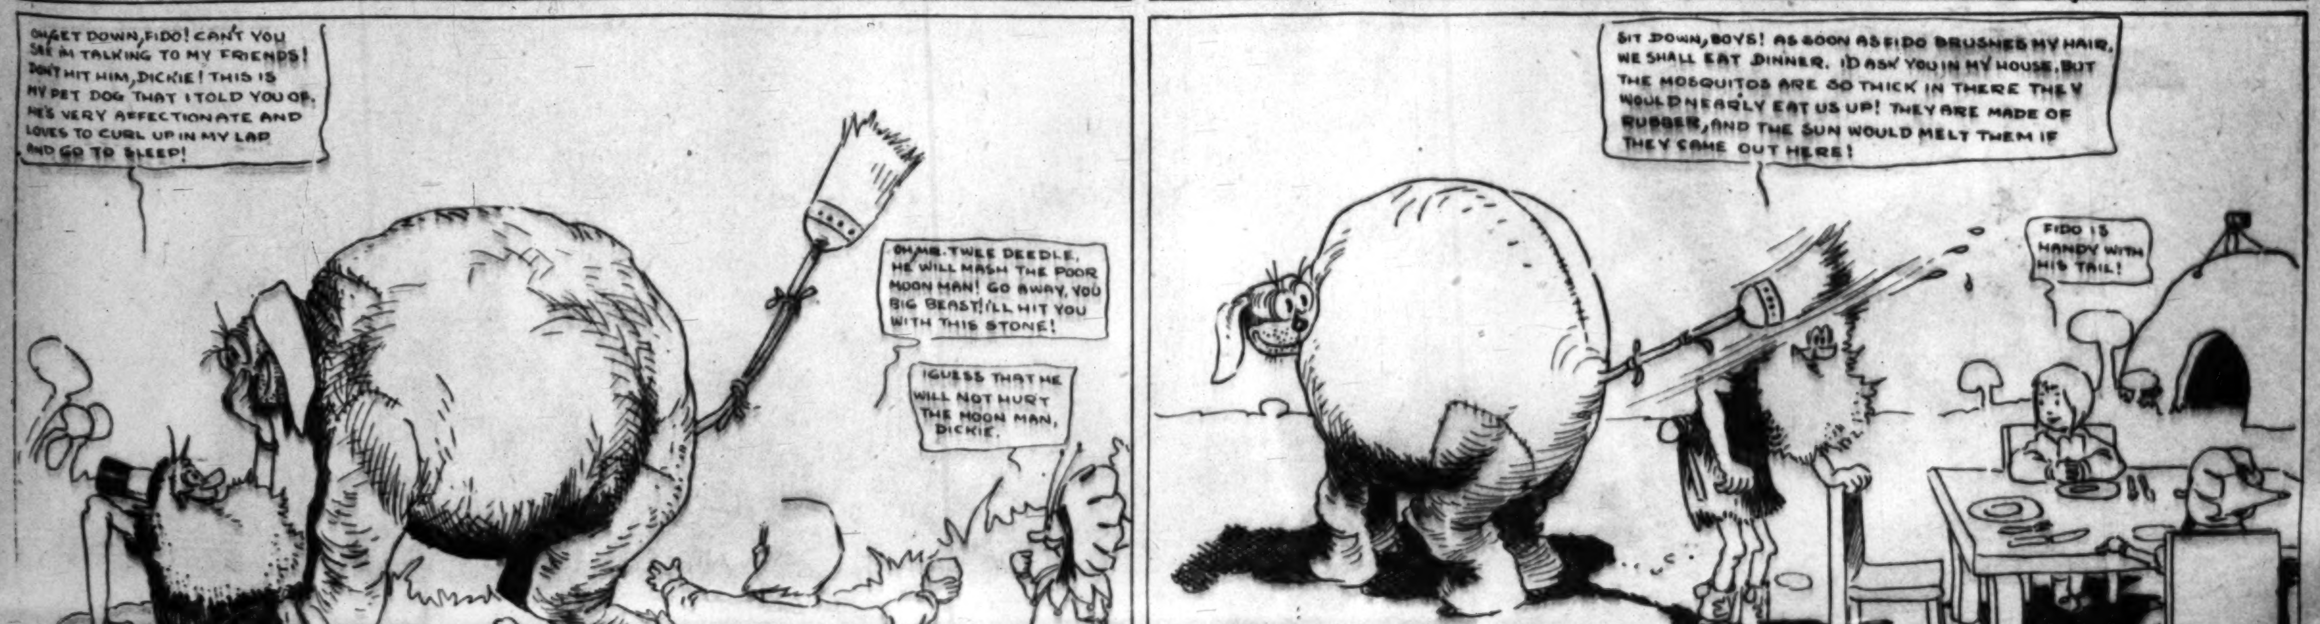
The Tearful Tale of the Moon Man.

"Yes, sir, it was a million years ago yesterday, and I remember that mamma said:—Willie, run up to Mashburger's grocery and get a pound of knick knack knuckles and three clam shells worth of liver pudding for dinner."

So I ran along the stone cliff toward the grocery, but just as I passed Schmidtmeir's, I saw a big Wagaboo weeping as if his heart would break.

I asked him why he was weeping such salty tears, and he said, "If you were a Wagaboo you would weep too!" And perhaps I would, for I have never seen a Wagaboo yet that wasn't weeping. Perhaps you boys do not know that Wagaboos are never happy unless they are discontented, so they tie one another's tails in hard knots so that they will have something to cry about.

Anyway, when I untied sixteen knots in the Wagaboo's tail it made him so contented that he was unhappy, and he caught me up with his trunk and threw me so high in the air that I bumped against a comet. I do not know where the comet came from, but it soon fell right on the moon and I rolled off into a puddle of ice cream soda. I guess I would have drowned if it hadn't been for Fido; he pulled me out, and we have been good friends ever since.



OH GET DOWN, FIDO! CAN'T YOU SEE I'M TALKING TO MY FRIENDS! DON'T HIT HIM, DICKIE! THIS IS MY PET DOG THAT I TOLD YOU OF. HE'S VERY AFFECTIONATE AND LOVES TO CURL UP IN MY LAP AND GO TO SLEEP!
OH MR. TWEE DEEDLE, HE WILL MASH THE POOR MOON MAN! GO AWAY, YOU BIG BEAST! I'LL HIT YOU WITH THIS STONE!
I GUESS THAT HE WILL NOT HURT THE MOON MAN, DICKIE.
SIT DOWN, BOYS! AS SOON AS FIDO BRUSHES MY HAIR, WE SHALL EAT DINNER. I'D ASK YOU IN MY HOUSE, BUT THE MOSQUITOS ARE SO THICK IN THERE THEY WOULD NEARLY EAT US UP! THEY ARE MADE OF RUBBER, AND THE SUN WOULD MELT THEM IF THEY CAME OUT HERE!
FIDO IS HANDY WITH HIS TAIL!

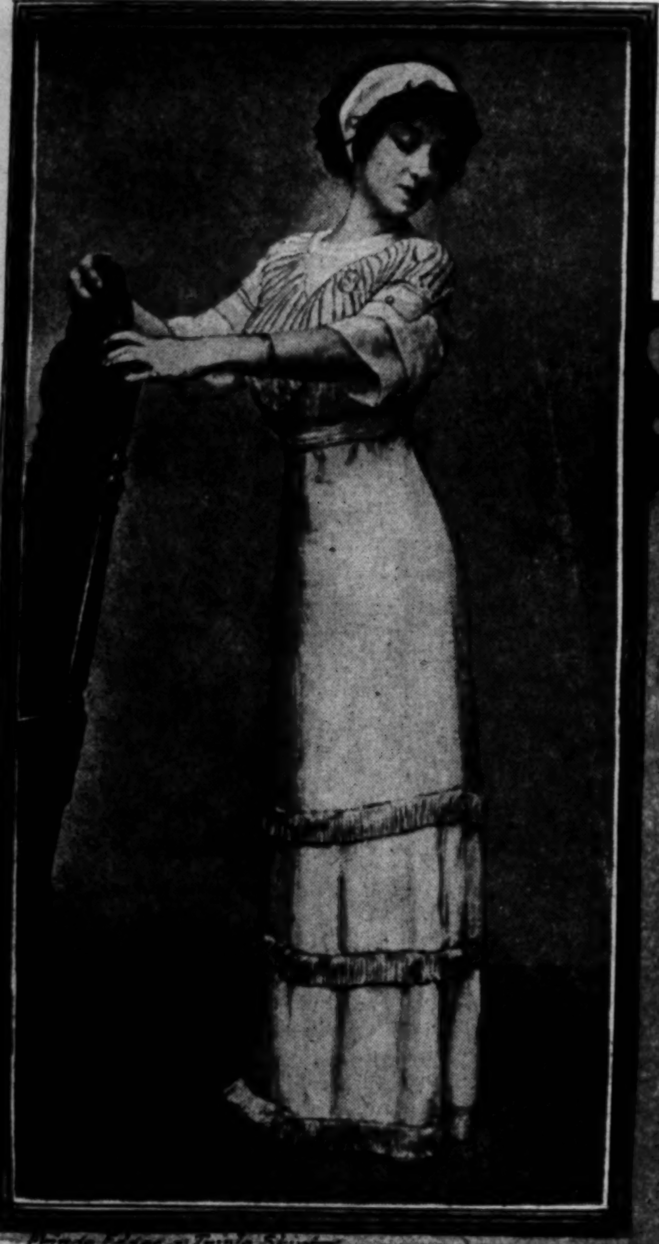
The Turns of Fashion's Wheel



Fringe Edges a Triple Skirt

EVER changing, and yet bringing to the top revivals of old styles, modifications of favorite modes and alliances of modistic ideas that have survived from the last season, fashion's wheel turns. Let it be added that the wheel has turned in circles that favor lovely woman at all hours of the day.

Let us look at the features that have been emphasized in the season's fashions. For evening there is a beautiful gown of satin and lace. A bolero effect of lace is edged in front with ball fringe. There is a crossed fichu line in back, one side ending in a long court train, which is square. A pleating of net edges the skirt. With this is worn the new headdress of metallic thread and beads suggesting a Dutch bandeau.

Back again in the field of fashion has come the quilling, or ruching, of silk. It edges the skirt above the broad hem. This is of frayed satin, laid in double box-pleats and caught down to the center line of stitching, just as your mother used to make it. This is a particularly favored trimming on sleeves, the top of a bodice and the skirt. It is easily made and effective. Notice the bunch of flowers that holds down the folds of the bodice. This, or a large single flower, is an insistent note on evening gowns.

Do not forget the single rever n the separate blouse. This may be of satin, or mousseline, or chiffon; it may be of contrasting shades, stripes and plaids being greatly favored. But it is here, helping designers to carry out the one-sided effect that is a feature of the season.

The triple skirt has returned. It is nothing but a variation of the tunic idea; but it is here and is especially good for a tall woman. It is edged with silk fringe—the feature of the season's decoration.

As a modification of the sailor collar idea, there is shown a deep collar, rounded to be strictly in turn and piped with buttons. This type of collar is shown on suits, wraps, coats and all kinds of gowns. It is easily constructed and effective. While looking at this model, observe the puffed sleeve that is inserted in the kimono shape. Yes, the fullness is returning slowly but surely.

The tale of the tunic has been continued from last year, but the up-to-date woman wears her tunic "with a difference." Today it must be slashed, so that the effect of an overskirt is given. In the little dance frock suitable for a young girl the pale cream-colored marquisette is draped over yellow satin. The fichu is fringed and embroidered and the tunic is similarly decorated. A high line is shown, emphasizing the empire modes.

A sweeping glance over these turns of fashion will bring to your mind the wide field from which you can choose. All periods have been favored, the Louis rever being just as prominent as grandmother's fringe or Marie Antoinette's fichu. It is the clever woman who is cognizant of her own lines who will stop the wheel in its turning when her own becoming mode is on top.

A SQUARE PEG IN A ROUND HOLE

THE phrase generally describes a misfitted man or woman who is hopelessly incapacitated from the performance of duties selected by himself or herself or allotted by fate.

"The woods" (which I take to mean the world) "is full of them"—fools who rush in where angels fear to tread, presumptuous, vainglorious and arrogant, the laughing stock of acquaintances, the grief of friends. Much study of mankind has led me to the conviction that the one and only really ridiculous thing in life in pretension.

Mark Twain put it patly, if roughly, to a blatant poetaster:

> "O, cease your silly complaint!
> What's the use of pretending to be what you ain't?"

Women who pretend to be amiable or accomplished when they are bad-tempered and, at the best, "well-smattered"; men who plume themselves upon business sagacity when a child could circumvent them; vulgarians who ape the manners and customs of their superiors in birth and breeding—most despicable of the crew; the Pecksniffs and Chadbands who dishonor the churches they think they adorn—these are specimen square pegs which are the laughing stock of the community when they wriggle themselves into round holes and delude their distorted fancy into the belief that they are a neat fit.

Our business today is with quite another class, namely, with the discouragingly large number of human pegs that might round off square corners and will not.

If there be a family circle of fair size which has not in it one "kinky" member, I have yet to see it. The word "circle" conveys the generally accepted theory of what the household should be that is bound together by kindred blood and identity of interests. Disbelievers in heredity maintain that the shaping and coloring of the child's mind and disposition depend wholly upon environment. The infant is plastic clay; parent, guardian, teacher is the potter whose molding hand determines what form the clay shall assume and keep. The theory is all right. In effect, no two children of one family, brought up under precisely similar influences, are duplicates the one of the other. Each boy and girl has his and her individual characteristics. Some of these distinctive traits are idiosyncrasies. And where three or four are gathered together under the parental roof we find among them a "kinky" boy or girl, man or woman, as surely as the traditional black sheep runs and pastures with the rest of the flock.

"Tom must not be judged by the standards set for his brothers and sisters," pleads the mother to friend or guest. "He is shy and taciturn to a degree that makes him appear ungracious and even rude at times. But his heart is in the right place. He was born odd."

In other words, Tom is the obstinate section that mars the symmetry of the dissected family map or pictures when the parents would put it together, the square peg that refuses to be rounded. Under the "advanced" systems of family government, of which we talked together some weeks ago, the sharp angles are a hopeless puzzle. Having been born odd, it must need be that Tom, in following out the natural bent of his "individuality," will remain odd—or, if you choose, square—to the end of his days. After the mother admits to herself and others that he is not to be judged by the commonplace standards respected by the rest of the household, kinks and corners are more pronounced with his growth. He sulks under reproof; he fights his brothers and berates his sisters and openly defies his parents when he has "one of his ugly turns," and goes unwhipped because it is "only his way."

Only his way! How often and with what extremity of disgust we hearken to the pitiful excuse for the eccentricities of bigger folk than our poor, ill-used boy! "Ill-used," inasmuch as the guardians appointed to the charge of his soul are letting the bent sapling grow and toughen into a crooked tree—spiritual deformity.

I have in my eye a man who devours his meals as a wolf might tear a carcass in the darkest corner of his den. From the time he sits down to the table until he kicks back his chair and stalks out of the room without uttering a syllable of apology, he never opens his mouth except to stuff food into it. He looks neither to the right nor the left, before or after, but with head sunk into his neck, as a lobster in his shell, he is oblivious to everything but his loaded plate. Chancing to sit next to him once in the house of a common acquaintance, I was so unlucky as to address a remark to him upon a subject with which I had reason to know he was thoroughly acquainted. Reasoning from experience with other fellow-mortals, I imagined he would be flattered by the appeal to him, as a recognized authority, to settle the question under discussion. He glowered at me out of the corner of one eye, the beetling brows lowering, as he discovered that he was spoken to, and emitted three consecutive grunts. To this hour I do not know whether they expressed dissent or acquiescence, or if they were merely brutish protest against my temerity.

In the drawing room, when we had left the animals to feed undisturbed by feminine observation, his wife—a gentle, refined little woman—sought me out and "hoped I had not been disconcerted by Mr. Orson's reticence at the table."

I should not have selected the noun, but I bowed and murmured a polite equivocation.

"My husband does himself great injustice by his peculiarities of manner," she went on to say, sinking her voice to a confidential key. "He has fine feelings and a warm heart. He is one of the noblest and best of men. His early education fostered certain natural eccentricities into incurable habits. For instance, as a child, he had a dislike to eating with the family and, I have heard his mother say, behaved so badly when forced to come to the table that she gave over trying to make him do it. She let him eat in the nursery until he was 10 years old. After that his meals were taken up to his room. I told her once that it was a pity the habit was confirmed by indulgence, but she declared with tears in her eyes that it was born in him and incorrigible."

I held my peace. I did not believe then, any more than I think now, that the square peg could not have been pared and sandpapered into fitness for the family circle. Parental weakness had confirmed the "kink."

There slipped into my mind—as if it had been repeated in my very ear—a strong (the "advanced" thinker would brand it as a "brutal") speech of a New England father when told that a neighbor's son, 5 years of age, "could not be broken of swearing":

"I would break the habit, or I would break his neck!"

Yet the speaker was the wisest and most just of disciplinarians.

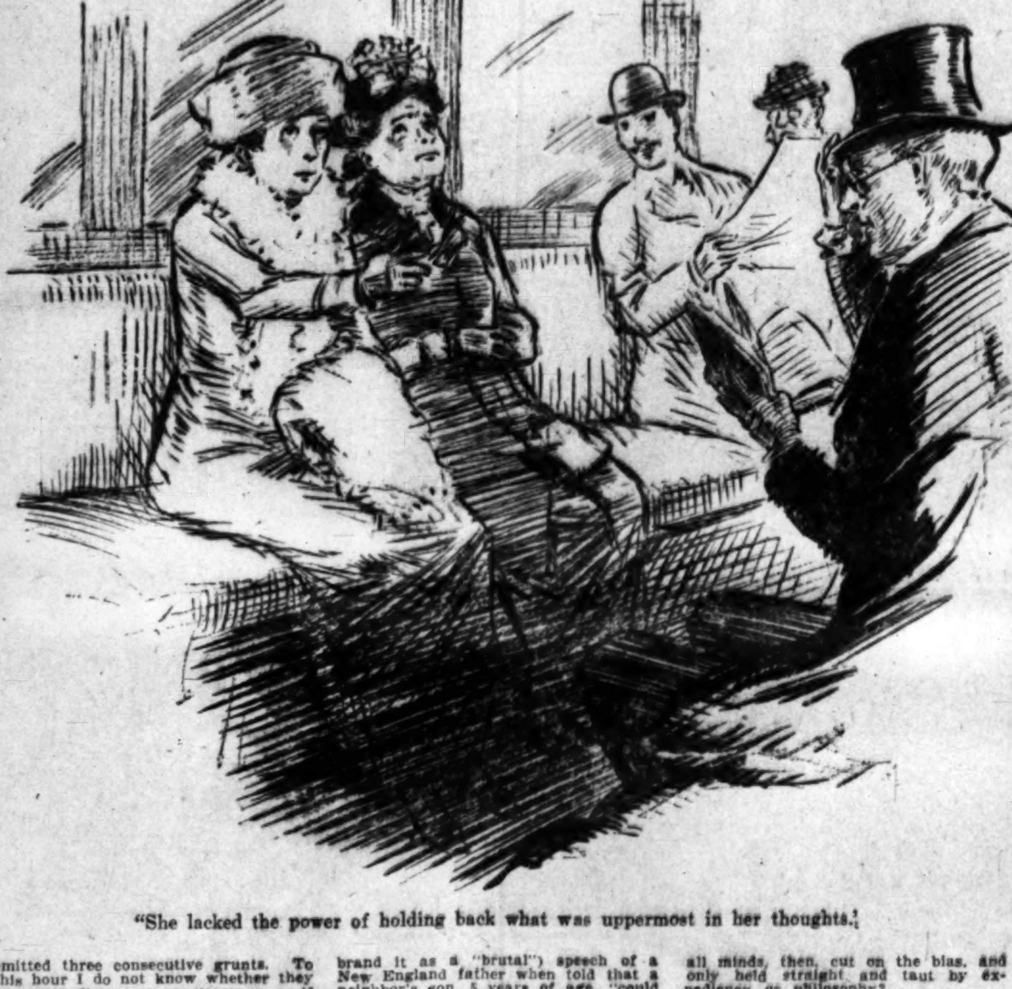
I hold that the mother of the "odd" boy would have done him less harm by severe and continued discipline through a term of weeks than in allowing him to grow up into a boor and a mortification to those who knew his real worth under the repulsive hide.

Another square peg is of the other sex. To do women justice, their inborn regard for appearances tends to restrain open manifestation of eccentric dissimilarity to their associates. The virago is often smooth to silkiness of speech in society. "Too sweet to be wholesome!" as I heard one old lady say of her. For untold generations woman's metier has been to please and to attract, and the rod of the outspoken New Woman cannot drive it far from her, even in the twentieth century. Yet there crop up through the crust of conventionality occasional exceptions to the rank and file of the "pretty-behaved." Thus our old mammies used to commend their nurselings who spoke when spoken to, did not gobble their food and kept clean faces and aprons.

The exception to the household roundness of the pegs, whittled down to glide without friction into the socket fashioned for them, prides herself upon "speaking her mind" in every condition of life and under all circumstances.

Is this a good time for calling attention to the amusing, or it is a melancholy fact, that to "speak one's mind" invariably means that something disagreeable is said? Something uncharitable or denunciatory or sarcastic of somebody else, present or absent? Are all minds, then, cut on the bias, and only held straight and taut by expediency or philosophy?

Returning to our "frank" woman, I really doubt if she be more ill-natured than a majority of her acquaintances. But from her babyhood she lacked the power of holding back whatever happened to be uppermost in her thoughts. Her mother tells now of catastrophes brought about by "Emma's uncontrollable tongue. She never could repress anything that she thought or heard. She set the whole neighborhood by the ears by the time she was 10 years old, and she has been at it ever since. She is as well-meaning as any of us. It is only her way!"



"She lacked the power of holding back what was uppermost in her thoughts."

I was in the street car with her one day, when she accosted a fellow-passenger with a mild, intellectual face. He sat across the aisle from her and she had to raise her voice to carry the question to his ear:

"You are Professor M., of Blankinton University, I believe?"

The man lifted his hat. "I am, madam."

"What do you teach there?"

The professor smiled politely. "Mine is the chair of English literature."

"I didn't ask you what chair you have. I asked what do you teach there?"

The hat was lifted ever so slightly again. Not a shadow crossed the pleasant face.

"I teach English literature, madam."

All within hearing turned to look at the tart catechist; several turned aside to conceal smiles; one man shrugged his shoulders contemptuously. For my part, I blushed for my sex.

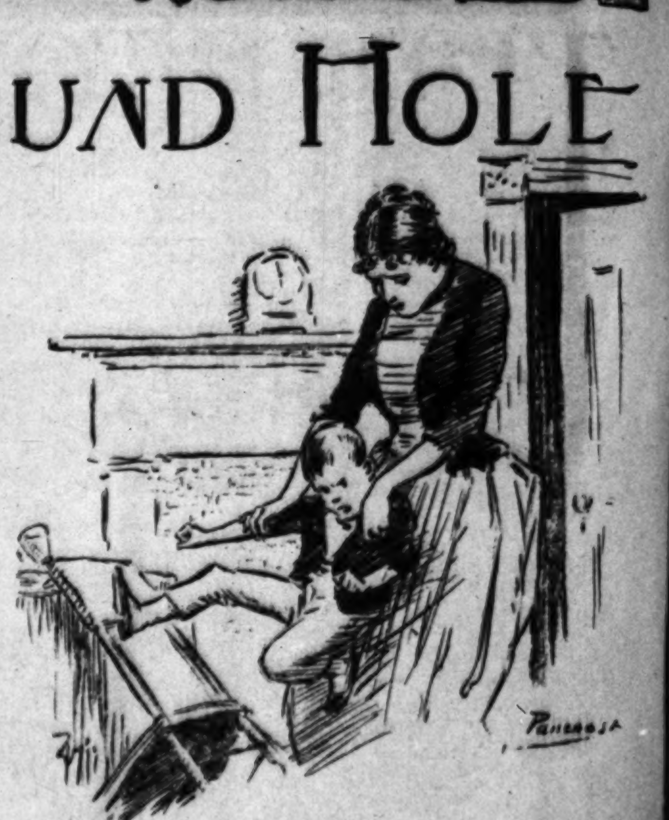
Seriously and without prejudice, what right has any one to have a "way" that interferes with the well-being or taste of an innocent fellow-being? Upon what grounds may the Golden Rule and the laws of polite society be ruled out of court that the kinky one may offend sight and hearing? What right has the peg to be square when decency, good breeding and right feeling demand that it fit into a round hole? Why should the wanton offender against the gospel of conventionality go scot free upon the plea of native and cultivated disinclination to conduct himself aright?

Another branch of my subject applies especially to the parents of school children. This is the age of specialties in every profession. I have nothing to urge against the eclectic system that seeks to perfect each student in the line of study and practice for which he is best fitted by nature and toward which he inclines most decidedly. If I may sometimes cherish a secret regret that the all-around familiarity with the standard studies of fifty years agone is a thing of the past; if I could wish that the lad whose forte is mathematics wrote a clerkly hand and were less original in his orthography; if I did not so frequently hear the brilliant chemist or physicist avow without shame his ignorance of ancient and modern history—I bow with what grace I can counterfeit to the consensus of popular opinion as to the expediency of the successful man knowing one thing well, instead of acquiring a superficial knowledge of a dozen "isms."

I do affirm that parents are in danger of accepting too readily the decision of children that they are not able to cope successfully with this or that science or art. A boy protests that he cannot master even the lower branches of mathematics. He loves history; he is not averse to languages; he "adores" music, and would spend upon the study of the divine art the energies tyrannical teachers insist upon his squandering upon examples and problems. He means to make music the business of his life. What possible use can he have for mathematics? He has been stupid at figures all his life.

A girl turns sick at the thought of studying languages. Good old English is enough for her. She brings to the support of her petition to be allowed to "cut out" French and German from her list of tasks the testimony of her teacher that she rarely has a tolerably perfect lesson in either of these tongues, albeit not deficient in intelligence.

A third pupil finds history "as dry as dust and sees neither rhyme nor reason in stuffing her mind with stories of what happened a thousand years ago. There are always the newspapers to keep one abreast of the happenings in the world of today." She wants "something alive that will make a fellow sit up and take notice."

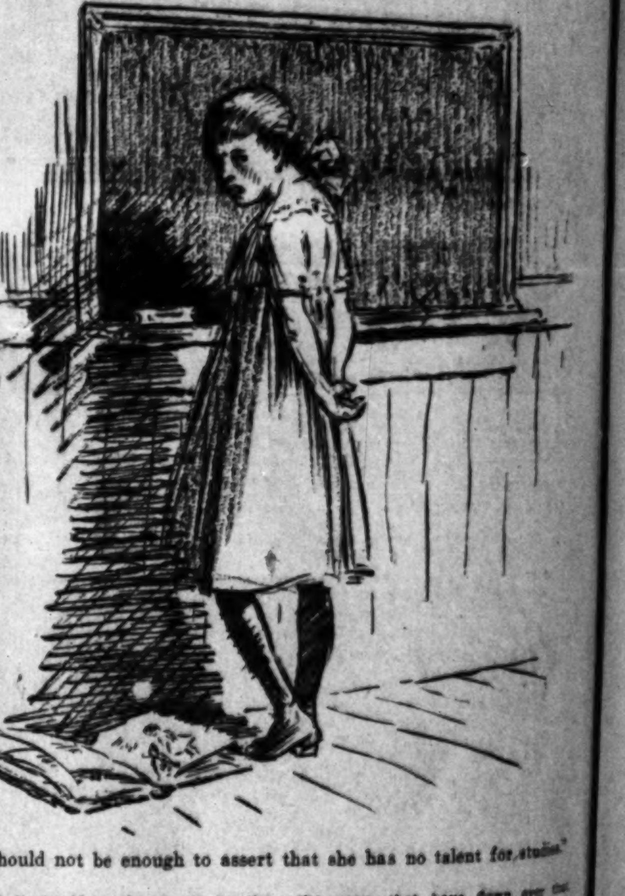


"Behaved so badly that she stopped trying to make him come."

Are we likely to run into the extreme of specialism?

Comte, the celebrated founder of positive philosophy, expressed the fear over fifty years ago: "All specialism of study, one-sidedness of view and division of labor is dangerous."

In the opinion of the thoughtful parent, it should not be enough for the child to assert that he has no talent for studies which his wiser instructors consider essential to a thorough education. The rash youngster may confound talent with taste—a mistake, by the way, that is overcrowding our art schools. It is not enough that one likes to draw and paint, and enjoys one's own playing and singing, to convince the cooler-headed instructor that the learner "possesses talent of a rare order." Least of all does it follow that, when one detests mathematics, it is needless cruelty to exact blackboard exercises and tasks in mental arithmetic from him.



"It should not be enough to assert that she has no talent for studies."

I speak with feeling upon this last point. My debt of gratitude is vast to the preceptor who, when I laid my face down upon Euclid with a half-sob of "There's no use trying! I never had any head for mathematics!" quoted gently but firmly, "If the iron be blunt, a man must lay to it more strength."

The lesson has stayed by me for all the years that have flown over that head since that hour of deep discouragement. Had I heard the pessimistic proverb then, it would have burst out with the sob:

"There's no use trying to fit a square peg into a round hole."

Make very sure that the peg ought to be square, and not round, before you give up the fight.

THE HOUSEMOTHERS' EXCHANGE

IMPORTANT NOTICE

BECAUSE of the enormous number of letters sent to the Exchange, I must ask contributors to limit their communications to 100 words, except in cases of formulas or recipes which require greater space. I want all my correspondents to have a showing in the Corner, and if my request in this respect is complied with it will be possible to print many more letters.

Attention is called to the fact that Marion Harland cannot receive money for patterns, as she has no connection with any department that sells them.

A Protest

I AM moved by the letter from "A Shopgirl," published in your Exchange a while ago, to speak out my thought. You may not make room for me in your columns, but I shall have "freed my mind."

Isn't here the old way of holding the world responsible for our mistakes? How can one so unfitted for the duties of the position she would take expect success? With evidently no training in any line of systematic labor, what can result in her case but the wages and conditions of the incompetent laborer? What business, may I ask, has the daughter of a poor clergyman to grow up with no practical knowledge of cookery? She ought to have acquired this in her home. Is the society of the girls employed in such a store as she describes, then, very much better than that of the kitchen maids at whom she scoffs? Does her hall bedroom offer her social advantages superior to those enjoyed by the maids in good places?

I say "good places" advisedly, for the American girl who can cook, is bright, neat and willing, may choose her own place. She will not have to stay amid unpleasant surroundings while the demand for woman's work is so great as at present. A girl of the right kind can find a place where she will be treated according to her deserts, and life be much easier and better than that she describes in the letter referred to.

In spite of these established facts, girls are turning their backs upon homework and housekeeping, and crowding in to cities, to department stores and hall bedrooms.

SOUTH DAKOTA (Huron, S. D.).

No reader who knows life as it now is in our cities and towns will deny the sound, practical sense of this letter. Yet the problem of social caste is as fiercely debated between shopgirl and the domestic in a private family as the question of precedence in the ducal drawing room.

In close connection with this communication I have one written in a different vein:

You speak complacently of the pleasing domestic picture that met your eye when you looked into your kitchen to give a forgotten order to your cook. Your maids were seated in rocking chairs under the droplight, one busy with a bit of embroidery, the other reading aloud. It was a wet evening, and as you went back to your own sitting room and desk, you reflected satisfiedly upon the difference between them and the factory girl, who had exchanged her wet clothes for dry, had her supper in a sixth-rate boarding house and gone up to a sixth-floor hall bedroom, in which she must sit and sleep. You don't put it just that way, but that was what you implied. Now, not being a novelist or a sentimentalist, I fail to see the two pictures with your eyes.

In the first place, your factory girl would not be chased up to her room by her employer to remind her of tomorrow's work.

In the next place, how would you like for your daughter to have no other place to receive her guests, and to sit after the day's work is done, than her workshop? And that is what the kitchen is to the girl out at service.

The sooner you and other theoretical writers acknowledge that in this country the term "servant" is equivalent to "degradation," the better for all parties concerned, in the ridiculous attempt to make them out to be anything but household drudges, at the beck and call of women whose only claim to superiority is that they have a few more dollars than the persons they employ and look down upon.

ONE TRUTH TELLER (New Brunswick, N. J.).

As you request in a postscript, I give the body of your epistle without the alteration of a word. While we are speaking what we consider to be the truth, it is my right to be as outspoken as my censor.

I dissent in toto from the statement that "servant" and "degradation" are indissolubly linked together in the minds of decent Christian folk in this country. The highest officer of our republic proudly styles himself "the servant of the people." As he is! Nor do I forget who set the crown of honor upon the word, "Him that is greatest among you, let him be your servant." And, "I am among you as one who serves."

My employe is every whit as respectable in her position as I am in mine. (I have written and said that a hundred times before, it would seem to no purpose!) As to the comparative comfort of sitting in a tidy, warm, bright "workroom" in the evening and then going to bed in a comfortable chamber as well appointed in essentials as my own, and sitting, dressing and undressing, bathing and receiving visitors in a small, stuffy bedroom—I am content to leave the decision to readers.

Again, the women who were brought up in farmhouses or in cramped city apartments habitually sat, morning, noon and evening, in kitchens so poorly provided with the comforts my maids "couldn't live without" that their present quarters are luxurious by contrast.

As to the intrusion of the employer upon the seclusion of her maid in out-of-work hours, I have but to explain that the forgotten order had to do with a measure that would lighten the next day's work.

Dear fellow-housemothers, is it not time that these unprofitable skirmishes upon debatable ground should be forbidden by those who have the interest of both classes at heart? Our domestics are not a body of unprincipled nomads, with but one purpose in that side of their life that touches ours, and that to cheat and worry us, their (nominal) mistresses, by every means at their command. They are not in league to torment us, any more than we are bent upon oppressing and "degrading" them. There are grievous defects in our so-called "system" of domestic service, the most serious of these arising from the utter lack of loyalty to one another in the housewives themselves. But it is not a sink of corruption, and each of us has it in her power to improve it by obeying the municipal ordinance which worked so well in Jerusalem of old, to wit, keeping the street clean in front of one's own door.

A Paste

Please publish in the Exchange a recipe for making library paste, and if possible, in your next issue.

A. J. S. (Winona, Minn.).

I have said so often how impossible it is to answer a query in "our next issue," it would be superfluous to repeat it here.

Library Paste

Wet a cupful of sifted flour to a smooth batter with cold water. Have ready a pint and a cupful of boiling water in which has been dissolved a heaping teaspoonful of powdered alum. Cook in a double kettle, stirring often, until it is of the right consistency. Add then a teaspoonful of oil of cedar or oil of cinnamon, or—unless you object to the odor—the same quantity of carbolic acid. This is meant to keep the paste from souring. Put into small, wide-mouthed jars and pour paraffine upon the top.

Packing Meat at Home

In reply to "R. C. M." (Pittsburgh, Pa.), I think she must mean what I call laying down ham or sausage for winter use. I do not consider it advisable to try fresh meat. The ham or sausage should be partially fried; laid in a crock (not in glass jars), and covered with the grease from frying it. Should there not be enough of this, use melted lard. The meat must be fully covered. Set in a cool place; cover with a cloth, then with a plate. It will keep for months.

Mrs. H. D. M. (Dowagiac, Mich.).

Would it not be as well to steam the meat in a close vessel until partly done? The frying, I should think, would make bits of hard crust, which would interfere with close packing.

New Breakfast Rolls

I am in great need of an exceptionally good recipe for making whole wheat bread. As everything I have tried that came from the Exchange has proved good, I turn to it now.

I beg leave to inclose a recipe for rolls. We like those made by it very much.

Breakfast Rolls

Scald 1 cup of milk. Mix with it a tablespoonful of melted butter, 1-3 of a cupful of sugar (or to your taste), 2 cakes of compressed yeast, ¼ teaspoonful of salt, yolks of 3 eggs, 4 1-3 cups of flour, 3 cardamom seeds, powdered.

The dough should be just soft enough to handle. When all the ingredients are in, beat well for ten minutes, then roll out and cut or form into rolls. Butter before setting them to rise.

C. B. L. S. (Edgerton, Wis.).

A recipe for whole wheat bread was printed among others in our familiar talk of last week.

Pardon the query, but do you mean that you use for the rolls two cakes of compressed yeast? The quantity seems disproportionate to the rest of the ingredients. Are you sure you did not intend to write "one cake"? Or are your cakes but half as large as ours?

And do the rolls require but one rising? I should give one to the dough and a shorter after the rolls are formed and buttered.

Please let us hear again from you.

Cream Cheese

I shall be more than obliged to you for a recipe for making cream cheese—the kind which is made with rennet. Where can I get the rennet?

Mrs. E. F. B. (Janesville, Fla.).

You may buy liquid rennet from any druggist. Be careful to get the unflavored. It is sometimes flavored with vanilla or some other essence, to be used for junket.

Stir a teaspoonful of rennet into a quart of rich milk, adding at the same time a generous pinch of salt. Set the milk in a rather warm place and throw a cloth over it to exclude dust and flies. It will form into a firm cake in the course of an hour or two. The time depends upon the temperature. Watch it, and when it is solid turn into a cheesecloth bag and suspend it over a bowl to drip. It may, perhaps, take all day to drain itself dry from the whey. When you do not see another drop falling, and the curd in the bag is hard, take it out, chop it very fine, work in a tablespoonful of melted butter and press and knead into a cheese. Or you may make several small cakes of it. Wrap in two or three folds of tissue paper or in tinfoil, to exclude the air, and keep it in the refrigerator.

If you wish to use it soon, work in a little sweet rich cream before molding. This makes a softer cake, somewhat resembling the famous Neufchatel cheese. I always do this and beat the curd, butter and cream together.

Business Ethics

Some day I hope you will write upon the crime (for it is nothing less) of women failing to keep business engagements. My daughter is a dressmaker, and you would be amazed to see how women whose time is their own make her lose precious hours and even days. For instance, one did not come in the afternoon, as she had promised, because "it was so hot." She came in the evening for her fitting, when girls employed all day had appointments. They are prompt—bless them! My lady was quite offended because she had "to be kept waiting." She gave no thought to the fact that she was keeping my poor child working late on a sultry evening. Can't you say something to awaken the conscience of so-called "ladies" to the rights of working women?

Mrs. M. E. H. (Chicago).

I wish I could prick the conscience of women in general to the binding nature of a business engagement! Truth compels me to add that my laundress and "scrubwoman" and the general utility woman, who has done odd bits of sewing for me and mine for sixteen years, disappoint me oftener in the matter of keeping a promise to be with me at a stated time than any other class. My stenographer and typewriter has had a business training which keeps her up to the mark. Editors and authors have cultivated a conscience based upon a fair knowledge of the value of time; men and women who buy and sell lose custom if they are careless in keeping engagements.

I cannot reprobate too strongly the dishonesty of the woman of leisure who steals the time of her sister woman, to whom hours and minutes stand for dollars and cents. It is on a par with the wickedness of holding back the wages of the laboring man or woman.

For the INDUSTRIOUS NEEDLEWOMAN

By ADELAIDE BYRD

THREE TOWEL ENDS

IT STARTS off like "three blind mice," doesn't it? The only similarity between the title of the page and the old nursery rhyme is the fact that your fingers will fairly run over the design, so quickly will you be able to work out the pretty patterns.

You can purchase huck by the yard, the 18-inch width being the usual size. Damask, too, is excellent; but for the design showing the new darned work huck is necessary.

Transfer the design to one end of the towel that you intend to work; on the other end draw only the scalloped border.

The pretty flower design has been arranged to form an oval space for an initial, which you will buy and apply on the outer line. A monogram, too, will add much to any gift. This design has been planned for wallachian stitches—buttonhole stitches, you know. Work them from a center line, with the purl edge forming the outline of each petal. The center should be solid. Outline the short stems and work the long leaves with the quick wallachian stitches, using an imaginary center line for a guide.

If you do not like this quick work, the design is just as good when done in solid stitches.

Pad the scallops and buttonhole as for any edge. Give towels a second treatment to prevent fraying. Pad with darning cotton and use long, loose stitches or a chain stitch.

The new darned work is given a chance in our page. You have probably noticed the towels done in this pretty style. White thread is used to outline the flowers, stems and leaves. Then the weave of the huck guides you in the rest of your work. With colored thread — pale blue, yellow, pink — darn the petals and leaves, using the parallel lines of the toweling for the guides. Catch up one thick thread and then make stitches of uniform size in straight lines. All must run either horizontally or vertically. The effect is solid work at a distance, yet the little breaks in the lines give a white effect that makes a delicate color in the pattern.

After working the flowers in the new and quick way, pad the scallops and buttonhole as usual.

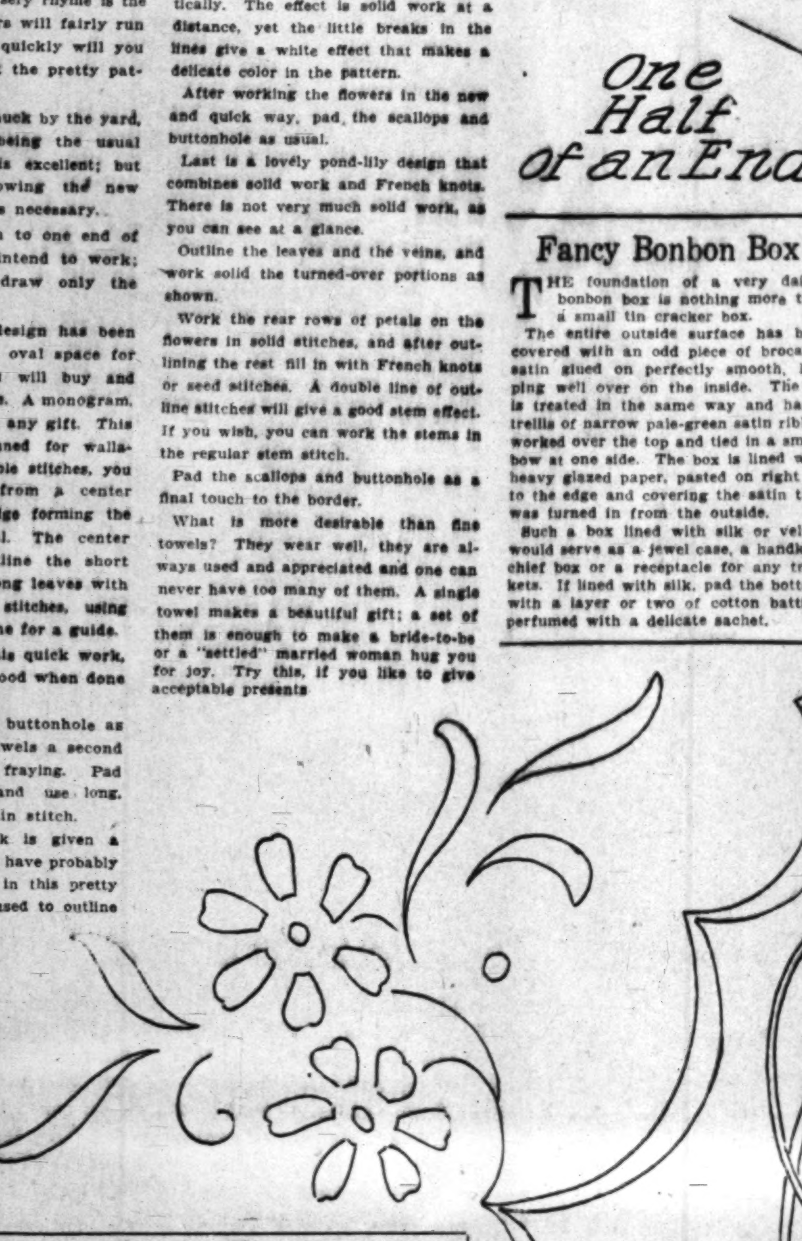
Last is a lovely pond-lily design that combines solid work and French knots. There is not very much solid work, as you can see at a glance.

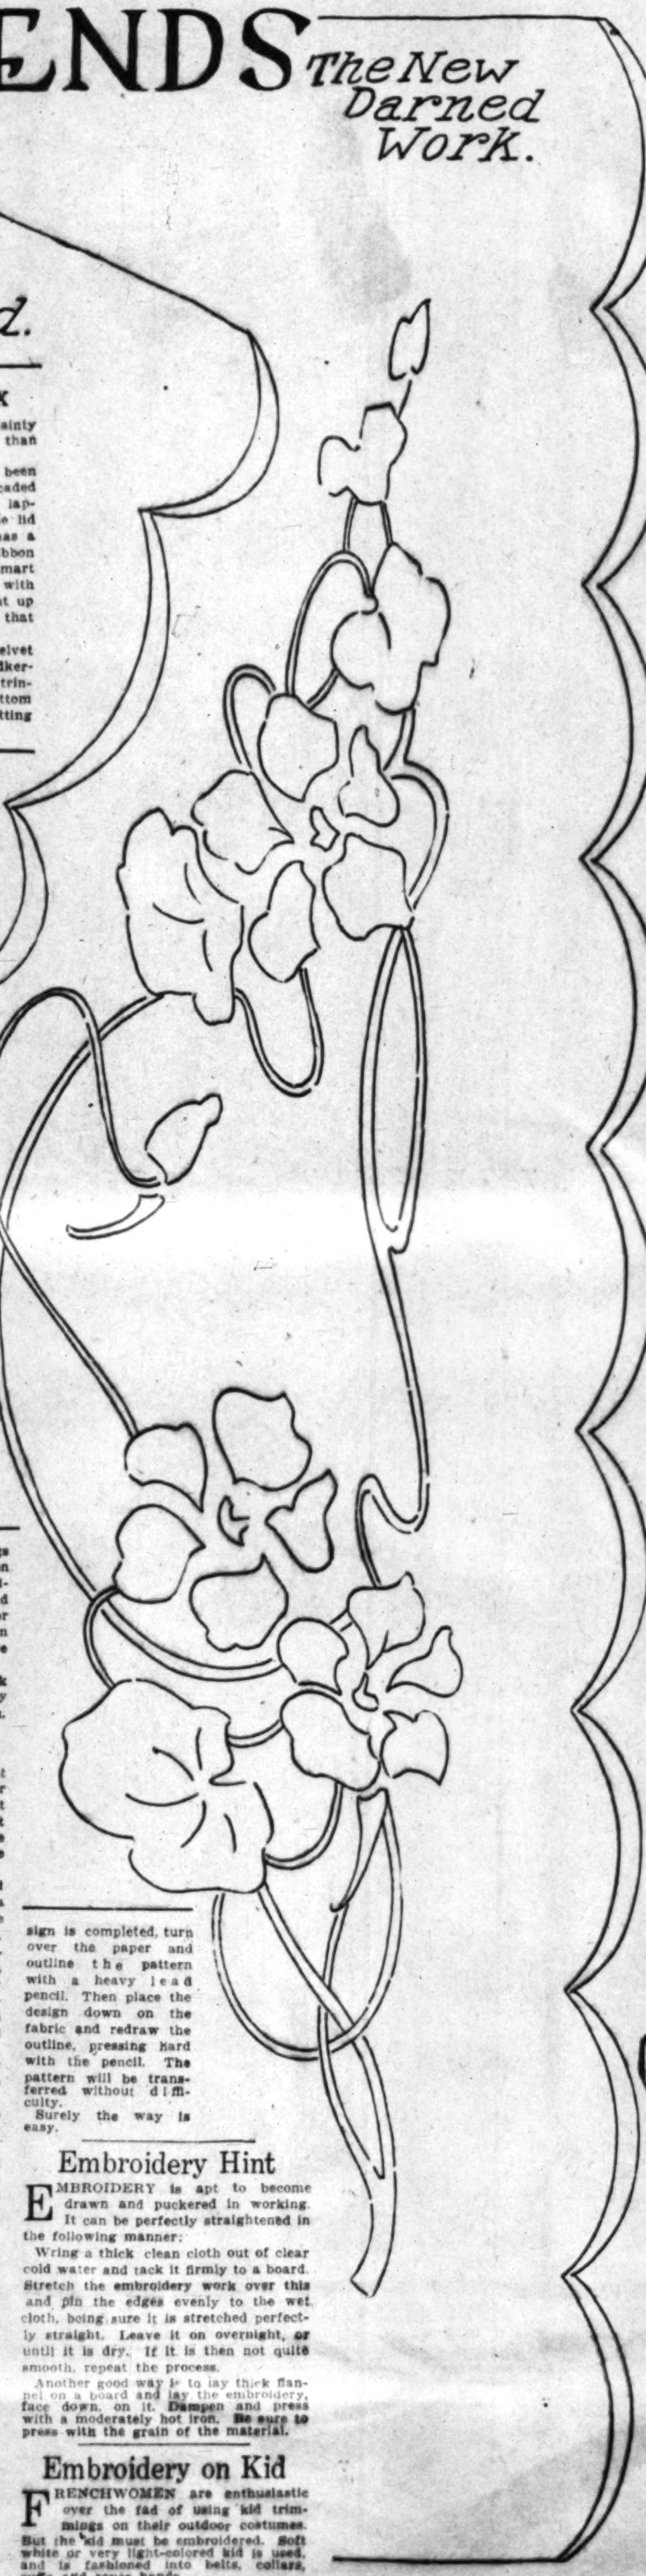
Outline the leaves and the veins, and work solid the turned-over portions as shown.

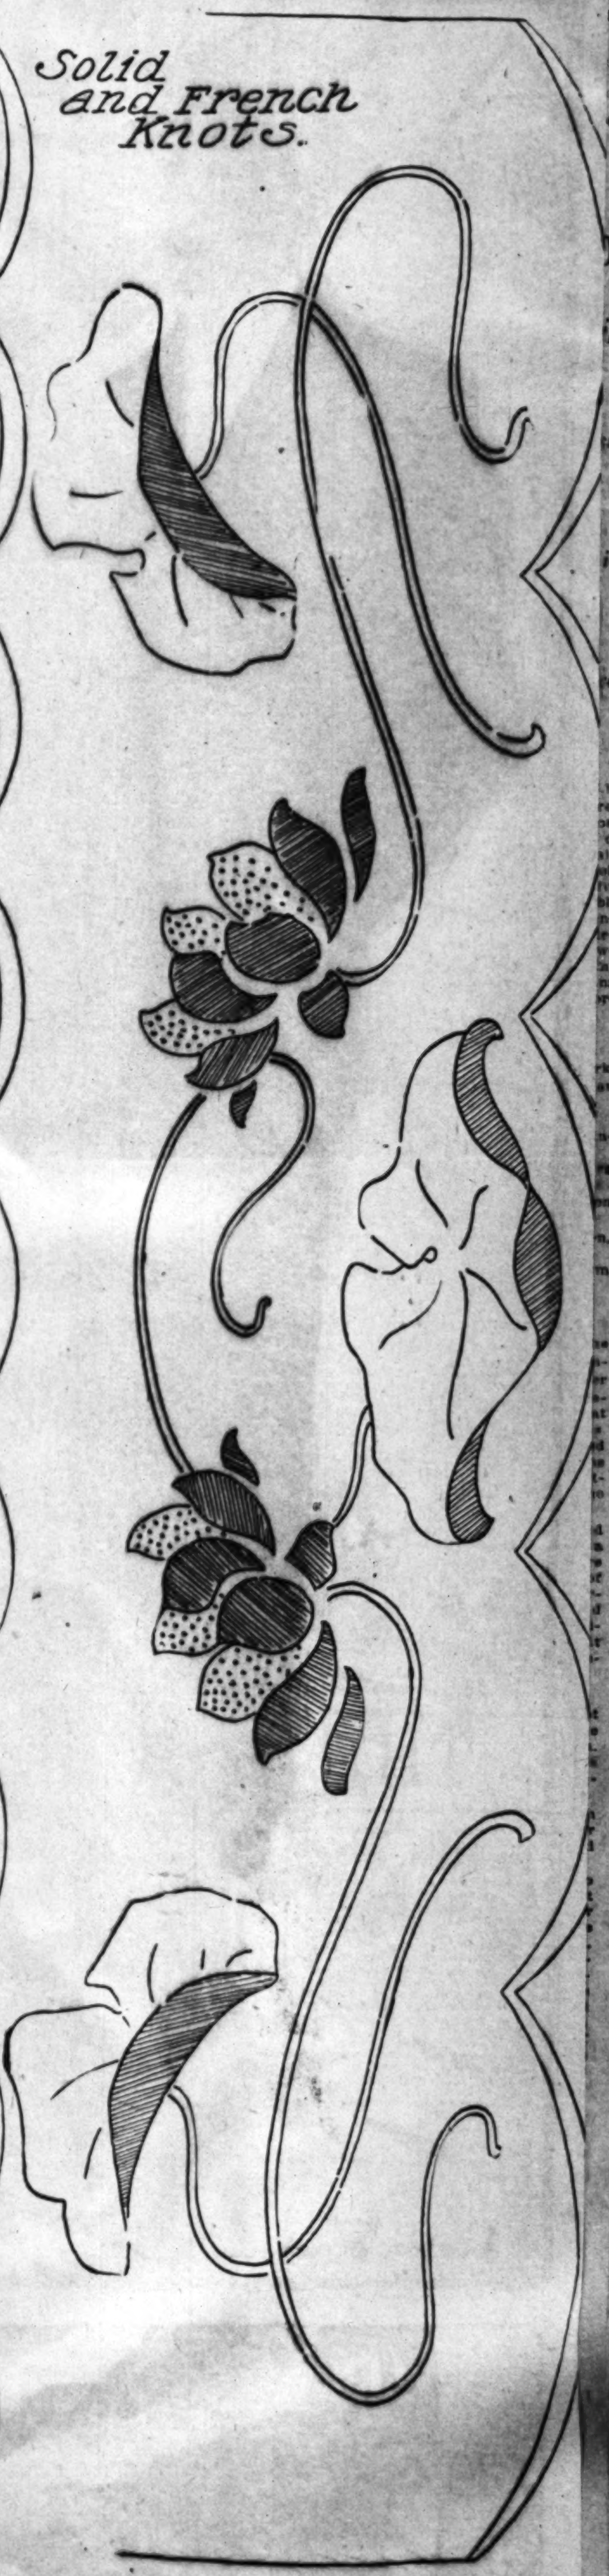
Work the rear rows of petals on the flowers in solid stitches, and after outlining the rest fill in with French knots or seed stitches. A double line of outline stitches will give a good stem effect. If you wish, you can work the stems in the regular stem stitch.

Pad the scallops and buttonhole as a final touch to the border.

What is more desirable than fine towels? They wear well, they are always used and appreciated and one can never have too many of them. A single towel makes a beautiful gift; a set of them is enough to make a bride-to-be or a "settled" married woman hug you for joy. Try this, if you like to give acceptable presents







Fancy Bonbon Box

THE foundation of a very dainty bonbon box is nothing more than a small tin cracker box.

The entire outside surface has been covered with an odd piece of brocaded satin glued on perfectly smooth, lapping well over on the inside. The lid is treated in the same way and has a trellis of narrow pale-green satin ribbon worked over the top and tied in a smart bow at one side. The box is lined with heavy glazed paper, pasted on right up to the edge and covering the satin that was turned in from the outside.

Such a box lined with silk or velvet would serve as a jewel case, a handkerchief box or a receptacle for any trinkets. If lined with silk, pad the bottom with a layer or two of cotton batting perfumed with a delicate sachet.

FOR THE PROSPECTIVE BRIDE

GIRLS who are contemplating matrimony should have a dower chest.

An old German fashion, but one that is being extensively revived. It is not possible for one person to present a prospective bride with a full chest; therefore, the custom of giving linen "showers" has become quite the thing among the young woman's friends.

A member of her family or an intimate friend presents her with the chest, cedar lined, with the bride's initials carved or stamped in the center of the lid. Every member of the family, as well as relatives and friends, then proceed to contribute to the filling of the chest by making all sorts of useful articles.

Household linen is given, linen sheets and pillow cases with the bride's initials embroidered just under the hem or on it. Large and small towels, also embroidered with initials, and having scalloped edges embroidered with heavy white linen thread. Napkins, three sets, one for each daily meal, and hemmed neatly by hand, and have the initial embroidered in one corner.

Scarfs for bureaus, sideboard and stands ornamented with embroidery or drawn work; pillow shams, kitchen towels and wash cloths.

Squares of soft cheesecloth, hemmed neatly for dusters, and coarse linen squares, hemmed for dishcloths.

Each complete set is tied with a dainty ribbon.

The addition of kitchen and pantry towels is a new and very acceptable idea; the pantry towels are used only for drying cut glass and silver, and are of fine soft striped linen, having the ends scalloped and buttonholed with colored thread.

Another pretty set that is added to the dower chest consists of embroidered cushion covers.

Some large enough to slip on over a sofa cushion, others designed for pincushions. Modern women will not use pincushions covered with fancy silk and lace that cannot be washed. They are not considered to be sanitary; but the embroidery linen covers that can be changed every few weeks are very much in demand.

Several sets of these covers for the top and bottom of the cushion, which have scalloped edges and small slits, buttonholed to run ribbon through, are part of the dower outfit.

The bride's initial is embroidered in the center of the cover, and a set of a dozen tied with ribbon and a cake of scented soap on top is a practical gift.

Sachet pads for bureau drawers are another addition to the chest.

Make these of gayly colored silk or pongee. They are made by covering a double fold of cotton wadding, thickly sprinkled with the bride's favorite sachet, with silk.

Tuft the pads with a few stitches of colored floss. You can make any one of these articles for your friend, the prospective bride, with the assurance that she will be gratefully pleased with your gift.

FRILLS AND FURBELOWS

THE number of pretty accessories to the toilette that a clever needlewoman can make is almost limitless.

From the crown of her head to the tip of her dainty satin slipper, every addition to her costume can show the personal touch, the mark of individuality, by the application of a bit of lace or embroidery. So, then, let us begin with ornaments for the coiffure and consider in detail the frills and furbelows.

On half a yard of gold ribbon four inches wide sew a wreath of tiny blossoms made of varied colored ribbon and join at the side with a rose or rosette of yellow ribbon. This makes an attractive bandeau for the hair. A bow made of five or six loops of fine lace wired so that it will stand erect and fastened to a band of satin or metal ribbon is also a pretty coiffure ornament; while a wreath of ribbon roses attached to a ribbon-covered wire and joined with a large artificial rose is just the daintiest kind of hair decoration for the young girl.

Ribbon roses are not difficult to make. You simply fold a strip of satin ribbon through the center, using two-inch-wide ribbon for small flowers and four inch for large ones. Beginning at one end, roll the ribbon around on itself until the desired size is obtained, sewing it fast at the selvage edge.

Large satin roses are made by cutting oval-shaped petals of varied sizes, lining them and threading a very fine wire around the edge of the seam. Sew all to a small circular foundation, using the smaller petals in the center, the larger on the outer edge and placing a small ball of cotton, satin covered, directly in the center. One large satin rose, with a few dark-green velvet leaves attached to the stem, makes a dainty coiffure decoration.

Now for the frilly collars and jabots. Fine net and maline are to be much in evidence this season made up into dainty neckfixings. Lace, of course, will always be extensively used, and you can fashion any number of very beautiful jabots and collars by combining these materials. Make a high stock collar of tucked net, having a jabot made by edging a half yard of plain net with narrow lace. Lay the jabot in narrow folds and attach it to the center front of the collar.

Ruffs of maline are made by sewing a two-inch pleating of double maline to both edges of a two-inch band of ribbon that is cut to fit the neck and fastened over with hooks and eyes.

Black and white are the favorite colors for these ruffs, but you may have one to match any colored gown you choose. They are decidedly chic.

Embroidered belts are dainty and fashionable. A little handwork on the belt worn with the tailored suit improves its looks wonderfully. Stockings embroidered in self-toned floss, when you do the work yourself, are exquisitely dainty and inexpensive. And plain satin slippers embroidered or beaded in a pretty conventional design add greatly to the beauty of the entire costume.

Every woman who enjoys needlework should provide herself with as many handmade dress accessories as she can.

Wool Caps for Girls

IF YOU are clever with a crochet needle, make your small daughter or little niece one of the warm but fashionable caps of thick zephyr. It can be bought in all colors, but the dark ones are best and most serviceable for winter wear.

Blue, red, brown, maroon are good colors to choose. Trimmings of a contrasting color or a different shade of the color used make pretty caps. They are crocheted round, like a skullcap, but made long enough to have a broad band turned up all the way around. This band can be of contrasting color of yarn. The band can be turned up all around, up in front and down to protect the neck in the back, or it can be left slit open in the center of the front and laid back, like two small revers, on either side. A ribbon is often woven in and out of the loose crochet stitch and tied in a rosette or flat bow on one side.

Any desired stitch may be employed in the making of these caps; they can be as plain or as elaborate as you wish.

To Transfer

HERE are suggestions for transferring the pattern before you to any material before working.

Perhaps the easiest way is the "window-pane" method. This is successful when the material is thin, like linen, batiste, etc. Pin the sheet of paper and the material together and hold them up against the glass of a window. With a sharp pencil draw on the material the design, which can be easily seen through the goods. If one-half of the design only be given, unpin the paper and turn the other side to the fabric. The strong light behind will make it plain.

If you have carbon paper, you should place the sheet between your fabric and the newspaper. This latter is on top. With a sharp pencil go over the outline of the design. The impression will be left in fine lines and will last until worked. This method is successful on heavy material.

The last way is also easy. On wax paper or ordinary tissue paper trace the pattern before you. When the design is completed, turn over the paper and outline the pattern with a heavy lead pencil. Then place the design down on the fabric and redraw the outline, pressing hard with the pencil. The pattern will be transferred without difficulty.

Surely the way is easy.

Embroidery Hint

EMBROIDERY is apt to become drawn and puckered in working. It can be perfectly straightened in the following manner:

Wring a thick clean cloth out of clear cold water and tack it firmly to a board. Stretch the embroidery work over this and pin the edges evenly to the wet cloth, being sure it is stretched perfectly straight. Leave it on overnight, or until it is dry. If it is then not quite smooth, repeat the process.

Another good way is to lay thick flannel on a board and lay the embroidery, face down, on it. Dampen and press with a moderately hot iron. Be sure to press with the grain of the material.

Embroidery on Kid

FRENCHWOMEN are enthusiastic over the fad of using kid trimmings on their outdoor costumes. But the kid must be embroidered. Soft white or very light-colored kid is used, and is fashioned into belts, collars, cuffs and rever bands.

Any shape that suits the fancy is used, but all must correspond. The work is done in silk and metal threads, and the raw edge of the kid is finished off with a cord or heavy thread of dull gold or silver. Any simple design can be worked out, but be sure to let the design be simple; one does not wish to cover too closely the beauty of the kid.

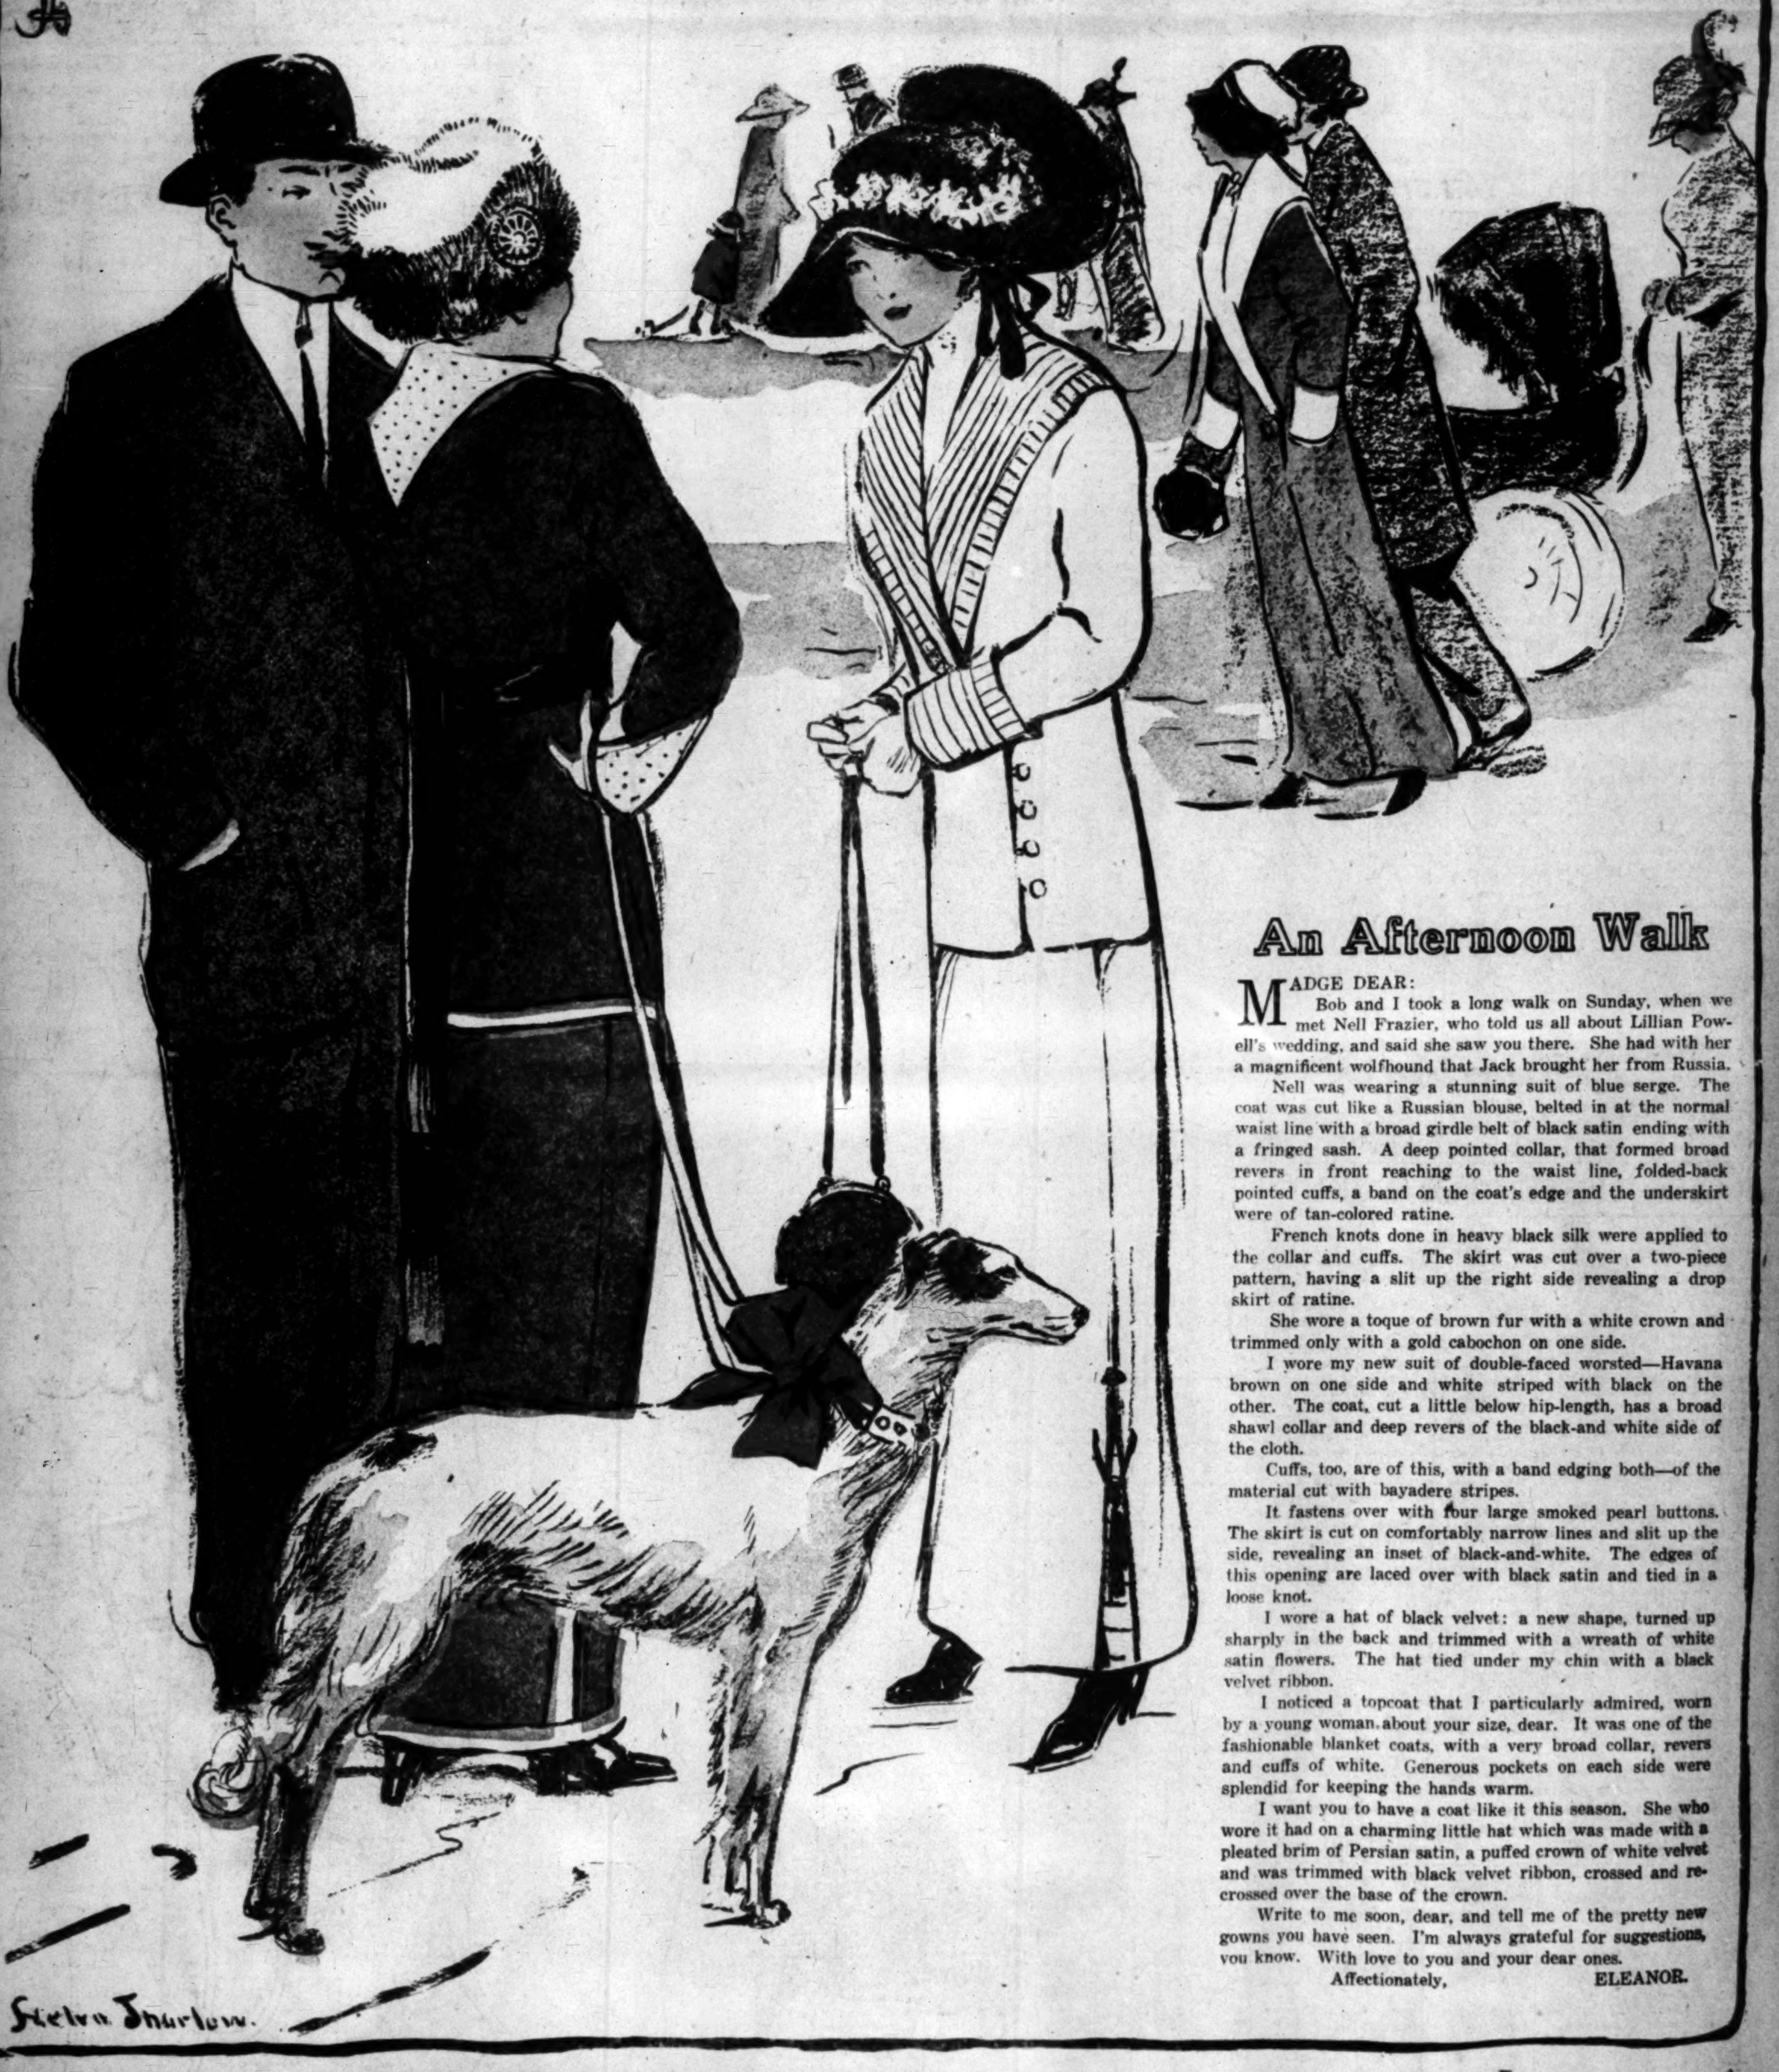
A favorite adaptation of the work is the loose "ceintures," or fronts, worn beneath the fashionable boleros of cloth or velvet.

The kid fits in the space between the fronts of the bolero and reaches to the belt line. It is then embroidered, using white or two tones of silk that correspond with the color of the gown.

Little loops are placed at the sides, and these fasten to hooks sewed inside the bolero. Sleevebands to match a another trig touch to the costume.

The work has many other uses besid dress trimmings. It can be made i charming opera bags, holders for v rious things, or mounted on cardbo for picture frames, fancy boxes, etc.

THE SMARTEST FASHIONS OF WELL-DRESSED FOLK



An Afternoon Walk

MADGE DEAR:

Bob and I took a long walk on Sunday, when we met Nell Frazier, who told us all about Lillian Powell's wedding, and said she saw you there. She had with her a magnificent wolfhound that Jack brought her from Russia.

Nell was wearing a stunning suit of blue serge. The coat was cut like a Russian blouse, belted in at the normal waist line with a broad girdle belt of black satin ending with a fringed sash. A deep pointed collar, that formed broad revers in front reaching to the waist line, folded-back pointed cuffs, a band on the coat's edge and the underskirt were of tan-colored ratine.

French knots done in heavy black silk were applied to the collar and cuffs. The skirt was cut over a two-piece pattern, having a slit up the right side revealing a drop skirt of ratine.

She wore a toque of brown fur with a white crown and trimmed only with a gold cabochon on one side.

I wore my new suit of double-faced worsted—Havana brown on one side and white striped with black on the other. The coat, cut a little below hip-length, has a broad shawl collar and deep revers of the black-and white side of the cloth.

Cuffs, too, are of this, with a band edging both—of the material cut with bayadere stripes.

It fastens over with four large smoked pearl buttons. The skirt is cut on comfortably narrow lines and slit up the side, revealing an inset of black-and-white. The edges of this opening are laced over with black satin and tied in a loose knot.

I wore a hat of black velvet: a new shape, turned up sharply in the back and trimmed with a wreath of white satin flowers. The hat tied under my chin with a black velvet ribbon.

I noticed a topcoat that I particularly admired, worn by a young woman about your size, dear. It was one of the fashionable blanket coats, with a very broad collar, revers and cuffs of white. Generous pockets on each side were splendid for keeping the hands warm.

I want you to have a coat like it this season. She who wore it had on a charming little hat which was made with a pleated brim of Persian satin, a puffed crown of white velvet and was trimmed with black velvet ribbon, crossed and recrossed over the base of the crown.

Write to me soon, dear, and tell me of the pretty new gowns you have seen. I'm always grateful for suggestions, you know. With love to you and your dear ones.

Affectionately, ELEANOR.

Covered with "Pioneer" Roofing

Fine buildings call for the best roofing. Many of the artistic Bungalows, and other types of residences in and about Los Angeles, are covered with Pioneer "Silveroid" Roofing (silver gray in appearance). A roof of Pioneer "Silveroid" Roofing is not alone pleasing to look at—it is a permanent protection, on account of its wearing qualities.

Pioneer Roofing

If you are going to build—you should by all means investigate the merits of Pioneer "Silveroid" Roofing.

There is one Pioneer Roofing for the residence; another for barns, outhouses, poultry sheds, etc.; and still another for hotels and business blocks. Each has demonstrated by years of service, in all sorts of climates, its peculiar adaptation to the particular type of building for which it was intended. Write for the Pioneer Roofing Booklet 31, which contains much valuable information about Roofs and Roofing.

THAN ALL OTHER BRANDS COMBINED.

Manufacturers inexperienced in making roofings—without knowledge as to their dependability—without responsibility as to their own financial standing, will very often guarantee their roofing for any number of years simply to get the order.

The roofing generally fails and so does the firm that makes it, and they never live to make good their guarantee.

Malthoid Roofing is made to make good, and while its manufacturers guarantee it, their guarantee is unnecessary because the roofing in itself is sufficient to do all that is claimed for it.

This is best proven by the splendid experience of Los Angeles Builders and Owners, who have used more Malthoid Roofing than all other brands of roofing combined.

Los Angeles is practically a Malthoid City, and it speaks well for the intelligence of Los Angeles Builders that this is so, for a Malthoid City is a protected one.

For twenty-seven years, The Paraffine Paint Co. have made and guaranteed their roofing, and not one single purchaser can ever say they have ever even hesitated to make good a guarantee.

You can depend upon the responsibility of the makers of Malthoid Roofing, and you will never have to bother about guarantees if you use Malthoid Roofing.

Suetene, the perfect shortening and frying product (made here in Los Angeles fresh daily from the purest vegetable oil), has been proven ACTUALLY SUPERIOR to butter for cooking purposes by tens of thousands of California women. Butter contains salt, which detracts from its shortening efficiency—Suetene is all shortening—of uniform purity, strength, quality and dependability. For frying purposes, cooking experts claim it as good as olive oil.

One overwhelming advantage of using Suetene is its extreme freshness, as compared with shortenings shipped to Los Angeles from the East. Cooking tests prove that the only real good shortening is the absolutely fresh kind. At all grocers.

THE AMERICAN COLLEGE.

A CHICAGO millionaire manufacturer has brought a sweeping and bitter arraignment of American colleges. His charge is that drunkenness, if not general among college students, is so prevalent as to constitute a danger sufficient to deter the average parent from trusting a son to the care of these colleges.

When a charge like this is brought the first and most important inquiry is as to the person who makes it. This inquiry should include not only his acquaintance with the subject, but his natural temperament as well as his prejudices.

The person in the present case, Mr. Crane, is known by those well acquainted with his history to be somewhat prone (if a slang phrase may be permitted) "to go off half-cocked." In politics he was a Democrat up to 1896, when he induced nearly every one of his employes to vote against the Democratic candidate for President in that year and for Mr. McKinley. About a year after that he visited Los Angeles and was reported here as having said that he was sorry for what he had done, as the results had not in the slightest degree justified his fears of Mr. Bryan or his expectations of the Republican President.

About a year ago Mr. Crane admitted his employees to partnership in his business on very liberal terms. So far, very good. But he took occasion at this time to arraign in a decidedly spectacular way the munificent generosity of other millionaires who showed much public spirit in disposing of their wealth. That Mr. Crane's bricks at that time were shied at the heads of Mr. Carnegie and Mr. Rockefeller was very evident. He thought these generous benefactors of the public were too spectacular in their gifts and suggested their public spirit was more for self-glorification than for public good. Now that phase of the character of Mr. Crane reminds one of the other fellow who, abusing roundly his neighbors for public subscriptions to church and similar purposes, said: "I went privately to the clergyman and gave him $50,000." The retort was instant and proper: "Yes, and then you get up here and boast about it." The point is that in finding fault with the largesses of his brother millionaires he placed a halo upon the brow of Mr. Crane.

As to the investigation made by this generous millionaire before he indulged in his sweeping criticism of the colleges we are in the dark. But we do not hesitate to say that if he visited many American colleges and found things as he reported he must have either happened among the very worst sets at these institutions or must have been in a condition himself "to see double." It is not on record that this good man is ever found out late "with the boys," or returns late in a state of "how did you come so."

American colleges are in the limelight all the time. No person at all intimately conversant with their workings and who knew them fifty years ago can fail to recognize that great changes have taken place. Up to the middle of the last century these institutions were mostly directly under very close religious influence. A good many of them were so narrow in their moral policies that the use of intoxicating liquors by the students was strictly forbidden. In many of them the same policy prevailed as to the use of tobacco. Card playing and other games of chance were taboo. Attendance upon religious worship was exacted of every young man who attended these colleges.

We have used the word "narrow" above in no condemnatory sense. The policy pursued by these colleges may have been much better than those that have taken its place. The American colleges of the early part of the last century justified their existence by the erudite scholars they turned out and the clean lives of most of their graduates. No doubt the policies were highly approved by 90 per cent. of all the fathers and mothers of the youths who attended these institutions. But how about the young men themselves?

Here we arrive at the reason why the authorities of the colleges changed so radically from the stricter policies of their predecessors. The young men of America simply would not endure such strict discipline. Americans at this time began visiting Europe in considerable numbers, the numbers increasing with each passing year. Many families went with their young men and boys. It was also thought by many Americans that the universities of England and of the continent of Europe afforded opportunities for a finished education superior to that to be had in our own country. The young men who went to Oxford, Cambridge, Bonn and Heidelberg came back and made known the character of discipline found abroad. The knowledge of this discipline obtained in these two ways settled the whole question as to the mode of conducting American institutions of learning of the higher grade. It simply settled down to this: either relax the strictly narrow discipline of the college that was a religious hotbed, or close the doors of every such institution in the country.

Nine out of ten of the youth of America would have gone to Europe to be educated if a change had not been made. There may have been 10 per cent. of the fathers and mothers of the country able to coerce their sons into attending the college where such strict discipline was exercised, but that ratio would not have been enough to support the American institution and maintain it on a level anywhere near that of the universities of Europe. Then paterfamilias and materfamilias, too, no matter how orthodox their religion, would have been compelled to send their boys to Europe in order to acquire the necessary education to compete with highly trained minds, and so we would have had a case of "out of the frying pan into the fire." It is probably entirely true that the least strict American institutions are not so lax as the most strict universities of Europe, taking grade for grade.

Now we are conscious of the fact that we are in a way pleading guilty to the charge made by the Chicago millionaire. No one at all conversant with the subject will deny that there is more or less carousing carried on by the young men who attend American colleges. But is this an exception or a case under the general rule? Are not young men in business living under their fathers' own roof, bankers, manufacturers, business and professional men of all kinds, addicted to these same vices more or less in their clubs and other places right in the shadow of the home? Is the young man at the American university likely to be "led into temptation" more than the one who remains at home? From our observation of the world we think the answer must be in the negative.

Then there is another phase to this question. Is it well to hedge around with physical obstacles the way of the young man in the world to too great a degree? Is the monastery the best place for all men to dwell in order to keep out of the way of temptation? Is the man who must be so safeguarded likely to become the better man and the stronger character in the long run? Is not the truly good man, young or old, the one who "in the world is not of the world." Let us assume for the sake of argument a child brought up tied to his mother's apron string until he is well along in his teens and is never permitted to join the baseball club or to run with his companions. Let us put this tender shoot of the hothouse in a school where the forcing process of morality is still carried on and where he is guarded from every form of temptation by insurmountable barriers. Let him finish his education in this way, and then what? Unless he is to be "a monk all shorn and shaven" he must be thrown into the world sooner or later, and then temptation must be faced. You may make this young man a clergyman, and so to the end of his days hedge him around with safeguards that will keep him in the safe and narrow path. But if he is a lawyer, a doctor or a business man, how is he, fresh from the hothouse, going to endure the rude storms of a wicked world of which he has had no experience?

The best answer to this arraignment of American colleges is the lives of their graduates. Since this relaxation of discipline has taken place these institutions have turned out no end of Roosevelts and Tafts, men who filled the highest offices in public life, conspicuous examples not only of integrity, but of every higher virtue that adorns human character. Think you if college men were mostly sots, gamblers, ne'er-do-wells and undesirable citizens we would have had to wait for the year 1911 for the Chicago manufacturer to discover this dreadful fact and make it known to a world shocked by the revelation?

Americans are charged with being proud of their country and conceited of their attainments. They may well be so. They have many things to boast of and not one more so than their institutions of learning. The public schools of America are the most thorough and the most successful morally as well as mentally of any similar system on earth. Our higher institutions of learning match in every respect and surpass in most the best-known in any part of Europe, whether in the British Isles or on the continent. They are turning out a mass of finished human material as well equipped mentally as any other nation can boast of, and at the same time more highly moral and generally more truly religious than the young people of any other nationality in the world.

AMAZING FINANCIAL FIGURES.

[November Strand:] Wagner and Sufan, the German statisticians, estimated in the year 1891 the population of the world at 1,480,000,000 persons. More than one-half of this estimated number was based upon the results of actual censuses, and the remainder was carefully estimated. We shall probably not be far away from the truth if we say that there are now (in A. D. 1911) 1,800,000,000 persons on the earth.

If in Anno Domini 1 a man had then desired to be hailed in a later century universal benefactor of the world, he could have achieved his desire by then investing the equivalent of a modern American cent at 5 per cent. compound interest per annum, the interest to accumulate year by year for the benefit of future generations.

At the end of the first century of investment—namely, in A. D. 100—the original cent would have grown to $1.31. At the end of 1910 years after Anno Domini 1—namely, at the end of the year 1910 (last year)—the original cent would have grown to the stupendous value of 296,180,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000 dollars ($29,618 followed by 34 0's.)

This accumulation resulting in A. D. 1910 from the original investment of one cent in Anno Domini 1 is so vast that no brain can realize what is the meaning of the enormous quantity of dollars just stated. We are wholly unable to realize the stupendous golden growth of this original cent unless we press into our service various aids to imaginative conception, such as those I have dreamed and here illustrated.

Imagine the earth transformed into a huge flat slab one mile thick, floating in space. Let every man, woman, and child now living in the world—approximately 1,800,000,000 persons—continuously discharge a quick-firing gun loaded with American gold eagles in place of bullets for 1000 years. Each gun fires into space 1000 gold eagles per minute, which drop over the edges of the earth.

The result is that at the end of 1000 years' continuous discharge of gold eagles from 1,800,000,000 of quick-firing guns at the rate of 1000 gold eagles per minute from each gun, only an infinitesimal fraction of the money would have thus been got rid of. The amount to be thus drawn upon being the $29,618 followed by thirty-four 0's, this amount being the accumulated result of one cent invested in Anno Domini 1 at 5 per cent. compound interest until the end of the year 1910.

All this firing away of gold eagles would have to continue for more than 31,000,000,000,000,000 years, in place of for merely 1000 years, in order to exhaust the money accumulated in A.D. 1910.

This incredible result is no freak of fancy, but a solid fact.

UNCLE SAM'S PLANS.

TO CHEAPEN FREIGHT RATES AND REDUCE THE COST OF LIVING.

From Our Own Correspondent.

WASHINGTON (D.C.)—Uncle Sam is waking up to the value of his waterways. The Presidential platforms of both parties during the coming campaign will have planks providing for their conservation, and the questions of irrigation, drainage and a national canal system will be canvassed from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from Canada to Mexico. The matter is already before Congress. There has been introduced into the Senate a bill providing that $500,000,000 be spent within the next ten years upon the control of our water resources, and the scientists tell me that if this is done it will result in a saving to us of $1,000,000,000 per annum. The proposed expenditure is to be made at the rate of $50,000,000 per year. It will cost us each year about 62 cents per capita, and the saving will be at the rate of $12 per capita, or twenty times the amount of the expenditure. This means 2000 per cent. profit, which, even in these times of multimillionaires and billion-dollar trusts, is a fairly good investment. The man at the head of the movement in the Senate is Francis G. Newlands, who has for years ranked as the leader of our irrigation and reclamation projects, and who, as Dr. W. J. McGee, the secretary of the Inland Waterways Commission, says, is a quarter of a century in advance of the average statesman on such subjects.

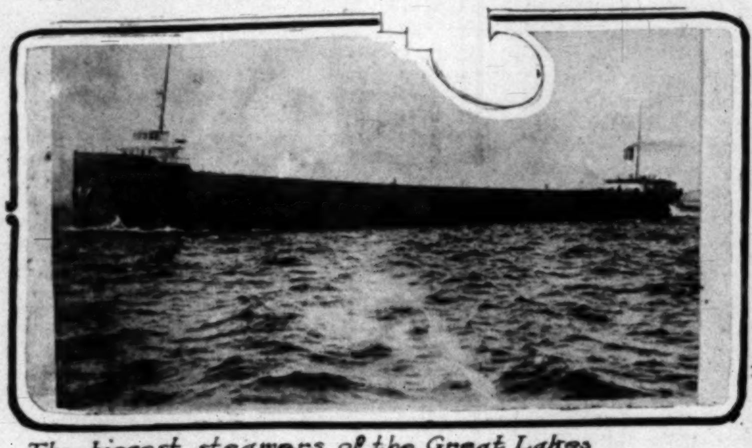
Billions in Water.

But before I take up this great project for the regulation of our rivers I want to give you some idea of the water supply of the United States, and the part it has in the welfare of every man, woman and child of us. The man who knows more about this than any other in the country is Dr. W. J. McGee, and it is from him that the greater part of my information comes. During the past week we have been talking about the rainfall of the United States and where it goes. We have discussed our mighty rivers and the schemes for their improvement, and Dr. McGee has laid before me the plans for a great series of ship canals which when completed will result in a saving of hundreds of millions of dollars in freight transportation every year.

Our great irrigation sections of the West, where an acre or so will support a family, give some idea of the value of water in the production of food. Dr. McGee tells me that every pound of plant food we use has required on the average 1000 pounds of water to make it. So that if you eat four pounds of vegetables today it would just take two tons of water, or all that four horses could haul, to make that food. It takes even more water to make meat and eggs, for the food of the animals comes from the soil, and in addition they drink many times their own weight every year. Every pound of bread is equivalent to two tons of water used by the growing grain, and a pound of beef is equal to from thirty to fifty tons of water, which the animal has consumed directly or indirectly through its food. I can't tell exactly how much water each of you consumes in this way every year, but if you should eat 200 pounds of bread and 200 pounds of meat you will have consumed altogether more than 4000 tons of water in one shape or other, and this is without counting that which you use for drinking or bathing.

Dr. McGee.

This turnip from the Northwest weighs 20 lbs.



The biggest steamers of the Great Lakes will float down to Gulf of Mexico

The great Atlantic barge canal from New York to Florida will go through country like this

Moreover, as we have more or less food, we have more or less water, and so, after all, it is water which regulates the size of our bread basket. Dr. McGee says that we have an annual water supply big enough to make food for a billion people, and he estimates that at the current rate of increase we will have that population in something like 300 years. This supposes that all the water be properly cared for, and that is what Congress is now asked to do.

Uncle Sam's Water Supply.

Now let us look at the water supply of the United States.

Dr. Willis Moore of the Weather Bureau has estimated that our annual rainfall averages about thirty inches the United States over. The best way to measure this is by acre feet—that is, by covering a certain number of acres with water one foot in depth. The yearly supply measured that way would cover 5,000,000,000 acres, which in area is equal to 200 States the size of Ohio, Virginia or Kentucky, or in volume to ten Mississippi Rivers running day and night all the year through. All this comes from the rain or snow which falls in one year.

The distribution of this supply, however, is very uneven. Draw a line north and south across the United States so that it will bisect Des Moines, Ia., and more than half of all the rain that falls will be found east of that line. The average precipitation over that tract is forty-eight inches per annum. It is the humid region of our country. From that line about 500 miles westward is another territory which may be called semi-humid, where the rainfall is about thirty inches, and the whole remainder, consisting of about two-fifths of our country, includes the arid lands, where the average precipitation is only twelve inches. The other tract is the region of the deserts, the mountains and of the reclamation projects. It is a country of a few well watered spots, but also of extensive tracts which are bone-dry.

Where the Rains Go.

Nevertheless, we have, all told, an annual rainfall equal to ten Mississippi Rivers. We have measured the quantity and know that it falls. Where does it go? I shall ask these high-browed scientists to tell you the story. Here again McGee is the best authority. His mind is so sharp that it can split a raindrop, and his vision so clear that he can follow the drop to the skies or to the bowels of old Mother Earth. He divides the rainfall into three—the run-off, the fly-off, and the cut-off. One-third of all the water that falls, says he, flows into the sea through the rivers and the smaller streams. This is the run-off. A smaller amount soaks into the soil and saturates the rocks and finds its way into the The remainder, which is by far the most of the supply, evaporates and goes into the air to fall again as rain. This is the fly-off. This is the water which, in connection with that from the oceans, loads the clouds and drops again upon the land.

The fly-off is so large that if you could freeze it into sea by leaking out into the streams. This is the cut-off. cubes a mile square it would suffice to build an ice wall a mile high and a mile wide all the way from New York to Detroit. The run-off, if so frozen, would make such a wall 500 miles long, and the cut-off, or the water which sinks into the soil, would make one long enough to reach from Philadelphia to Boston.

Our Underground Waters.

In addition to the water which falls every year, we have another great supply underground, which has accumulated and is fed by the rain and snow which fall from time to time. This water is always moving, but the amount is so great that it is equal to the entire rainfall of the United States for seven years, or to the run-off for twenty years. There is so much of it under rainfall of the United States for seven years, or to the run-off for twenty years. There is so much of under the surface of the earth that it has been estimated that if it were equally distributed it would wrap around our globe an envelope of water ninety-six feet in thickness. McGee estimates that the amount of water which lies under the United States to a depth of 100 feet would, if it could be raised to the surface and held there, cover our whole country to a depth of seventeen feet. He estimates that it contains 11,000 cubic miles of water, or enough to build a rampart of ice two miles wide and five miles high through the Mississippi Valley from St. Paul to St. Louis and on to New Orleans.

This underground water runs from the surface, as in the case of swamps and marshes, to hundreds of feet, and even a thousand feet, below the surface. All the cracks and openings of the rocks are filled with water, and there are porous rocks which take up water like a sponge. In these about one-fifth of the whole volume is supposed to be stored. It is this water which feeds our artesian wells and other wells. It is this that feeds the plants in great degree, and this that furnishes the larger part of our table supply. In some places this water is pumped up and used for irrigation and in others it flows on being tapped, and altogether it is very valuable. Congress will be asked not only to conserve the forests that tney may act as a sponge to retain this underground water, but to hold it back in other ways.

Regulating the Rivers.

These schemes of Uncle Sam for controlling the water supply embrace the whole United States. They provide for the regulation of the flow of the rivers and of standardizing them. They provide for great reservoirs along the Mississippi, Ohio and Missouri. They treat of drainage and irrigation and of the development of our water power. They also include the making, by means of canals, of a great system of interior water transportation, which shall supplement our railways, and reduce freight rates to the merchant and the consumer. According to Dr. McGee, the scheme means an annual saving in transportation charges alone of more than $750,000 for every day of the year, an annual saving in flood damages of $150,000,000 per annum, and a saving in the washing away of our soils of $500,000,000 every year. In addition to this there will be an enormous profit from the water powers created, and altogether a mighty decrease in the cost of living should follow.

Our Inland Waterways.

The plans for this development have been worked out in connection with the Commission of Inland Waterways and with the Bureau of Soils of the Agricultural Department. Senator Newlands and the Committee of Rivers and Harbors have had the matter under discussion, and in time we will have a great waterway project which will add not only to the cheapening of all classes of freight and to the increase of our industries, but will be of enormous military advantage in the defense of our country.

As far as waterways are concerned, there are few countries which compare with the United States. We have a coast line which, if stretched out, would reach twice around the world and still leave 14,000 miles to spare. The United States shore line of the great lakes is half again as long as from New York to San Francisco, and the navigable waters of our rivers, if they could be joined in one line, would form a continuous stream around the globe with a thousand miles to spare. The Mississippi system alone has 2500 miles of waterways which have a draft of six feet, and our whole country is so cut up by streams that a great system of canals and rivers could be made by which the heaviest of our freight could be carried by water.

Some Mighty Improvements.

The plans of the commission, as shown to me by Dr. McGee, provide for a deep waterway from the Gulf of Mexico to the Great Lakes, and a deep and continuous Atlantic interior passage from New England to Florida and the Gulf of Mexico. Dr. McGee says that canals could be built connecting the lower Mississippi with the Rio Grande at Brownsville, Tex., and another system in the Northwest by which freight could be carried from the Columbia River to Puget Sound. The projects embrace the deepening of the Mississippi and the Chicago drainage canal and Illinois River so that our men-of-war could go from the Gulf of Mexico right into the great lakes. All sorts of ocean transportation could go the same way.

Another provision is for the improvement of the Ohio. This, it is estimated, would result in a saving in freight of something like $100,000,000 a year. A third is the deepening and improving of the Missouri, so that boats drawing ten feet could go from the Mississippi at the gulf as far as Great Falls, Mont., a distance of 3000 miles.

Dr. McGee says that the Tennessee River might be improved so as to give slack water navigation for ten-foot barges, and that barge waterways of equal depth might be made all along the Atlantic Coast from New York to Florida. There are many natural waterways there and the land is such that canals could be easily dug.

What the Consumer Pays.

Have you any idea how much money you have to pay to the railroads? It comes out of you in the price of the goods you buy, in your own traveling, and in the cost to the general business of the country, which is based upon your consumption. The sum we annually pay for transportation is about one-third as much as the value of all the products of our farms. It equals $2,700,000,000, making a tax upon the soil equal to $1.25 per acre for the entire mainland of the United States. Taking the improved lands, it is equal to a tax of $5.25 upon every acre, and, comparing it with our population, it is equal to $30 per year for every man, woman and child in the Union.

Thirty dollars a year is $2.50 a month. Suppose you should receive a bill every month of $2.50 from the railroads, or of $12.50 per month for your family of five. Wouldn't it jar you? Well, that is what you pay.

During the year it costs on the average every family $150. Now the average cost of living the United States over is not more than $450 per family, so that one-third of our living cost goes to the railroads.

Water Freights vs. the Railroads.

These are figures given me by Dr. McGee. He tells me, moreover, that the cost of water transportation is, on the average, only about one-fourth that of rail transportation, and that the greater part of the heavy freight might be taken by water, leaving to the railroads the lighter freight, for which higher prices are paid, and which is by far the more profitable. As it is now, the railroads have more than they can carry, and it is believed that this system of canals would so increase the traffic that the railroads would still have all and more than they could do. Their business would pay better and the dividends would be correspondingly increased. It is the idea that the railways and waterways might cooperate here as they do in Europe, and that together they would work not only to the advantage of the companies owning them, but to that of the consumer. Both would be under an interstate commission, as their business is between the States.

There are some railway men who look upon such a combination as one of the necessities of the future. Among those who have the broadest views is James J. Hill. He says that railroad transportation cannot be performed at much less than half a cent a ton per mile. The rates on iron ore on the great lakes are about 1 mill per ton per mile, while the same ore carried by railroad costs ten times as much.

Uncle Sam's River and Harbor Projects.

As it is now, the government is spending tens of millions of dollars a year on rivers and harbors, and a great part of this is political graft. The money goes to the improvement of creeks and other waterways which have no commercial importance, and it is really an appropriation bill for the benefit of the representatives in their individual districts. The amount appropriated last year was a little more than $41,000,000.

Among the important works under way are the improvement of the Ohio and Mississippi, the deepening of the channels in the Delaware River at Philadelphia, in the Hudson River at Troy, and at Mobile, and at Oakland, Cal. A considerable work has been done at Baltimore and New York, as well as at Galveston, where the entrance channel has been deepened to thirty-four feet.

The government is making surveys for a deep-water channel from Lockport, Ill., at the end of the Chicago Drainage Canal, to the Mississippi River at Cairo, and the State of New York has about half completed the making of a new barge canal twelve feet deep from Lake Erie at Buffalo to the Hudson River. The route is from Buffalo to Rome along the line of the old Erie Canal, and from Rome to the Hudson it is a canalization of the Mohawk River. The State is authorized to spend $101,000,000 on the project, and it is probable that the whole amount will be needed.

Eskimmerziene.

SOME INTERESTING STORIES OF AN INDIAN CHIEF.

By Carroll York Belknap.

OUT IN ARIZONA they tell great tales of old Eskimmerziene; you know him, crafty old Apache Eskimmerziene, him of the broken promises, promises that were never meant to be kept. Now that he is dead they can afford to laugh at him, but not so long ago it was Eskimmerziene that laughed.

There was the fort he built, above Ft. Grant. From the top of that hill he laughed at the white man and his futile attempts at capture. It was but twelve miles from Ft. Grant, but it was never taken while Eskimmerziene was within. There he used to sit and watch the soldiers, with an old spyglass he had stolen somewhere, and for miles around the country was exposed to his eyes. They sent men to take him, time and again, Some of them came back—the most did not. For a quarter of a mile in every direction the hillside was bare, bare of root, stem or leaf, and never a white soldier crossed that line of death until the old chief had left.

The freighters' teams brought the supplies for Ft. Grant from Tucson in those days—flour and bacon, and even the precious ammunition. And Eskimmerziene waited on his hilltop, and watched with his spyglass till he thought them close enough. Then out he sallied with his braves, and before the soldiers in the fort knew anything about it, the Indians had a fresh supply of provisions on hand.

Or, the spyglass failing, there were the fires and the smokes. By day, when the white man's soldiers or his wagon trains were seen, a tiny spiral of smoke ascended from a tinier hole in the ground, and at night a blanket was passed across a flame as many times as there were men, while Uncle Sam's grateful wards on the San Carlos Reservation watched eagerly.

But the best joke was that of the cattle. The cattle were few in Arizona then, and it was a big undertaking when the government shipped in fifty head of choice steers and corralled them at Ft. Grant. They were for the soldiers, and there were sentinels posted day and night. Old Eskimmerziene was fond of beef himself, and one night he and his men slipped down and, while the sentinels dreamed of sirloin and rib steak, the cattle were driven quietly off to the Indian stronghold.

And all night long one lone Indian sat in the corral, softly jangling a bell from one of the lead steers. As for the sentinels, they were content; the bell took care of that. They could hear the herd moving about—what need to watch them closely!

But when day broke, the Apache threw the bell to the nearest sentinel, mounted his horse, and raced home to a breakfast of juicy beefsteak.

Can the Emerald Isle beat that for a sense of humor?

It was a good joke to the Indians that for weeks they feasted, while the white soldiers starved at the fort.

Eskimmerziene went raiding down in Mexico, and while the genius of the place was away, Gen. Crook, with a large company of both settlers and soldiers, surrounded the Apache fort and killed every man, woman and child within it. Not a soul was left. When the chief returned, he rode into Ft. Grant and surrendered.

For five years Eskimmerziene generously allowed the paternal government to provide his rations, while he lived in the fort. He became very intimate with one of the farmers in the valley, and often spent the night with his friend. But one morning, after a quiet breakfast, the chief ended the friendship with his knife.

When they tried him at Ft. Grant he was asked the reason for the murder.

"My heart swelled within me," he said, "and I had to kill him. Any man can kill his enemy, but oh! it takes a brave man to kill his friend!"

Crook took him to Washington, to show him how useless it was to fight against the white man and his soldiers. After his return an Apache asked him how many soldiers the government had. "Count the leaves on the trees and the sands in the river, and you will know," Eskimmerziene replied in the picturesque metaphor of his race.

Soon afterward the soldiers were removed from Ft. Grant, and the old chief obtained permission from Washington to move to the Gila River with his family, and so down he came, seven wives, two sons and all. The sons, Bismarck and Washington, he sent to school as soon as one was started in the vicinity.

At this time Eskimmerziene had in the neighborhood of $5000 which he had collected in his career of thievery. For two years he lived on this capital, but his promises to the government were soon forgotten and he again took up his old trade.

Under his command one of his braves killed a neighbor's calf. Armed with a warrant, the Sheriff and a deputy attempted to arrest the offender. When they arrived at Eskimmerziene's camp they found him drilling all his men in the tactics of the white man's soldiers. The man was not arrested.

When the "Kid" was on the rampage, it was old Eskimmerziene, crafty as ever, who continually helped him, even hiding him, it is said, in his own house on one occasion when the pursuit was uncomfortable. So at last they packed Eskimmerziene, his baggage and his seven wives, off to Florida.

But Eskimmerziene had not exhausted his bag of tricks. Religion took him suddenly, and for the rest of his life he junketed about, attired in stovepipe hat and long black coat, preaching the gospel with the fervor of a darky evangelist.

He asked permission to return to Arizona, but to the great relief of the Arizonans, the government preferred him in clerical garb to war paint, and so in Florida died old Eskimmerziene, worn out by a life of deceit and trickery, and if there is such a thing as the happy hunting ground, no doubt the Great Spirit keeps careful watch upon the Apache chief.

SUBSTITUTES FOR SALOONS.

[Temperance:] There are in Birmingham, England, sixty-six social clubs in which no intoxicants are allowed. About forty are self-supporting. Eleven are carried on in what were formerly public houses. Twelve clubs meet only once a week, but all the others are open nightly except Sundays. Most of them are open Saturday afternoon also.

A social institutes' union also converts five corporation swimming baths into free social recreation halls in the winter months. These institutions are quite distinct from sporting, trade, benefit, musical and other sectional clubs. There are also thirty-five Good Templar lodges in the vicinity of the city.

The Good Templars have many lodges open weekly in Birmingham and 200 in London; others can frequent social clubs and drink free temperance concerts if they will. Sir Thomas Whittaker and others are opening large temperance billiard halls about the country with many attractions of a wholesome kind; the churchmen and the Methodists have provided great social centers, and other churches are doing the like. It is therefore not a fact that workingmen go to the public house because they have nowhere else to go.

PAN IN THE WEST.

I thought thou wert a dweller, O great Pan,
  Only in Grecian woodlands, or where slope
  Sunny Italian vineyards softly up
To the pine forests of Italian hills,
  Or where warm breezes fan
Pastures and shaded rills
  Beside the sunn'd Mediterranean.

Therefore I looked not for thee in the West,
  Nor listn'd for thy goat's foot on the trails
  That wind along the wide San Gabriel's
Dry and shaggy spurs, nor the thought of thee
  When o'er the pinewood's crest
The distant western sea
  Flam'd with the purple sunset's brilliantest.

Blind! now I know that I was blind, O Pan;
  For, wandering alone a rocky way
  'Neath western pines, one unforgotten day,
I felt thee, saw thee suddenly, and knew
  That where white water ran,
Where trees shook or grass grew,
  There thou wert, too, O Cosmopolitan.

ROBINSON JEFFERS.

THEIR FIRST THANKSGIVING.

[New York Sun:] "I went to a Thanksgiving dinner in Paris last November," said an American who had just returned from a year abroad. "Most of the guests were Frenchmen, Germans, Italians and Russians. The hostess was an American, a New York woman who has been living abroad for several years, and who entertains lavishly in the French capital.

"On the table were all sorts of things to remind one of home. There were lights in pumpkins on the table and all sorts of American dishes, including a turkey, which the hostess announced she herself would carve on the table in the American fashion. But the majority of the guests failed to grasp the significance of the feast, and sat about trying to veil their astonishment at everything, even to the pumpkin pie, which they could be induced to attempt with difficulty. None of the foreigners seemed to know what Thanksgiving was.

"'Zanksgeeveeng fery nice,' remarked a German count on my right, leaning over to me. 'I nefer eat vone before.'"

CHURCH BUILDING.

A STUDY OF ITS ORIGIN AND DEVELOPMENT.

By a Staff Writer.

AS IS PALLAS ATHENE among the celestials on Mt. Olympus, so is the United States among the family of nations. That primeval suffragette, you know, never was a baby. She sprang mature from the head of Jove when Vulcan the blacksmith clove the head of the father of the gods with his ax. The goddess of war came into the world with the full stature of a woman, with mature mind. She was, moreover, clad in armor with the greaves upon her shapely legs, the helmet on her godlike brow, the shield on her left arm and the spear grasped in the strong right hand.

So our country had no infancy. She came into the family of nations fully developed. In our literature there is no Percy's Reliques, no Grammer Gurton's Needle, no crude, imperfect work of any kind. In ceramics America has no crude terra cotta figures except those of the aboriginal Indians. In painting there are no pre-Raphaelite pictures of American origin.

Bryant's odes are as finished as those of Horace, Lowell's poems as perfect as Virgil's, Powers's Greek Slave as fine as the best thing in the Luxembourg.

We lack something in this. It is interesting to trace ballad poetry from "Chevy Chase" to the "Ancient Mariner" and sculpture from the crude essays of primitive Greece and Italy to the Venus de Milo, the Farnese bull and the group of the Niobe. The artists love to wander through the galleries of the Old World and trace the development of painting from very early sacred pictures where a lackadaisical-looking saint stands with hands in a suppliant position, head on one side and eyes downcast in humility or upcast in ardent aspiration, while side by side in the zenith of the sky the sun looks down benignly out of his right eye and the full moon out of her left, down to the madonnas of Raphael and Murillo, and in landscape art from crude efforts which are reversible, the top doing for the bottom and vice versa as well as in natural order, to a Corot, Millet or Daubigny.

But everything in America is the result of a perfectly-developed civilization, from the Constitution by which our governments are guided and the White House at Washington on to San Francisco or Los Angeles, all architecturally the product of the present century.

Our country is a poor one for the study of the evolutionist. There are none of these sharp contrasts between the earliest efforts of the human mind and its latest. One would say here that there never had been any evolution. If an inhabitant of Mars should visit our sphere he would say America was made in the same way that the Talmud accounts for creation. The Hebrew commentators on the Old Testament say creation was finished on an evening of a perfect autumn day. The grain was yellow in the field and the ripe fruit was dropping from the trees, while grapevines hung laden with great bunches of pale green or purple grapes.

A Study of Church Architecture.

Let us take one branch of art for a brief study. In Europe one can trace the whole development of church architecture from the rudest, simplest little temple up to the most consummately ornate and gorgeous of sacred fanes. As we read, many of us can close our eyes and see the little country church at Stoke Pogis where Gray wrote the ever-famous "Elegy," and pass on from there to Westminster Abbey with "long-drawn aisles and fretted vault," or to St. Paul's, London, that massive, almost imperishable pile of granite and marble in the strong construction of the Renaissance.

But those who wander broadly over the continent of Europe, up through Swiss mountains and across Bavarian and Austrian plains will see in still sharper contrast the development of church architecture from the earliest Christian times up to the magnificent cathedrals of the Middle Ages. In continental Europe they are still constructing the little church as plain and simple as a piece of mission furniture and not always as harmonious in outline. And then in some close-by city one will find a new temple of worship just a little less magnificent than the cathedral at Cologne.

We are taking the Gothic architecture and its development rather than the Italian. You know in Italy a cathedral is often called a basilica. The regular Italian word for the building is a "duomo." When Constantine had swallowed that copious draft of Falarian wine or some cognate beverage and saw that banner in the sky which converted him to Christianity the connection between church and state was followed by turning over the town hall to the bishop as a place of worship. The old Greek Courthouse, as we would call it, got its name "basilica" from the Greek word meaning king. It was the king's court where all cases were tried and where all public meetings were held. The nave of the church was the auditorium and the chancel with its raised floor for the high altar used to be the dais where the court sat, frequently presided over by a king or an emperor. The word "duomo" is a contraction of the Latin "dominus," meaning "lord," or else of "domini domus," "the Lord's house." As the missionaries from Rome penetrated broadly through Europe they carried the basilica idea of a house of worship with them, but up among the Teutonic races the style of architecture was modified into the Gothic type. Our American poet William Cullen Bryant in his beautiful ode teaches us that "the woods were God's first temples." The Teutonic people took the forests as the crude model of their architecture, just as the Saracens modeled their temples of worship after a palm grove or the poles that upheld the tents of the nomad shepherds.

In the ecclesiastical architecture of Eu tient, attentive student can trace the who civilization. In the Thuringian forest in and generation are people as primitive as Europe were 300 or 500 years ago. All a civilization has swept forward. The cut of

On one end is added a smaller structure of exactly the same kind to serve as a chancel. Some of these are without porch or tower.

But here we get the first step in the evolution of church architecture. From very early times the church bell was sounded at prayer time to summon the people to worship. In comparatively primitive America the limb of an oak tree often held up the bell. Undoubtedly it was so too in the earliest times in Europe. But in due time came the bell tower. With an eye to economy a little rectangle was put either in the center of the front end of the church or on one corner to serve as an entrance and a bell tower at the same time. The whole affair was simply the church building in miniature. The angles were right, the walls straight and plain, and the roof exactly like that which covered the main body of the building. Some "progressive" architect of those early days was the author of an innovation. Instead of a roof with two sides to cover the little bell tower he put on a "hip roof," which is simply a small pyramid to protect the combined entrance and bell tower from the weather. But "revolutions never go backward." The architect next door to this innovator felt that he must "go one better," so instead of a pyramid with a rectangular base he erected over his entrance bell tower a roof consisting of five sections instead of four. A more ambitious member of the craft made his a hexagon, then came the octagon, the decagon, the duodecagon covering of the bell tower, until finally the base became converted from a rectangle to a circle and the roof from a pyramid to a cone. But the development was not at an end; the evolution was not complete. At first the cone-like roof ended in a point as plain as a pike staff. A genius of the early day conceived the idea of ending it in a finial. The Teutons were always very partial to the oak leaf and the acorn, and so the architectural finial was very often a bunch of oak leaves or a single acorn magnified to "heroic size."

Advent of the Cross.

Some pious soul conceived a steeple (for such the roof of the bell tower had become) with the sacred emblem of religion on the top, and so came the cross. It was at first of the Latin type, a straight upright piece, plain as could be, with the transverse arms as plain as the shaft. This was capable of efflorescence, and the efflorescence came. If the original needle-pointed steeple could end in a finial, so the simple Latin cross could be terminated with a triple ornamentation. But there is the other sacred emblem, the circle for immortality, and so came the cross with the circle surrounding the head and arms. This emblem of the Christian religion has assumed protean shapes. There is St. Andrew's cross in which the pieces are set at an oblique angle, and the Greek one, the Maltese and the Celtic.

Rivalry had still scope for operation, and from the steeple the architect turned his attention to the roof and other parts of the church. A finial of one kind or another went on every gable. There was the water conduit which led the rain off from the building, and here came one turret after another until we have St. Stephen's at Vienna, a miniature artistic forest of ornamentation that covers the building as the branches do a luxuriant tree. This is one of the most ornate of the smaller cathedrals of Europe, and in the richness of its decoration rivals the grandest of them all.

The inside of the edifice offered even a broader field for treatment than the exterior. So we have Westminster Abbey, with all its wealth of carving and ornamentation of various kinds, and to go back to Italy, we find at Milan the most splendid of all the sacred fanes of Europe. The acorn and the cross did not exhaust the means of ornamentation. There were saints and seraphs, angels' heads and graceful madonnas. The carved heads of the angels and saints on the cathedral at Milan number hundreds and are as perfect as the art of the sculptor can make them.

But "old Adam," the catechism tells us, persists in the heart even of "the elect." The architects who built the temples were very human. Along the eves where the water gutters run was an opportunity of decoration, and a rival artist, perhaps despairing of surpassing a competitor, turned him into ridicule. The Gothic imagination was always very rich in the grotesque. All know what gargoyles on the cathedrals are. But perhaps some of us do not know that the faces so monstrous and diabolical are often caricatures of the architects of the city in which the temple was erected. These grotesque figures are often fiendish in their hideousness, and the most of them often stand for some unfortunate contemporary who had incurred the dislike of the artist who constructed the temple. He fairly petrified the hated features of his rival or enemy in granite or marble, and set it in the most conspicuous spot on the most conspicuous building in the city.

An Index of History.

In the ecclesiastical architecture of Europe the patient, attentive student can trace the whole history of civilization. In the Thuringian forest in this our day and generation are people as primitive as those of all Europe were 300 or 500 years ago. All around them civilization has swept forward. The cut of the people's garments has changed. Everything in this condition of fashion has been toward greater ornamentation and decoration. The plain has given place to the florid, the simple to the ornate, the severe to the luxurious. With the onward progress of humanity, narrow, rough streets have given way to broad avenues and boulevards paved and flagged, ornamented with beautiful shade trees, all in sharp contrast with the simplicity and vulgarity of the earlier ages. Along the streets where hovels stood for palaces there are structures that no king dreamed of in the early days. It is all a matter of evolution. Think of Berlin in the time of Frederick the Great, less than 100 years ago, and Berlin of today, with its electrical street cars and all the polish and finish and luxury that 2,000,000 of earnest, most intelligent and very industrious people can put into the making of a modern city. From the simplicity of Frederick's time to the luxury of the day of William II things have moved step by step in every ramification of civilization. All the arts, all branches of literature, all the more material concomitants of life, have moved on step by step, each going with equal pace with all the rest. And it is all typified, all seen in epitome, in the architecture whose evolution we have been trying to trace.

Utility the Handmaid of Art.

It is very interesting to trace the parallel in this evolution to that of Darwin in his "Origin of Species" and the "Survival of the Fittest." In developing the church spire out of the little roof whose base was a rectangle it has not been all a matter of art. Art and usefulness have gone hand in hand every step of the way. The simple covering to protect the combined entrance and bell tower was far from perfect and was not long-lived. A heavy wind whipped it off frequently. When it was converted into a hip roof, pyramidal in shape, it turned the weather better and was stronger to resist the elements. The six-sided structure was more effective than the four-sided one, and so on until the circular tower base with the conical steeple reached a point of very high perfection compared with the first crude attempts of the early architects so little skilled in their art.

We owe a great deal to these early architects, as we do to our forerunners in every branch of art, ornamental or useful. They are building a great cathedral in New York on Morningside Heights. It will rival in magnificence and splendor the stateliest of them all, even that at Milan or the one at Cologne. But it has not sprung, Minerva-like, from the brain of any human or mythical god. It is an evolution of architectural art which reaches back to the simplest little temple the earliest Latin missionaries who penetrated the forests of Germany constructed for the use of their neophytes. The people who are to worship in St. John's or in the sister temple of St. Patrick's in New York City are surely "the heirs of all the ages in the foremost ranks of time." We may not always realize it, but it is an inestimable blessing to live in America in the year 1912 of the Christian era rather than at any other date since primitive man first dwelt in caves, a dug-out or a hut. It is indeed a great deal to kneel and worship while gazing through the rose window of the cathedral at Milan or the one at Sevilla. We have taken architecture as typical of all our civilization. It is just as great a blessing to enjoy the privilege of living in a modern American house with its sanitary plumbing, perfect ventilation, well-equipped kitchen with its gas stove, the whole house lighted with electricity, its Cashmere and Wilton rugs on the polished floors, rather than to have dwelt in the Teutonic huts of the people who built the first rude churches, the successors of which we have been looking at through the lines of this article. The food of the early people was as coarse and unwholesome as their huts were crude and unsanitary. Their clothes were as uncomfortable as they were ungraceful. How little we realize our happy condition as we bowl along a level, well-paved road in a sixty-horse-power automobile going safely at the rate of a mile a minute as compared with the rude cart of the German people of the early ages, drawn by fractious, ill-broken horses over rough roads where progress was not only slow, but dangerous.

THE LOURDES PILGRIMAGE.

THE STORY OF THE WONDERFUL SHRINE IN FRANCE.

From Modern Society.

It is rumored that an attempt will be made to suppress the annual pilgrimage to Lourdes this year. But, apart altogether from the religious feeling that would be stirred up, it is such a good paying concern to the railways of France that it would be silly, as well as unwise, to interfere with the festival.

It is less than fifty years since pilgrims began to wend their way in medieval spirit, if not in medieval fashion, to Lourdes. It was in February, 1858, that Marie-Bernardi Soubirous, or Bernadette, as she is generally called, a not especially brilliant little peasant girl of 14 years, who was just preparing for her first communion, wandered into the dark, mysterious recess, her mind perplexed with childish troubles.

Suddenly the place was illuminated with a celestial brightness, and she felt herself to be in some holy place. With transfixed gaze she looked upon what she thought to be an angel.

"Bernadette," it said, "I want you to come every day for fifteen days, for I have much to say to you."

Bernadette obeyed, taking her beads with her. The "angel" did not appear every day, however; but on most days she was there. Each time she smiled sweetly on the child. One day the vision said: "Bernadette, I am the Immaculate Conception. I want you to tell the cure of Lourdes that I wish him to build me a church on this rock."

The cure said, when the little peasant girl, full of faith in the verity of what she had seen and her mission, gave him the message of the Virgin: "Bernadette, go home and count your beads, and learn your catechism. Do not bother about such things."

Bernadette, however, still believed in what she had seen in her simple fashion, and she continued to visit the grotto in the face of the rock. People learned of her visits, and that she believed she saw something supernatural there. They could not see what she seemed to see; but her earnestness and rapt expression they could perceive, and they, too, believed.

One day as she knelt, looking on the figure in white with blue sash and gold roses on her bare feet, the beautiful apparition said to her: "My child, drink of the well at my feet and wash." The child was astonished, for there was no well there. She hesitated a moment, but only a moment. Her faith in the vision was superior to any doubt, and, stooping, she began the motions of washing her hands. As she did so, out of the heart of the rock and through the earth sprang a stream of icy cold water. When Bernadette looked up after the miracle the figure smiled and said: "I wish that there may come many persons from all over the world to drink and wash in these waters." Then "Our Lady of Lourdes" disappeared. The little girl told what she had seen, and some went to the grotto to see if she spoke truth. Yes, there was the spring. They gave thanks, brought their sick, bathed them in the chilling water, and they were made whole.

The child was threatened by the civil authorities for introducing such superstitious practices; but the wonders continued. The civil authorities put a palisade across the entrance to the grotto, but that did not keep the people away. Then the Bishop of Tarbes and other ecclesiastics assembled, and after much deliberation decided that the figure in the vision could have been no other than that of the Blessed Lady; and it was decided to carry out her wishes regarding the erection of a church. The Pope sent his blessing, and millions of persons have since made pilgrimages to Lourdes. The little maid died a number of years ago in a convent.

This is the legend told of the origin of the shrine of Lourdes. Today pilgrims to the number of 200,000 or 300,000 go to Lourdes every year to worship and secure help for their ailments or those of their friends who are unable to come. Besides those who bathe in the water at the grotto are many who cannot go to it, but to whom the water is sent. The mail bag of the postman who carries the mail to the priests of Notre Dame de Lourdes is a heavy one. Sometimes he brings as many as 500 letters in one day addressed to "Our Lady of Lourdes." Many letters are also thrown or deposited in the grotto addressed in the same way. They are opened by the priests, who take charge of any money or stamps enclosed. The letters ask for all sorts of things, including success in attaining the desires of the writers in marriage and the punishment of enemies.

So eager were the early pilgrims to throw themselves bodily into the spring that it became necessary to cover it over with iron doors, and the water is now conducted from the spring through pipes to the faucets, from which it is drawn by those who desire to bathe their faces, hands and arms, or fill a bottle or can with it.

The pilgrimage, in one respect at least, is unlike that of the Canterbury pilgrims, for it is made by rail. Special trains designated by colors and one known as the "Saints'" train, because the departments are dedicated to different saints, take the pilgrims to Lourdes. A special road has been built from the station to the spot. A large number of the visitors to Lourdes are so poor that they cannot afford to pay for shelter, and they sleep on the benches in front of the church and grotto.

Passing the baths one finds the grotto facing the promenade and the river, and situated directly under the apse of the church. It is only only fifteen feet deep. Its walls are covered with soot from the millions of candles which have been burned there; and there are hundreds upon hundreds of crutches which have been left by those who departed believing themselves cured. In a niche in the shadow of the overhanging growth is the figure of the Virgin, modelled after the description given by little Bernadette, with flowing veil and gown of white, a blue sash, and a gold rose on each bare foot.

On certain days, when thousands of pilgrims are assembled, processions are formed by the pilgrims and, accompanied with banners carried by girls selected for their maidenly beauty, they follow the Host, carried possibly by a cardinal archbishop, from the church entrance around to the grotto and through the grounds. The maimed and the sick gathered in the square look upon the marching throng and the Host with tense features, crying: "Our Lady of Lourdes, cure us! Our Lady of Lourdes, shrive us clean!" These words are uttered in the language of the half-dozen nationalities represented. This is one of the crucial moments for them. "Will Our Lady hear our prayers?" is their thought.

The shrine, of course, publishes no balance sheet; but it is estimated by conservative students that the amount paid to Rome each year is fully £50,000, in addition to large sums which annually go to Rome for special dispensations and favors. Taking this as a basis, it is no extravagant estimates that the annual income of the Lourdes shrine is nearly £300,000. The income in the past, however, has doubtless been equally large, if not larger, and it has been a common practice for Cardinals and other high church dignitaries to apply to Lourdes for money whenever the need presented itself. It is said that the government will seek to close the shrine on three grounds—legal, moral, and medical.

Righting the Compass.

UNIQUE VESSEL MAKING MAGNETIC SURVEY OF THE WORLD.

By Alfred C. Pickells.

IT IS RATHER difficult to find in this world a class in which there is but one member. But there is one striking illustration in the magnetic yacht Carnegie. There is no other vessel in the world like it, for three reasons; because it is the only vessel built entirely of non-magnetic materials, because it is the first vessel to ply the great oceans propelled by a producer gas engine, and because it is the only vessel on which absolutely accurate magnetic observations can be made.

To correct the world's magnetic charts was the sole reason for its construction, because to be the medium by which thousands of these observations may be made at as many points over the various oceans is the mission which the ordinary vessel is not fitted for.

If one were lost in a broad expanse and knew something of the heavens it would be possible to obtain one's bearings so long as one could see the sun by day or the stars by night. But suppose one were lost in a dense woods, or on the open prairie, or out at sea under a cloudy sky, or in a dense fog? The only means of guidance would be the earth's magnetism.

The Carnegie under sail.

The Carnegie at Falmouth, England.

But nature has so distributed the earth's magnetism as to hamper even that means. Ordinarily one speaks of the compass needle as pointing to the North Pole. As a matter of fact, instead of pointing to the north geographical pole in the northern hemisphere it indicates the direction of the north magnetic pole, over a thousand miles away, and by an amount that varies in different parts of the earth and from year to year.

If one, therefore, did not know the correct variation one would go far wrong by accepting the direct readings. To make a complete study of the earth's magnetic forces, to mark their direction and strength, and from these to determine the changes that are going on and to chart them is the mission of the Carnegie. It means guidance for the navigator and explorer, accurate calculations for the surveyor, and ready information for the man of science.

The materials of which the ordinary ship is constructed affect the compass in the same manner as the local earth influences and cause it to not only deviate from the direction of the true pole, but also to weaken the earth's magnetic force.

But this has a still worse feature because the local influences aboard ship are continually changing. It is different on the different courses which the vessel might ply, and it is also varied with the change in geographical position.

But the compasses on the yacht Carnegie are not influenced by such local conditions, and it is a singular coincidence that though iron and steel made possible the construction of this vessel through the endowment of Mr. Carnegie, every effort was made to avoid these metals in its structure. The only magnetic material used is less than 600 pounds in certain parts of the engine, and these are so far away from the compass observation-rooms that their influence is negligible. Even the cutlery used on board is made of Mexican silver.

The first voyage proved the Carnegie's worth. The charts theretofore published gave a variation of the compass based on observations made only on ordinary vessels. In October, 1909, on her voyage from Newfoundland to Falmouth, Eng., the Carnegie uncovered errors of the greatest importance to the mariner. These ranged as high as about two degrees in some places even on the three best charts published, subjecting the mariner to risk in case of foggy or continued cloudy weather. In the work of the vessel during last July in the Indian Ocean errors in the charts as great as six degrees were found.

The Carnegie is apparently as strong as the best steel-hulled craft afloat. Every plank in its 155 feet of length is fastened with either locust-tree nails or composition spikes, and the beams are held together by copper and Tobin bronze bolts.

On deck you can see copper and brass everywhere, but not a sign of iron or steel. Her great anchors show the dark brown of a 5500-pound mass of manganese bronze, and where ordinarily you would expect to see great heavy chains leading to them from out of the chain locker, there are instead thick hemp cables.

For propulsion the vessel depends mainly on 12,000 square feet of sail, but every fitting on every spar and mast is made of bronze and copper, and the blocks by which the sails are raised or lowered and trimmed are made of bronze and gunmetal.

In order that no time may be lost in regions of calms and for use in entering harbor, the Carnegie is fitted with a 150-horse power auxiliary engine to force her ahead should the wind fail.

This, too, is one of the new things in marine propulsion. It is strictly a gas engine, receiving its power from gas generated on board by anthracite coal. Producer gas engines for marine work are not new. The Otto Gas Engine Works in Germany turned out several small vessels fitted with such engines in 1901, and during the year in which the Carnegie was constructed such an engine was placed in a forty-foot power-boat on the Hudson River with great success; but the Carnegie's engine is new in that it is built entirely of bronze, copper and brass.

The gas is generated in a great copper cylinder six feet long and five and one-half feet in diameter, and when supplied to the engine is capable of producing a speed of 144 nautical miles a day, or about eight miles an hour, at a cost of $7. The vessel's bunkers will carry twenty-five tons of coal, enough for continuous cruising of 2000 nautical miles.

Following along these same lines the cooking ranges and refrigeration plant are made entirely of non-magnetic metals. In this respect the Carnegie has all the latest devices in cold storage to provide comfortable living in the edible line for long cruises of six weeks or more, but her only adherence to the old-time apparatus is in the lighting arrangements. An electric plant is the most highly magnetic piece of mechanism on earth, and it has therefore been entirely displaced by oil lamps and gas.

The knowledge of terrestrial magnetism dates back to the thirteenth century, when Peregrinus demonstrated the magnetic power of the earth. Later, on his first voyage, Columbus decided that the irregular action of his compass was due to the difference in magnetic conditions.

A little over two centuries ago the first collection of data was made by the British government, and in speaking of its publication Prof. J. A. Fleming in an address in London said:

"That great empire which has its center in these islands, but its dominions scattered over distant seas, has been built primarily on the art of navigation, in which the magnetism of the earth is a central fact. Neither its world-wide commerce, nor the naval power which defends its coasts, could exist for a day without the aid of the magnetic compass."

The British government in 1698 sent the royal astronomer, Edmund Halley, to make magnetic observations over the North and South Atlantic oceans from latitude 60 degrees north to the same distance south of the equator in the ship Paramur Pink. The results were published on a chart in 1701, showing the lines of equal magnetic variation. In the years immediately following he issued a chart of the world showing the lines of equal magnetic variation for the five great oceans, and in the years from 1872 to 1876 the British expedition in the ship Challenger made more extensive observations and the charts were partially reconstructed from time to time. Later on an attempt was made by one government to secure observations made on all merchant vessels whether iron or wooden with the hope that the errors would be lost in the averages. But the results were so varied that even the averages were looked upon with suspicion and were regarded as unsafe.

As far back as 1831 Capt. James Clark Ross located the north magnetic pole in the vicinity of 70 degrees north latitude and 96 degrees west of the Greenwich meridian. The British Antarctic expedition selected the neighborhood of 73 degrees south latitude and [illegible] degrees east longitude as the location of the south magnetic pole.

The compass on approaching the magnetic poles will point steadily toward them with greater and greater deflection from the true geographic poles as they near the centers of magnetism until, when directly over them, the tendency of the needle will be to dip straight downward. If the compass were mounted on a horizontal axis it would take a vertical position at these poles.

But even if the exact positions of these poles were known magneticians have declared that no formula could be devised which could be used to give a reliable correction because the deflecting force varies with the different locations.

This is due to the influence produced by the distribution of the land and water surfaces. In the numerous regions thus far found by the Carnegie's observers to exert a great attraction on their compasses, it has afterward been learned that those localities possess large local deposits of magnetic iron ore. It produces the same effect on the needle as the iron on the ship, but more powerful and extending over a greater distance. The Madeiras, the Bermudas and other islands of volcanic origin have been found to exert a pronounced local attraction which, if not allowed for by vessels plying a course within the influence, might cause serious mishaps. The Carnegie has been gradually locating these and thus warning the mariner by placing on his charts the proper correction to apply.

It is the variation of this declination from place to place that makes the Carnegie's mission a world-wide one, and it is also the change in variation from year to year that will give the Department of Terrestrial Magnetism something to study over to determine the cause. In 1580 the compass at London pointed 11½ degrees east of true north, in 1622 not quite 6 degrees, and Henry Gellibrand of Gresham College observed in 1634 that the declination was 4 degrees and 6 minutes east. Thus the change in fifty years was 7 degrees. It had been known as early as 1600 that the compass variation changed from point to point, but it was supposed to be fixed at any one point.

The result of the observations made by the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey and the Department of Terrestrial Magnetism so far show that in Northeastern Maine the deflection is 20 degrees west of north, and in Northwestern Washington 24 degrees east. Western Ohio and South Carolina represent nearly the zero variation, while over the Atlantic Ocean along the sailing route for full-powered steamers from New York to England the needle varies the entire distance, being 10 degrees west at New York, increasing in mid-ocean to 30 degrees west, and decreasing to 17 degrees west at Southampton.

The Carnegie Institution of Washington was established in 1905, and one of its first departments to be organized was that of terrestrial magnetism. Under the direction of Dr. L. A. Bauer the department began its first work in a chartered vessel, the brigantine Galilee, over the Pacific Ocean. In those three years from 1905 to 1908 the Galilee cruised 60,000 miles from the Aleutian Islands on the north to New Zealand on the south, zigzagging across the ocean between North and South America and Asia. But though the Galilee was only a sailing vessel, its metal fittings contained enough attraction for the sensitive compasses to soon demonstrate that fine adjustments were necessary and that the resulting tedious calculations were uncertain and unsatisfactory. It was then decided that the work could be done best and most economically on an entirely non-magnetic vessel.

The regular ship's complement of the Carnegie consists of a crew of twenty-two men. Dr. L. A. Bauer has direct charge of the entire work of the department with W. J. Peters, an expert magnetician, in command during the cruises. The scientific staff consists of four magneticians and one surgeon, and the sailing branch of four officers, eight seamen, one engineer, two cooks and two cabin boys.

All the comfort and convenience that could be desired is to be found on the Carnegie. The living quarters are all below decks, the crew in an ample space forward with the commander and his staff aft. Each stateroom is fitted both as an office and a living-room, convenient for work and recreation.

The compasses are mounted in observatories so constructed that observations may be made in all kinds of weather. There are two observation-rooms on deck amidship, covered by great heavy glass domes, operated by a revolving apparatus, under which the observer may work in rain or sunshine. The total cost of the yacht reached $115,000.

With the progress of the work the Royal Society of Great Britain has become so impressed that it has expressed a desire to co-operate and has aided in the work of the department in Africa under Profs. J. C. Beattie and J. T. Morrison, two British authorities on terrestrial magnetism.

The Carnegie is at present on a cruise which will encircle the globe and will last three years, covering 65,000 nautical miles. One of the facts recently brought to light during the Carnegie's work is that for the purpose of minute and accurate observational work the complicated compasses used aboard the modern vessels are handicapped by their many attachments, because the accuracy depends not so much on the instrument as on the method of taking the observations.

The results of the institution's magnetic work are accepted by the hydrographic offices of the world as correct. On land observations are being made over the greater part of most of the magnetically unexplored continents and the islands. The variations for the land and oceans are being charted as rapidly as they come in, and the expectation is that the survey of the entire globe will be accomplished and the charts completed in fifteen years.

The Panama Hat.

A WOMAN'S VISIT TO THOSE WHO MAKE THEM IN ECUADOR.

By Annabel Lee.

THERE is a persevering faith in the stories circulated by sea captains that the Panama hat is made under water at a temperature that nearly reaches boiling point and not long ago I had a chance to run down that tale. The annals of the out-of-the-way tribe who have made Panama almost as well known as the perennial revolution or the big canal have in like manner been buried in mystery; for the Panama-hat weavers are the descendants of the Incas Indians, who do not dwell in Panama at all, but live and weave in the western mountains of Ecuador. The port of Manta is a three days' voyage north of Guayaquil, and up in the mountains eighty miles away is the Incas community that for over four centuries have practiced the industry of their forebears in weaving Panama hats.

The tropical sun, the scorching sea breezes and the insufferable air of the land of Pizarro make a visit to the home of the hat weavers one long to be remembered and its interest absorbs you if you can stand the discomforts of an outing over a tropic trail. But unless you wish to give up the comforts of a commonplace civilization, avoid the trip, for the trails are barely accessible and the wild jungle can only be appreciated by seekers after new scenes. For my part, I learned by degrees to enjoy the lazy, dark-skinned, tattered, beggarly Indians, whose costumes seem to have been borrowed from Carmen.

The little town of Jipajapa (pronounced Hipahapa) is a community whose history is preserved by the unwritten lore of romantic Indian legends that live only in the hearts of the people. It combines a strange mixture of fascination and repulsiveness, of thriftlessness and industry and is a sight to see while the romance of the Middle Ages still lingers upon it and before the disastrous complexity of civilization has had a chance to rob it of a peace that it can never by any chance regain. We entered the harbor of Manta in the middle of the afternoon and found at this port as elsewhere on the west shore of the Americas, with one or two deviations, that there is no wharf, and we had to land in small boats. But long before we anchored the shore line came into view. The royal palms stood like sentinels, topped by their lofty plumes and around them gathered the tropic jungle, noisy with the bugle call of parrot and paroquet.

Close to the ocean's rim huddled a mob of dusky Panama-hat venders who have borrowed the "early bird" proverb from the northern latitudes and ply us with their wares before we leave the ship. The day was oppressively warm and steaming with the liquid sunshine that sent all life to the covert, save the buzzards lazily lapping the air, and even our guides refused to start on the trail before nightfall.

The moon was full and no night ever lent itself less to the commonplace or more sharply suggested a trip to the land of the hobgoblins. About 2 o'clock we entered a forest of cactus trees. The unreal aspect of these huge pulpy trunks and branches, sometimes reaching upward and outward fifty or sixty feet, extending tentacle-like arms in ghostly gestures; the round masses of prickly matter that looked like porcupines rolled into balls; the mysterious white sand out of which they grew and the tropic moon silvering and polishing the soft-colored spines with weird Druidical precision are not scenes easily forgotten.

Toward dawn we found our trail hedged with rare tropical bloom. Orchids of unparalleled beauty, uncoveted by the native, therefore undisturbed, clung to the path to the edge of the town of Jipajapa, which we reached at noon.

The stores and market places were closed, for the wheels of traffic stop at 7 o'clock in the morning and are not ready for business until 7:30 at night, when the hat weavers bring in their goods to exchange for the essentials of life.

The traditions of the hat makers, the art of their deft fingers and the houses wherein they dwell are not the most interesting subjects to the seeker after new scenes, but I was here to learn of these. In January the peons begin to plant the seeds of the screw palm, which the Indians call the jipajapa, and which naturalists name the Carudovica palmata. The seeding requires about thirty days, allowing for the many and frequent Spanish holidays, and the straw is ready for the market in about three months.

The hats are woven from the leaves of this palm. It is a stemless species and grows in shady places along the coast of Ecuador. No weaver ever buys more straw than enough for one hat at a time, and the process of its preparation is both tedious and interesting.

The leaves, pleated like a fan, grow in the shape of three-cornered stalks, six to twelve feet high. They vary from three to four feet in diameter and are deeply cut into four divisions, each of which is cut again. When the straw grows to the thickness of sugar cane the Indians call it ripe, and they gather the leaves and remove the parallel veins, after which they split them into shreds, but do not separate them at the stalk ends. Then they dip the straw into boiling water, after removing the green husk, and bleach it in the sun for about twenty-four hours. These fibers are about a yard in length, and are rolled by the Indians from either edge, and become one yard long, with two small circles showing on the under side. They are rolled in this manner so that they may have no raw edge. They are then pressed out flat and are ready for the process of the hat weaver's art.

The weaving is done by old men, women and children, and the weavers are so erratic in their work that it is quite impossible for any one to know how long it takes to make a hat. They are most industrious during the morning hours and at night because they are more comfortable if idle during the heat of the day. Besides, a saint's birthday, a funeral or other excuse for a holiday is a welcome diversion from work which they eagerly appropriate, for to them "work is always work and idleness a joy." The children usually begin to weave at the age of 7. They weave from the center of the crown and their circular beginning is called a button. They select straw of a coarse texture for the novices, who require fifteen years of experience to qualify them for a fair knowledge of hat making, and the experts turn out the fine-grade hat only after a lifetime of application.

The weavers sit cross-legged about the yards of bamboo huts or on their bamboo floors and weave over wooden blocks placed between their knees. If the day is hot they moisten their fingers every few minutes in an olla of water, but they never wet the straw, so the sea captain's tale went a-glimmering.

Some enterprising agent discovered a few years ago that the climate at Monte Cristi (at a higher altitude and some twenty miles away) kept the straw moist and produced the finest grade of hat in the world. At any rate the finest hats are woven at Monte Cristi on moonlight nights in order to save the expense of burning candles. The finest quality of hat requires approximately six months' time in the weaving. Its texture is like damask and its fibers are like threads of linen, but whatever the time required, you know the Indian deducts his time for play, and work is always a secondary consideration.

The men principally shape the straws after they are completed and pack them for shipment. They rub them with sulphur and pack one dozen in the space that one ordinary blocked hat would occupy.

The Indians braided but one shape, called the National or Ecuadorian style, until a few years ago. Then the United States Consul at Manta shipped some tourists blocks from New York, and since then the dealers are able to get the Alpine straws.

Hats that retail here for $10 are bought in Jipajapa for 50 cents. The best hats are sold in Ecuador for $100, and this hat will bring $500 in New York; but the medium-grade hats which bring from $75 to $100 here can be purchased in Ecuador for $20.

The long line of Indian venders carrying their hats to the merchants in the evenings is a novel sight. The women dress in black nun-like clothing, covering their hats under their arms with a shawl, while the men conceal their millinery under their ponchos. The market place, as in all Spanish colonies, faces the plaza and the Indians slowly file in the waiting line across the plaza to the merchant's door.

He sits just outside and tries each piece of headgear upon his own head to determine the size; if it suits him he will fix a very low price upon it, from which he never vacillates. It is a common occurrence for the Indian to walk away in disgust, for he knows the fine grade hat, and hunger, not craft, is the agent that will conquer him and force down his price.

A JOHNSON LIBRARY.

[London Daily Mail:] Lichfield, the birthplace of Dr. Johnson, has just celebrated the 202nd anniversary of the birth of its most illustrious citizen, and Johnsonian scholars and admirers gathered in the ancient city to take part in the commemorative proceedings.

At the old house in St. Mary's square where Johnson was born the Mayor of Lichfield accepted on behalf of the city the Hay-Hunter Library. It comprises about 1050 volumes, was formed by the late Rev. Peter Hay-Hunter of Edinburgh, and has been presented to the birthplace by his widow. Among its rarest treasures are first editions of the dictionary, the "Adventurer," "Rambler," "Rasselas," and the poetical works and political tracts. It also includes between thirty and forty editions of Boswell's "Life."

The annual Johnson supper was held in the old George hostel. The "coarse" fare beloved by Johnson—beefsteak pudding, with kidneys, oysters and mushrooms, haunch of mutton, apple pie with cream and toasted cheese—was served, and then the old ale and punch were brought in and the guests had each a churchwarden pipe and a dish of tobacco.

WORLD'S GREATEST PRECIPICE.

[Youth's Companion:] Capt. C. G. Rawling, a member of the British expedition that recently explored Dutch New Guinea, describes what may be the greatest unbroken precipice in the world. It runs, he says, for a distance of eighty miles from Mount Carstenz westward to the Charles Louis Mountains. Its greatest sheer height is at Mount Leonard Darwin.

The explorers were never in a position to measure with theodolite a sheer height of this immense precipice exceeding 6500 feet, but from many views obtained of it while he was climbing Capt. Rawling has no hesitation in stating that the greatest perpendicular height is not less than 10,500 feet or almost exactly two miles.

CHURCH FOR FUNERALS ONLY.

[New York Sun:] New York has one church which is devoted entirely to funeral services. It is called the Funeral Church, and its usefulness comes from the fact that many families living in small apartments in the city desire to have the last services for their dead conducted in a larger place than is provided by their home. Having no fixed church affiliation, they seek this place for the services.

Science at the Capital.

MEN OF KNOWLEDGE HAVE USEFUL PLACE IN GOVERNMENT.

By Rene Bache.

THE WINNING OUT of Dr. Wiley has given most people a clearer notion than they had before of the formidable power wielded by the really big scientific men here in Washington. The bureau of which he is chief is not merely a group of experimental laboratories, but a great administrative office, charged with the enforcement of wide-reaching laws.

To cite another instance, the greatest individual spender of the government is a scientific man—Frederick H. Newell, who is at the head of the Reclamation Service. In the last eight years he has paid out no less than $65,547,000.

He has done a good deal with the money, however. For one item, he has constructed 5967 miles of canals, many of which carry whole rivers. He has built 2193 bridges, and has completed three of the highest dams in the world—the best known of these being the Roosevelt Dam in the Salt River Valley of Arizona. Incidentally, he has bored great holes through mountain ranges, and has excavated 73,666,000 cubic feet of earth and rock.

All of this work has been done for the purpose of creating artificial oases in formerly desert valleys by storing water during the season of rainfall in huge reservoirs in the mountains and distributing it over the thirsty land in the dry months. During the present year $20,000,000 worth of crops has been produced on these irrigated patches, and as a result of the enterprises in twenty-eight valleys land values have increased more than $106,000,000.

Prof. Monroe's Work.

President Benjamin Harrison said that one of the most important achievements of the government under his administration had been the production of a satisfactory smokeless powder. This powder was the invention of Prof. Charles T. Munroe, who is the greatest expert in explosives now living. Although he is not in the service of the government, he is employed by it from time to time to make special experiments or to do original research work of one kind or another. Thus, for example, he made for the Treasury a series of tests of the effects of high explosives upon safes and vaults—the results obtained being published in the form of a bulletin which the newspapers spoke of jocularly as the "Burglar's Guide."

Frederick H. Newell and the Roosevelt Dam.

Prof. Monroe has made some very interesting discoveries in regard to the explosiveness of certain things which are not ordinarily regarded as dangerous at all. For instance, in explaining the occurrence of occasional disasters in flour mills he has stated that the contents of a twenty-five-pound sack of flour mixed with 4000 cubic feet of air will, if ignited, generate force enough to throw a mass of iron weighing one ton forty-five miles up into the sky. Gunpowder is no more dangerous than common household flour if the latter be set afloat in the air. But sawdust, cork dust, finely-powdered starch, malt dust, or even soap powder will explode with frightful violence under similar conditions.

The government is now thinking seriously of adopting a new idea of Prof. Munroe's, which is to color the outside of the grains of all the smokeless powder used by the army and navy with a dye which will change its hüe in case the explosive substance undergoes any chemical decomposition. Such decomposition, causing the powder to set itself on fire, is said to have been accountable for the recent blowing up of the French battleship Liberte. The material used for the above-mentioned purpose may perhaps be colorless, only assuming a pinkish or bluish tint in case the powder goes wrong. The idea, of course, is that any batch of smokeless powder which has begun to decompose shall make its condition immediately visible to the eye.

The Official "Bone Man."

Most men, in order to get along in this world, find it necessary to proclaim themselves to some extent. They must tell folks how really important they are, lest perchance they be overlooked. Quite otherwise is it with Frederic A. Lucas. The most unassuming person imaginable, he would, in all sincerity, have you believe that it was mere accident which elevated him recently to the position of director of the great Museum of Natural History in New York City.

Not very long ago Mr. Lucas was the "bone man" of the National Museum in Washington, and devoted most of his time to putting together the skeletons of a great variety of animals. The government's magnificent collection of skeletons of dinosaurs and other ancient creatures was mounted and put in shape for exhibition under his personal direction.

To speak of Lucas's knowledge of fossil monsters is merely to mention one of many branches of his learning. He has made a special study of the anatomy of birds—particularly (an odd point) with regard to their weapons. When first it was realized that the great auk was actually extinct, he was sent to Fund Island (formerly occupied by this feathered species in vast numbers,) off the Newfoundland coast, to collect bones. He brought back several barrels full, which today practically constitute the only existing osseous relics of the departed fowl. Thanks to his work, the National Museum is in a position to supply great auk skeletons, complete, to scientific establishments at a price quite moderate, considering that it has a monopoly of the output.

Expert Fisherman.

One of the newest ideas of Dr. Hugh M. Smith is to introduce the sturgeon of the Caspian Sea into our lakes and rivers. The government of Roumania has offered to give us as many live and hatchable eggs as may be wanted, or, if preferred, a quantity of baby sturgeon. It is a chance well worth accepting, inasmuch as the Caspian sturgeon is a very superior variety, and its roe is valued at $9 a pound, for caviare.

Dr. Smith is the deputy commissioner of fisheries. He has charge of all the scientific work done by our government in connection with fishes and other aquatic animals, including the lobster. In his line he is undoubtedly the foremost expert living. His acquaintance not only with fishes, but with the commercial fisheries, is profound, many years of his service having been devoted to a study of the actual methods of capture employed. Thus he has come to be regarded as an authority on such matters in Europe as well as in the United States, and at international fish conferences, such as the one held not long ago at The Hague, he is relied upon to furnish most of the practical information.

Great Work of Prof. Holmes.

The most noteworthy studies in regard to the antiquity of man upon the earth have been made by Prof. William H. Holmes, a very remarkable man, inasmuch as he is distinguished as a geologist, as an anthropologist, and as a painter. He is president of the National Academy of Fine Arts.

Prof. Holmes has dug far and wide and very deep in the remains of ancient man. Exceedingly ancient, as he seems to be, in the judgment of the science of today. There is no question of the fact that he lived at the beginning of the glacial period, which was at least 600,000 years ago, and there is good evidence apparently to show that he was on the earth a long while before that—away back in the Pliocene, that is to say. just where and when he ceased to be a monkey and became merely monkey-like, as he is today, nobody can state with exactness.

The first scientific man to learn how to make fire by rubbing two sticks together was Dr. Walter Hough, who is curator of ethnology in the National Museum. Not only can he do this, but he is able to accomplish the feat in five or six different ways. Nobody taught him; he just learned the trick by experimenting with the methods used for the purpose by savages in various parts of the world.

Every boy has been fascinated by what he has read in story books about the making of fire with two sticks. And now some boys have actually learned how to do it themselves. The Boy Scouts have taken up the idea, and the art—a mighty useful one under circumstances easily imaginable—is being taught incidentally to the field work of that enterprising organization.

Dr. Hough (who is, by the way, a Knight of the Order of Isabella of Spain) has earned fame mainly, however, through his explorations in the Southwest, where he has studied the cliff dwellers and has dug into the ruins of many prehistoric cities. He has devoted more attention than any other living man to working out the history of the development of invention—for example, in the case of the stove, the progressive improvement of which may be said to have marked the cultural advance of the human race.

A Man of Many Parts.

Another man who in his life has played many parts is Prof. W. J. McGee. (The printer will put those two initials with periods after them, but it is wrong.) McGee's parents called him simply "W J," giving him no other name. He grew up on a farm, and while doing the usual farm chores studied Latin, higher mathematics, astronomy, and law. Workings with his own hands at forge and bench, he invented several agricultural implements. Later on, he took up geology and ethnology, distinguishing himself greatly in both branches of science.

Prof. McGee is especially proud of the fact that he was "self-educated." One of the foremost scientists of the day, he has taught himself everything he knows. At the present time he is connected with the Bureau of Soils in the Department of Agriculture. One of his achievements was the bringing together of the remarkable assemblagé of wild and semi-wild peoples from all parts of the world, which did so much to make the St. Louis Exposition attractive.

His most noteworthy exploit, however, was the visit he paid to the Seri Indians. These savages, the wildest and most ferocious in America, dwell on the great island called Tiburon, in the Gulf of California. No study had previously been made of them—which is not surprising inasmuch as they are reputed cannibals, and are accustomed to murder any white man they happen to come across. Prof. McGee escaped being eaten, and published through the Bureau of Ethnology his observations concerning the Seri.

Two Other Famous Experts.

It is now realized that certain insects, and particularly those most familiar to us, have importantly to do in the scattering of disease. Thus it comes about that Dr. Leland O. Howard, the government's entomologist-in-chief, is ex-officio consultant of the Public Health Service. He runs the bug end of that branch of the government, so to say.

Dr. Howard is one of the most famous of living scientists, his reputation being as high abroad as it is in this country. He is particularly known as an authority on the mosquito and the house fly. But his greatest achievement has been the development of the utilization of good insects for fighting bad ones. At the present time he is attacking by such means the destructive gypsy moth in Massachusetts, with good prospects of success.

The greatest living expert in petroleum is Dr. David T. Day of the United States Geological Survey. For quite a while he has been engaged in developing the uses of the by-products of such oil, which already have a surprising number of commercial uses—for instance, for paraffin wax, candles, artificial honeycombs, matches, artificial straws, covering preserves, and the coating of flypaper. One compound obtained by Dr. Day from crude petroleum boils at the temperature of the human body, so that if a small bottle of it be held in the hand the contents will presently begin to bubble.

To wind up with a word about Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, it is interesting to know that he was at one time a professor of Latin and Greek in a western college. He is a wonderful talker, and rather famous as a humorist. If there is one thing that he does better than conducting the Chemistry Bureau, it is acting as toastmaster at a banquet. Then he is really in his element, and manages to keep things going in such a way that everybody has a good time.

Judge Hightower.

HE TALKS OF POLITICS AND OTHER LIVE TOPICS.

By Irvin S. Cobb.

"AIN'T THERE an election down in your country on Toosday next?" said Sticky McGlue of Fourteenth street, addressing Judge Hightower of Kentucky in New York.

"I believe something of that sort is in contemplation," said the old judge.

"I take it fur granted that youse would sure wanter be there fur that," said Sticky.

"Elections no longer appeal to me pussonally as they onct did," said Judge Hightower. "There was a time when the open season on Republikins started as early as August and continued right through until the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November. It was good sport, too, because while there wasn't enough of 'em to make it commonplace there was always enough for a mess. In those good old days a Republikin in my district approached the pollin' place with his ballot in one hand and his life in the other, and neither one of 'em countin' fur much in the general result. And as Calloway county went so went the nation—or if it didn't it was the nation's own fault. Calloway always done her duty, anyhow.

"But things are mighty changed. I regret to state that the solid South ain't as solid as she uster be, and Kintucky is in the same class with Missouri and Tennessee and some of her other sister commonwealths along the border—she's reliably Democratic by 40,000 the day after election, but on election day itself she's prone, not to say liable, to be toler'ble close.

"But it was the rise of the Prohibitionist movement that really took the edge off of my enthusiasm. I can remember when there was one Prohibitionist in our country, and people came for miles on hossback and in buggies to look at him and hear him speak. There was right sharp talk at first of lockin' him up, but after a while we decided he was harmless and just let him be. Squire Gilkins said he's heard of a grown man onct that was mentally afflicted in much the same way—only this other one collected bird aigs and uster go out in the woods and lay on his back and look up into the trees, pretendin' to be studyin' nature as he called it—and Squire Gilkins said he never got violent or offered to hurt anybody, and so people just humored him along and he advised that we do the same thing in regard to this here Prohibitionist.

"But as it turned out, he wasn't as harmless as he let on, because his breed kept increasin'. Purty soon a Prohibitionist was no longer a natural curiosity like a calf with six legs or a lady with chin whiskers, and here a few months back it begun to look like purty soon I wouldn't be able to mix me a sweeten' dram without a grand jury interferin'. It got on my nerves and disturbed my sleepin'. My rest was as much broken as a centipede with a wife that suffers from cold feet. So I just decided to take my foot in my hand and leave. The Southern Cross had disappointed me, but I still had hopes in your Big Dipper; its very name commended itself to me. And I may say that my hopes have been more or less realized. If I could only find a grocery somewhere in this town where the barkeeper could make a toddy without lookin' in a recipe book first I feel that I would have no cause to complain at your local facilities for squenchin' a fireman's thirst.

"So takin' everything into consideration, I don't think I'll return to my native State for the election. The excitement probably wouldn't justify the expense. If I should feel a longin' stealin' over me to smoke one of them old-fashioned rim-fire seegars I can probably run upon the desired article here without goin' all the way back home to find a candidate for County Assessor to give one to me."

"Do they still have them old campaign brands of 5-cent cigars down there?" asked Sticky.

"Yes," said the judge, "you light 'em with a percussion cap and smoke 'em with a lamp wick, and they smell like the insulation burnin' off of a trolley car. Oh, yes, they have 'em. An election wouldn't be complete without 'em. The campaign torch is gone, but its half-sister the campaign seegar still lingers in our midst, and throws off very much the same sort of an aroma. So with us no matter how little a campaign may look like a campaign it still smells like one.

"But I'm very comfortable situated at the tavern where I'm stoppin' and besides it's been sort of bornè in on me that for the time bein' my sphere of observation and usefulness is located right here in your city of New York. There's a lot of reforms I want to introduce as soon as I can git round to 'em. I'm thinkin' seriously of crossin' poker dice on green peas so as to produce an article that'll stay on a knifeblade. It strikes me that folks who eat in public in New York are so fond of correctin' the table manners of the rest of the country that they've had no time to work any little improvements in their own. Something ought to be done with the person who gargles his asparagus and yodels his consommy and there ought to be a law prohibitin' a man with a droopy black mustache from eatin' a runny welsh rarebit with the free-arm movement or the Australian stroke. A yellow mustache for welsh rarebit?—yes, a black one —emphatically no!

"Yes, suh, there's a slew of things around here that need attention. And there's a lot more things that need observin'. I want to give society a little more of my time than I've been able to give it up to now. I understand you've got a hoss show and a grand opry season comin' along purty soon, and I certainly would admire to attend both them events and study your elite classes close up. I'm told they're worth the trouble. And in the meantime I've been devotin' some of my spare time to examine a type that seems to reach it's most luxuriant growth in this here climate."

"Meanin' wot?" said Sticky.

"Meanin' the style of young he-butterflies that I observe on Fifth avenue and elsewhere, leading a glow-worm existence on a grub-worm intellect?" said the judge. "Every time I observe a suit of clothes out for a walk wearin' an absent expression I come back here to this hotel lobby and sit in this arm chair and wonder that such things can be. I suppose they have to have 'em, or otherwise there'd be nothin' but feminine genders in the society columns of your leadin' daily and Sunday papers. I judge they're necessary to have around at a cotillion or an infair so the female debutyantys won't have to dance with each other. But pussonally I feel that if I had to give up anybody I could spare such of them youths as I have seen without a pang.

"And yet I realize that they must have their uses. There goes one of 'em now," and the judge broke off his remarks to point toward a faultlessly-appointed youth who went drifting across their range of vision with his hands in his pockets and the ends of his trouser legs flapping about his shoe tops.

"I git you," said Sticky. "Lovely piece of work, ain't he?"

"Yes," said the judge, "he is indeed, and I think he must've been sent by Providence to illustrate the point I've been tryin' to make. Lookin' at our young friend yonder, you'd say that he probably didn't have more than about two bushels and a half of the best XXXX brains sloshin' around inside of his ostensible head and that if he wore any hat size bigger'n a five and three-quarters, he'd be in danger of losin' it every time he coughed. Nature never gave him enough face to cover his front teeth nor enough eyebrows to mark off the place where the face ought to stop. At any job callin' for an able-bodied man you'd figure him as a total loss, but I want to tell you, suh, that at the social graces that same young person shines with a monstrous brilliancy, or I miss my guess."

"Social Graces—wot's them?" said Sticky.

"I will explain," said Judge Hightower. "You go out an' throw a lasso over the smartest man in this country at large and hog-tie him and back him into the customary regalia of an usher, say at one of these swell international weddin's, and then start him up the aisle just ahead of the bridal couple with four or five thousand people lookin' at him and the organ throwing off deep notes from it's stomach like it had a touch of dyspepsia and needed a pinch of cookin' soda. Long before he got to the chancel rail his neck would be settin' his collar on fire and he'd have four or five bushels of extra hands and feet that he wouldn't know what to do with. But I'll bet you that young person that just passed by and gladdened our eyes and gave our souls such a treat, could do it night after night and never turn a hair. If appearances count for anything I'll bet he's been doing ushin' for the best families for years.

"And bein' of a sportin' disposition I'll bet you furthermore that he can go to the grand opera and sit in a box with everybody sittin' and lookin' at him and still appear perfectly unconcerned as he passes out the kind of chatter that has given squirrels the reputation of bein' frivolous and light in the head. And I'll lay a little eight to five that he knows more German figures than any dressmaker in Hoboken and that he could dress himself blindfolded and yet never make a single mistake that would cause him to be talked about in the best circles.

"Wot's the good of all that?" inquired Sticky.

"Well, from what I can gather," said Judge Hightower, "the fact that he's so numerous gives real men a chance to get out and earn a livin' for him and the women folks. And besides it's worth something to be able to wear a dress suit, as you call 'em, without lookin' like you'd borrowed it from a waiter and was afraid something might happen to it before you could get it off again, which is the way most men seem to look when so engaged.

"Did youse ever wear one yourself, Judge?" inquired Sticky.

"No, not yet," said the judge. "Senator Joe Bailey fell finally, but I still stand firm. At the same time, though, I'll admit the swallow-tail has its attractions. I never seen a garment that seemed better adapted for a man who totes his hardware in his hip pocket."

FALCONRY IN JAPAN.

[Metropolitan Magazine:] In the East falconry is still the sport of kings. Taiko Sama, that most ingenious of warriors, brought the sport home with him from Corea, and some of the imperial hawks of today, they say, are descended from his fledglings.

It is a costly sport, perhaps the Emperor's greatest extravagance. At his orders and at his expense men learned in falconry have recently compiled a history of the art in the eastern world which fills a hundred volumes, and the hawking establishment entails heavy outlays. There is a serving man to every hawk and a number of others who aspire to enter the service of the imperial bird. One gets an idea how carefully these men are trained by seeing the aspirant servants stand for hours at a time with outstretched hand, holding a glass of water filled to the brim. It is only when they can do this without fatigue and without spilling a drop of the water that they are entrusted with one of the precious birds. For if the wrist should give ever so little under the hawk he is startled and spreads his wings, which according to Japanese ideas is very unsightly and interrupts his training as well as ends the career of the aspirant serving man. But though the ducks never escape, what is still more remarkable is that they are never maimed or mangled. The hawks, whose claws and talons are kept wonderfully manicured and inspected every day by the chief hawker, strike their quarry a stunning blow, and invariably bring them down to be retrieved, but not a drop of blood is shed.

Queer Tombstones.

A TRIO OF STRANGE MONUMENTS IN FAMOUS GREENWOOD CEMETERY.

By Louise E. Dew.

SHOULD you ever take a stroll through Greenwood, the most famous city of the dead in the United States, and known the world over, be sure and ask the sexton to point out "the three queerest monuments." Tourists always ask to see them; in fact, when our English cousins include Greenwood in their sightseeing itinerary they always ask to be shown "those very amusing monuments, don't you know."

Strange and amusing epitaphs are usually responsible for tombstones being pointed out as peculiar; but in this trio there is an exception, for no epitaphs or eulogies are engraved on the slabs of granite. It has been left to the art of the engraver to tell the story of the departed, not by words, but in pictures, as it were.

Perhaps the quaintest of the trio is the family monument of a Griffiths family who lived in Brooklyn in the early part of the nineteenth century, and many descendants of whom still live in Greater New York. There was nothing peculiar about the family history to bring them into any special prominence until the elder Griffiths met with death under rather harrowing circumstances.

Christmas was but a little more than a week away, and, no doubt, that morning at the breakfast table they had talked over and planned the holiday festivities—Grandpa and Grandma Griffiths. If so, it was for the last time. Grandma Griffiths full of plans for the many little Griffiths, bustled to the door when her husband left for business, following him down the steps to give a parting injunction—possibly about the tree and the candles, mayhaps the toys and gifts that were to adorn the tree. Who knows?

Grandpa Griffiths turned to listen, then as he heard a car coming around the corner he said a hurried good-by, Alas! just as he reached the curve the car struck him and he was killed instantly.

What more fitting monument could be erected to the memory of the deceased than one depicting the last farewell between husband and wife that fateful morning? Thus argued kinsmen, friends and the tombstone man. To be sure, agreed the stricken widow. Nor was either pains or money spared to make the memorial realistic.

In a beautiful corner of Greenwood near a hillside it stands, a mausoleum compared with the other simple slabs in the vicinity. Towering above the low iron railing in the rear, the huge granite block beckons the passer-by to pause and gaze at the monument. In bas relief carved on the upper slab is one scene of the story of that last morning. The quaint old brick Brooklyn house with its green shutters, iron-barred basement windows, stone steps and its ivy-grown walls are carved in bas relief in the background. In the foreground stands Grandma Griffiths on the steps, her hands folded decorously over her kerchief, her curls hanging gracefully over her bare neck. As if pleased with the picture she made, Grandpa Griffiths is pictured frock-coated and high-hatted, as was the custom of that day, leaning over the gate in an attitude of admiration. The rest must be imagined, but that is not so difficult, for even a section of the vehicle that hit Grandpa Griffiths as he hastened to the corner is realistically carved.

Another monument that is a decided contrast to the low slabs and modest stones surrounding it is that which marks the resting place of Henry Chadwick, "father of baseball." It is surmounted by a huge sphere, seamed like a ball, and representing not only the baseball, with which he was so familiar, but the world itself in which once lived and moved the "father of baseball." There are those still living who remember the signature of "Old Chalk," under which he wrote for over a quarter of a century in the Brooklyn Eagle, of which he was sporting editor.

Two bronze bats crossed over a baseball glove are in bas-relief on one side of the monument. The small bronze name plate which faces the low mound, is in the shape of a baseball diamond. On this is the simple inscription: "In Memoriam, Henry Chadwick, Father of Baseball, Born October 5, 1824. Died April 20, 1908."

Probably there is no more characteristic monument in the world than the third of this strange trio. It is approached by two stone steps on the granite posts of which are inscribed on either side the name "West." It is a memorial of "Billy" West of Primrose and West fame, who has made more people laugh than any other minstrel in the world. Even the immortal little god Billiken had a rival in "Billy" West, for as a chaser of the blues he was a wizard. Nor could the grumpiest individual resist the witchery of his smile.

In the background is the seat of minstrelsy, empty to be sure, for how could there be an audience when "Billy" West is no more. The monument itself is surmounted by a life-like bust of the minstrel. All the carvings are symbolical of some phase in his long life spent in serving the Goddess of Mirth. First of all, there is the mask of mirth itself; there are the bones and castanets and banjo. Within the inclosure there are the signs of several fraternal orders to which the minstrel belonged. Peter F. Dailey, the comedian, and brother-in-law of "Billy" West, is buried in this plot. The small stone seen at the left of the picture marks his grave. Requiescat in pace!

THE COMING BACK.

When I came back to Ireland the leaves on the tree
The birds in the branches would keep reminding me,
With, don't you remember? and could you forget?
Till I'm living and walking in the old times yet.

The wind from the mountains it blows fresh and strong
Ah, don't you remember? is still the wind's song.
With don't you remember? and could you forget?
As I went out a-walking 'twas the dead that I met.

There's a road to Wicklow: it goes past the door
The dust of it's holy for feet it once bore,
They've all traveled westward where the sun doesn't set.
Ah, don't you remember? and could you forget?

The blackbird he's mocking from the apple bough:
Sure why would you trouble to be coming now
When them that sore missed you is past fear and fret?
Ah, don't you remember? and could you forget?

There's not a flower in Ireland; there isn't a hill,
Nor yet a breath of the Four Winds but keeps reminding still,
Till my poor heart is troubled and my eyes are wet
For don't you remember? and could you forget

OLD PURITAN BIBLE BOXES.

CARVED CHESTS FOR THE SAFE KEEPING OF COPIES OF THE SCRIPTURES.

Almost invariably after some great wave of religious enthusiasm, we are confronted by strange fragments of salvage relicts of the emotional passion and religious ardor of a departed hour, says the Queen. Such were the devotional carvings of the Middle Ages—the triptyches, the private tabernacles, the beautiful little ivory madonnas.

Among such memorials are the vast old Puritan Bible boxes. Cumbrous, ancient arks, into which the revised version of James I was once committed for safe ward and keeping. The sound oakboards with which they were made have resisted the tooth of time.

In the long journeys of the men of the Puritan period, when the Scriptures were part of the daily accompaniment of life, the province of these old boxes may readily be seen. Within the home they were made to contain those ponderous family Bibles in which, especially during the commonwealth, the head of the house carefully inscribed the birth, death or marriage of his children with other memorabilia of family life. This circumstance in the absence of other authentic records, and the laxity of parish registers, has sometimes proved an invaluable aid. How little we could have spared, for instance, that volume in which Milton recorded the very hour and minute of his children's birth.

Ash wood was sometimes used in the manufacture of Bible boxes, but oak was the most popular from its superior powers of resistance, for we must remember they were at times in the possession of ecclesiastical stalwarts, the vigor of whose preaching was sometimes calculated by the amount of damage done to the pulpit furniture.

Throughout the commonwealth, and by the General Convention of 1656, traveling ministers were gratuitously supplied with Bibles, a very expensive item; and in struggling pastorates the Book, with its appropriate coffer, often formed the sole effects of a new conventicle. It is a curious fact that Bibles were sometimes subjected to raffling, even in those austere days. In 1675 one Dr. Wilde bequeathed £50 for the purpose of providing Bibles to be raffled among the poorer brethren.

Numbers of these old Bible boxes must have lingered on in the upper States of America after the establishment of the Pilgrim Fathers, and most probably, as the facilities of the colonial press multiplied smaller and cheaper editions of the Scriptures, they were converted to secular uses. Now and then in England these ancient boxes may be met with, diverted from their former use as chosen vessels and turned into desks or other receptacles.

Several of them, though not large enough to be requisitioned as wardrobes, were yet made to accommodate the minor articles of the toilet, and in one instance a box, long after its original use was forgotten, became in a remote cottage home a pantry, husbanding the best brand of tea and kindred delicacies. And yet, almost 300 years after their first appearance in the world, one or two of the old Bible boxes may yet be seen in rural vestries fulfilling their original mission, patiently surviving generation after generation, and calmly outliving all conflicts of time, change or religious opinion in the execution of their first duty.

A MORAL FOR GIRLS.

[New York Sun:] Prof. John Spencer Bassett, author of "A Life of Andrew Jackson," is accustomed to illustrate his lectures at Smith College with incidents in American history. On one occasion he repeated a well-known story in regard to Stephen A. Douglas, closing with a moral which aroused peculiar interest.

Douglas, as the narrative runs, was once sitting in a profound sleep in the corridor of the Capitol when Adeline Cutts, a Washington belle, passed by. She did not know the sleeper, but was struck with compassion on seeing such a splendidly intellectual face under such conditions, and stooping down laid her handkerchief over it to protect it from the flies. Douglas on awakening found the handkerchief, sought the owner, and married her. There was a pause, and then the professor added: "Young ladies, the moral of this story is: Have your pocket handkerchief marked."

The World's Oyster Crop.

HOW IT IS CULTIVATED AND HARVESTED AT HOME AND ABROAD.

By A. H. Harris.

OYSTERS are in season again. People are in expectancy over the prospects of gastronomical treats during the lengthening evenings of autumn and winter.

The mysteries of the oyster are like unto the mysteries of heaven, little understood by men, and by angels not divulged. Scientists have puzzled their brains for ages in an effort to understand the mollusks, and perhaps do in a general way, but the average man is too busy to take a second thought about the tiny object for which he pays two prices at the restaurant, as a pan roast or a stew.

While the oyster takes to salt water as naturally as a Kentuckian takes to good whisky, he will live for two months entirely out of his natural element if kept in a cool place. His shell is close-fitting and gives needed protection from the elements. When the shell is broken or cracked the tenant dies whether in water or out of it. The well-bred oyster has a head and tail, or parts resembling these important characteristics of animal life, and when found at rest is usually reclining upon his left side. This habit is not exactly accounted for as "left-handed," either. He has no eyes, but the sense of touch seems to be abnormally developed. It is said that he will instinctively close the valves of his shell upon the approach of a boat even before the first tiny waves strike him.

The mature oyster is a good feeder. He never misses a meal. While he is exempt from every graft trust, he feeds regularly and in some cases gluttonously, even to his undoing. Men have seized upon his frailty and discovered how to fatten for market the innocent little fellow, and sell him for a high price as "select." He is fed like hogs or cattle for the packer, and responds as readily in extra flesh.

Millions of translucent hairs provide the oyster with a means of taking nourishment from salt water. He gathers minute organisms by the millions as his appetite craves nourishment, and the variety is ever-changing. He eats heartily and regularly, and can be readily injured by unfit water or that lacking the essential element, lime. This he needs to keep the roof on his house, the shell being largely composed of lime and salt.

Many people imagine that the oyster "just grows up," like Topsy. Such is not the case. The little fellow will grow only in favored spots, where the winds and tides are suitable, and where a certain mixture of water is found. He must have a resting place, hence his home is in a bay or eddy, usually not far from the mouth of a river which supplies fresh water to mix with the sea. A mixture of mud and clay must form a bed upon which he can rest, and heavy ocean currents must be unknown. Water makes a great difference in oyster culture, showing clearly that the sea water is not the same, and that the constant addition of fresh water from rivers changes the salty element near the mouths of rivers until shellfish realize the difference and remain in the place most suited to their needs.

Oysters, generally, are planted and cultivated like corn or castor beans, and the better the system of cultivation and the care, the greater and more certain the returns to the owner of the lands. One exception to perfect cultivation is the Olympia oyster, which so far has kept in the market by dint of natural selection, the field being but partly cultivated, and then crudely, perhaps.

Of immense proportions is the oyster industry in America. Capital and energy are thoroughly mixed and alive to the true situation, and satisfactory results come to each. It is estimated that 22,000,000 bushels of oysters are produced and marketed annually, with the demand rapidly growing and the profits increasing as better methods are employed. Perhaps $15,000,000 is involved in the business, aside from the value of the land used, and over 50,000 people are engaged in "farming" oysters and marketing the product. Over 5000 vessels and dredges are employed in gathering and working over the beds. In the business of disposing of the shells to poultrymen and others a large number of men are employed.

Maryland is the land of oysters, and Baltimore is the center of the industry in this country. Here the delicacy is produced and marketed in all its glory, furnishing 25,000 people with constant employment and piling up fortunes for the lucky promoters of the enterprise. From here go forth to all parts of the world packages and buckets of "Baltimores." The canning industry is an immense institution. It is stated as a fact that the beds occupy over 200 square miles of water front and the field is being extended as fast as suitable lands can be found.

About 300 "Baltimores" make a bushel, while the smaller varieties require nearly double that number. On this basis the American beds produce about 6,660,000,000 oysters annually, most of the output being consumed in this country. Every American consumes or should consume 100 oysters each year to get his share of this number. New York is a great oyster market, consuming, perhaps, 1,000,000,000 a year, and 5000 families are supported by the industry.

South Carolina was considered a promising field years ago, but bad management nearly ruined the business. In Connecticut the same condition prevailed, but active interest upon the part of men who began to understand the scientific principles of the industry saved the field and brought about a rugged activity which has resulted in maintaining the standard of the oyster in those waters and at the same time building up an industry of considerable importance to the State. In Southeast Virginia the oyster is worth $3,000,000 annually to the people, and new fields are being added in places along the entire Atlantic coast.

In the autumn of 1891 Pashford Dean visited France as the representative of the United States Fish Commission to study oyster conditions in the old world. His investigations added much of value to the knowledge of fishermen, and some of his reports have become authority upon matters relative to the industry.

Prior to 1784 there was no law in Connecticut or any of the struggling States restricting the depletion of oyster beds, and as a result early settlers over-fished the fields until they became nearly worthless. It took a great many years to improve conditions materially.

In 1855 Connecticut passed a law restricting the holdings of each man to two acres, which had to be cultivated properly. This law remedied the old trouble, but it required many years to completely rehabilitate the beds. In 1881 the acreage worked in Connecticut was 33,987, and eight years later it had grown to over 70,000 acres. Since then the area has extended wherever the oyster will grow.

Connecticut can well claim the best fishing laws of any State. The importance of the industry has forced especial attention along these lines, and the best efforts of the State Legislature have been directed toward equitable fishing laws. Especially is this true of oyster "farming."

The oyster industry has reached an apparent state of perfection in France, where the system of culture, care and shipment is the most modern and scientific known anywhere. Arcachon is the mecca for oyster culture from all parts of the world, and many a wealthy producer has learned his first lesson in the business while viewing immense "farms" devoted exclusively to the production of the slippery bivalve. Arcachon is said to produce and market annually about 80,000,000,000 oysters, and it is said that in two and a half hours' time an army of pickers took from the beds 22,000,000 without apparently affecting the supply for a single day. Four million oysters are said to thrive nicely on a piece of land 650 by 450 yards in area.

In 1874 it was estimated that fully 70,000,000 oysters were to be found on the immense banks at Cancale, the calculation having been made at the close of the French wars. The effects of the long years of bloody struggle had been to decrease the destruction of the little hardshell, the French people preferring to rely on a more firm diet when the glory of France was in the balance. Within seven years the stock had been diminished one-third, and finally the great banks at Cancale, once world-famous, practically disappeared.

While France leads the world in the oyster business, it is but fair to state that the present industry is of recent growth. About the middle of the last century the importance of the industry began to be recognized, but it required many years to demonstrate its great value to France and to the world. Frenchmen grasped at the chance to make money quickly, and in favored spots immense farms were quickly developed, fortunes were made as if in a a day, and then it dawned upon the people of France that one of the greatest industries established by a prodigal nature had been overlooked for ages. Today thousands of French families are supported wholly by the industry, and everything is being done to bring the business to a state of absolute perfection in a commercial way and extend its influence.

While the waters of the shores of France are suitable for the profitable culture of oysters, they abound with pests which play havoc with shellfish and become a serious menace to the business. Starfish, whelks, boring sponges and other pests abound and require the most vigilant and destructive warfare against them. No dredging is allowed in French waters, and the fields retain their productive qualities better and longer than any others, largely, it is said, on this account.

Arcachon oyster beds, immensely valuable as they are, require vigilant watching that marauders may not sweep down on them and pilfer in an hour millions of the little animals. Watchmen with little white sailboats are on the lookout day and night, and use every precaution to prevent any devastation of the fields. Thus has the industry in France grown and prospered.

While France leads the world in oyster production, it remains for the land of King Edward to produce the best article known to the markets of the world. The fine old beds at Newhaven, Firth of Forth, lead all others in the production of a peculiar oyster, one that brings the highest price and has the right of way over all competitors. Sixty years ago it is said that these sold at 10 pence for 100, and the market was not glutted, either. Prices have increased greatly since that time, and now range higher than in this country.

On the shores of Kent and Essex prize beds are established. The "native" oyster is here produced to the exclusion of all others on account of its peculiar flavor. The "Whitstable" product is in a class by itself. In these beds alone it is estimated that fully 15,000,000 marketable oysters are always in stock. The cultivation and care is perfect.

London is a great consumer of oysters. The cheapness of the delicacy half a century ago created a demand for it, which has hung with the appetites of the people as tenaciously as the habit of smoking a pipe has among the men. It is estimated that London consumes a billion a year, and the record shows that in 1864, when prices were very low, 700,000,000 were eaten.

The European oyster (Ostrea edulis) differs materially from the American species (Ostrea Virginiana,) being less prolific and more uniform in size. The European also grows slower and develops later by several months or perhaps a year in some places. Prof. Mobius states that from 1,800,000 eggs, one full-grown oyster is produced in England, and Eyton, in his "History of the Oyster and Oyster Fisheries," agrees that the estimate is a safe one founded upon a wide range of research and experiment.

Oyster "farming" requires a great deal of labor and close attention and in this one feature Europe offers advantages over America. Labor, of the close, attentive kind, is readily secured in Europe, at very low wages, and women and children have no scruples against doing much of the lighter work. In America oyster culture is always attended with more or less trouble in securing capable and steady help even at high wages.

Adam Korter is given credit with being the pioneer oyster culturist on the Pacific Coast, at least on the northern portion. He discovered the Olympia fields, and in 1858 was marketing small quantities of the shellfish to his neighbors. During the years which followed he developed the business, and at his death, in 1879, had gathered quite a little fortune through the manipulation of the oyster market. The price charged by Korter was ridiculously low, but he never attempted to handle the little animal outside of its native shell.

The first Olympia oysters were shipped from Oyster Bay, a spur of Puget Sound, about twelve miles from the capital of the State of Washington, in 1859, by Capt. Dayton, who had command of a pioneer boat doing business on the sound. Later when H. R. Weatherall sent from the same fields a sloopload, in sacks, he found no market for them and threw the cargo overboard, with but small loss. But he retained his conviction that the business would grow, and finally made a fortune from it. Now several large companies with great packing plants are doing the wholesale business of the Coast.

It is estimated that 8000 acres of first-class oyster land is cultivated in the Olympia district. Much of this land is valued at $2000 per acre. In addition large sums are used in the maintenance of boats, houses and equipment. The hard work of the beds is done by Indians, Chinese and Japanese, three men being required constantly on ten acres. During the winter the work has to be done at night on account of the high tides during the day. Only when the tides recede can the oyster be taken to advantage. Then men with rakes gather the shells in piles and transfer them to "floats," where they are sacked and sent to the culling-house Here the small shells are taken from the mass and returned to the beds for future growth. Gathering is carried on every day of the year except in the spawning period, generally conceded to be July and August, although some growers insist on their beds being closed until September 15. The Olympia requires foun years to develop into a good commercial size.

The real beginning of the oyster business in the Pacific Northwest occurred in 1880, after investigation had been carried on for a number of years by men interested in tidelands. Representatives were sent to Germany and, on returning, recommended active operations. A number of German and French people soon rushed to Oyster Bay. Then the industry took on life which it has retained to this day. There is no artificial propagation in this field, the oyster maintaining a steady growth by natural means. The only pest of considerable importance is the starfish, which has a habit of gathering the oyster in its powerful grasp and sucking the life out of it, even when the prisoner closes up his shell as tightly as possible. Workmen, while on the beds, provide themselves with sharpened cedar sticks, and when the little pest is found, one of the sticks is pierced through it, and when the tide goes out again fish and stick are carried to the sea.

Oyster beds, formed roughly on the seashore along tide flats or in shallow sheltered water, are, in Europe, dredged thoroughly on the start and afterward to keep them clean. Then shells, or tiling, about eight by eighteen inches in size, are placed on the beds to which the young, or "spat," as the little fellows are called, attach themselves after leaving the mother, being carried by the movement of the water. It is estimated that for this purpose alone, in this country, 7,000,000 bushels of shells are used in five years.

Generally the beds are laid out like garden plots, and each subdivision is cultivated as a unit. Only half of a farm is worked in any year, the plan generally adopted being to "summer fallow," as is done in raising wheat. This is found to be profitable in natural propagation, but where artificial means are employed, the crop is taken off each year. The plan of dyking to keep a supply of water covering the land all the time has been found eminently successful in all parts of the world. The land must be covered with water to a depth of several inches or the hot rays of the sun in summer and the severe frosts of winter will kill the oyster and finally ruin the beds.

The very best oysters have firm white flesh, nut-like in flavor, enclosed in a shell in form as nearly like the petal of a rose as may be, the shell having a clear metallic ring and a peculiar opalescent luster on the inside. The shell resembles fine China cups in its transparent parts and in its magnificent polish. The flesh is the best criterion to go by when judging the character of an oyster. The whiter and firmer the flesh the better the animal for food purposes. The ordinary oyster is about one-third flesh, the bulk being shell, while in some places, especially in the English Channel between England and France, the native oyster is but one-tenth flesh.

The female oyster has an experience that is reserved for perhaps no other female in the animal creation. It spends its early years in the hazardous occupation of producing approximately 9,000,000 eggs and rearing to development half a dozen able-bodied oysters, and is then allowed to change sex entirely, and for the remainder of its days in the sea is a full-fledged male.

The Web of Felipe.

A WELL-LAID PLAN THAT CAME TO SUDDEN DISASTER.

By Verne Gregory.

THERE was gloom in the row of whitewashed, flat-topped sheds which sheltered the Mexican section hands at Soledad, for had not Mr. Bob Twombley, the section foreman, declared that the one bachelor among them, Felipe Romera, must be exchanged for a married man with at least two children, in order to bring the school list up to eight, the number required by law to secure public funds. Mr. Twombley was the proud possessor of three sons, the Indian trader at Soledad had two daughters, and down at the Mexican shacks was a little girl, the child of Jose Montoya. The ages of these ranged from 6 to 17. Besides, Jose had a niece of 20, but she was being courted by Felipe, and would not listen to any suggestions in regard to acquiring an education. Neither of the lovers could write a word, and the prospect of separation appalled them. Their elders were sympathetic, although they did not dare oppose the master upon whom they were dependent for their daily labor.

Bob had lived long among the Mexicans, and a fortnight passed without any move on his part toward securing the transfer. Felipe and his sweetheart, Orilla, were beginning to hope he had forgotten the matter, when an error of one of the young Twombleys recalled it to his mind. The boy in disputing with his brother, insisted that Chicago was on the Pacific Coast.

"That settles it," exclaimed the father "Nora, where are those letters?"

"What letters?" inquired his wife.

"Those applications for a school. I am going to pick out one and write to the woman tonight. It's a disgrace for these boys to grow up so ignorant. Probably it will take two or three weeks to bring her here, and I might as well wait until I go to Creston on other business to see the superintendent about another man. Don't mention it to Jose until we are sure of one."

But the intelligence filtered through various media until it reached the ears of Orilla, who lost no time in imparting it to Felipe.

"Such foolishness!" she lamented. "These Americans make the most stupid rules. Why won't six children answer as well as eight? Those three boys alone would keep me busy."

"It is set down in their books," replied Felipe with a tender glance at the girl, "and the head man at Creston wouldn't give them any money to pay the teacher unless they had eight."

He meditated in silence for some minutes, and then his face brightened. "It wouldn't make any difference whose children they were, though."

Then he unfolded to Orilla a scheme born of his meditations. At first it alarmed her, but gradually he won her support and encouragement, and she advised an immediate conference with her relatives. The result was that on the following morning Felipe asked Mr. Twombley for leave of absence, alleging as an excuse that his widowed sister was dangerously ill and desired his presence at her bedside. Mr. Twombley willingly granted the young Mexican's request, and Felipe boarded the next east-bound train.

That day was a hard one for Orilla. Mrs. Twombley, in accordance with the rights vested in section foremen's wives generally, commanded her help with the family washing, and while she was thus engaged, plied her with questions concerning Felipe and his sick sister. Orilla had been carefully coached, and she succeeded in gratifying the woman's curiosity without awakening any suspicions as to Felipe's plans.

A week later Felipe returned home, but not alone. Accompanying him were two strapping boys, whom he introduced as his nephews.

"And you're going to keep them here with you?" said Twombley.

"Yes; they have no other home."

"Well, that's just what we need; there are eight children in the district now, and I wish that teacher would hurry up. She wrote that she would be here before the first of the month."

Mrs. Twombley scrutinized the behavior of the new arrivals closely. "That oldest one acts like a regular hoodlum. I don't know whether I want him associating with my children."

"Oh! come, now, don't go to raising objections when we are so near to getting started. Likely the new teacher can lick him into shape. I selected an experienced woman, pretty well along in years, that I thought would be able to handle the crowd here."

Bob honestly believed he had selected the teacher, but in reality he had adopted his wife's suggestion and employed her choice, a certain Miss Kennedy of Michigan.

Mrs. Twombley was far from satisfied with the lady's appearance. "She's certainly old enough—she will never see forty again, but I don't like the youthful way she dresses—too many frills and furbelows, and her hair all puffs and waves. If she had any sense, she wouldn't wear fine kid shoes and silk petticoats out to this rocky, dusty country."

"Probably no one ever described it to her, and she didn't know just what she was coming to."

"She has studied geography, and common sense ought to teach her a little."

When Miss Kennedy was taken to inspect the schoolroom, she viewed its fittings in consternation. It contained nether desks nor blackboard, and the only thing in the shape of a seat was a long bench drawn close to the workingman's table in the center of the room. The place was poorly lighted by a small square window at either end. Really, it would be cruel to shut children up in such a dungeon. But no other was available, so Miss Kennedy, after vainly urging the trustees to cut more windows, gathered her little flock in the semi-darkness one Monday morning.

Unaccustomed to discipline and confinement, they reminded her of a herd of young colts. With the skill born of long practice and genuine interest in youth, she studied her new charges and succeeded in reaching a responsive chord in all but Pedro, the elder of Felipe's nephews. From the start he was incorrigible. Somewhere he had acquired more booklearning than the others possessed, and occasionally he would display his superior knowledge, but as a rule, and particularly if visitors were present, he would feign ignorance. And the tricks he could invent to disturb and distract his mates—their number was legion. The small Juan, whom he had been instructed to call brother, suffered most of all through Pedro's misdeeds, and often came to Miss Kennedy, beseeching her protection.

Felipe's life was rendered miserable by his protege's threats. The man believed that if the truth were published, Mr. Twombley would at once dismiss him; then what would become of the fine castles he had built with Orilla as the presiding genius? Sometimes he feared that Mrs. Twombley had an inkling of the truth—she asked so many peculiar questions of the two strangers. Once she remarked that they did not resemble each other in the least, and Orilla, who spoke fairly good English, said that was often the case in families.

Pedro was not at all anxious to return to the slums from which he had been extracted, and under the fire of Mrs. Twombley's questions, he managed to stop just short of betraying his benefactor's secret. He seemed to find positive enjoyment in Felipe's evident distress whenever these colloquies were in progress.

The lady gave Miss Kennedy much sage advice in connection with governing the unruly Mexican, which was not often followed, the teacher having little confidence in her landlady's methods.

"Conceited upstart!" said the latter to her husband. "She hasn't done a thing to reform him, and she won't listen to any one who knows how. After all, I think a young girl would have given better satisfaction; when they are as old as this one they get so stubborn and set in their ways."

And Bob, who alone would have aided and supported the teacher, was led by his nagging wife to distrust her powers and to long for the close of the school term. Undoubtedly he had his failings. He would spend hours at the shacks, drinking a peculiar Mexican beverage and playing cards with his subordinates. When he returned with husky voice and unsteady limbs, Miss Kennedy regarded him pityingly. It was only when in this condition, spurred on by his sharp-nosed, sharp-tongued spouse, that he indulged in unpleasant allusions to ladies of uncertain age.

One May morning when a duststorm was raging, Miss Kennedy, glancing up from an arithmetic paper she was correcting, was startled to see Mrs. Twombley's face at one of the windows. A minute later, its owner entered the room. Ignoring the teacher's presence, she addressed her sons:

"Ralph and Pomeroy, I want you to come home this minute and help me nail some boards upstairs; the back window has blown out and is all broken to pieces."

Miss Kennedy was about to insist upon her prerogatives in a case of this kind, but a commotion among the children arrested her attention. Pedro, as far as his limited resources would permit, was giving an imitation of Mrs. Twombley's disheveled appearance and excited manner. He had hastily rumpled his hair and drawn his cotton bandana over part of it, much in the fashion in which she had covered hers with an apron. Her eyes flashed ominously when she became aware of this mimicry. She rushed forward and attempted to seize the boy, who sprang to his feet.

"Come on, then," he shouted, doubling up his fists, "you meddlesome old marplot!"

Miss Kennedy reflected that he must have borrowed that phrase from some of the men who objected to Mrs. Twombley's supervision of their affairs. But the irate woman did not come on; instead, she resorted to oral attack.

"It is time you miserable scum of the earth were put in your places—you have no business here with white people's children."

"Mrs. Twombley, I must request you not to create any further disturbance in this schoolroom," interposed Miss Kennedy.

Before the unwelcome visitor could respond, Juan jumped from the bench, screaming: "Pedro pinched me. He isn't my brother. I never saw him till the day we came up here."

"Not your brother? And isn't Felipe your uncle?" Mrs. Twombley trembled in anticipation of unearthing fraud.

"No," doggedly. "I am sick of this place, and I'm going back to the city."

"Just what I have suspected all along," said the matron, turning to Miss Kennedy. "There'll be a settlement when Mr. Twombley finds out how we've been imposed upon."

The teacher was familiar with Felipe's romance, and she pitied him while she condemned his artifice. There was little doubt that Bob would obey his wife's behests in the matter and bestow condign punishment upon his assistant.

Contrary to their expectations, Felipe appeared relieved when Juan's revelations were repeated to him. In his perfect English he explained:

"It was like a heavy weight hanging over me all the time, and I expecting to be crushed by it. Now I will go to my cousin in Texas, who works for another railroad, and he thinks he can get me on. Next summer, if all goes well, I will send for Orilla."

"Pretty well paid, Felipe," remarked his foreman, "but you forgot to reckon with the old lady."

AN AMUSING EXPERIENCE.

WHEN CONGRESSMAN RODENBERG INTRODUCED A CONSTITUENT AT WASHINGTON.

By a Special Contributor.

William A. Rodenberg, Representative in Congress from Missouri, related the following story:

During President McKinley's administration I had a visitor one day that afforded me genuine entertainment. I was surprised to see him in Washington because he was known as a miser in his own neighborhood, and a trip so far away from home meant an expenditure of money; in fact, I was well-nigh paralyzed at this show of his extravagance. "Well, Mr. Shultz," I began, "you are about the last man I expected to see so far from home."

"Vell, I shust thought I take a trip vonce; I ain't been away from home for a long time yet."

"Would you like to see the President?"

"Sure, sure."

In a little while we were on our way to the White House and my voluble friend was for the first time in his life in a quiet frame of mind, or at least he was so busy thinking that he forgot to express himself.

We took our places in the line and as we approached the President, I noticed that he seemed somewhat abashed. But he stuck to his guns and when we reached Mr. McKinley, I said: "Mr. President, this is my friend Mr. Shultz. Mr. Shultz is a prominent German business man in my district. He is a gold Democrat, but voted for you in 1896 and is still in full sympathy with the policies of your administration."

The President greeted him cordially, and said: "Mr. Shultz, how long have you lived in this country?"

"I was imported in 1876," said Shultz seriously, and the good-natured President could scarcely repress a smile.

As we left the White House office, Mr. Shultz said he would like to see the Secretary of the Treasury, so we walked across to the Treasury building, and after a little while we were admitted to the Secretary's presence. Here I expected my German visitor to be overcome by the awe-inspiring and august mien of Lyman J. Gage, who was never known to be democratic and has a personality so imposing that I expected Mr. Shultz to stutter and stammer his way out of the office. But Mr. Shultz was not impressed as his questions soon indicated.

"Vot is your name?" he said putting his hand to his ear in a listening attitude and just as we were leaving the room he started back toward Mr. Gage as if he had forgotten something and said. "Vot job do you hold?"

Mr. Gage never was free from those questions after the members of the Cabinet were told about Mr. Shultz's visit and whenever the Cabinet met the President or some member would say facetiously: "Vot is your name? Vot job do you hold?"

When we left the Secretary's office Mr. Shultz scratched his head and I knew he was bothered about something so I said by way of encouragement:

"Well, out with it, old man—where do you want to go now?"

"There's shust one more man what I like to see yet."

"Who is that?"

"That man Mark Hanna mit his funny clothes on."

"How's that?" I inquired.

"Vy mit tollar marks all ofer his clothes."

Hanna's manner was always the antithesis of that of Lyman Gage and in consequence Mr. Shultz was made to feel that he was a long-lost relative and was the only person of the hour so cordial was his reception. When we left Hanna's office I could see that Shultz's brain was working over-time but I didn't disturb him. We walked for several blocks and then Shultz exclaimed: "That man Mark Hanna ain't tammed bad looking is he?"

LEE'S IDEA OF A GENTLEMAN.

[Atlantic:] Lee hated parade, display and ceremony, hated above all things being made an object of public gaze and adulation. His idea of high position was high responsibility; a superior was simply one who had larger duties and the mark of a gentleman was a keen sense of the feelings and susceptibilities of others.

"The forebearing use of power does not only form a touchstone but the manner in which an individual enjoys certain advantages over others is a test of a true gentleman.

"The power which the strong have over the weak, the magistrate over the citizen, the employer over the employed, the educated over the unlettered, the experienced over the confiding, even the clever over the silly, the forebearing or inoffensive use of all this power or authority or a total abstinence from it when the case admits it will show the gentleman in a plain light.

"The gentleman does not needlessly and unnecessarily remind an offender of a wrong he may have committed against him. He cannot only forgive he can forget; and he strives for that nobleness of self and mildness of character which impart sufficient strength to let the past be but the past. A true man of honor feels humbled himself when he cannot help humbling others."

Madagar.

A BROKEN WHEEL AND A WONDER WORKER.

By Kensett Rossiter.

A DOLLAR and a half isn't very much to want, but Madagar wanted it more than anything else on earth—more than a new hat, more than a fresh gingham, more, even, than a new pair of shoes; and goodness knows she stood in need of each of these things about as sadly as any girl ever did.

"A dollar and a half," sighed Madagar, "a weeny, tweeny dollar and a half!"

She poked the empty vegetable crate in the front of the wagon, and gave old Dobbin a slap with the reins. Then she tucked one of her torn little shoes under the laprobe and laughed. Another mile passed, and another. The old wagon still held together, but one of the front wheels wobbled doubtfully. It wouldn't last long, it COULDN'T, it was so very wobbly and so out of plumb. This was why the dollar and a half seemed so much—it would cost that sum to have the tires set. Then the old wagon would run for another month—with good luck, perhaps two.

Madagar began to whistle. It was dreadful to be so poor. It was—she kept repeating the words to herself—to be so poor—so very poor. Finally she was whistling it. The repetition had seemed to invoke a special tune all to itself. With a start she tucked the other shoe under the laprobe, with the little torn one, and laughed again. Madagar was pretty when she laughed; she was pretty at any other time. When one looked into her eyes, it was impossible to describe what she had worn. One forgot everything except that she was pretty, that she was Madagar.

Suddenly she stopped whistling her new little tune, for she was getting close to the three-cornered eucalyptus grove by the cross-roads this side the village. Opposite the blue gum stood Whittlesey's blacksmith shop, and every second day when she made the trip to town she passed here about 4 in the afternoon. She always stopped and chatted with Young Whitt, as the valley folk called him, and it was not an unnatural thing to do, considering that Young Whitt and Madagar were engaged and intended to be married on the very day that she became 18. That event was still 79 days off; we must trust Madagar's happiness to have reckoned this date accurately. But of late Madagar had given Dobbin an extra slap as they had neared the three-cornered eucalyptus grove. She had no desire to hurry by, but her spirit was too proud to allow Young Whitt to see that wobbly old wheel of hers. If he did see it he would insist that she leave it to be repaired, and she had no money with which to pay him. Madagar was far too proud to let her lover know what a stiff little fight she had been carrying on for so long, even if she had spent three times as much as the setting of the tires would have cost for his Christmas present a few months before.

Fate, however, made her pause this day—fate and old Dobbin. Directly opposite the blacksmith shop Dobbin came to a full pause and looked around. He knew what was the matter, he felt the wheel going, and now he turned his head and saw it. It didn't break, it just crumpled in, and old Dobbin simply switched his tail and looked sad. I think he was less surprised than Madagar, for Madagr only stared at the broken wheel, and then—and then Young Whitt stepped out of the shop and laughed. He couldn't help it any more than Dobbin could help turning backward, but it sent the blood rushing to Madagar's throat and made her very unhappy.

"I think you're mean! It's not fair to——"

Young Whitt laughed again. "You wait here just a moment," he said, "while I finish putting a point on David's plow, and I'll hook up and take you home."

"I'm going home MYSELF, right now."

She began to unloosen the tugs and take Dobbin from the wagon.

"How?"

"Oh, come," begged young Whitt. "I won't be a minute. I want to tell you something. Wait—please."

But Madagar had already sprung on Dobbin's back and was off down the road.

She put the horses into the corral, fed the chickens, milked the cow and turned the sprinkler on the bed of sweet potatoes before entering the house. Her mother was sitting in her invalid's chair by the window. The girl stopped and kissed her before going to the kitchen. After supper was over and the dishes washed she came and sat by her side.

"I've got bad news, Momsey."

"You mean the wagon?" The old lady had divined the secret. She did not have to be told.

"Yes, Momsey, the wagon."

A deep silence followed, the silence that comes over one after the last shred that has held things together has snapped.

"Yes, Momsey, the wagon," repeated Madagar.

Another silence.

"Whatever are we going to do now, Madagar?"

"I don't know, Momsey, I don't, I can't think just now, but——"

"And the corn getting ripe and the first cucumbers! We have no way, now, to get them to market."

"We'll get them there, Momsey, if I have to carry them on my back, if I have to go barefoot."

"Poor child!" her mother was looking at the ragged little shoes. "Poor child! you're most barefoot now."

Madagar laughed. It was awfully hard to, but she laughed.

The next day was Sunday. Madagar walked to Lame Pond Canyon, and brought back four trap-door spider nests which she forwarded to a St. Louis collector who had previously paid her 75 cents apiece for them. She fed the chickens, milked the cow, got supper and washed the dishes before going to bed. Young Whitt had not come as usual for the simple Sunday evening supper, nor did he appear later, although Madagar sat out on the step and waited a long time. That night Madagar cried herself to sleep. It was the first time since a child that she had cried. She didn't know how to cry as other girls cry; the very tears hurt as they ran down her cheeks, and they kept on running—and hurting, too—long after the first sleep had come.

A little light was creeping in at the south window when her mother called her in the morning. "Some one is driving into the yard, dear. Please see what they want."

Raising herself on her elbow, Madagar pulled aside the curtain; in another moment she had bounded to the floor and was dressing with feverish haste. She bobbed her face into the wash bowl and laughed as the cold water sent the blood singing to her temples. A slap here and a dash there, and the broad sunbonnet jammed over her pretty head, and Madagar stepped out on to the porch, fully dressed, fully as irresistible as though she had prinked for three hours before her mirror. Young Whitt, leading a horse, was moving stealthily toward the front gate. He was tiptoeing as carefully as though the sand had been a city pavement, and had almost reached the gate when Madagar's voice rang out, clear and sweet and fresh as the day that was just beginning.

"Hello!"

Young Whitt started. "I—I didn't mean to disturb you, I——"

"You didn't disturb me, I've been up for hours, silly."

Young Whitt continued to regard her. If he had been at all of an observant nature he would have known from Madagar's hasty toilet that she had not been up for hours; but Young Whitt was looking into Madagar's eyes, and he saw nothing else.

"You DROVE in, didn't you?"

The lad nodded. He turned as if about to jump on his horse.

"If you drove in, where is the wagon?"

Young Whitt tried to slip through the gate, but Madagar seized the halter rope and tied his horse to the big pepper tree. He was cornered. Together they walked toward the barn. She swung open the door, and there before her was not the old wagon, but—she looked closer.

"I just touched it up a bit here and there," apologized Young Whitt.

Madagar moved her fingers lovingly over the new bright spokes. "Oh, you shouldn't have done it! Why did you?"

"It didn't take long."

Young Whitt lied. He had worked over that wagon as he had never worked upon anything in his life before. From the moment he had finished putting the point on David's plow he had begun. He got his young brother Jim to help, and Jim, in turn, had inveigled Bobbie Cove, and Bobbie Cove had inveigled Snicker Morrison into lending assistance. The small boy of the neighborhood would fight a lion if necessary to prove his loyalty to Young Whitt, especially after he had obtained the latter's promise to borrow David's hound on the first moonlight night and take him coon hunting in Upper Lame Pond Canyon. Twelve, 1, 2 o'clock passed. At 3 in the morning the tires had been set, four new spokes inserted in the wheels, and the old wagon cleaned, scraped and sandpapered until the body glistened and the running gear showed the clean fiber of the second-growth hickory as it had looked twenty years earlier, when it had stood in the factory waiting for its first coat of paint. At half-past 3 Young Whitt took up his brushes and sent his young force home, but alone in the shop, hour after hour, he toiled on. Fifty hours in the saddle had fallen to his lot many a time at the spring round-up back in the cattle land. He could do its equivalent for Madagar. By noon next day, with but twenty minutes of absence for breakfast, the first coat of the quick-drying paint had set, and the second was begun. Not until darkness stole down the mountains did Young Whitt begin to feel tired. Then was it time to draw the thin, fine lines of the relief, and he did it with a free hand, and well.

During the time they had stood by the open door of the shed Madagar's eyes had taken in every detail. It is only those who have lived with some familiar object week in, week out through the years who can know what another has done to restore that object, and well Madagar knew every stroke of the brush, every defect covered up. She alone could know how hard Young Whitt had worked for her. It was too much—a swelling was beginning to come at the throat.

"Don't you like it?" Young Whitt spoke the words very slowly.

"I hate it!" cried Madagar. "I had intended to do it myself. I wouldn't have had it red for anything. Oh, why didn't you leave it alone! Why did you do it at all?"

Young Whitt was silent.

"You hadn't any right to do it without asking me," persisted Madagar.

Two little tears glistened between her lashes, and she turned her back that they might not be observed.

"I'll sand-paper it off. I'll make it just the way you want."

He had already started toward the gate, and Madagar was letting him go—alone. But before he reached it she ran swiftly around the other side of the house and stood in front of him.

"I'll fix the wagon just the way you want," repeated Young Whitt. "Perhaps I can start in this afternoon."

It was then that Madagar did an unexpected thing. She threw her arms around Young Whitt's neck and gave him a bear hug. Then she looked up into his eyes and smiled, while Young Whitt looked down at the pretty little head framed by the sunbonnet.

"I don't want it ever changed," she told him. "Never, never, never!"

"Then you like it? You're glad?"

"I didn't think—I didn't know I could let any one do so much for me!"

He smiled.

"And when"—Madagar whispered the words—"we are really and truly"—she laughed—"will you take me up in the mountains beyond Little Lame Pond Canyon for those first days—with the wagon—our wagon?"

Young Whitt smiled and nodded.

"Oh, but won't I take good care of it till then!" whispered Madagar.

BACK TO THE FARM.

A LITTLE REFORM IN RURAL SCHOOLS THAT WORKED A MIRACLE.

[New York Sun:] Prof. Benson of the Department of Agriculture tells an interesting story about the revolution that has taken place in some parts of the country in the attitude of country boys and girls toward the farm. In the spring of 1907 he began an experiment to show the result of teaching something about agriculture to scholars in the rural schools.

"In March, 1907," says Prof. Benson in an address delivered before a committee of the Council of Grain Exchanges, "I sent out a circular to thirty-four schools in one county in Iowa asking the teacher these questions:

"How many boys above the fifth grade in your school expect to be farmers when grown to manhood?

"How many of the girls expect when grown to womanhood to have anything to do with the farm home and rural life?

"Out of a total of 164 boys enrolled in the thirty-four rural schools above the fifth grade, 157 said: 'We will have nothing to do with farming in any shape or form; we will be doctors, lawyers, preachers, statesmen, Presidents of the United States, anything but farmers.'

"Only seven of them had the nerve to say that they would be farmers or have something to do with farming when grown up into manhood. When I received that report I was so interested in those seven boys that I made a special trip out to the schools where they were located and made some personal inquiries as to why under the sun they had decided to become farmers.

"Two of these boys had been associated pretty closely with P. G. Holden and M. L. Bowman. They had heard Mr. Bowman lecture on corn. They heard Prof. Holden. There was one boy that had actually gone down to Ames and had taken the first short course that was put down there. There were three whose fathers had been in short courses or farmers' institutes and had got the spirit in some way. Then the other one—I am unable to this day to account for the index of his life.

"Now this would not be interesting unless I give you the results obtained last spring (1910.) There was then a total enrollment of 174 boys in these same thirty-four schools. I sent out to them the same letter and the same questions, with the same precautions, and got the following report:

"Out of the 174 boys 162 had changed their minds or had decided that they would be farmers or have something to do with directing of farms, and not only there but somewhere else. And still twelve of them persisted in not having anything to do with farming. One, I remember, was to be a rural school teacher, and two or three of the others were going to be merchants, one a banker and so on.

"One of the chief reasons for the changes that had been made was that I saw to it after getting the first report that every teacher in those thirty-four schools should get to work at once and teach by correlation, by general lessons and by class study the elements and rudiments of agriculture and home economics, and I succeeded that very year in getting thirty-one out of thirty-four to work.

"Then the girls; we must not leave the girl question out of this. In those thirty-four schools there were 174 girls enrolled. On the first census we have 163 girls who did not wish to remain on the farm and eleven who would stay on the farm. Well, that is a rather disastrous condition of affairs. But at the close of three years work along this line in these same schools out of a total enrollment of 178 girls 161 of them said: 'We will have something to do with the direction of the farm home,' and seventeen of them still persisted in going to the city."

TO T. G.

As one who walks in woods, when the young spring
Hath scarce begun to throb; when the frore sky
Is bleached with snowflake spindrift scudding high,
When the trim thrush hath not yet cared to sing:
And in the midst of his lone wandering
Feels on his sense some fragrance freshly lie,
And turns, and 'neath some jetsam doth espy
Of withered leaves, sweet violets blossoming:
So have I walked in woods I did not love,
So felt, too early, winds snow up my heart,
Till in a shelter, flowering apart,
Thy spirit, that for long I knew not of,
Breathed her warm fragrance round my chilly mood,
Like those wet violets in that wintry wood.

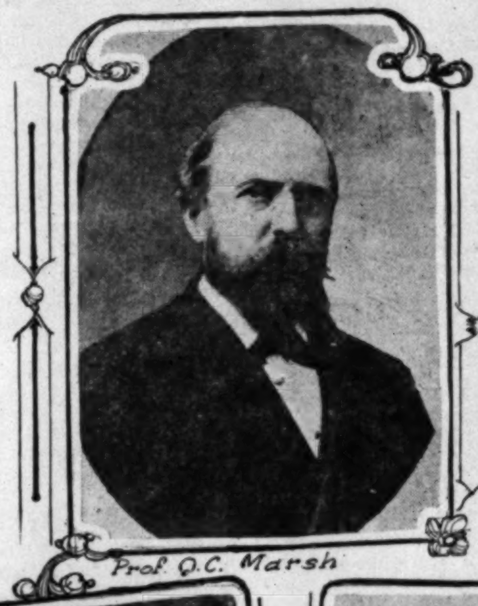
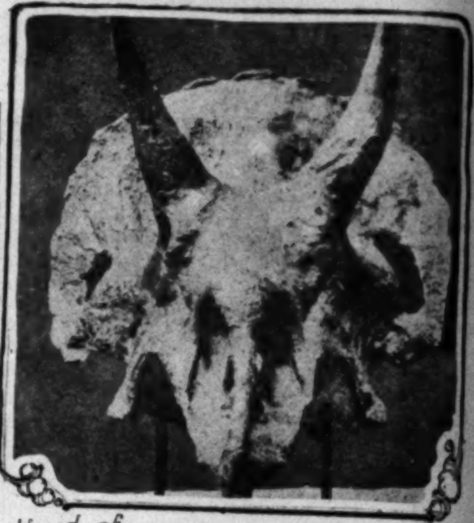
Some Ancient Animals.

GROTESQUE MONSTERS THAT LIVED TEN MILLION YEARS AGO.

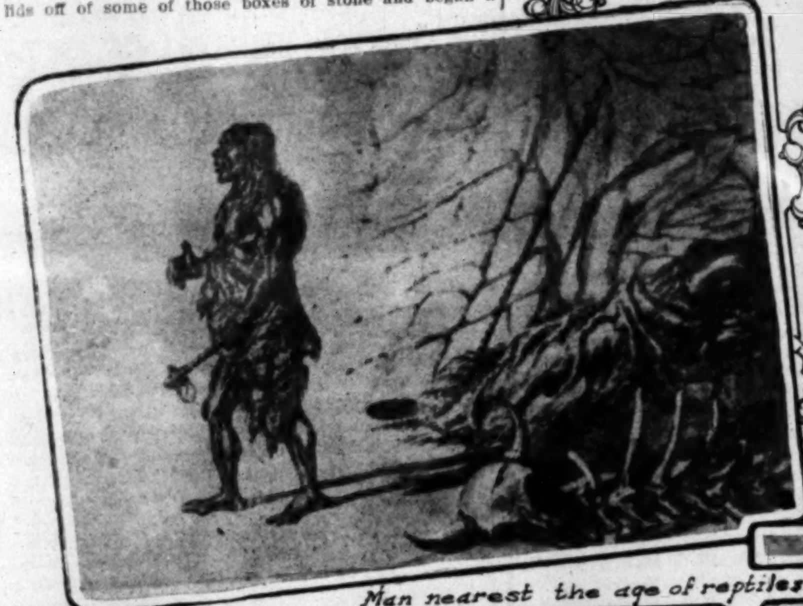
By William Atherton Du Puy.



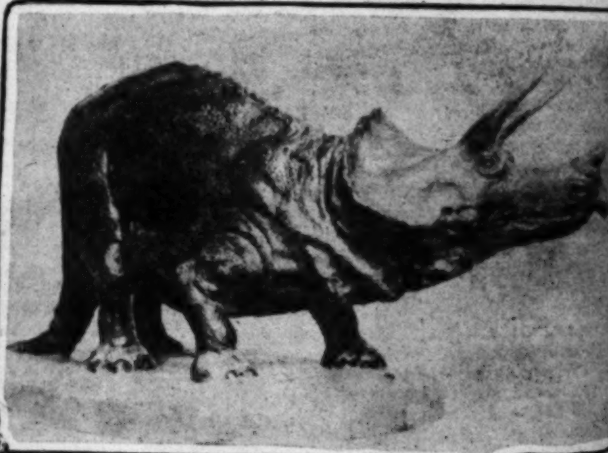
Prof. O.C. Marsh



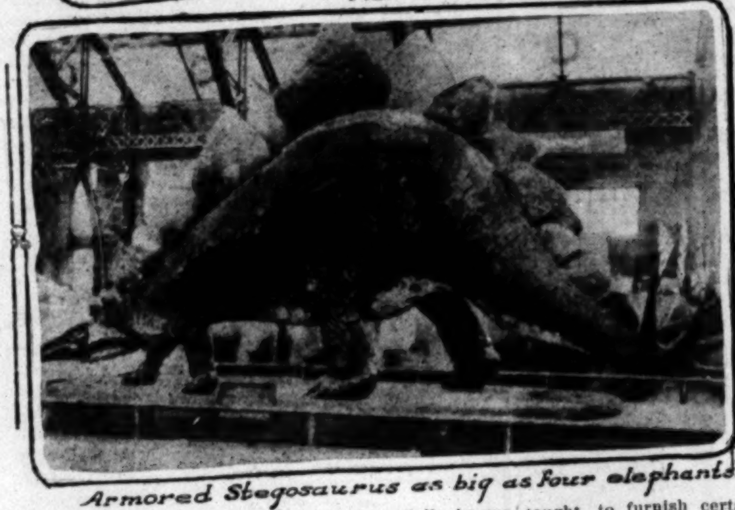
Head of Diceratops.



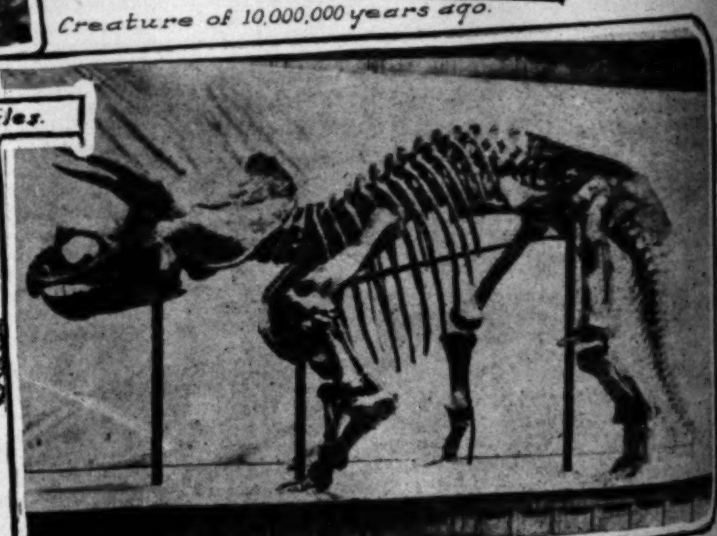
Man nearest the age of reptiles.



Creature of 10,000,000 years ago.



Armored Stegosaurus as big as four elephants.



Fossil bones of Triceratops

CREATURES of strange and grotesque shape, such as walked the earth when time was young, are just now being released from a rock bondage of 10,000,000 years and given to the light of day at the government's great museum in Washington. The fossil remains of hideous monsters, held prisoners through the aeons, are being freed from the stone that incased them and such forms as the eye of modern man never before looked upon are being set up and the world invited to come and see.

For the National Museum has just discovered itself heir to such a heritage of prehistoric lore as has never before fallen to the lot of a scientific institution. Accumulating dust for a quarter of a century in the basement of the old museum have rested 500 boxes containing a collection of rock that would make the chaperon of any chain gang green with envy. One man who lived, as most great men do, a generation ahead of his time had known of the secrets locked up in these rocks. He had devoted his life and his fortune to their preservation. When he had died he had left them to the National Museum, with an inspirational foresight which told him that thus would the door of knowledge he had found be best left ajar to the generations to come.

Rediscovered Scientific Wealth.

The man died while his secret was still held in stone. Last year the National Museum found itself the possessor of a new building of magnificent proportions. It had an opportunity to spread out and take stock of the material that it has been accumulating since the nation began in just the way it had been bequeathed these specimens. There are acres of basements about Washington filled with such material and in many cases little record kept of the source or value of it. In its investigation of its resources the National Museum pulled the lids off of some of those boxes of stone and began a study of their contents. So far it but partially knows of their value, but already it is sure that such fossil wealth as it possesses are as El Dorados and Klondikes to the scientific student. There are such pay streaks as it will take another generation to work out.

Prof. O. C. Marsh is the man responsible for the existence of the present collection. Back in the seventies he was paleontologist for the Geological Survey. It was in the course of his field work for the government that he discovered in Wyoming vast quantities of specimens of the remains of these prehistoric animals that existed in the days when the world was a swampy jungle overrun with rank vegetation and inhabited by a race of monster reptiles such as are known to modern man only through their petrified remains.

That the world has changed greatly since those times is evinced by the fact that the regions that were then great swampy marshes are now the highest mountain ranges and plateaus that the continent knows. Wyoming and Colorado have proven themselves the greatest treasure-houses for this sort of specimen that the world has ever known. Prof. Marsh found that in certain quarries in Wyoming rock was being hewn out and used for building stone that was immeasurably rich in geological value.

Prof. Marsh's Collections.

Prof. Marsh recognized the opportunity that was offered him of collecting valuable material. He realized that his was a great chance for operating in an absolutely new field, of collecting the best in his field of endeavor that was to be offered by a new and unexplored country. He induced Yale, at which university he had taught, to furnish certain amounts of money for the collection of his fossils. From the Federal government he begged the greatest possible appropriations. All these he expended and yet the wonder-house of specimens was hardly scratched. He was a man of a comfortable private fortune, and all this he also threw into the hopper. All these public and private funds he expended without stint in gathering and boxing rock-bound specimens of the animals of yore. He dragged the mountains of Colorado and Wyoming back and forth, finding in many localities specimens that were to his liking. Great blocks of stone that must be preserved unbroken until their hidden forms were revealed were freighted many miles over the worst of mountain roads and shipped other thousands of miles over western roads, where freight rates were high. The hardships of the West and of toil in isolated regions were faced for years. But in the end the specimens were stored away that were some day to reveal the secrets of the animal life on the world when all was a tropic, humid morass, where the only growth was the monster fern that dwarfs the forests of today and the only animal life was the kin of our reptiles, but grown to the size of mastodons.

To separate the petrified remains of an animal from the rock which incases it is a task of infinite care and infinite labor. It requires the painstaking labor of many scientific chiselers working for many years. It requires the expenditure of great sums of money through great periods of time. Yale has not had the money with which to work out more than a small percentage of the rock which Prof. Marsh left to that institution. The National Museum has been able to barely begin to unfold the secrets that it holds in storage. But this beginning has given a prophecy of the things that are to come.

Solving Rock Secrets.

There is the diceratops, for instance. This is a weird creature many times as large as a hippopotamus, huge of horn, with a bill like that of a duck and a tail like that of a monster snake. There is a flute of bone back of its horns that is a yard across. It is one of the characteristic monsters of its time.

The best specimen of the diceratops was found in a most interesting way. Prof. Marsh was traveling overland through Wyoming when he noticed a huge boulder lying upon the plain. With the instinct of a paleontologist he went to examine the boulder. Much to his surprise he found the tips of two monster horns protruding from it. From their positions with reference to each other he decided that they were parts of a head that was still intact. He boxed the entire boulder and made it a part of his collection.

That boulder was a year ago dug up from among the boxes of the Marsh collection. For an entire twelve months C. W. Gilmore, a man of wide experience in such work, has been chiseling at the big boulder. That year of work has resulted in the cutting away of all the stone that was not a portion of the prehistoric head. There remains but the stone of a different texture that was once a portion of the monster reptile. The infinite care and pains that is necessary in accomplishing such a task, in removing the stone that is not of the specimen and yet leaving the animal remains unharmed, is the secret of re-establishing these creatures of old.

This was a wonderfully perfect specimen of the head of this one creature. It established with a degree of thoroughness the bone formation of its head. But what was the rest of the creature like? How might the whole skeleton be completed? These were further problems. Possibly in another set of bones found elsewhere Dr. Marsh would find the bare tip of a jawbone that indicated that this creature was also of the same breed as the diceratops. This specimen might establish the form of the front body of the animal. Down in Colorado might be located other fossil bones with a shoulder blade that hitched onto the second find, and this collection might contain bones of the hind legs. The tail might be lacking and a search of years might go on before a tail was found that was identified with a creature of the right horns and duckbill to finish the complete animal. Then would the whole creature be complete and then might the bones be articulated and the complete formation of the animal set up as it had stood when it trod the fern marshes of old.

Completing Triceratops.

The diceratops and the triceratops are closely allied species. One has two horns, while the other has a third horn on its nose. There is otherwise little difference in the creatures.

From these fossil bones the skeleton structure of triceratops was finally completed. In fact, the original skeleton of the creature was set up as accurately as might be the skeleton of a horse. After this the problem faced the restorer of cushioning that frame with flesh and making the creature stand forth as it did in days of old. The footprints of the creature were somewhere found in geologic rock. This determined the shape of the foot. The heavy tail had left its mark in the wake of the footprints. In another place the imprint of the scales of its skin was found. It was known to be a reptile and its coloring and absence of hair were taken to resemble those of such modern creatures as the alligator. A clew to one part of its body was found here and to another part there. In the end the scientist had in his mind a picture that left little to the imagination, for he had the evidence of the formation of the creature in all its completeness. With this idea in mind he constructed a model of it. This model was the creature of 10,000,000 years ago brought back for the delectation of the moderns.

The model was turned over to certain papier mache manufacturers, who know nothing of prehistoric creatures, but who will manufacture a paper creature to order that is so accurate that photograph of it cannot be told from a picture of the live animal. The scientists gave the dimensions of the creature in accordance with skeleton measurements. Presto! In a few days the National Museum was in possession of a triceratops such as prowled the jungles in the days when the world was terribly hot, when a dense cloud hung ever overhead and precipitated a humid haze, when ferns alone represented the vegetable world and the only living creatures were reptiles that perpetuated their kind through the eggs they laid in the sun.

Enter Stegosaurus.

But the triceratops is an inconspicuous creature compared with the stegosaurus. Here is a creature twice as long as an elephant, heavy in the hips, with a small front body and a tail of sufficient weight to almost balance it with the hips as a fulcrum. Here, again, the head is small and duck-billed. The tail is most formidable, and is armed with five most wicked-looking horns that would been capable of doing great damage should the creature thrash about with it.

Skeletons of the stegosaurus in almost complete form were found in Colorado and Wyoming. In a single quarry so many bones of this huge creature were found as to almost reconstruct it. But here again were the infinite pains of the scientist needed to prevent a mistake. In excavating for the bones a map of the quarry was drawn. Wherever a bone was found it was placed upon the map and numbered. Then the bones were boxed and sent to the museum together with this map. So when the time came for the reconstruction a quarter of a century later, here was the record of the finding of the bones. The positions of these bones are an indication of the portions of the skeleton to which they belong. They are a clew to the reconstruction. The men of the museum lay out the bones in accordance with the map, and the process of putting them together and correlating them is begun. This, of course, after a year or two has been spent in chipping the foreign stone off of the true fossil.

The great papier mache model of the stegosaurus at the National Museum boasts a series of flutes along the back such as have never been even approximated by any modern animal. These were established as actually existent by their actual discovery in connection with the skeleton. The museum has a handsome collection of these armor plates in its possession, indestructibly petrified into stone. Their use is still a matter of contention among the scientists. It is argued that this was a semi-aquatic creature, and that these were probably defenses against creatures of the air that might attack the monster while the lower portions of the body were submerged. A further theory is that they were used for fanning off mosquitoes that in those days were probably in proportion to the rankness of the growth of other things. It is even ventured that these sawbacks might have been used in cutting a way through the jungles of old.

Other Weird Creatures.

Mounted in the side of one of the great halls of the new National Museum is the skeleton of a trachodon, a small, duck-billed, semi-snake about the size of a modern camel. The bones of this creature were found intact and incased in the solid rock. The stone was shipped with the Marsh collection, and the experts have so cut away the foreign formation as to show the creature as it rested in its native stone. The great slab has been completed and squared up, and now makes a part of the wall of the museum, the bones still resting half imbedded in it. Others of these creatures have been restored and stand gaunt and forbidding in the showcases of the display rooms.

A similar piece of work has been completed with reference to the pteranodon, a combination aquatic and jungle creature of the air, more closely allied to the great bats of India than any other modern animal. While the other creatures of its time were lolling in the jungles of Wyoming and Colorado these huge winged things were circling over the seas of what is now Kansas. It was in Kansas that the bones of a complete wing of one of them was found and that enough information was amassed for a reconstruction. From this skeleton an artist's conception of the pteranodon has been drawn and is exhibited together with the fossil remains.

When these creatures roamed about the world it had been about 10,000,000 years since animal life had begun. With the one-moleculed creatures of the seas the growth had gone on and on until it came to its rankest in this time, a period when huge reptiles dominated the earth. Since that time an approximate 10,000,000 of additional years have circled around, and with them the reptiles have gradually lost their dominance and in their place the mammals have gained sway. Finally, man, the king of the mammals, has developed the capacity to take thought and to use tools and to laugh, thus distinguishing himself from the others, and through some or all of these qualities enabling himself to outstrip them. So in these days of the twentieth century the man is going back into the aeons that are gone and reconstructing the creatures that were dominant before him. When the world was half as old he finds strange conditions which he is just beginning to thoroughly understand. The sum total of his knowledge of those times is just now being greatly increased through the unfolding of the treasures of the Marsh collection at the National Museum. But enough of it has been restored to give a promise of what is to come. But it is safe to say that there is prospect of getting sufficient creatures in papier mache to populate a well-equipped zoo, using only the creatures of this long ago.

THE BITE OF A COBRA.

SOME WEIRD CEREMONIES WITNESSED IN SULTRY CEYLON.

From Pall Mall Gazette.

The day had been unusually hot and sultry even for Ceylon. But there was the prospect of a change. A cluster of small clouds which had risen over the hills had been followed by others larger in volume and blacker in color, until at length the north was darkened with an unbroken stretch of ominous vapor. Presently the foliage, parched and drooping, was stirred by the first skirmish of the approaching storm. The wind steadily increased in force, and the clouds rose, darkening the region over which they passed. There, from base to summit, a streak of light separated for an instant the thick mass, and a moment afterward a distant rumbling reached the ear from the troubled heavens. There was a steady subdued light casting around well-defined shadows on the dry earth. But few persons were abroad, and except that occasionally a coolie hurried by in the hope of reaching his destination before the tempest burst, the road was left to the dust which was blown along in diagonal lines.

In one of the native dwellings that lay back from the road, embowered in palms and a wealth of tropical vegetation, a young man lay between life and death. He had been bitten by a cobra, and an inclination to sleep was overpowering him. More than once he had closed his eyes and allowed his head to drop, and for a time had resisted the frantic efforts of his friends to rouse him. The Kapurala had been sent for, and had just arrived with his company of dancers, tomtom beaters, and singers, and they were now making preparations for the ceremony by means of which they would endeavor to drive out the evil spirits by which the sick man was invested. They covered him in leaves and flowers, and erected by his side a figure representing the demon they sought to exorcise, and, near at hand, they placed an altar, upon which they arranged offerings of flowers, rice, and flesh, by way of propitiation. Then they left to don their professional attirement.

Meanwhile, the storm had broken with terrific violence over mountain and valley. The rain descended in torrents, saturating the parched jungle and causing the roads to welter in floods of muddy water that rushed along the conduits on the wayside. The black screen of cloud which had cast a shade over the land was now merged in the natural darkness of evening. The lightning became more and more vivid, and the thunder louder and more terrible. Flash after flash shot through the black mass, illuminating the surrounding country and revealing the outline of the adjacent mountains and then again leaving all steeped in darkness. The thunder made the heart of the bravest leap. It was a Walpurgis night indeed!—a night when the whole company of evil spirits were awake, and holding communion in the neighboring jungle. The intermittent light showed in each puddle, in each drop of rain, or on each leaf, a sudden sparkling as of some demon's glance, that blazed for an instant and then as quickly disappeared; and the thunder, the music of this infernal gathering, accompanied it like a blare from the Brocken itself.

The villagers had sought refuge in their huts, and, despite the rage of the elements, were endeavoring to sleep. But one family were up and could not rest, for there the Kapurala and his strange associates still conducted their midnight orgies over the fleeting soul of the unconscious native. The company had returned to the hut arrayed in their weird apparel. The dancers wore short cotton skirts, puckered up into flounces, and round their loins were thick leather girdles, gaudily decorated with colored buttons and metal knobs. Their breasts were covered with a network of beads in concentric circles, and meeting in the middle under bright discs of brass. The headpieces would have done justice to the most whimsical of demons. They had white metal crowns, the castellated rims of which spread out over the foreheads of the wearers, and, in front, rose seven ornaments of plated silver like an array of feathers, and from each hung trinkets and pendants in all varieties. Round their necks and on their arms and feet were a wealth of ornament, necklaces of beads, heavy bangles, armlets, and hollow anklets filled with beads. t

The ceremony was conducted in the light of a small cocoanut-oil lamp, which barely sufficed to show the features of the performers, but the lightning, gleaming almost without intermission through the open doorway, made up for its shortcomings. Standing by the head of the dying man, holding out his hands and twisting himself about, the Kapurala was chanting a strange incoherent air, in which the singers at first joined listlessly. As he proceeded, his fervor increased, until his movements became those of a maniac. He was accompanied in his spasmodic gestures and grotesque postures by the other dancers. Suddenly they would become motionless, with hands outstretched, singing to the unhallowed thumping of the tomtoms; and then, as momentarily, they would bend their knees almost to a sitting posture, and advance by slow and convulsive steps, while their trinkets tinkled and their wild song added fresh terrors to the tempest-shaken night. Then their movements would become more vigorous, until they had worked themselves up into a frenzy, in which the tomtom beaters fully participated. The latter struck their instruments with bare hands and with great force, all the time contorting their faces until they assumed the most demoniac expressions. To the accompaniment of the storm, the scene was impressive in the extreme, for the devil dancers clapped their hands, screamed and hallooed in a manner so wild that it filled with awe even those who had witnessed the ceremony many times before.

At length they desisted, and the inmates of the hut grew more composed. The storm, too, had shown signs of abating. The lightning was less vivid, and, except now and then for a flash unusually dazzling, it was passing away to other districts. The thunder was heard only as a distant rumbling, and the dark bank of cloud which had heralded the approaching storm had traveled on until, through its silvery fringe, gleamed the welcome rays of the moon. The light shone down upon the fresh earth, sodden by the copious rain, and stole among the native dwellings and through the open door of one whose inmates had secured no rest that night. The Kapurala was stooping over the prostrate form of the sick man. All apparently was still, for coma had supervened, despite the extraordinary efforts of the devil dancers to prevent it. The face was set, and there was a tranquillity about it that caused the beholder to gaze at it earnestly for some minutes. Then, seeing that his rites were unavailing, he turned away and, taking the offerings of food and flowers from the altar as custom allowed, stole out into the cool night, followed by his companions. The cobra had prevailed!

MECCA VISITED BY ONE-SEVENTH OF HUMAN RACE.

[Harper's:] Although one of the most inaccessible cities on earth, Mecca each year has visitors in such number that it must be ranked in this particular with London and New York. Even the world's metropolis on the Thames can boast no such cosmopolitan character as is imparted to this mysterious city in the wilderness of Arabia by the myriads of pilgrims who, at the cost of incredible pains, annually crowd into its confines. This city is the oldest place of resort in existence, yet of all the millions who have visited it not a score of Christians are known to have come out alive. No flag of citizenship would save a man's life were he known to be a Christian within the sacred precincts of the city where the Prophet himself decreed that no unbeliever should set foot.

Of the 225,000,000 Moslems in the world, only 15,500,000 live under the Turkish flag, yet most of them acknowledge the Sultan of Turkey as their caliph, the successor of the Prophet. As Mohammed shrewdly foresaw, the Mecca pilgrimage binds together his disciples into a unity which could be effected in no other way. "Mecca," says Dr. Samuel M. Zwemer of Arabia, "has become the religious capital and the center of universal pilgrimage for one-seventh of the human race."

The Lady of the Circus.

WHEN THE CLOWN DISCOVERED HER LIFE'S GREAT SECRET.

By Walter Beach Hay.

LEWIS had left home—run away to find independence. Without a thought for the feelings of those who had loved him, and cared for him all his life, he had stolen off, leaving behind him the brief message that he was tired of it all, that he wanted freedom and a chance to make his own way. Everything had been so distasteful in the old life; it had been studies and school and always some one to point the way to some unpleasant duty; he had rebelled at the restraint—but had he found liberty in this new field?

He was 16, big and strong; he had thought himself almost a man—or, in fact, had thought himself quite a man, altogether able to take care of himself; he did not need any one to guard or guide him. Other boys had struck out and made their way—why could not he? He had considered that the softening influence of the home was something that he could get along very well without; he had argued that it was a bad thing for him—it was weakening his character, he said. But after four days—it was only four days, though it seemed longer, very much longer—he was forced to confess to himself that he was homesick. He longed to hear his father's deep-toned voice, to hear the hearty laugh, to have once more the companionship of that father, who in his heart was still a boy. Had any other boy such a good father? No. At the thought, Lewis had a feeling of great shame as to his conduct. He was more homesick than ever, so homesick that he would even have been glad to see his grandmother again, stern and unrelenting as she had always been in her attitude toward him.

Yet, his pride would not allow him to return.. He had hoped (after the first day) that a diligent search would be made for him, that his father would start out, would never rest until he had found him and could take him home. However, he was no longer hopeful on that score.

He ached in every part of his body; he had never before in all his life been so tired and sore, but he must go on and on for the present and in the future some time he would become accustomed to his labors. He had always been proud of his strength, but what did it amount to here? Nothing! He was nothing but a boy, after all! And he was dreadfully unhappy—he felt it more than he otherwise would because his life up until a few days before had really been all happiness.

He looked about at the great tents—how he hated the sight of them! The whole place stretched out before him, a horrible nightmare; the dust choked him; the multitudinous odors were offensive to him; the sounds, which were unfamiliar still, beat upon his ears with a sort of frenzy; and but such a short while ago he had thought it all so wonderful! However, all the romance was now torn away from it—the mechanism was all disclosed to him. Why, he asked himself bitterly, had he run away with a circus? Why did he do any of the foolish things which he was sure to regret when it was too late? He could not understand what it was that made him so uncertain of himself. A problem of no small magnitude confronted him.

His mind was so occupied with these thoughts that he did not notice one of the bareback riders who passed him; he was unconscious of the friendly smile that she turned in his direction. She was on the point of speaking to him, but as he seemed so abstracted she did not disturb him. Another thing: she was on the way to the dressing-room, and she did not have much time to spare. However, she hesitated at the entrance of the tent; something whispered to her that now was the time—that she must not go on—and she turned back to the boy. She was a dainty little woman; her dress was a plain black walking suit and she carried herself with a certain distinction; she was young, but the hard life and the artifice of the toilet table had left deep marks upon her face; nevertheless, she had a semblance of good looks which bespoke that in her girlhood she must have possessed much beauty. She came to the boy and in a low tone she said to him: "You are new here?"

His thoughts had carried him so far away that he was startled by her voice. It took him a moment to recollect himself. Involuntarily he removed his hat as he answered, with some embarrassment: "Yes."

"You have run away from home." She spoke with conviction—there was no interrogation in her voice. The boy flushed and she went on quickly: "Do not be angry with me. I ran away from home myself, fifteen years ago—and it was such a good home that I ran away from! You have had a good home; a good father and mother—perhaps—to think of your happiness."

She took one of the boy's hands in hers and looked at it intently. A whimsical smile came to her lips, though there was a suggestion of tears in her eyes. "You have been well cared for—you have not been accustomed to anything like this. The work that you have known best has been PLAY. The play you enjoyed—I know what it was that you did not like; you must have found out by this time that this is far worse than school."

She continued to hold the boy's hand; for a moment she was silent. "You must go back," she said finally, "tonight. Do not wait until you feel that it is too late. Go back to your old life as if there had been no break—as if you were just returning from school. Don't wait for some one to come after you. I thought that some one would come for me when I went away—but no one came. I think some one else held him back. I grew tired of my new life—oh, so soon; I wanted to turn back, but I had delayed too long and I lacked the courage to face the issue."

She was silent again, but only for an instant. "I married too young—that was the trouble in the first place; I hadn't lived out my girlhood—I hadn't passed from the uncertain stage of childhood, where there is no explanation for one's actions. I was a foolish girl, and after I was married I thought I was being cheated out of something. This"—she nodded her head toward the tents—"all this fascinated me. I had always loved the unexpected thing—I enjoyed being fantastic. I left my good husband and came away to this. I left behind me a note asking my husband to consider me as dead; he did—that is, I think he must have done so, for I never heard that he tried to trace me.

"This was not such a big show then. It was a small circus then, but it has grown." There was a touch of pride in her voice. "It so happened that they needed some one at the time—they took me in gladly. I was fond of horses—I knew much about them—I learned quickly. I liked it at first—right at the very first; I always liked anything new. That was why I worked so hard in the beginning—later on I worked hard because there was nothing else for me to do. I came to stand high in my profession—I was and am still an equestrienne.

"The people about me have always thought me something of a mystery—I never told them my story. Perhaps I have always held myself a little aloof; at any rate, they call me here 'The Little Lady of the Circus.' I have been with them a long time now."

She paused again; she was looking off, far away. Gently she patted Lewis's hand, and the boy did not resent the caress. "One, two, three times," she went on, "I have seen my husband in these fifteen years, but he has not seen me—to know me. The first time I remember best. It was during a street parade one morning—it must be ten years ago, yes, just about. He was standing on the curb—he did not look at me—he was not watching the parade. On his shoulder was a little boy—the little boy I had given him—a little boy with such a flushed, excited face, with such joy and wonderment in his eyes. My husband looked only at his son; any one could see that he was fascinated by the child—and I could not blame him for falling beneath the spell. I rode quite close to them, and—I looked, too. Who would ever have thought that I was the mother of that beautiful boy—I, a circus rider? But there was a time, long ago, when my beauty was not alone that of the ring—when I was pleasing to look upon even in the glare of the sun.

"Chance has brought me face to face with my husband twice since then, and with my—his boy, once—twice, also.

"You joined us at—Bonner, was it not?"

"Yes," the boy answered.

"I was quite sure that you did," she continued. "Go back there tonight. It is not so very far. I can let you have the money for your fare—you can take it as a loan if you wish. Take your time to pay it back—send it to 'The Little Lady of the Circus,' and it will reach me—or, if you wish to wait, you can bring it to me next year when we show in your town. Do not tell them at home that some one persuaded you to go back; let them think that you acted as your own heart and head together bade you; it is wise, you will learn some day, to let the heart and head work together. Do not let any one hear my little story—I have told it to you in confidence; it may do you good to remember it—it can do you no good to pass it along."

She dropped the boy's hand. From her bag she took several pieces of money. "Here, this will see you safely home. Come, take it."

The boy hesitated for a moment, but the picture of his home and his father flashed before his eyes and his hand closed upon the money. "Thank—you," he stammered. "I will—send it—back to you."

She smiled. "You need not hurry about sending it back," she said. "All you need to think of now is the necessity of getting home as quickly as possible. Good-by."

She stood motionless; quickly her eye took in everything about her; no one was in sight. Impetuously she threw her arms about the boy; she drew his face down to hers and lightly she kissed him on the lips. "Forgive me," she said breathlessly. "Perhaps some day you will understand—but I am quite old enough to be your—mother."

She loosened her grasp, but Lewis' arms had risen and now he held her; twice he kissed her—should she ever forget it! Twice! "I am late," she said, and he let her go; without further words between them she passed into the tent.

As she went in, she brushed against the clown called Mike. He had been listening—he had heard all—he had discovered her secret. She swept by him without giving a sign that she was conscious of his presence. She had always liked Mike—he had always shown her great consideration. It grieved her now to have to admit that she had caught him in the act of eavesdropping upon her; and he had been listening—she knew it by his attitude.

The man looked after her sorrowfully; he knew that she had seen him—he read what was in her mind. He had not meant to listen, but—he had so wanted to know of her past. He had tried to be her friend. He had even dreamed—but it had never been more than a dream, and now it had become more of a dream than ever, a something that could never be. He knew what she must have been; he had always felt it; she was "the Little Lady" in fact. At any rate, he could be her friend, her slave to the last. He sighed heavily. It was hard not to be able to gain the things one wished; how dreary was the aspect. Then, his philosophic sense asserted itself and he smiled as he stuck his head outside the tent—better a little than nothing at all, he thought. He winked meditatively at a star which was just showing itself for the night.

"Good evening," he said. One would have thought from his manner that he and the star were the only two atoms in the whole universe. "Good evening, and if I had the money and was 20 years younger, or thereabouts, I would walk within the shadow of the tents southward (not northward, for the coast is not clear to the north;) and I would reach beneath the tent three poles down and draw out an overcoat and a fairly respectable hat, which could be returned to Mike at some future date. Do you catch the drift? Then would go one block south (when got free of the grounds) and some three or four blocks west and, by quick walking, would just about catch the 7:45 for a place called Bonner—and it's a mighty nice place, is Bonner; but I wouldn't lose much time—I'd move lively. However, I haven't the money and I'm not as young as I was twenty years ago, and any way no one would really be expecting me in Bonner. I think, under the circumstances, the best thing I can do is to step along with some speed, INSIDE the canvas, to the third pole down."

The clown disappeared. Perhaps it was he who later stood for some minutes in the shadow of an animal wagon with his eyes turned to the south; it is more than likely that it was he, for he was late in making his entrance at the performance. But when he did come, he exerted himself to the utmost to draw the laughs of the crowd. He frisked and circled about the ring of "La Petite Madame." She did not notice him. He threw her kisses in mock infatuation—at least, it was mock infatuation to the crowd and to "The Little Lady" herself—but to Mike! He knelt in the sawdust and pressed his hands to his heart in anguish. Hundreds of times he had done this same thing—was that the reason why at last it had come to seem real, to take on a serious aspect? But tonight he meant it more than ever before, and he wanted her to look—yet, she refused to acknowledge that she was aware of his presence. Finally, he began to run along beside her. "Madame, I cannot wait," he breathed, as she bent low upon her horse. He waited for her to come around again. She was looking at him now intently. "Madame, the boy has gone. Here!" He thrust a bit of paper into her hands. She stooped and pinched the tip of Mike's ear. He turned and bowed low to the crowd to show that he had triumphed. It was all a part of the show to them; they laughed at him and he was glad that they could be so joyous.

"The Little Lady" rode on with a wild frenzy. Once, long ago, she had experienced this madness of joy, but then there had been a slight touch of pain; this time there was no pain—she was wonderfully happy. She had thrust the bit of paper into her bosom where it could warm her heart. She was glad, glad, glad. She had learned in her hard schooling to make every bit of sunshine tell, and this that had come to her that day had all the brilliancy of the sun itself. She could be "The Little Lady of the Circus" to the end, to the very end, with joy in her heart. She was not afraid of the long years, stretching out before her. She could always have the hope that she might see her boy again—certainly she had the right to call him her boy just to herself. Hope is a wonderful elixir; it had never deserted her in the past; she had always possessed the power to believe that something happy was coming to her some time—and it had come and might come again—it might be that in the future the boy would come to see her. Was that not enough for her to look forward to? She ran from the ring. For the time being she wanted to get away from the lights, from the confusion and the people. She wanted to get off by herself, just for a moment. She wanted to know what message was in the note for her. She took it out and opened it. The words had been jotted down in haste. Her hand shook a little—she could feel the blood tingling in her cheeks.

"Thank you," the note said. "Perhaps it isn't too late for you to go back, either. I will see you again some time."

A smile flickered about the corners of her mouth; her eyes twinkled despite the tears.

"It is wonderful to be so generous," she whispered. "And I have so little that I can give in return for this. Why should I not have seen?"

She did not hesitate; quickly she walked across to where Mike leaned against a pole. She held out her hand to him. "And thank you, too," she said. He raised his brows in surprise, but he failed to disguise the fact that he had caught her meaning.

"You are a good actor sometimes," she went on, "but the best actors cannot always carry off their parts." His head drooped guiltily, but he reached out and took her hand. "You are very, very kind," she said softly, as she touched the paper. "This was very thoughtful of you, but—you did not, could not, perhaps, make your writing look different enough." She laughed. "There is something so peculiar about your writing—once seen never forgotten."

She paused to allow him to speak, but he remained silent. He was thinking and there were no words which could express his thoughts; he had no right to speak them, if there were; he had an intuition that she at last read his heart, understood how he looked upon her. He was not mistaken in this—she had awakened; she now could appreciate the tenderness of everything he had ever done for her; she realized how he had shielded her; she was aware also that it had not been his intention to allow his secret to escape from him. What a life of sacrifice his was! What pity she felt that she had so little to give him in return for his devotion! What could she do? Her life was not, could never be wholly her own. There was nothing for

The Wait at Paradise.

GARRITY'S MEETING WITH THE PRETTY GIRL IN KHAKI.

By Edith Letts Dunn.

THE westbound Overland, nursing a crippled engine, limped into Paradise that day an hour behind the schedule and ten minutes ahead of the sandstorm that had pursued it across the desert for many miles.

Garrity probably would not have noticed the Overland if it had not been for the storm. He had ridden far and hard on a stern quest since dawn, a quest that left small room for interest in the line of smug Pullmans and grimy day coaches, but the swirling sand held him prisoner on the station platform, and while he chafed at the delay, his glance fell upon the delayed train on the siding.

A few of the Overland's passengers had crossed to the station and were refreshing themselves with aenemic sandwiches and bitter coffee from the lunch counter.

Among them was a girl in khaki, and Garrity had watched her intently for many minutes in an abstracted, impersonal way before he discovered that he had transferred his attention from the train and was bestowing it upon the girl.

It was almost the first time that Garrity had given more than casual attention to a woman since he had come west to make a home and fortune for the girl who waited him in the old eastern home.

He was so unaccustomed to conversation with the gentler sex that he felt confused and awkward when the girl left the lunch counter and came straight to where he sat on a truck sheltered from the wind by an angle of the building.

"May I share your seat?" the stranger asked shyly. "It's so hot in there. Do you think it will be very long before the train starts?"

"Heard a fellow say there was something wrong with one of the drivers," Garrity explained tersely. "They're tinkerin' at it, but they may have to send to Sanderson for a 'nother engine."

The girl drew a long sigh. "I'm going to Sanderson," she said, "but I don't know as it matters much how soon I get there. One place's about as good as another to me."

"Folks live in Sanderson?" questioned Garrity briskly, detecting a sad note in her voice and wishing to escape a tearful confidence.

"I haven't any folks. I'm going to Sanderson to work—that is, if I can get a place. You don't know of any job I could get around here, do you? Waiteressing or something like that?"

Garrity found himself suddenly unreasonably angry that the pretty, delicate creature before him should be forced to the vulgar necessity of "hunting a job."

"Why do you want to work?" he asked sharply.

"Because I gotta eat," she flashed back at him pertly.

There was no denying the statement, and Garrity pondered it a moment gravely.

"I might get you a job if I wasn't in such a blamed hurry," he said at last, "but as 'tis, I'm headed on an errand that won't wait."

"Are you huntin' a job, too?"

Garrity laughed. A laugh that tightened the lines about his mouth instead of loosening them, giving him a look that was not pleasant to see.

"I'm hunting a man," he said briefly.

The girl shuddered. "That's terrible, but I guess it's done a good deal in this country. What you huntin' him for?"

"To put him in prison. But we won't say no more about it. Such things ain't nice for little girls like you to hear about. He realized that the girl's innocent questioning had led him to say more than was discreet, but he was also aware that in this instance discretion might be safely dispensed with, for the woman at his side, scarcely more than a child in years, had apparently small conception of the gravity of his mission beyond the shock which the idea of a man hunt always brings to the feminine mind.

Across the blur of sand-swept tracks the engine of the Overland was being uncoupled from the train and Garrity called the girl's attention to it.

"That means they've got to send to Sanderson for a 'nother engine," he said. "You're in for a good bit of a wait."

"You think I'd better go on there? You think it's no use lookin' for a job here?"

Garrity was flattered by the way in which she seemed to leave the situation in his hands.

"If I just wasn't in such a darned hurry," he regretted. "Say, do you think you could ride through this storm and fast? I know a lady—Swede—back in the country that wants help mighty bad. She's dry farmin' over on Johnson's Mesa an' she wants some woman person to cook an' look after the house while she does the agriculture act. How'd that suit?"

The girl was beating her little hands softly together in an ecstacy of gratitude.

"Grand, grand," she breathed. "Oh, will you take me?"

"I could get a 'nother horse at the livery," planned Garrity. "It's 9 now. We ought to make it by 4 if we start right away. I could start back by sundown an' that'd get me here by midnight. I needn't lose more'n twelve or fifteen hours, an' I've a straight tip that the party I'm after is countin' on stayin' where he is for a couple days. If he does that I'll have time, but it's a risk. Come on."

But the girl hung back. "It seems horrible to catch a man and put him in prison," she shuddered, "but if you really want him I ain't a-goin' to let you run the risk of losin' him on my account. I reckon we better call it off. I—I can't let you fail just for me."

Garrity looked down into the pretty childish face, the lips quivering, the big dusky eyes tear-filled.

"I'd a darned sight rather fail FOR you than succeed without you," he said boldly in a voice the girl who waited in the East had never heard.

That was the strangest ride Garrity ever took. A sharp, sand-weighted wind dogged their steps every inch of the way. Above their heads a fevered, swollen sun half-obscured by clouds of dust, poured its sickening heat into the world. But Garrity was conscious of none o' these things. His mind was absorbed by the girl who rode beside him. Her beauty charmed him. The unassuming sweetness and innocence of her manner was a delight. He found himself beginning to dream dreams that, had she known them, would have brought uneasiness to the woman in the old eastern home.

If any thought of the outlaw Roth, whose trail he had abandoned at Paradise, entered his mind, he did not let it trouble him.

The day before an Indian gold seeker, coming out of the scorched hills to the south, had brought him word of the hiding place far up among the blistered crags, where the fugitive was nursing a wound that would make a further flight improbable for a day or two at least.

Once during the ride the girl asked a few desultory questions about the man hunt, and Garrity pointed out to her the break in the hills through which the outlaw had fled and through which he meant to follow him. The place seemed to interest the girl and she made him tell her just how he planned to reach the ambuscade; and at her suggestion, since his explanations were a bit confusing, Garrity made a rude map of the place and the trails whereby he meant to reach it, on a leaf of his pocket diary and gave it to her.

At the dry farm in the desert the lady Swede was voluble in her appreciation of Garrity's favor. She would have the new maid take the rest she so obviously needed before beginning her duties, but the girl pleaded to be allowed to prepare the early supper, at which Garrity was to be a guest.

The ample meal was fairly cooked, but the strong coffee was nauseating and Garrity found it difficult to drink the three cups of the bitter beverage which the girl urged upon him as a remedy for his fatigue.

He had a word alone with her before leaving.

"I'm ap' to be along this way agen in a few weeks," he told her, "an' I'll stop in to see how you're gettin' along. That is—if you'd like me to."

"Of course I'd like it," assured the girl, blushing.

There was more that Garrity wanted to say, but the words were such that come with difficulty to lips unused to soft speeches as were his. He struggled a moment with his diffidence and brought out the single injunction: "Don't you let her work you too hard."

"I won't."

Her face was turned to his, delicate, flower-like and with great shadows of fatigue beneath the soft eyes. Impetuously Garrity stooped and laid his lips against hers.

"I won't ever forget you, kid," he murmured.

She did not shrink from his caress, but as he raised his head Garrity thought he saw the faintest flicker of a smile cross her mouth at his words.

"Forget me," she echoed, "no, I'm sure you won't."

Garrity had left his own horse in Paradise, having secured one from the livery stable with which to make the trip to the ranch. He told himself that it was because the strange animal's gait was a peculiar one that he sat so unsteadily in his saddle and lurched about so much that afternoon when he left the ranch. But after a while he was forced to admit that it was not the horse, but himself, who was at fault.

He had begun to suffer a terrible ever-increasing pain accompanied by a dizziness which lapsed at last into unconsciousness. Twenty-four hours after he had left the dry farm on the Mesa, Garrity came out of a delirium in the camp of a Mexican sheep herder, who had found him wandering over the desert. It was three whole days before he was able to mount a horse and ride back to Paradise, and when he arrived his story had preceded him. They were telling it on the porch of Ryan's place, which is both the general store and the social center of Paradise, when Garrity rode up.

"Bottamuller the Dutchman that runs the eatin'-house over at the station, seen 'em talkin' together," Ryan was detailing for the benefit of a late comer who had not heard the tale. "Bottamuller usta cook in a camp up in Lost Hills where her an' Roth was married. He says he 'sposed o' course Garrity knew who she was. He seen 'em go away together, but didn't think much about it, bein' busy, 'till he heard that Garrity's horse had been at the barn four days. Then Bottamuller he gets communicative an' as soon as it's known that Garrity's been eloped with, the boys start out to hunt for him. Well, they trails the pair out to Johnson's Mesa, where that Swede woman has her dry farm, an' there the plot thicked up like molasses in cold weather, for they find the Swede woman terrible sick an' she swears an' declares that she was poisoned with some coffee the girl made for supper the night she an' Garrity come. She thinks the girl lit out an hour or so after Garrity left, but she was too sick by then to notice much. Anyway, the girl was gone on the best horse the Swede had, an' leadin' a 'nother. Well, then the boys split up an' part of 'em started out to hunt Garrity an' part of 'em to trail the girl. They didn't find Garrity, nor the girl, but they tracked her clean up into the mountains to the place where Roth had been hidin'. She brought him word of his danger, and the two of 'em had made a clean getaway on the Swede's horses.

"How'd she know Garrity was after Roth? Well, nobody knows that but herself an' them that put her next to it, but the plain facts are just these. She knew, of course, same as everybody else, that Roth was bein' run down by the ablest man trailer in the State, who had bragged that he would go after his man alone an' take him single-handed. She didn't know just where Roth was at, but she knew, somehow, that Garrity would be in Paradise one day this week. She come here intendin' to hang around 'till he come. She didn't have to wait, for they got here the same day, and though she'd never seen him before, she picked her man at once. The rest seems to have been easy."

The entrance of Garrity at this point put a sensational climax to Ryan's narrative.

There was rejoicing over his return, mingled with much good-natured banter about the readiness with which the "ablest man hunter in the State" had walked into the trap laid for him.

The jesting did not disturb Garrity, for he was too intensely interested in Ryan's story, which was the first explanation he had had of the mysterious events of the last few days.

And down in his heart was a sense of loss. The loss of a dream, a vision which had waked in his heart at the glance of a girl's dark eyes.

As he crossed the tracks to the Paradise House, where he was to pass the night, he suddenly realized what the girl's smile had meant when she predicted that he would always remember her.

She had spoken ironically but truly when she had said he would never forget her. Garrity knew that he never would.

The Lady of the Circus.

either of them to do, then, but call upon their seemingly inexhaustible supply of philosophy.

"It is easy to make a tragedy of any life," she said as calmly as she could. "It is wise when the horizon is limited to magnify each tiny spark of happiness into a burning light. There are few things above a true friendship—the realization that some one cares for you is bound to warm the heart. You have warmed my heart; you have brought me great, great happiness; I am rich today because I know I have a true friend, one who was willing to sacrifice himself for me—and I will try in return to be faithful to the friendship. I am content to go on as I am to the end, to the very end.

"You have been a good, good friend to me, Mike—how good a friend I had never realized before tonight. It was kind and unselfish of you to think of it, to suggest it—but I cannot go back—it would not be fair to the boy. It would not be fair to any of us—this is my life."

The clown raised his head and looked steadily into the unfaltering eyes of the woman who stood before him—the woman who had read his secret. He saw courage, unassailable determination, the determination to make the best of the life that had been hers for years, written upon her face. If she was undaunted by the future prospect, why should he not be brave? Why should he not continue to make her path as pleasant as possible? Why should he give up the jokes that had always amused her—would she not understand them even better now? With the gallantry of a courtier, he stooped and kissed the hand of the "The Little Lady of the Circus." "Madame, with your confidence as one of my possessions," he murmured, "life takes on new colors for me. What cannot be, cannot be; what is is best, after all, for a clown. I have sometimes wept at my own fun—I will now try to laugh at my sorrows."

He stood straight again. His features were twisted into a comical grimace. He stepped back a few paces, turned a couple of flips, and, when he was once more on his feet, made a megaphone of his hands and called in a subdued voice: "At your service, Madame, for all time." The mockery in his voice and manner did not hide his sincerity.

"The Little Lady of the Circus" laughed at him—but were there not tears upon her cheeks? She laughed at him and blew him a series of kisses in response to his farewell. She laughed and the tears dried, for there was joy, unquenchable joy in her heart. That day had been good to her. She had seen her boy; she had held him in her arms; she had kissed him—and he had returned her kiss; and she had sent him back to the life in which he belonged. And then, then, too, she had found a friend; how she had longed for a friend! And now, at last, he had come. Why should she not be glad?

PRAWNS THAT CHANGE COLOR.

[The Scotsman:] An interesting example is given by a correspondent in illustration of the changes which welcome the morn among some of the inhabitants of the sea. The shallow water around our coasts is peopled by a small prawn, hippolyte varians, which lives in shoals among the seaweeds at the level of low spring tides. Throughout the night the prawns are of a beautiful transparent blue or bluish green color, but as soon as dawn appears the transparent blue fades and each assumes the color of the particular seaweed upon which it browses.

This rhythm of color change has become so unvarying that if they are kept in perpetual darkness their color alters at the time when daylight should have appeared and reverts again at the hour of nightfall. For two or three days they keep up the change until the habit is broken, and only the admission of daylight can reawaken the nervous rhythm once more.

Beyond the Judge's Control.

"THE courtroom has its fun as well as its tragedy," once observed William Travers Jerome. "Sometimes the humor is not as appreciable to the principal actors as to an outsider, as in the case I once attended in a New England court, where a slander trial was on.

"The principal witness was an impetuous old Irish woman. She talked so fast that the judge was unable to follow her testimony, especially as it was delivered in the broadest of brogues. In vain he attempted to stop her.

"'Stop! Stop!' he cried, rapping sharply on his desk. But the torrent of words continued as before. 'Old woman, shut up!' he shouted, in exasperation. But to no avail. The old lady was determined to have her say. Finally the unhappy judge threw down his pen and yelled to the lawyer.

"'There, Mr. Murdock! You set her a-going, now stop her!'"—[Lippincotts.

The Turn of the Worm.

THE REV. SYLVESTER HORNE, the noted Liberal clergyman and M.P. of London was talking, at a dinner in New York, about charity.

"The trouble with most charity," he said, "is that it is administered in a grudging, condescending spirit. Charity, to have any effect, must be administered in a spirit of absolute sympathy—a spirit, I may almost say, of absolute humility. 'To uplift, get underneath,' as the philosophic Ade well said.

"There was once a London lady, the wife of a millionaire promoter, who decided, being rather bored, to go in for charity. So she rang for her electric brougham and glided in a luxurious silence down to the New Cut.

"The lady selected the very worst house in the New Cut, and she paid a call of about half an hour on the poor, tired, underfed woman who lived there. The questions she asked this woman were supercilious and impertinent. The lady had a very good time.

"But when she came to go, her hostess, whose cheeks were now unwontedly red, rather spoiled her good time by saying quietly.

"'Well, good-by, madam. I don't suppose I'll see you again. The fact is, I haven't time to go slumming myself.'"

The Optimist.

"ADMIRAL SCHLEY," said an officer of the Navy Department in Washington, "had no use for the unreasoning optimist—the optimist who won't contend against evil, excusing his laziness on the ground that all things work together for good and so forth.

"Admiral Schley once tried to have certain reforms instituted in the navy. He found at headquarters a good deal of the optimistic or lazy spirit, however, and so, at a dinner one night, he rebuked a headquarters optimist with a story.

"You remind me, sir," he said, "of old Jimmy Traddles. Jimmy was a laborer. Noon sounded one day, and he sat down and felt in his pocket for his lunch. But the pocket was empty.

"'Boys,' he said, 'I've lost my lunch.'

"Then he gave a cheery laugh.

"'It's a darned good thing I've lost it, too,' he said.

"'Why so, mate?' a man asked.

"'Because,' said old Jimmy, 'I left my teeth at home.'"

The Ring and the Girl.

"I WAS among the guests at Skibo when Andrew Carnegie entertained Lloyd George."

The speaker, a New York millionaire, smiled complacently.

"What a raconteur Andrew Carnegie is, to be sure!" he went on. "At dinner one evening the talk turned to the set of golf clubs he had sent to the President, and some one made a joking remark about the invisible strings attached to the clubs.

"But Mr. Carnegie declared that no strings, no conditions, attached to his gift. He said he didn't believe in gifts that could possibly cause unpleasantness, and then he told an appropriate story.

"Two girls, the story ran, were drinking tea and eating scones at Sherry's. The first girl said:

"'Maud is so sorry she took Reggie's ring back to Dymon's to be valued.'

"'Why?' asked the other girl, as she opened a fresh scone.

"'Dymon kept it. He said Reggie hadn't been in to settle for it according to his promise.'"

Modern Marriage.

FREDERICK TOWNSEND MARTIN, the satirist of the "idle rich," made a witty speech, at a literary dinner in New York, about modern marriage.

"Love," he said, "certainly has a very small place in a marriage a la mode. I was talking the other day at a tea to a beautiful débutante, when a beautiful bride, a girl of 18 or so, passed with her husband. The husband was an old fellow of 70, and the debutante, nodding toward him, said:

"'I suppose Bessie married Millions for his money.'

"'If she did,' said I severely, 'it was a very wrong and foolish thing to do.'

"'Yes, wasn't it?' said the debutante. 'Old Millions looks so healthy. I'm sure he'll live to a hundred.'"

More Appropriate.

REPRESENTATIVE HENRY, condemning the international marriage, said at a dinner in Waco:

"What kind of men are these dukes and earls, anyway, that they can frankly admit marrying heiresses for their money?

"I heard a story the other day, a story about an heiress who said to her titled fiance:

"'My dear, I'm rather a new woman, you know, so do you mind asking the bishop to omit the word, "obey" in our wedding ceremony?'

"Lord Laclan stroked his mustache, smiled cynically and answered:

"'No, I don't mind, my love. I'll just tell the old boy to make it "love, honor and supply."'"

The Still Small Voice.

A REAL live bishop of the Anglican Communion had never before been seen in the Berkshire village of Leamings and his high-church hostess, in the palatial "cottage" where she came between Newport and "town," was almost as proud of his gaiters and shovel hat as if her own broker husband was wearing them. She was particular, moreover, about the dignitary's proper title as a "spiritual peer," and all the servants were strictly coached as to what they should say if called upon to address him. Buttons, for instance, when he took up the shaving water in the morning was to be sure and announce himself as "The boy, my lord."

But 12-year-old Tommy was easily rattled in the face of such grandeur, and the prelate's heavy manner and deep voice, moreover, had immensely impressed him. So, when to his somewhat timid knock there had come back a rumbling: "Who's there?" he could only gasp: "The Lord, my boy."

On the Conductor.

DR. NICHOLAS MURRAY BUTLER was talking, in the saloon of the Kaiser Wilhelm II, about American honesty.

"For all our muck-raking writers," he said, "I think that the American people are the most honest people in the world. Is an American ever subjected at home to the petty cheats and extortions to which he is subjected in Europe?"

Then, apropos of foreign honesty, Dr. Butler told a railroad story.

"On a foreign railroad," he said, "a commuter had a row with the conductor. At the end of the row the commuter turned to a friend and said:

"'Well, the P.D.Q. will never see another cent of my money after this.'

"The conductor, who was departing, looked back and snarled:

"'What'll you do? Walk?'

"'Oh, no,' said the commuter. 'I'll stop buying tickets and pay my fare to you.'"

The Three Beers.

"OSCAR HAMMERSTEIN," said an actress on the Cunard pier in New York, "entertained me at tea last week in his new operahouse office in London.

"The operahouse is in Kingsway. It's a wonderful place, all but the statues on the top. They're hideous, but, being heavily draped, they will be sure to please the Londoners.

"Mr. Hammerstein at tea talked about his successes and his failures—his eighty successes as an inventor of cigar-making machinery, and his 800 successes in opera.

"Then he mentioned his tremendous failure with his first operahouse fifteen years ago—how he devoted it to opera and ballet and it wouldn't go; how he then turned it into a theater, with Mrs. Bernard Beere as his star, and it still wouldn't go; and how at last he turned it into a music hall and made a fortune.

"'Yes,' said Mr. Hammerstein, with a chuckle, 'that was the record of that place—first, Meyerbeer; then Bernard Beere; then lager beer.'"

Wanted to Be More Earnest.

THE REV. SYLVESTER HORNE, the Liberal M.P. from London, was talking about religion at a dinner in New York.

"Too many of us in our religious observances," he said, "are like a little Tottenham Court Road girl.

"This little girl said one night to her new nurse:

"'Oh, must I sleep in the dark?'

"'Yes, miss,' the nurse answered.

"'Then wait a minute,' said the little girl. 'I'll get up and say my prayers more carefully.'"

Revised Version.

REPRESENTATIVE HENRY of Texas, in an eloquent and witty attack on international marriages, said the other day in Waco:

"The Honorable Maude Laclands, the little daughter of the Earl of Laclands and a Chicago pork queen, once asked her mother:

"'Mamma, how long does a honeymoon last?'

"Lady Laclands with a bitter smile made answer:

"'The honeymoon may be said to last, my dear, until your husband begins to pester you for money."

Johnson's Joke.

"I WAS TALKING to Jack Johnson at the Criterion bar in London about the authorities' refusal to let him fight Wells," said a sporting editor of Chicago.

"Jack blamed it all on 'Bishop' Meyer, as he calls the advertising divine who managed to stop the fight. He wasn't at all angry with Bishop Meyer, though. In fact, he cracked a joke about him.

"Flashing his golden smile upon me above a huge glass of stout, Jack said:

"'I can't blame Bishop Meyer. He's dreadfully opposed to fighting, you know. The fact is, he won't even read "Punch."'"

The House Beautiful—Its Flower Garden and Grounds.

GROWING SWEET PEAS.

SUGGESTIONS AS TO HOW TO PLANT THEM PROPERLY.

By Ernest Braunton.

THE VERY BEST of our sweet peas are produced during cool weather, for the plants do not thrive in a heated soil. Some growers plant in early October, for flower dealers like to have sweet peas during the holidays. Seeds may be planted any time now and will bring a longer period of bloom than those planted later. Early and deep planting is necessary if one is to have vigorous growth and luxuriant bloom. Frosts are not likely to seriously injure sweet peas in Southern California. Peas have fine, silky roots and need a deep, loose soil so that the trenches for seeds should be made a foot in depth, and no doubt deeper ones would prove an added benefit, for the full protection of the roots from heat and drought must be insured. Most of the failures in local gardens come from shallow planting. In addition to the necessities noted it must be kept ever in mind that peas are gross feeders and drinkers, and after vigorous growth has started too much plant food and water can hardly be given. When the young plants show a tendency to climb they should be given immediate support, and nothing answers the purpose better than the so-called mesh "chicken wire" of coarsest screen. To conclude, sweet peas need full sun, but cool feet; no sprinklings, but absolute drenchings of water; close picking of all blossoms to insure a long and bounteous season of bloom. He who follows this method of care and culture cannot fail to have good sweet peas.

ROYAL PALMS IN CUBA.

The Royal Palm of Cuba.

FOR MANY YEARS botanists believed the Royal palm of Cuba (Oreodoxa regia) to be identical with the one growing in the everglades of Florida. Now all are agreed that ours is a distinct species and it has also been placed in a different genus, being now known as Roystonia. With us the Royal palm does not seem to be as hardy as another species known as the Cabbage palm (O. oleracea,) also native to the West Indies.

The writer has not known of the Roystonia having been tried here, for it might prove hardier than the Oreodoxa, and if so it would prove a welcome addition to our local palm collections. A few years ago two plants of O. oleracea were planted a little above Fremont Gate in Elysian Park and withstood the first winter without harm. Whether or not they still live the writer knows not. It is probable that plants native to such humid climates as that of the Florida everglades and indeed the whole southeastern United States, will never thrive in our dry climate. The palmetto and many other plants native to the same area do not grow one-tenth as fast with us as they do in what we know as the extreme Southern States. It may be that in very warm spots close to the ocean such palms may be made to grow, but it is wearisome watching for development in our dry interior localities.

The Iris Family.

IT IS NOW TIME to consider iris, for a few should be found in every garden and nearly all do well in Southern California. No one without a specially-favored place and willing to give close attention to them should plant Japanese iris, for it is very exacting and requires more than ordinary garden care. The sorts that every one may and should grow are the German, English, and Spanish iris, of which the former are the best, so popular, indeed, that they have been called the "poor man's orchid." New sorts are constantly being introduced, and in very recent years we have had some splendid additions to this already attractive family—a great range in color and form.

The Violet in History.

THE VIOLET has been a favored flower for centuries, for over 500 years ago the poet John Fletcher wrote:

> "Violets plucked, the sweetest rain > Makes not fresh nor grow again," and not many years ago William Cullen Bryant sang sweetly of the yellow violet, a species of which grows in Southern California:

> "When beechen buds begin to swell,
> And woods the bluebirds' warble know,
> The yellow violet's modest bell
> Peeps from the last year's leaves below."

Those having a half-shady place should try growing a few of our native yellow violets (Viola pedunculata,) for it is a most lovely flower and thrives, under rather cool treatment, in nearly all parts of California. To the north of Los Angeles, even in the limits of the city, they may soon be found in plenty.

Double and Single Flowers.

IN AN ARTICLE upon "Abnormal Growths in Plants" read before the Horticultural Club of London, G. S. Saunders said: "One of the commonest of abnormalities is that of a double flower, where the cells which should have formed stamens form petals instead. The tendency of a flower to produce petals instead of stamens has been taken advantage of by florists, who have utilized it to breed the many charming double flowers that now grace our gardens. Notwithstanding the beauty of many charming double flowers that now grace our gardens. Notwithstanding the beauty of many double flowers, one is glad to find at the present time that there is a tendency for the popular taste to revert more to single blossoms than it has done for some years, for in doubling the individuality of form in the natural flower is completely lost."

It may be that in this writer's experience flowers have first lost their stamens, but with many of us all flowers, in doubling, first lose their pistils, the stamens remaining. In plant breeding the closest search is made in all common flowers to find rudimentary pistils that are sufficiently receptive to be able to set seeds. When such discoveries are made there is great rejoicing.

California Holly.

THE CHERISHED HOLLY of our eastern States, the botanist's Ilex opaca, whose bright, cherry berries and evergreen leafage are so familiar in our Christmas decorations, is not found on the Pacific Coast, but Californians possess a very pretty substitute in the shrub or small tree which the scientist knows as Heteromeles arbutifola—an evergreen of the rose family, bearing in winter beautiful panicles of bright red berries. It is locally called Christmas berry, redberry, and Toyon, besides California holly, the last name being perhaps due to the influence of the eastern tourist, who looks for holly at Christmas wherever he is, as an Englishman expects his bath. The shrub is quite common in the Coast mountains, and from November to February the hillsides where it is well established are showy spectacles, owing to the exceeding abundance of the fruit. On the island of Santa Catalina, about thirty miles from the mainland, a yellow-berried form is found, but sparingly.

Garden Planning.

TO MANY persons gardens are one and the same, regardless of the fact that the plan should be partly determined by the purpose, the location and the climate. A garden is, or should be, as individual as its owner. Truly, there are gardens and gardens. To make them all the same is as if a woman should purchase a gown without asking or caring whether it was designed for summer or winter wear, for housework use or to wear at a White House reception. She wants a dress, forsooth; in the same way some persons want a garden without in the least knowing what they want or intend it for.

A garden designed solely for one purpose is not entirely satisfactory if viewed from a different standpoint. Of course, any garden where the plants grow thriftily and enjoy themselves has a certain charm, whether it be really well arranged or not, but haphazard work never attains an ideal. If the would-be gardener does not know what she wants of her garden, how can she plan it? It is extremely difficult to hit a mark when one has none in view.

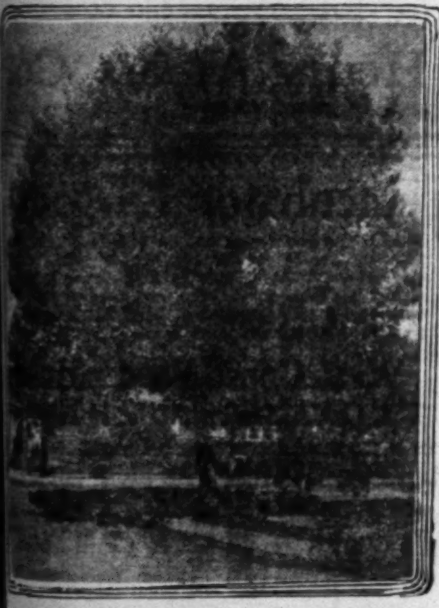
BOTANIC GARDENS.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA SUITED TO THEIR DEVELOPMENT.

BOTANIC GARDENS are unquestionably of great value to the plant fancier, both directly and indirectly; directly, through personal visits for the purpose of examining what is found growing there and indirectly through novelties introduced by plant dealers who first learn their worth by watching their growth and development in the trial grounds of the botanic garden.

In climates where plant growth is restricted to vegetation from the temperate zones only these gardens are far less interesting than those in tropic and semi-tropic climes, where plants from nearly all parts of the world find a congenial home. Largely because of Southern California being a land much favored by nature we may here assemble the vegetation, in part at least, of every known land, and very few classes of plants have been found that may not be grown in some part of our favored southland. Los Angeles could not provide herself with any greater attraction than an extensive botanic garden, for if well-equipped it would draw visitors from every country and prove of inestimable benefit to our own people.

In this country, however, botanic gardens have not proven of such great commercial benefit as those abroad, where both dealers and people in general have a higher appreciation of gardens and their plants. Writing on this point Prof. C. S. Sargent says: "In this country, however, commercial horticulture is slow to take advantage of its opportunities for its own improvement and that of the public. To illustrate this, I need only refer to the Arnold Arboretum. This is a museum of trees and shrubs and a station for increasing the knowledge of such plants, by study, experiment and explorations. It has now for many years been active in the botanical exploration of North America, and more recently it has worked in Japan, Corea, Manchuria, Eastern Siberia and Western China. It contains the largest collection of trees and shrubs in North America, and few European collections are richer. It is well known in Europe; the heads or the principal officers of some of the national gardens have found it worth their while to cross the Atlantic to visit it; it is in constant correspondence with the principal nurseries of Europe to which the Arboretum is greatly indebted. Every tree lover, professional or amateur, who comes to America turns his steps toward Forest Hills. To American commercial horticulture, the Arnold Arboretum, however, is hardly more than a name. Occasionally an American nurseryman passes an hour there, generally in the middle of a hot summer day, and then goes on his way. I do not believe there is a single one of them who knew the collection or its richness in commercial possibilities. What is true of American nurserymen is true of many American park superintendents, and of American landscape gardeners. This is a cause of general and national regret. The Arboretum fails in its duty and of its purpose, if it fails to make known to the country generally the value contained in its collection. This can only be done by nurserymen. A [illegible] taken up by the trade in the course of a few years [illegible] known to thousands of people in different parts of the country, who might never have the opportunity to [illegible] the Arboretum."



BLACK WATTLE SEVEN YEARS OLD.

Black Wattles for Street Planting.

ONE OF the really good street trees for all parts of California is the Black Wattle (Acacia decurrens.) This fern-leaved species should be sharply distinguished from the Blackwood (A. melanoxylon) which the unknowing still persist in calling the "Black Acacia," a name having no standing in the tree literature of this or any other country. But to leave the prod and return to the tree, the Black Wattle finds extensive use over a large range of country.

Prof. E. J. Wickson states that in Berkeley and thereabout it is one standing well toward the head of the list among street trees, and in a report on tree growth on the Berkeley hills in 1892 a university bulletin recites the fact that it proved the most drought-resistant of many trees planted on the hilltops. Six species of eucalypts planted at the same time and in the same plat perished during a series of dry years, while the Black Wattle survived. While the coldest weather in Berkeley differs but little in degree from that of Los Angeles, in other parts this tree has stood unharmed through some trying frosts.

The writer has planted many Black Wattles in street and garden and carefully noted their behavior, and is firmly of the opinion that all need root pruning except they grow in sandy or gravelly soil. In the writer's garden, in a made soil four feet deep, with perfect drainage and an abundance of plant food, the main roots spread out less than six inches beneath the surface and this was also true of the closely-allied species, A. mollissima and A. dealberta. In like soils their behavior is identical with that of the pepper tree. Heavy pruning of the roots should be accompanied by an equally heavy reduction of the top. In this way a deep-delving, resourceful set of roots is thrown out and a self-sustaining, well-shaped top built up. Treated in this way the Black Wattle has few equals for street alignment.

South Pasadena to the Fore.

ALL INTERESTED persons seem agreed that now is the proper time to set about the actual acquisition of the Arroyo Seco Park. Another annexation election is at hand, the result of which will doubtless add to Los Angeles all of the Arroyo Seco up to South Pasadena, and until Los Angeles leads the way the two Pasadenas can do but little. Anticipating Los Angeles' control of the problem, South Pasadena has set about getting control of all Arroyo Seco lands lying within that municipality. The South Pasadena Woman's Improvement Association held a meeting a week ago and at the close set actively to work to secure her part of this great park. Talent was on hand sufficient to move the most indifferent or apathetic. Mrs. Frank Cattern, president, opened the meeting and introduced Supervisor R. W. Pridham as chairman of the meeting. Then followed speeches by C. B. Daggett, Mrs. A. S. Lobingier, Park Commissioner Lippincott, closing with an illustrated talk by Landscape Engineer Cox, who showed lantern slide views of parks and boulevards in our own and foreign countries, holding up those of Los Angeles as an example where nature had done much and man but little. The audience was a very enthusiastic one, and no doubt desirable permanent results will be the final issue.

Good Roads and Streets.

TWENTY years ago there had been practically no concerted action looking to the improvement of the highways in this country. To the League of American Wheelmen belongs the credit of beginning an organized movement in favor of good roads. Backed up by its membership of over 100,000 bicycle riders it exerted an enormous influence, and only when people had ceased to be so enthusiastic over bicycling, and individual effort declined, did its influence wane. But although the bicycle riders are less strenuous in their efforts to secure good roads than they were a few years ago, the movement thus given birth has been taken care of by other interests, and at last the cause of good roads has come down as a heritage to the automobilist.

The matter of good roads has been as strong an element in the history of the development of the automobile as the automobile will be, and is in the history of road-making. "Man is a social being," as our schoolboy friends say in commencing their essays, and because of this fact he has ever tried to establish means of communication with his fellow-men. Not only does a man desire the pleasures of social intercourse with other men, but he also wants to exchange with them the various products of his handiwork. That is why we have roads; that is why we have railroads, steamships—automobiles.

Roads were made long before automobiles were dreamed of and when the problem of road navigation by motor-propelled vehicles began to be given the attention it deserved in this country, it was found that the condition of what we are pleased to call roads, made the solving of the problem most difficult. With Europeans this element did not enter so largely into the problem, for the reason that they had had good roads for hundreds of years. In this country it was different. Vast stretches of our so-called roads are more properly termed mud holes, swamps and quarries. The question to be answered was, "How shall we build a vehicle sufficiently strong to withstand the terrific strains to which it is subjected?

THE STRIPED RIVERS OF SOUTH AMERICA.

In his article in Harper's Magazine on his recent explorations of the great rivers of South America Caspar Whitney describes an interesting characteristic of these rivers.

"One of the phenomena of this land of waters," he says, "is the retention by each of its own color without diffusion to the very point of actual contact, even where the rivers differ vastly in volume. Black waters flow into white ones, and white ones empty into black ones, retaining their individuality up to the very edge, a visible line of demarcation—on one side white, on the other side black—unmingled and unexplained. Thus the puny black Atabapo joins the surging white Orinoco to no loss of integrity; the black Negro receives almost at right angles the odious white Casiquiare without contamination, and itself empties into the Amazon, not so much as tingeing the mud-colored waters of that mighty river. Humboldt reports on the lower Casiquiare, which I did not visit, a black and a white stream, both coming from the east, while of the rivers flowing in from the west, some are of white and some of black water. Of the number of small streams coming into the upper Casiquiare from the east, those I noted were olive. These colors, which among white waters range from the really white Branco through many yellowish mud shades, and of black waters from the greenish and bluish and deep brownish to the really deep, almost black, of the Negro, high up—are explained, the scientists maintain, by the character of the soil whence they take their source and through which they flow. Those rising among the decaying roots, leaves, and vegetable matter of the forests are the black, and the white those that have their source and course in the alluvial and clayey soils. Yet the Orinoco has its source in the heart of the mountain forest, and flows under their very shadow on the north until it sends off the pest-laden Casiquiare to the south."

[Tit-Bits:] When Christine Nilsson made her concert tour in the United States in 1884 Signor Brignoli sang with her. He caused much merriment when he came forward in a Missouri town to apologize for Nilsson's indisposition.

"Madame Nilsson ees a leetle horse," he said.

Noticing a ripple of laughter among the audience, he repeated the statement that Nilsson "was a leetle horse, a leetle horse, a little colt."

Whereupon a facetious occupant of the gallery brought down the house by remarking:

"Well, then, why don't you trot her out?"

Practical Poultry Culture in the Southwest.

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF STANDARD-BRED POULTRY AND THE PEOPLE WHO GROW IT.

WELL FED IS WELL BRED.

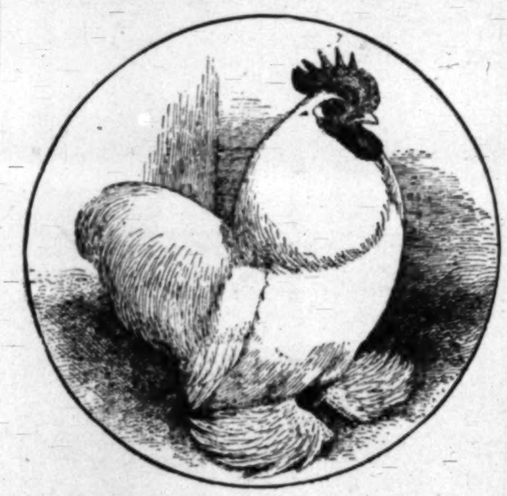
NUTRITIVE ELEMENTS IN PROPER PROPORTIONS ARE ESSENTIAL.

By Henry W. Kruckeberg.

NOTE—Short articles of a practical nature are cordially solicited from breeders and fanciers, relating their experiences with poultry, giving their successes as well as failures. The writer will be glad, in so far as lies in his power, to answer inquiries of public interest bearing on any phase of an enlightened poultry culture, such as feeding and management, disease and its prevention, market conditions, fancy points, etc. The co-operation of utility breeders and fanciers is cordially solicited, to the end that the best thought and practice in an enlightened poultry culture may find a healthy expression in these columns.

IT WOULD SEEM that with all the preparatory foods now on the market it would almost be impossible to "go wrong" on the matter of proper foods and feeding; yet in spite of these, there are many flocks which fail of good results because not properly fed and managed. It is not the number of chicks that one gets out of the shell that counts, but the number that one grows to maturity. And this loss by death is largely a matter of improper feeding and handling. For good stock should perpetuate itself, and if intelligently fed must give results. Often bad feeling is due to a desire to economize by the utilization of restaurant and hotel kitchen waste, and cheap grains, all of which are more or less tainted. It is always hazardous to use food from these sources. Again, indiscriminate feeding is bad. In the face of these facts it seems to us that the standard brands of preparatory foods have a reason for their present use.

Prepared chick, egg and fattening foods have, during the past ten years, made a place for themselves. The manufacturers have, by years of experience, worked out the problem of a balanced ration for different purposes, with the result that their product gives results with but little or no waste. All the nutritive elements are furnished in about the right proportions, hence fowls do not overload on one element in order to satisfy their natural cravings for another. And in the nature of things it cannot well be otherwise, for the success of these feeds depends wholly on the results achieved by their use. If they do not "come through" the manufacturers will simply be forced out of business. That poultrymen appreciate this is clearly shown by the constant widening use of prepared poultry foods the world over. It is more economical to use the knowledge of those understanding the chemistry of foods and get the balanced ration all prepared in one sack, than it is to acquire this information and, once learned, do your own mixing. Time and effort required to do this may more profitably be spent in giving the birds intensive culture, and so augment size of carcass and quantity and quality of hen fruit.



WHITE COCHIN BANTAM COCK.

The White Cochin Bantam.

In California the White Cochin bantam is not so popular as the Buffs or Blacks. In spite of that, however, it is a handsome bird when bred at its best, and to one partial to a white plumage, there is nothing superior to a White Cochin bantam. The standard calls for pure white throughout, a consideration not always possible in every bird of a flock, as there is a tendency to throw creamy and straw-colored feathers. Comb must be single and even; beak yellow; eyes bay; earlobes and wattles bright red; hackle feathers and saddle abundant; tail carried horizontally; shanks and toes yellow or white; legs and feet heavily feathered. All the Cochin bantams are good layers, setters and mothers. Many breeders use them for hatching out and brooding other varieties of bantams.

The Belgian Breeds.

If we are to believe the current reports in the English and American poultry papers, there is a strong attraction just at present for the Belgian breeds, such as the Compines, Flemish, Malines, etc., due, it is said, to the demonstrated economic values in this class. The livestock industry has long been recognized in Belgium, from which some of the finest cattle and horses are imported, as of first importance. The farming classes there are essentially a practical people who would be in the game for utility results rather than beauty of plumage. In this country quite a number of poultry breeders have taken up these breeds, which all seem to possess characteristics suggestive of Leghorns and Minorcas, though the color scheme is individual and different from all other breeds. We believe they merit attention from the poultrymen in this State, because the birds are active, good foragers, and seemingly adapted to arid conditions.

Are Specialty Clubs On the Wane?

The objects and aims of the average specialty club is to "boom" its particular breed and variety. This is done in various ways; by advertising, by the gratuitous distribution of literature treating of its virtues and advantages, by offering special premiums on the breed and variety, and by personal salesmanship. All of these promotion schemes cost money, and there be those among the champions who say that the game isn't worth the powder; that the tangible returns have on the whole been inadequate. Is this the reason why some of these specialty clubs are in a state of inocuous desuetude?

Caught on the Wing.

The rainy season is again with us, and of course your house is damp-proof and free from draughts.

Get the incubator out and cleaned up; then test it out to learn if it is free from faults; the hatching season will follow the show campaign which is just ahead of us.

Shape the turkeys up right smart. Thanksgiving dinners are due within less than thirty days.

The cool weather calls for an increase of corn in the daily rations.

April and May pullets should now be showing symptoms of laying; if not there is something wrong with your management.

If living on a main-traveled road, and you have hen fruit to offer, put up a sign "Strictly Fresh Eggs For Sale." Make it conspicuous and you will be surprised at results.

It is said that twenty-five pairs of pigeons of vigorous strain will produce 400 squabs annually. Yes, if well managed and intelligently fed.

It is claimed that the swiftest bird of the air is the swallow; nevertheless, there are cases where the Homer pigeon has a mile a minute to its credit.

Never rush in among your hens; it makes them "scary" and nervous, a condition wholly inimical to egg production.

Avoid the mongrel as you would the itch; the pure-bred costs no more for feed and care, and possesses a value peculiarly its own.

Never make any addition to your flock without first disinfecting for lice and mites. Of course your new birds may be clean, but you cannot afford to "take a chance."

First secure good stock, and then give good feed and care. With such a start success is quite sure to be your reward.

Nearly all the state agricultural colleges give a course in poultry culture, particulars of which may be secured on application. If in California write to E. J. Wickson, State Agricultural College, Berkeley, Cal.

Do not forget that your local poultry show needs and deserves your support. Make an entry in keeping with the quality and numbers of your birds, and "boost" for it all you can.

This is certainly going some: It is said that Greater London, with its 7,000,000 population, consumes annually about 900,000,000 eggs, and about 7,000,000 head of fowl. The principale source of foreign supply is Russia.

Of the white feathered ducks in England the Aylesbury has first choice with the White Peking a close second. In America the case is just the reverse. Both are large framed-birds which fatten up well.

A Case of Favus.

J. M. writes that his birds two months and over of age are growing bald-headed, are pale about the eyes and beak. He can find no trace of lice nor mites; and that otherwise the birds appear healthy.

This is a case of what is commonly known as "baldness," "white comb," etc., but in scientific jargon is recognized as favus, caused by a fungous which also attacks dogs, cats and rabbits. It is a disease of the skin which in birds generally commences upon the comb, or other fleshy parts of the head and gradually extends over the body. At first it appears in small dull spots, from the size of a pinhead to that of a silver dime, until all the affected parts are covered. At first the general health is not affected, but after the disease gains a foothold the bird manifests weakness, loses flesh, and falls into a decline. Favus is contagious, hence ailing birds should be isolated. Either tar and sulphur or equal parts of lard and sulphur will kill the spores, but the affected parts should first be bathed in vinegar to loosen up crusted skin. Use rubber gloves in handling the birds, and be sure that hands and face are free from skin cuts or bruises which the spores might reach. Houses and yards should be disinfected with a solution of limewash and carbolic acid. As has been frequently remarked, it is often economy to send sick chickens to the block. A virulent case of favus would certainly give us that tired feeling we read about, which might induce us to kill the ailing ones, disinfect the premises, and so try and save the remaining healthy birds of the flock.

The Difference Between.

CALL AGAIN JOHNSON MEETS WITH A GREAT TEMPTATION.

From M. A. P.

TO EVERY cheeky office boy in Fleet street he was known as "Call Again Johnson."

Among the underlings of the region that breathes newspapers, as Oxford street breathes drapery, the tall, stooping figure, the thin face, with its dreamy light blue eyes, had become a familiar sight. The men who sat in the rooms above did not know him so well, for, after one or two futile interviews, the editorial dictum was always "Call again."

Johnson was not his real name. It would be hardly fair to give him away to that extent. Besides, Johnson was as good a name as any other. He was a hack journalist, and, as such, about the greatest failure Fleet street ever produced.

Fate obviously intended him for anything but a "hack." A writer of poetic rhapsodies or gossamer fairy stories, even a novelist of the most asthetic type; but a hack journalist—never.

To start with, he had absolutely no bump of suitability. And that is the be-all and end-all of most members of his profession.

It was his extraordinary lack of the sense of fitness of things that made him decide to invade Fleet street, when an earthquake in his family fortunes made work imperative, two years ago.

If the Oxford undergraduate had possessed the bump of suitability, he would have sold up the remaining family possessions—which he did!—collected some decent clothes, and gone for an extended round of house-party visits.

At that time, while his friends were many and his responsibilities few, he could have done it with success. Drifting from house to house, well dressed, gay, and a little peculiar, he would have sought work, without appearing to need it.

That is a tremendous secret in this heedless world. Work always comes to those who apparently pass it by; but when a man seeks it, with hands obviously outstretched, it is always somebody else who gets it.

Among his father's wealthy friends, with a few judicious hints and ostensible prosperity to back him up, he would have secured some delightful secretaryship within six months. And the end of his struggles would have been a happy marriage with some charming girl who was not quite a pauper.

But such a course never occurred to him, just as the possibility of his father's ruin had never been whispered in the course of a luxurious childhood. In his solitary year at Oxford he made innumerable friends. Quiet, unusual men often do; and besides—he was so rich.

Then came his first long vacation, and one nightmarish week the news of his father's failure and death. It was a good thing he was the sole surviving member of the family, so he thought at the time. After the crash he found himself with about £200—and the world before him, in which to earn a living without a trade. And, like the dreamer he was, he took the wrong road at the start.

"I will be a worker!" he decided courageously, and packed some Oxford manuscripts. "Fleet street—that's where I'll go. Some rooms to live in, some paper to write on, and a fortune in the future."

With his £200 in a canvas bag—another idiosyncrasy—he sought these rooms—two in number, and bought some paper. In brief, he became a hack journalist.

The house parties were forgotten; the charming girls who used to laugh at his lazy witticisms, the jolly men who used to drink his wine passed out of his life like shadows. For a time, in the fever of composition, he forgot they had ever formed a very vital part of his existence. And they, for their part, forgot him. People are like that.

Then things began to hang fire. Editors were strangely reluctant to accept his productions. The fact that the director of a comic weekly was justified in refusing a treatise on the habits of butterflies never occurred to him. He took it as a serious rebuff, and never looked in the right place to correct it. Finally, he thought he would look up a few friends. That was the time when his dreamy eyes first saw clearly some of the degradation of poverty in the eyes of those who have banking accounts.

Though his father had had no connection with journalism, his son had frequently met, dined, and danced with influential newspaper directors, their sons, and their daughters. He sought them out, sending up his card jauntily. They saw him, of course—"poor chap—he's gone smash. What a pity! Yes, show him up." None of them realized how serious things were. When he asked for regular work they almost laughed at him—he was still well dressed in those first few months, and his boyish face was the shape God meant it to be. They chose to imagine that the smash could not have been so bad as all that. When the son of a practical millionaire comes and begs for work at £2 a week it is hard to credit his story. "My dear fellow," they said, "don't you bother about things. If you want to see your little thing in print—oh, we all like that, I know—I'll give you an introduction to some of my editors with pleasure. . . . Come and dine at the Savoy tomorrow."

He didn't dine. He had not got to that yet. The introductions were duly forthcoming; and, in the case of his fantastical stories, his work was accepted. But when those editors asked him for more, the stuff he sent in unblushingly met with instant rejection. It was always the essence of unsuitability. And some of the long-suffering paper producers marveled that their chief should have troubled to send along such a hopeless contributor—until they learned who his father had been.

Soon after that he changed his name. His old friends were of no use; and it was too late for the house-party business now, had it even occurred to him. He had chosen a new life and he meant to succeed at it, sooner or later. It never seemed to strike him that he had made a mistake. But, in the meantime, the sooner he severed all connection with past days the better. So he had 100 cards engraved with his new name, moved into one room, gave up lunch as an unnecessary meal, and started the bombardment of Fleet street.

On a sheet of foolscap he wrote a list of ideas, for stories and articles—his memory was never very good. Armed with this, he ascended stairs innumerable, and asked for the editor. He came as a stranger to them all; and never reminded some of them that he had been introduced by the men in command, a few months ago. In the evenings and at such times that he was not marching along scorching, or soaking pavements, he wrote stories.

And some of them were very, very good. There was an odd, eerie vein of fancy in the man's nature that at times he reproduced with delightful results. He would have made a name undoubtedly, if he had once found his proper market. But he always despatched these gossamer tales to some deadly serious magazine; or when he succeeded in placing one, followed it up by something so hopelessly commonplace, that editors despaired.

As to his articles—they were impossible. "Call Again Johnson" became his nickname, as editors found it was useless to waste even five minutes on him. Most office boys would merely march out of sight and return with the bitterly familiar formula, without troubling to ask.

"Er—thanks." He always answered them courteously, and acquired a trick of screwing up his light blue eyes, perhaps to hide the sudden mist that dimmed them.

"All right, I'll come round another day." Some of the urchins laughed at him, others, in their hard little hearts, were vaguely sorry for him. Some of them watched his shoulders grow rounder, and his cheeks thinner during eighteen long months, and wondered why?

And now the two years had come to an end, also every half-penny of the £200. He possessed one decent suit, boots in sad need of repair, and a very seedy hat. His other possessions had gone to buy dinners. He owed his landlady several weeks' rent; and, in consequence, his breakfast had degenerated from coffee, toast, and marmalade, to weak tea, and a slice of stale bread and butter. He was learning in a hard hungry school that what a man can't pay for he can't expect to receive.

The landlady in question was not really a bad creature; and as she looked, furtively, at his sunken cheeks and remembered the gay young fellow who had engaged two rooms two years ago, she bit her thin lips. Those gray hollows between cheekbone and chin came from one cause—hunger, as she knew too well.

One day in the late autumn, "Call Again Johnson" walked slowly out of a newspaper office, pushing a sheet of foolscap paper back into his pocket. He dragged his feet wearily, stooping a great deal; his head thrust forward on his chest. His right hand crept into his trouser pocket, and jingled the three pennies that represented his sole fortune.

Threepence—and no work, or prospect of any.

Breakfast seemed such ages ago, and he wondered, dully, how much dinner threepence would buy. And, then, there was tomorrow——

As he walked, subconsciously, toward his lonely room, he tried to remember what money was owing to him. Only a single check—long delayed—for a magazine story. God only knew when it would come! He had given up wasting his money on buying monthly magazines to hunt for his work. Only that check to come—and a few stories still "out," which might with any luck, be accepted. But, even then, he had to live and eat at the moment, and every pawnable possession had gone long ago.

Suddenly he paused before the windows of an emigration office, staring at the pictures of British Columbia and Canada. He remembered, with a rush of feeling, that he had written in desperation to a one-time friend who was now in Columbia, doing well, asking if there was any sort of opening for a man like himself. That was months ago—and there had been no answer.

His feet ached, his head ached, his heart ached worst of all, as he opened the door of his tiny room, and staggered in. And there on the table lay a letter.

Falling forward, his shaking hands opened the flimsy envelope, and out fell the check for his story—£6—six solid pounds!

"Call Again Johnson" dropped weakly into a chair, his hands, holding the check, extended across the table. Six pounds—six pounds! That meant dinner, today and tomorrow. And his rent paid; and——

He would go out to dinner at once! He was so hungry, so frightfully hungry; and everything in his head was going round and round.

Six pounds—and Columbia or Canada—— And that editor had said, would he call again? Ah! but they all said that now. Still, he would go out to dinner—and change that check.

Six pounds! A clock struck harshly. Six o'clock! He had been hours walking home. Hours. Six o'clock—and all the banks were shut! With a sudden groan his head dropped forward, his hands beating the table feebly. No dinner, after all! Nothing, nothing, but a slip of paper worth £6!

Who would trust him—lend him money on the strength of it? His landlady—a tradesman? He knew both were hopeless. There was the price of a dinner, and he would make a great effort to go out and get one. But he couldn't pay with a check.

Weakly, he turned the slip of paper over. Six pounds! Why wasn't it sixty? Sixty pounds!

On his half-crazy brain the thought burned itself like a red-hot coal. Six pounds. Sixty pounds! What a little difference to speak, to write. And what a world of difference between.

Six pounds—with two small letters added to the word six, and one small figure placed after the figure six, it would be sixty pounds—for him! So easy; so very, very easy. Just two strokes with that pen, lying under his fingers; his signature on the back; out to the bank in the morning; and off to Columbia, before any one had time to find out.

What a splendid idea!

Sixty pounds—a fortune to him. How could they find out in time to arrest him? How could they?

He picked up the pen, his other hand pressed against his aching forehead, and began to write. Six pounds—a minute more. . . Sixty pounds!

Then something snapped in his tortured, starved brain. What had he done? God! What had he done. There, on the table, under his trembling hand lay a check, the back upward; and on the back, his signature. A check, worth £6, that he had altered to represent sixty pounds.

Like a frozen image he sat staring, horrified, at that slip of paper, from which his own name stared back, in firm, black outlines. What was he? A forger—a felon. By his own deed he had ruined himself. For the check was worthless now.

He could still realize that, though sense was rapidly leaving him. He could not, dared not present it—they would know at once. No explanation was possible, and he would be arrested. No dinner after all—no dinner; and that hunger pain was growing like some huge, frantic beast that seemed to devour him.

By a madman's act he had robbed himself, in his frenzy, of £6 that was legitimately his—for the sake of £60—that would have been stolen.

Still he glared, with glazing, awful eyes at that piece of paper, which his right hand pressed tightly to the table. He dared not lift it up; he dared not look at the other side—to see the marks that meant a felony, that made him a forger. He had got low enough, he knew; but not so low as that—surely not so low as that?

With one mighty effort, holding his breath, he lifted his right hand from the check. It dropped, nerveless, on the table. He couldn't; he couldn't——

The little room grew dark, and still he sat there, numb with misery and terror; that gnawing hunger nearly paralyzing him.

One more effort. His left hand crept along, inch by inch, until two thin fingers touched the edge of the check. It rustled. Crying out, he almost sprang to his feet; only to drop back from very weakness.

It was done. At last, it was done. With a lifetime's agony drawn into a few minutes he had shut his eyes, and reversed the check. And now he opened them; to look at it. . . .

There on the table lay an untouched check for £6! Just as it had dropped from the envelope, with only his signature added to the back. And under it was a letter that he had not seen; a letter that bore the postmark of a town in British Columbia.

It was the reply for which he had waited, in forgetfulness, for months.

And it contained the answer of his dreams. . . .

Call Again Johnson picked up the letter and the check, and raised them blindly to his lips. Then, with his head pillowed on his outstretched arms, lay still, sobbing like a child.

ORIGINAL OF "MRS. JARLEY'S WAX WORKS."

[Strand:] There stood, until some months ago in High Holborn, two doors away from Museum street, and facing the end of Drury Lane, an old building which housed what was probably the original of Mrs. Jarley's Wax Works. It was once upon a time a popular exhibition known as Ferguson's Wax Works, founded by that gentleman in 1832 or 1833. In its extensive rooms and "promenade" were to be seen the characters King George III, Mr. Grimaldi, as clown, Mary, Queen of Scots, and that "Unfortunate Maid of Honor in the time of Queen Elizabeth who died from pricking her finger in consequence of working upon a Sunday" (Lady Anne Wilson.)

All these are enumerated in Mr. Ferguson's Catalogue (1840,) which I have in my collection, the other personages mentioned in the "Old Curiosity Shop" having doubtless been changed into other celebrities, in accordance with the amiable custom of wax-work proprietors.

An old gentleman, who was for many years connected with the show, told me that their show woman, Mrs. Jarvis (not Mrs. Harris) was the very "moral" of Mrs. Jarley, and that she told him that Mr. Dickens was a frequent visitor and often spoke with her. Ferguson's would be on Dickens's road to work either at the Sun, or Mirror of Parliament, or Morning Chronicle newspapers, as the high road then ran down High Holburn, through Broad street and High street, Bloomsbury, to Oxford street. New Oxford street was not made until 1849.

Farming in California—The Land and Its Products.

CONDUCTED BY J. W. JEFFREY, FORMER STATE COMMISSIONER OF HORTICULTURE.

FIELD NOTES.

A Layman's Experiments.

THERE has been an increasing tendency of late years toward semi-technical experimentation on the part of the practical orchardist. This tendency should be encouraged, as it takes nothing from our interest in purely scientific work and may add to our knowledge of good horticultural practice.

J. R. Hodges of Covina has had certain investigations under way for some time in this line that he has kindly described to me. His experiments may be suggestive to others, and I submit them with this idea in view.

1. To determine approximately the amount of water required by a tree, say twenty years old, in order to maintain it in a healthy condition.

2. To determine a system of fertilizing that could be permanently maintained without detriment to the soil or tree.

3. To institute a system of maintenance that would introduce and continue a regular supply of soil bacteria under the surface of the ground.

4. To apply cultural conditions that would not interfere with the fibrous root growth, assuming that the top soil was always the most fertile if it carried a fair degree of moisture so as to maintain bacteria activity.

5. To introduce a system of irrigation that would maintain a more regular supply of moisture in the ground, and particularly on the surface, and that would not wash the land from the upper to the lower side of the field, leaving the land too dry and too wet alternating.

6. To introduce a system of fertilizing that would be economical in proportion to the fruit produced.

7. To determine in building up an old neglected tree whether it would be better to cut the tree down to a stump and grow new wood altogether, or leave the old wood and depending upon building from the same.

8. To determine also what would be the effect on the fruit and the bearing qualities of the tree in keeping up a supply of moisture and fertilizer sufficient to keep up a continuous and regular flow of sap sufficient to maintain the tree in a growing condition at all time during suitable weather.

9. To determine the importance of maintaining a relatively high percentage of humus in the various stages and in such a way that the fibrous roots would have free access to it without mechanical interference.

EXPERIMENTAL METHODS.

Mr. Hodges bought a city lot with a few twenty-year-old Washington navel trees and one lemon. He cut down all but six of the trees, and with the lemon they were the trees used in the experiments covering the nine points. The trees had been neglected for three years prior to the purchase, had not been irrigated during that time, and were entirely devoid of foliage. Two of them were cut down, leaving stumps eighteen inches in height, leaving the navel stub about one foot in height from which to allow suckers to grow. The other four trees were not disturbed. Treatment was begun on the 15th day of last January. Mr. Hodges' first work was to build a permanent basin around each tree about four inches high, so shaping the basins that when irrigated, the water would not get closer than eighteen inches from the trunk. Each basin was made sixteen feet in diameter, a dam run across the center of each to adapt the water level perfectly to the contour of the land and maintain an even wetting. The trees were twenty-two feet apart, which left the basin margins six feet from each other. A coating of barnyard manure two inches thick was applied to each circle spreading evenly, care being taken not to disturb the ground within the circles in any way. Then followed 80 cubic feet of water to each tree, which was continued every fourteen days from January to September. The mulching was left undisturbed and no attention paid to the land outside the basins except to pull up the weeds. It required 500 pounds of manure, and the mulch is holding out well at this time.

In the first growth on the unpruned trees the leaves were puny, about a half-inch in diameter. The second growth about the average size and the third above the average.

RESULTS.

1. It will take slightly in excess of an inch of water to five acres to give the trees the required moisture.

2. Present appearances indicate that the system might be maintained without injury to the soil, but with positive benefit to both trees and soil.

3. About two inches of barnyard manure is sufficient for a good mulch without excluding the air and to allow a slow decomposition without bacterial ferment.

4. Without disturbing the fibrous roots with cultivation they are free to make their regular growth. Many of them have grown six inches long during the season, while on the trees not so irrigated in many places near the tree are dead.

5. Each tree received about 50 cents' worth of barnyard manure. To maintain the mulch for another year will require about half as much. The process will be followed with small quantities of commercial fertilizer.

6. In that soil thirty to forty days is too long a period to let the soil go without water. The land that has been kept bare for years does not hold the moisture. The washings from the upper to the lower side in old orchards is serious and needs correction. A permanent basin would prevent this.

7. Old trees can be restored even after they appear to be gone.

8. Probably puffy fruit could be decreased by keeping the ground continually moist.

9. Next year will show to what extent the plan is raising the permanent humus supply. The soil there is generally deficient in humus and the process of cultivation has been very wasteful in that respect.

American Date Growing.

THE FIRST sale of a date grove in the New World was recently witnessed at Mecca, in Riverside county, Bernard G. Johnson disposing of his land with the 640 date trees thereon, the consideration being $15,000. This is a novelty and will convey to distant States a new idea and increased respect for California as a producer of tropical fruits. A company will develop the business of date growing, with the Johnson grove as a nucleus, and try to bear out commercially what has been demonstrated as a horticultural fact that dates can be produced upon the desert lands in the Colorado River delta.

Mr. Johnson has been closely connected with the importation of date offshoots for several years. In a conversation with him a few days ago he stated that the importation of offshoots from Africa had been much greater than the public was aware of. At Mecca there are forty-five acres of imported date plants, and twenty acres in Imperial county. Mecca and vicinity has seventy-five acres of seedling dates also and Imperial about ten, totalling 150 acres in date groves in the Colorado districts. Arizona is also experimenting in date production, being the first district from which the fruit has been sold in quantities. Mr. Johnson is very familiar with the Algerian date farms. He finds that trees six years old grown at Mecca are as large as trees ten years old in Northern Africa. Commercial date production has not been demonstrated yet in the State, but it is on its way.

Timely Organization.

THE CALIFORNIA ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN is now fully organized and its officials are casting the programme for the first annual meeting. I see some live nurserymen at the head of this enterprise, and it is time the more enterprising tree growers were gathering up the loose ends of the business and tightening up the strings all along the line. It is a fact that no calling suffers so acutely from the dishonesty and inefficiency of a portion of its membership. I have heard the whole contingency berated because one of the cult had sold a bill of mislabeled trees, and well may the public complain of a careless or dishonest act upon the part of nurserymen that brings suffering to a whole generation.

The shibboleth of the new association will be fair treatment of the public and a square deal from the people in return. There is to be no secret understanding or selfish work if this institution carries out its aims. Its meetings will be public and its deliberations in recognition that the people's interests must be served properly as a business proposition. If this plan is carried out, much will be done toward the removal of suspicion upon the part of tree buyers. I once undertook to defend the nurserymen of this State at a fruit growers convention. In this defense I stated that no other State could show as great a proportional acreage of orchard trees true to name as can be seen in California. A grower was present who had been bilked in varieties, and he attacked my statements with such spirit that to one not knowing the facts it would appear that there was not an honest nurseryman on the face of the earth. Good trees true to name is a vital subject in California. Competition in fruit growing is becoming a greater issue each year, and future development depends more than ever before upon the quality of the new orchard plantings. Nothing but the best can hope to succeed. Consequently our people will view with satisfaction the present movement of the nurserymen of the State designed to weed out inefficiency and promote the welfare of both planter and propagator. I am now a full-fledged member of the new association, qualifying by crawling along nursery rows for ten years in old Illinois, and paying the annual fee.

Nut Prices.

CALIFORNIA almonds are selling freely and well this season, even before the crop had been fairly harvested. The good news follows that the walnut growers are receiving good prices also. These facts will help along with the deciduous fruits that have been profitable and the satisfactory returns for citrus, making the season just closing very satisfactory upon the average. The year has been marked with both high returns and absolutely disastrous results. As the season's grape business is closing table grapes have become profitable. However, the rain ruined a large proportion of the crop. Hundreds of cars sold in the height of the season, and before the rains occurred, at ruinous prices.

Pear Trust.

THE INHIBITION of the alligator pear has brought about a peculiar state of affairs at Honolulu. Since the quarantine has been placed upon Hawaiian fruit by the California authorities a "pear trust" has been formed by the Chinese dealers at Honolulu. Pears were plentiful on the stands there, but old prices were maintained through an understanding between the celestials and the fruit is literally rotting at every fruit stand, the hucksters demanding about $1.50 a dozen there and finding no takers. The local epicures expected the pears to sell at reasonable prices as soon as the California quarantine went into effect. They were grievously disappointed through the action of the "trust."

Agricultural Genetics.

JAMES J. HILL has not sent out an alarm lately concerning the starvation of the human race. Whether his views upon soil exhaustion are justified or not he has drawn special attention to a subject that is receiving increased attention. Imagine the deficiency in the corn crop of this year were we dependent altogether upon the conditions prevailing thirty years ago in the production of this grain. During the few last decades the area of good grain land has measurably decreased. Land once teeming with native productiveness has become exhausted and princely estates once producing profitable crops have been abandoned, largely through exhaustion of humus and the consequent physical deterioration of the soil.

But there is a compensation. Land still in good condition has been made to increase its products through seed selection alone. There are phenomena of heredity in grain seed and they are being studied and utilized as never before. In fact there are elements and forces concerned with plant eugenics never suspected prior to the last few years. We cannot determine the limitations of this progress, whether it will keep pace with the natural exhaustion of the productiveness of the land. Probably it will not. But natural exhaustion, on the other hand is being checked by better methods of treatment, salvage of manures, corn crops, rotation of crops and better physical cultivation. It exhausts the soil as much to grow a hill of old-time corn as it does to produce a hill of the improved dents. The percentage of food cannot be compared. The farm is no longer to be treated as a mine from which treasure may be drawn without replenishing. And the farmers are coming to understand what kind of keys they must use to get at the treasure without robbing the bank. The breeders of agricultural seed are the farmers' greatest assistants.

Gardening in California—Flower and Vegetable.

Vegetable Marketing.

RAISING vegetables or fruit for market is a different proposition than raising them for home use only. By market we mean placing produce on the public market or among the commission men, or shipping to the eastern markets. After our vegetables or fruits have reached maturity our troubles have just begun. Forty years ago wheat and cotton were about the only products of the farm that were shipped any great distance. Now vegetables and fruits of all kinds as well as grains are shipped to points across this continent and to foreign countries. The business has become so vast, especially here on the Pacific Coast, that to handle the shipping business it requires men who are expert in that line. To get the best prices and hold the trade, it is absolutely necessary that the box or crate be neat and substantial, and, most important of all, that nothing but a perfect article be packed therein. This all requires more expert help or rather management. With eastern carload shipments, organization of some kind is the only method, and under the management of some one capable of handling any large business. Coming down to the man who sells in the local markets, we find that to get best prices each individual must have a certain amount of salesmanship. Here a good article and a neat package counts, too, but a good deal depends on the natural or cultivated faculty of selling goods. Many times the writer has seen individuals in Los Angeles public market with loads of identically the same fruit, or perhaps a load of melons, where one would get 10 to 20 per cent. more for his load than the other. Some seem to have an intuition as to the condition of the market. A sort of feeling as to whether to sell early at any old price or hang on and get a good price. These conditions prevail in all markets. At times the buyers do not seem to care whether they buy or not. To judge of these conditions is necessary to sell successfully. In shipping to local commission men or dealers to the best advantage it requires a certain amount of tact besides business sagacity. Oftentimes a commission man will make better returns to a man whom he knows to be a good business man than to one whom he knows or thinks is an "easy mark." Therefore, we say, to be successful in raising anything for market, one must have a head for business. The time was when it was thought that any one could succeed at farming. Now it is known that to be successful one must have a well-balanced mind to grasp the scientific and economic details of the business.—[G. H. [illegible] in Rural Press.

Strawberries.

STRAWBERRIES can be planted any time from now until spring in most localities. It is not too early to begin operations. If the ground could be plowed now and cross-plowed again before planting it will pay, as every foot of soil should be turned over. In fact, the ground should be fitted up as for an onion bed. After the second plowing cultivate and harrow thoroughly until the soil is well packed, then go over it with a float or drag and mark out. Of course where irrigation is practiced it will be necessary to level the ground which should be done immediately after plowing the first time. Where the soil is a sandy loam and hand cultivation can be done we advise making the rows eighteen inches apart and planting one foot apart in the row. While it takes a few more plants planted thus the returns will [illegible] pay for the extra cost. Planted at this distance will require about 25,000 plants per acre. Where plants are put in two feet apart to grow into what is called a mottled row the rows should be two and one-half feet apart. Planted at this distance it will take about 12,000 per acre, making the first cost of the plants about double where the rows are eighteen inches apart. However, the first year the extra berries will more than pay the extra first cost. The second year where the full stand was planted a full crop will be harvested. Where planted close, all runners should be kept off and the growth will center in the one plant, making a strong individual plant. In good soil properly cared for, the second year's crop from a full stand should return [illegible] of the three-quarter-pound baskets per acre and more. Where planted and allowed to run, the crop tne second year will, of necessity, be from either the young plants grown the year before or from the mother plants, which are bound to be more or less exhausted from bearing a crop of plants, and 10,000 baskets would be a big crop to expect the second year. So that for the best and quickest returns plant a full stand of plants at the start. Where soil is heavy and horse cultivation is to be used, it will be necessary to make the rows [illegible] feet apart. In this case furrow out the ground before planting and plant on the ridges. Here again if one wish to plant a full stand plant in double rows on each side of the ridge. Planted this way it will take about 25,000 per acre as in close planting.—[Town and Country Journal.

Salad Plants.

Very many cultivate nothing but lettuce as a salad plant. There are so many plants that are now available for this purpose that a list and description of them may be of interest.

Lettuce, chicory and endive are probably the most commonly used by our French connoisseurs as plants to be used straight or in mixture with lettuce in salads. Endive is as easily growns as lettuce, but chicory requires more care, to have the finest flavor. Not long ago, in my travels, a Frenchman who caters to high-class French family trade showed me how he grew this delicately-flavored plant to perfection. He sowed his seed in a seed bed, and when plants were quite large and strong he transplanted them into beds about four feet wide, with walks raised two or three inches to allow good irrigation. Over these beds he spread coarse straw or hay about three inches deep. This mulch was laid loosely over the plants, and the plants were allowed to make their growth underneath the straw. This method causes the plants to "bleach," and when cut they look a little like blanched celery.

Another method used by some growers is: As soon as large, healthy plants are obtainable, the "parsnip-like" roots may be lifted and transplanted into deep packing boxes. The boxes are, say, two feet deep, with six or eight inches of soil filled in and well settled. These boxes are covered with cloth or burlap and kept well watered. This process blanches the leaves in fine shape. Two or three boxes of one yard square surface will supply a family through the season with the most delicately-flavored salad, or to serve as part of a mixed salad.

Chives are almost indispensable for a mixed salad. These are as easily grown as onions—either from seed or division of root clumps. There are many who also think their salad lacks flavor without the dandelion, but as this is such a pest in the garden and lawn it is not very popular with the American gardener.

Suitable plants for salads are becoming more popular and important each year, and the market gardener that can produce the finest product finds ready sale. Nearly every one has enough space in their garden to grow all the salad plants that a family can use, of good, clean and fresh quality, surpassing any grown and marketed in the usual way.—[California Cultivator.

Corn a National Flower.

RUMOR has been going the rounds of Washington that the Department of Agriculture will soon lend its energies to have Indian corn or maize made the official floral emblem of the United States. Of course it is not necessary for Uncle Sam to adopt any emblem at all, but other nations are to be represented by the shamrock, the thistle, the lily, the chrysanthemum, etc. Seriously the Indian corn is a most beautiful and graceful plant, and its adoption as a national flower would be appropriate, since it is a native of America and occupies an important place in the prosperity of the country.

Without corn the earlier inhabitants of the United States would have perished. Today corn is everything to the American. He eats it on the cob and off, uses it in many kinds of foods, turns it into hogs and cattle, and distills it into mountain dew. In its sturdy vigor corn represents all that is American. While it may droop under continued drought, it regains new life when two or three rains have fallen, and it yields a most magnificent harvest. Verily corn is the keystone of American prosperity and we could go a great distance before we could obtain a flower more appropriate as a national emblem.—[American Cultivator.

Our Wild Grasses.

IN our rainy season when the grasses grow rank and lush and cover the mountains, the foothills and the valleys, and even the isles of the sea, with greenness, all grasses look alike and all look good. And all are good at that season; tender and appetizing for cattle and poultry to pasture on, and refreshing and agreeable for ourselves to look upon and walk upon and roll upon. But later—ah, then there's a difference in grasses we find—then come the prickers and stickers which work through our clothing into our tender flesh like vicious live things and think nothing of putting out the eye of a fowl. For a fact, there are more species of grasses on this Coast which develop vicious tendencies than we ever before met with. There are broncho grass, cattails and others—oh, lots of others—and all are tipped with spears and javelins; but we are not writing a scientific article on the grasses of this Coast and their vicious tendencies; we simply mention these things by the way in our joy at finding one species of wild grasses that is good from start to finish. That is the wild rye grass which springs up everywhere with a little encouragement and will go far toward choking out its vicious relatives along with vicious weeds.

Cattle, bird, fowl, everything, along with ourselves, delight in this grass. Green or dry, stock or seed, all goes and all is good. It is an all-around good grass for farmer and poultry raiser, and all should take pains to cultivate it in place of the vicious grasses and weeds that spring up about the premises.—[Press.

Potato Culture.

PERHAPS the most important factor in potato growth is the seed. It is a common custom among farmers to sell all of the fine big potatoes and keep the small unmarketable tubers for seed. In this they make a vital mistake. It is a dangerous tendency and in the long run will reduce the size of the potatoes and the yield per acre. Most emphatically like produces like. The seed from a good strong hill containing first-class potatoes will produce a better crop than seed selected at random. It has been thoroughly proved that any of the tubers from such a hill will usually produce a like hill when used for seed. This is true whether the farmer selects the large potatoes from the hill or those that have started late in the season, and have not reached marketing size.—[Lehigh Valley Bulletin.

A Flower-picking Apparatus.

AN apparatus for plucking flowers and collecting seed consists of a tube connected with a pair of shears. At the forward end of the tube is a fork which is slipped under the flowers. The blossoms imprisoned between the prongs are severed by a blade traveling upon the fork and are dropped through the tube into a receptacle at the rear of the apparatus.

The device not only collects flowers very quickly, but also without injury. When the flowers are plucked by hand it is almost impossible to break a twig without leaving behind a long sliver of bark. Sometimes even a whole plant must be torn up by the roots. The apparatus can also be employed for collecting seed capsules which are often crushed when picked by hand, so that the seed is lost. The entire capsule drops uninjured into the receptacle at the rear so that the seed is preserved.—[Scientific American.

PRACTICAL HYGIENE.

[The Times does not undertake to answer inquiries on hygienic subjects that are merely of personal interest, or to give advice in individual cases. Those desiring personal advice should write to the editor of the department for particulars. General inquiries on hygienic subjects of public interest will receive attention in these columns. No inquiries are answered by mail. It should be remembered that matter for the Magazine Section of The Times is in the hands of the printer ten days before the day of publication. A Menace to the Family.

THE INCREASING prevalence of divorce in this country continues to excite amazement in some quarters, and alarm in others. What folly to be tilting against the windmills of "free love" and polygamy, while the disintegration of the family, in the shape of consecutive polygamy, is steadily progressing.

In the city of Chicago, in June, 1911, 392 divorces were granted to 3850 marriage licenses. The ratio of divorces to marriage is gradually rising, until it looks as if before many years they would be equal. Then where will the "sanctity of marriage"—and the family—be?

The average annual number of divorces in the United States for five years was greater than the number in all the rest of the so-called Christian world. There is no European country with a divorce rate half as high as that of the United States.

In an address recently delivered before the California Club in San Francisco by Judge Thomas F. Graham of the Superior Court, he said:

"Our divorce laws may be changed to mitigate the evil, but the real cure can only be made by going to the root of the matter.

"When marriages are made with more deliberation and forethought, when girls are trained to expect and take pleasure in the duties of wifehood and motherhood, and are taught what those responsibilities are, and when boys are trained to respect the opposite sex as a whole, the proportion of divorces will decline, but not until then."

A wise judge. That is exactly what the editor of the Care of the Body has frequently stated, namely, that it is not more difficult divorce that we should aim at, but more deliberation—if necessary, more difficulty—about marriage. This view is confirmed by statistics compiled from the records of the District Supreme Court at Washington, D. C., which show that 40 per cent. of all the divorces in that district are the result of runaway matches.

Bourke Cockran of New York was recently quoted in a London dispatch to The Times as making the following sensible remarks on the subject of divorce:

"I am opposed to any divorce at all. We should either prohibit it or make it free. Now we grant it chiefly by dragging in the question of infidelity, on which it can always be secured.

"If we are to have polygamy I would prefer to have it as it is in Utah, where a man must support all his wives and not alone the woman who has his passing fancy.

"Divorce is only about fifty years old. In a hundred years from now if it is looked upon as broadly as it has been in the past few years, a man will have fourteen divorces as easily as two, which would utterly destroy the fabric of Christian civilization and abolish the law of succession. There then will be no home or family life. I want to impress it on the public that divorce now only encourages polygamy as well as vice."

And here is an extract from a religious paper, the Christian Work and Evangelist of New York:

"But why not accept a condition of free love and be done with it? Why keep up the hypocrisy of marriage, either by church or city? Why not, if the health authorities wish to know who are living together in a city and to keep a record of children, simply compel the man and his mistress to go to the justice of the peace, and say: 'We are going to live together for the present?' Why not set aside a large part of the city where huge communal houses, with plenty of playground for children, can be erected? They will need large playgrounds, poor things, not knowing father and mother love. But it is between this condition of free love and a marriage system much freer from divorce than we now have, that the nation has soon got to make choice. And quickly, too, for even now, some localities are becoming practically free love. There are women in New York who when they meet one of their husbands cannot always tell, without thinking, if it is the one she is now living with. At some tables it is unsafe to address a woman by the name you have known her by, unless you have met her within half a year, for she may have changed it."

Prof. C. L. Ellwood, head of the department of sociology in the Missouri University, during an address at the Chautauqua meeting in Boulder, Colo., while discussing the causes for divorce, said:

"The family as a permanent union between man and wife end in this country within a measurable length of time. Monogamy as an institution is doomed to extinction in the United States.

"The present unstable condition of family life in this country is equaled only in the history of the decadent days of ancient Rome."

Is it not high time that we should seek—and try to remove—the causes of this great social evil, which threatens the existence of the family, the basis of our social system? Would this not be wiser than to tinker with the results of those causes, as the physicians do in the case of physical ailments?

One of the most important things to be done in this connection, in addition to requiring more deliberation before marriage is entered into, is to institute a campaign of education, whereby young men and young women may be instructed in regard to the mental, moral and physical responsibilities they assume when they enter into a contract that is still, by some old-fashioned people, supposed to have for one of its purposes the begetting of children to people the earth.

Spread of Consumption.

THE FOLLOWING Associated Press dispatch from New York, recently published in The Times, confirms what has been said here in regard to the absurdity of the idea that consumption can possibly be "stamped out" by what are known as "sanitary measures:"

"Tuberculosis is increasing here despite every effort, according to the annual report of Leopold Plant, president of the United Hebrew charities.

"'Notwithstanding the propaganda against consumption,' his report says, 'the number of those who have applied to us for aid because of the disease has increased 20 per cent. Our only hope lies in a radical change of working and living conditions.

"'Factories must be made sanitary, tenements made habitable; children must have room to play and men and women must not be overworked and underpaid. Otherwise society in all its strata will have to pay the penalty."

As frequently stated in these columns, consumption arises from within, not from without. It always begins in the stomach, and is caused by wrong eating. The only way to avoid it is to eat right, and the same is the only way to cure it. In addition you must, of course, breathe fresh air. That goes without saying.

A Case Where "Race Suicide" Would Help.

THE FOLLOWING Associated Press dispatch from Maysville, Ky., recently published in The Times, is respectfully commended to the careful and prayerful perusal of the Hon. Theodore Roosevelt, chief proponent in the United States of the doctrine of anti-"race suicide:"

"Because his wife presented him with twins, the second set to be born in less than two years, Lee Hay, 30 years old, committed suicide by swallowing carbolic acid yesterday. Hay had been out of work for some time and presumably was despondent."

Origin of Circumcision.

AND God said unto Abraham, and as for thee, thou shalt keep my covenant, thou, and thy seed after thee throughout their generations. This is my covenant, which ye shall keep, between me and you and thy seed after thee: every male among you shall be circumcised. And ye shall be circumcised in the flesh of your foreskin; and it shall be a token of covenant betwixt me and you. And he that is eight days old shall be circumcised among you, every male throughout your generations, he that is born in the house, or bought with money of any foreigner that is not of thy seed. He that is born in thy house, and he that is bought with thy money, must needs be circumcised: and my covenant shall be in your flesh for an everlasting covenant. And the uncircumcised male who is not circumcised in the flesh of his foreskin, that soul shall be cut off from his people; he hath broken my covenant.—[Genesis xvii:9-14.

Hopeless Cases.

A CONSULTANT of the Care of the Body recently asked whether ham and bacon are meat.

Such ignorance is by no means uncommon. A San Francisco Jewish woman, who had been buying ham, was surprised when her butcher told her that it was pork.

Now, what can you do with such people? How is it possible to help them when they don't understand the very rudiments of food values? Many of these people are possessed of average intelligence and perhaps well informed in regard to the business which gives them a living. Yet they don't know the first thing about the material of which their bodies are formed.

Strange, is it not? And not at all surprising that fakers of all kinds, who fatten on public ignorance with "brainy diets" and various kinds of dope flourish and grow rich.

Care of the Feet.

THE FOLLOWING article is contributed to the Care of the Body by E. D. Jackson of Los Angeles:

"I wish to urge instruction to your numerous readers of the Care of the Body department on the care of the feet, especially in this mild climate, where there is so much danger from neglect and also where access to the open air is so easy. My daughter, who took a post-graduate course in the Polyclinic of Chicago informs me that the doctors there taught that a pair of shoes should not be worn over half a day at a time, nor socks and hose either, for fear of absorption by the feet of poisonous matter. Neglect of the feet is almost a universal sin,

If You Only Knew What

would do for you, you would never rest until you had learned it for yourself.

The story of OXYPATHY reads like a romance. In the history of therapeutics, in all the ages gone, nothing like it or approaching it has ever been shown, and wherever the Oxypathor is introduced it compels belief by demonstrating its wonderful healing and, with such amazing promptness that physician and patient alike stand agasp with wonder.

The Oxypathor is so simple, so absolutely harmless, so delightfully convenient and adaptable to any circumstances, and the philosophy of the thing when explained is so logical and sane, that it rapidly wins its way into your confidence and enthusiastic approval.

Every Oxypathor put into use in a community, is like the proverbial grain of mustard seed—it spreads with unparalleled speed, and the success of Oxypathy in that section is permanently assured for all time.

The wonderful strides Oxypathy is making is well illustrated in the following letter:

Saves Life of Trained Nurse

Shreveport, La., Oct. 10th, 1911.

The Oxypathor Co. Dear Sir:—For the benefit of the sick I will give you this testimony. Six weeks ago when the doctor said I could not live but a couple of hours, and when I was cold and unconscious, my friends sent for an Oxypathor. In about two hours after it was applied, they said that I began to get warm, and in two days I began talking, and in ten days I was able to get up. I am now able to get around and look after my household duties.

I am fifty-two years old, and am a trained nurse, but in all of my experience I have never met with anything to equal the Oxypathor. You cannot speak too highly of it in any respect. It saved my life when all else failed. I think it will not be long until every home will see the necessity of one.

Yours very truly,
MRS. LILLIAN McMICHAEL.

412 Crockett St.

What Is Your Trouble?

It matters not what it is or of how long standing. If you are not yet on the brink of thegrave the Oxypathor can cure you—absolutely cure you. And nine chances to one, it is the only thing that can. Especially if you are very ill or the complaint is chronic or of long standing.

Occasionally, persons tell us that the testimonials published in this column are too wonderful to be true; we NEVER publish any statement unless it is the exact truth and which the individual is willing to verify to all inquirers.

Let us prove to You that what we say is True. We can show you the proof right here at your own door. Why should you continue to suffer?

Call on our office and we will show you our LOCAL statements, or write for our literature.

we find that in old age the penalty has to be paid. I recall at 66 many instances of persons' feet literally rotting off and causing death from long-continued neglect. Whittier in the 'Barefoot Boy' refers to the prison-house of leather in which we incarcerate our poor feet which so faithfully carry us about and yet have to suffer. I wear No. 10 shoes, although not above the standard size of average man, caused by doing farm work in Wisconsin while a boy barefooted all the long spring, summer and late into fall days. I could walk with impunity over briers, sharp chips from timber hewing, and fairly scorned a boot or shoe. I never allow a week to pass without a hot foot bath, using a stiff brush scraper and soap vigorously. I never had the luxury of a corn or bunion, and so have escaped the most dangerous class of so-called practitioners—the corn and bunion doctor, who is almost sure to infect the already weakened tissues and lead to untold misery.

"Our Chinese know better how to treat the feet by using the sandal; and even other foreigners by using wooden shoes show some regard for the humble feet. The more I live and learn the more I am impressed with the truththat sooner or later we get what's coming to us. People think that they can sin a long time as to hygiene and then want to be lifted on to high ground of health by a doctor at one bound, but nature will have her revenge. While she ever applies the amending hand (manus amendatrix, as the ancients had it,) still there is a limit before the ax falls, and then woe to the sinner."

To the above it may be added that a foot bath should always be taken after the labors of the day are over. Then put on a pair of slippers on the bare feet—or go barefoot or in sandals. This is not only wholesome, but exceedingly refreshing to the body.

Take every opportunity of going barefoot as often as you can. It is a fine thing for the health, especially for the nerves. Let the children run around barefoot as much as possible. They will enjoy it, and it will do them good.

The Carving Mania.

IN THE Dietetic and Hygienic Gazette recently an eminent St. Louis physician had an article on "Surgical Treatment of Dyspepsia."

There will soon be few ailments they don't carve for—that is, when the patient has the money to pay for the operation.

Almost every day the editor of the Care of the Body receives letters describing deplorable cases of medical malpractice, resulting in the death or permanent physical ruin of unfortunate people.

Isn't it about time that the "common people" should begin to agitate for legislation against this monstrous mutilation of the human body?

The Water Cure.

THE GREAT power of water, used externally, in curing disease was first brought to the attention of the public about half a century ago by some illiterate German peasants, who performed wonderful cures in this simple manner. Soon afterward hydrotherapy became popular in England. Among others who testified to the benefits derived from water treatments was Bulwer Lytton, the novelist.

America has been rather slow in taking up hydrotherapy, although of late years a number of regular physicians have indorsed it—of course "when given under the superintendence of a physician." As a fact, however, few physicians know anything at all about the science of hydrotherapy, because they have not been taught it in college.

"Hydrotherapy for Students and Practitioners of Medicine" is a book of 300 pages by George Knapp Abbott, M.D., dean of the faculty and professor of hydrotherapy in the College of Medical Evangelists at Loma Linda, San Bernardino county, Cal. This is one of the establishments connected with the Seventh Day Adventist Church, whose members, while seeking to save souls, do not overlook the care of the body. (Published by the College Press, Loma Linda, Cal. Price $3. For sale in Los Angeles by Fowler Brothers.)

This book, which is dedicated "To those who are seeking to be co-workers with the Great Physician in the healing of disease by the use of nature's remedies," is a carefully compiled and complete compendium of the water cure in its various phases, including details of treatment of various diseases, chronic and acute.

In his preface the author says:

"In spite of the advances made in modern physiologic therapy in general, hydrotherapy is still a branch of therapeutics but little used by the general practitioner. The reason is not difficult to find. As a science it receives but scant attention from teachers of therapeutics, and in the medical curriculum is usually allotted a few hours from the combined course on materia medica and therapeutics, which is already overcrowded zy the presentation of a needlessly large number of preparations of doubtful or very limited usefulness. As an art even less time is devoted to it. It must, however, be acknowledged that this brief consideration is a distinct advance over twenty years ago, when the medical curriculum was quite innocent of even a mention of physiologic therapy."

In regard to mineral baths Dr. Abbott correctly states.

"The popular belief that particular virtue resides in the mineral constituents of water used for hydrotherapeutic purposes is almost wholly erroneous. This is rarely the case and is confined to a very few procedures such as the Nauheim bath above mentioned. The treatment of rheumatism and obesity at various hot springs derives but little advantage from minerals present in the water (unless it be that 'faith' in these induces the patient to drink more water than usual.) The results are due to the theramic effects of the hot water, combined with regulation of diet and copious water-drinking. Balneology, the use of mintral waters in the treatment of disease, therefore, adds little or nothing to the science of hydrotherapy."

Unfortunately, at these establishments, little or no attention is usually paid to diet, so that any benefit

DRUGLESS, SERUMLESS AND KNIFELESS HEALING.

The One Natural Curing System With a Golden Ruled Conscience.

I only direct the Best by Test of all ancient and modern Old World and New World Natural remedial agents, so no matter what the name of your Dis-Ease may be, or where located, NaturAID will cure it. Don't you see specializing with any one disease just cannot be done, since the same blood that reorganizes your toenail also reorganizes your brain. Listen! I, too, studied medicine and surgery, but was afterward given up to die eight different times by as many different doctors. Then I lived among primitive people, who cure themselves by instinct. Here I learned cause and just how almighty natural law cures all Nature, (of which you and I are but infinitesimal parts), and there is no other way. Indeed, I do direct the natural cure of RUPTURE, FALLEN WOMB, FLOATING KIDNEY, DEFORMITIES, etc., for which I make all kinds of supporting utilities, to be used only temporarily—merely as a means to an end—like a crutch, then thrown away. INSTEAD OF YOU TELLING A DOCTOR WHAT AILS YOU, LET ME TELL YOU. Yes, cure all Dis-eases.

CROSS EYES

When your child's eyes are turned in, commonly called Squint eyes, the cause is generally attributed to some disease of childhood such as measles or whooping cough. But the true cause in every case is a congenital defect of vision. It is therefore only reasonable to assume that the surest and safest way to straighten the eyes and improve the sight is by properly fitted glasses. During 40 years of experience in that line I have straightened many eyes where several operations have failed.

Care of the Body.

derived from the rest and bathing is often neutralized by overeating, or the eating of injurious food.

Referring to inunction, the author says: "Covering the skin with oil hinders both the elimination of heat where surrounding atmosphere is cold, and the absorption of heat when the atmosphere is heated." Just so. In other words, it equalizes the temperature, making it a most valuable method to use in fevers.

Writing on the subject of diabetes, Dr. Abbott correctly states that "the rational management must therefore aim at increasing the oxidation of grape sugar, and thereby preventing its elimination in an unoxidized state with consequent energy loss." He goes on to add, however: "There are no known medicinal agents or even any more of dietetic management which will accomplish this result." This is incorrect. In diabetes the blood is overcharged with carbonic acid, and is deficient in sodium, calcium, magnesium, and iron. These elements are found in raw green leaf vegetables, and in fruits, such as oranges, apples, prunes, grapes, strawberries, and melons, while they are lacking in meat, white flour, potatoes, polished rice, and are entirely deficient in refined sugar. Also, in cooking, these and other minerals are largely changed into the inorganic form, in which form they cannot be utilized by man or animals. Calcium, magnesium and iron are necessary to the formation of the red blood corpuscles, which take up the oxygen into the lungs and carry it to the tissues for oxidation of carbon while sodium combines with the product of oxidation, carbonic acid, which is excreted through the lungs.

From this it may be seen that a carefully selected diet is of the very highest importance in the treatment of diabetes. Indeed, no complete cure of this disease can possibly be effected so long as the diet is neglected. An excess of sweets and starches is specially to be avoided.

It Did Him Good.

T. B. FOSTER of Hemet, Riverside county, writes laconically as follows:

"I occasionally read your part of The Times. I like it. I like your humor. I like your views of religion. In early life I almost ruined my stomach and bowels by gluttony. Had dyspepsia, constipation, piles. Came to California. Got to reading Care of the Body. Substituted olive oil for dead hog. Food digests. Bowels regular. Piles almost gone. Past 70. Enjoy life. Owe you debt of gratitude. Please accept my sincere thanks."

Ragtime and Insanity.

AN EMINENT German visitor, Dr. Ludwig Brunner, late instructor in the Imperial Academy of Medical Research in Berlin, who visited Los Angeles recently, was quoted as saying:

"Your ragtime air jars the nerve centers and causes an irritation of the brain cells. While the roll and thump of ragtime is exhilarating to the senses and acts as a stimulant, it has the after effects of an injurious drug that eventually will stagnate the brain cells and wreck the nervous system."

How to live a Hundred Years.

A DISPATCH from Chico, Cal., recently published in The Times, told of an address delivered before a Butte county teachers' convention by William Titsworth, 81 years old, but looking to be less than 60, on "How to Live to Be One Hundred Years Old." The lecturer recommended the teachers to eat no breakfast, fast one day a month, and take a cold bath, followed by exercise, every morning.

This advice is good, so far as it goes, but it will not suffice unless a person learns how to eat right.

Diet and Dentists.

J. F. TEUFERT, D.D.S., of Yuma, Ariz., had a good short article on diet in the September number of Oral Hygiene, a little magazine for dentists. Dr. Teufert advocates the disuse of all animal products, eating less food, and thoroughly chewing. As he says: "Natural food is self-cleansing to the teeth, and will not make them decay."

If more attention were given to diet there would be less need for dentists.

Get Out of the Rut.

"THE DULL MAN is made, not by nature, but by the immersion in a single business, and all the more if that be sedentary, uneventful, and ingloriously safe. Acetanilid.

ACETANILID is one of the many deadly drugs—mostly "made in Germany"—that have become fashionable of late among the drug-dispensing medical fraternity, for there is a fashion in medicines as well as in bonnets. The public will never know how many millions of people throughout the world are killed every year by these drugs, before the doctors discover that they are injurious, and then by that time it often happens that their use in some convenient form has become

Indigestion and Schlichten Ramie Linen

Indigestion in the majority of cases is a result of the blood being unable to get rid of impurities.

—the skin gives off a lot of waste matter.

—stop up the skin and you put a stumbling block in the way of the blood's daily duties.

Wear Schlichten Ramie Linen and you wear the underwear that best helps the skin keep open and healthy.

It costs a bit more, but not in proportion to its additional advantages.
